LINDSAY'S

THE HOME OF CULTURE

In addition to the pleasure derived from music itself, there is the mark of culture which it conveys.

There can be nothing coarse or vulgar in the home environment where the real spirit of music reigns.

To speak of music in the home is to speak of the piano, for the piano has become the universal instrument. And when selecting a piano care should be exercised that the one selected possesses tone, beauty of line and durability.

INDSAY PIANOS

possess these three qualifications and many more besides. To see and to hear the LINDSAY is to like it. At its price there is no better piano made today. To purchase a piano without first having seen the LINDSAY is to invite dissatisfaction and regrets. Visitors always welcome.

IN STRIKING COLOR SCHEME

Rainbow Effect Employed for Many Things Besides the Costumes for Bridals and Parties.

Rainbow effects are much in vogue, and there are rainbow weddings now at which the bridesmaids all appear in gowns of the same design, but each in a different hue. And there are rainbow party dresses that are much in demand among the younger girls. But these rainbows are not always of the regulation sort. The people who plan them have a different color scheme.

Take, for instance, a very charming trousseau set offered in one of the smart shops. It contains, aside from the usual supply of lingerie, so-called, all sorts of dainties for the boudoir—chaise longue covers, clothes hangers, shoe trees, cushions, bags, etc. These are developed in a rainbow that consists of pastel green, yellow, blue, ivory white and shell pink. Not a bad combination of colors, to be sure, and perhaps under the circumstances a better color scheme than nature's own.

BOTH PRETTY AND DURABLE

Home-Knit Towel That Was a Favorite in the Days When Grandmother Was Young.

This is the kind of towel used by our ancestors, the directions for making it being copied from a Godey's Magazine, dated 1850.

Buy or spin a few skeins or balls of heavy cotton yarn. No. 4 wears well, but finer can be used if desired. Cast 65 or 70 stitches on long needles; knit plain back and forth until you have it the desired length.

A pretty colored border can be knit in if you wish to have it quite fancy; blue or pink or yellow, or all three in stripes make a real pretty border. Heavy lace can be crocheted on each end if preferred. These towels if well knit of good yarn will last for years used for a bath towel. Do not knit too tightly.

Japanese Spinners.

The cotton spinning industry in Japan is regarded by many to be as important commercially as the silk industry. The number of cotton spinning mills increased from 153 in 1909 to 177 in 1918.

THE FINAL VICTORY LOAN

Editorial in The Globe, Toronto, Sept. 16, 1919

Preparations for the launching of the final Victory Loan have been begun. From this time forward until the end of the campaign public interest in the financial condition of the Dominion will increase steadily. There is need for a discussion not only of the fundamentals of National Finance, but for the diffusion of information all over the country as to the purposes for which this specific loan is required. The war is over. The appeal to the win-the-war spirit—so effective in the floating of former loans—cannot be made upon this occasion. Instead, there must be an appeal to the common sense of the people and to their desire to do all that is possible to bring about the restoration of normal conditions in the Dominion.

The first thing that must be impressed upon the public mind is the fact that a large part of the money called for is required to wipe out the indebtedness of the Government to Canadian banks that have advanced great sums—almost a quarter of a billion dollars—to enable the Government to grant credits for the purchase of goods for export to Allied countries that are unable to pay cash for all the Canadian provisions and other products they require. The loan is needed also to meet the heavy expenditures attending the demobilization of the Canadian overseas army. Gratuities and back pay run into enormous sums. The credits to Great Britain to enable her to continue buying Canadian products have been very large. Greece, Roumania, and Belgium have been supplied with foodstuffs, clothing, and implements through a a loan of seventy-five million dollars made by the Canadian Government to the Governments of these countries. Sir Henry Drayton says that further credits will have to be made to finance the export of our natural products. The loans will be repaid in time, and such portions of them as are not promptly liquidated by the importation of British and continental European goods into Canada will remain to the credit of the Canadian people as an investment of capital on which interest will be drawn.

It is good to have considerable investments abroad instead of remaining—as Canada was before the war—almost exclusively a debtor nation. In pre-war days, for example, the British people had almost three billion dollars invested in Canada. They owned huge blocks of national, Provincial, and municipal securities. They held the bulk of the bonds and stock of our railways. They had much money in Western lands and in Eastern manufacturing enterprises. Large blocks of bank capital were British. It required the export of about a hundred and fifty million dollars' worth of Canadian products yearly to pay even the interest on this great investment. That fact indicates why Canadian exports to Great Britain were greater than Canada's imports from Great Britain. They had to be about a hundred and fifty million greater if we were not to keep going more deeply into debt year by year through the reinvestment of British money in Canada.

During the war the British people sold or put in pledge large amounts of Canadian securities—not less probably than half a billion dollars' worth—and Canadians have been buying these securities by means of a large surplus of exports. It is anticipated that after all the war accounts are balanced Canada will have reduced her debt to British capital by at least half a billion dollars, and that hereafter she will have to export twenty-five million dollars' worth less of her products than in pre-war years to pay her annual interest bill to Great Britain.

But it may be argued that the Canadian people as a whole will not benefit because some of them owe less to some of the British people than they did before the war. This is a mistaken view. It is true that there has been a vast increase of Canada's internal debt because of the war. For a period of years too long to estimate with any degree of certainty all the people of Canada as taxpayers will have to pay about $120,000,000 a year as interest on the war debt to the much smaller number of Canadians who hold war bonds. But when we get down to concrete cases instead of dealing in the mass the debt burden of two billions does not look so hopelessly large. The interest amounts to about $15 per year per head. Every shop girl or domestic or workingman who has been able to buy three hundred dollars' worth of Victory bonds—and their numbers run up into hundreds of thousands—will get annually in interest from the Government a little more than enough to pay his or her share of the taxation due to war debt. In other words, their savings cancel their share of the debt.

Had the country tried to finance its war expenditure by foreign instead of internal loans—supposing that to have been possible—the condition of Canada would have been vastly more serious to-day. Our debt to external creditors would have been over four and a half billion dollars, and to pay the interest at the current rate would have involved the export of about two hundred and thirty million dollars' worth of Canadian products yearly without any corresponding imports. The effect upon the manufacturers and merchants of Canada of such a drain would have been almost ruinous, for the people of the Dominion would have their buying capacity very seriously reduced by the export of their products to pay interest on the external debt. It is therefore of great importance that the Canadian people as a whole should owe some of the Canadian people the bulk of the money spent in prosecuting the war. The interest is spent in the country, and benefits in the spending all classes of the community—the debtor as well as the creditor.

If the argument here presented is a sound one, then it follows that to the very limit of our capacity we should continue to buy Victory Bonds. The new issue will have to yield at least four hundred million dollars to enable the National Treasury to discharge its obligations during the current financial year. Victory Bonds are an excellent investment, but they are more than that. They are a sign that Canadians have faith in their country, in its vast resources, in the stability of its Government, in the will and the power of the people to build up and maintain a civilization which will stand the greatest stress that can be brought to bear upon the foundations whereon the Dominion has been reared.

Gwen's Protege

By WILL T. AMES

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Miss Gwen Ciphers, daughter of an Indianapolis paint and wall paper merchant and one of the kind of women who name their first borns Archibald if fine and Gwendoline if superfine, met up with Ras Goora, son of a Caiffa rag picker, in Washington square.

Gwen was the ninety-six thousand and first girls' college graduate to come from Indiana to New York to soften the heart of the world with her pen. Ras was the second young man to come from Caiffa, Syria, with the definite purpose of acquiring, within six months, capital enough to buy a licorice plantation.

The first Caiffa youth to achieve this ambition had been Tufa Goora, Ras's cousin. He had returned, after a brief absence, with a small hatful of the golden coin of the infidels, and had purchased the most excellent plantation of Haj Akab; also the second-hand flivver of the departing French consul.

Eela Karhagian, sloe-eyed daughter of the Armenian doctor, seemed disposed to condescend to Tufa under these circumstances. Ras, too, had yearned hopelessly for Eela. He determined to put over a performance to equal or excel his cousin's. He knew of a better plantation and a newer Ford. The plantation he wanted was so near to town they could run in to the picture theater; if—

And Ras would have made his adventuring voyage to the other side of the world even had he known positively what had merely occurred to him as a probability—that Tufa's money had been the fruit of a series of predatory enterprises which made it by the rarest of good luck that he ever returned to Caiffa. He had got out of New York just two jumps ahead of the police.

Ras himself was entirely without prejudice as to the manner in which he might possess himself of some of the pelf of those villainously rich unbelievers in America. His one idea was to get it and get back.

George Washington Ciphers wouldn't have trusted Goora, pere, for a ten-cent paint brush if the latter, per magician's carpet, had suddenly walked in upon him.

Moreover, he would have kept the keenest of eyes on old Ras senior, to see that he didn't steal the knob off the front door as he went out. But Gwen Ciphers didn't inherit either her father's suspicious temperament nor his quick insight into human nature. Gwen, though she didn't suspect it, took somewhat after her mushy mother.

So when Ras, hat in hand, approached her as she sat on a bench in the historic square planning wonderful things for the world—to be put in her book—Gwen did not shoo him away, but looked at the paper he held out.

Ras had great, soulful eyes, like a deer, and said, so pathetically, "Plis, mees!"

The writing read: "Am strange mans in grate country. Ples show work. Am awful grate strong."

"What on earth—where did you get this?" Gwen exclaimed. Ras shook his head. "No spik American."

"Well, you poor soul, you've got a nice time ahead of you, sure. But who wrote this?" Ras shook his head again.

Gwen, by speaking very loud indeed, in single words, and making a series of experiments in the sign language, finally got out of Ras the two words, "cook, ship."

"Well, you come with me," Gwen suddenly exclaimed; and grabbing Ras's coat sleeve with thumb and forefinger she steered him over to the West Eleventh street "pension," where she lived with Madame Blanc, a Swiss conjuress, who knew how to change five cents' worth of cat meat into a most delectable ragout. She dragged him to the basement door, demanded to see Madame at once, and to that lady said: "Here's that house man you wanted. You've simply got to take him."

Madame was a business woman. Ras was without English. He would be worth no more than his board. Ras his deerlike eyes full of gratitude yearned to be shown work.

Nobody else ever learned the language as fast as Ras Goora. "These people, I have often heard," explained Gwen, "have a positive genius for tongues." Nevertheless she took a mighty pride in Ras's accomplishment for he was her pupil. A dozen times a day he was at her door receiving tips—tips on English, that is. In three months he was talking like a phonograph record.

Naturally, Ras explained everything to his benefactress. He was an altruist who lived for others. That's why he was in America. Himself, he would so many thousand times prefer to stay in his own beautiful, dreamy Syria, amid the olive trees and orange blossoms, than to go forth among so many, many strangers. But his people—ah, the poor, poor people!

Such a long time oppressed by the wicked Turks. For them he had come to America. They had no schools. He had come to beg money from the rich generous Americans for a great children's school at Beirut.

To cut it short, Gwen possessed eight thousand dollars, an auntly legacy. And the supreme court itself couldn't have convinced her that the book she was writing would fail to bring in other thousands shortly.

She was actually on the point of signing a check for four of the eight thousands, to be handed over to Ras Goora as the nucleus of the Gwendoline Ciphers school, in far off Beirut, when:

Sam Cody, the busiest man in Indianapolis found—or made—time to drop in to call on Miss Ciphers. Sam was all business. He had been everywhere and made money everywhere he went.

But he had leisure enough to keenly desire to make Gwen Ciphers Mrs. Cody. He jeered at her literary aspirations and her vaunted capacity for "making her own life." Consequently Gwen resented him while she secretly adored him.

He arrived at Miss Cipher's combination living room about thirty seconds ahead of Ras Goora, the moment of whose coup was ripe. He was shaking hands with Gwen still—that is, he was holding one—when Ras tapped discreetly at the door. Gwen, all smiles of triumph over her Beirut enterprise, invited Ras in. Then she proceeded to tell Sam all about what she and Ras were going to do for the Beirut infants. When she turned to beam on Ras she was amazed to find him, all atremble, staring at Sam as if at a ghost. At the same instant Sam got to the door first. He grabbed Ras by the collar, spoke rudely to him for about ten seconds, opened the door, chucked him through it and said "Scat." Ras took the stairs in three downward jumps, yanked the front door open and disappeared.

Sam had been an export agent in Caiffa six years before. He bought olives and licorice and goat's hair and other things and shipped them to America to people he represented.

He made a pack of money, but not so much that he felt like being robbed. So when he found Ras Goora, his office boy, whom he had hired because he could speak English, making a wax impression of the key to his petty cash drawer he kicked him into the road, to learn subsequently that as an all-around larcenist Ras was Caiffa's only rival to his own father, who, it was known, had robbed the poor box at the missionaries' chapel on the day of his own "conversion."

"Listen, Gwen," said Sam, after Ras had scurried away. "You're about as fit to buck against the snides and grafters and four-flushers as you were when you were two-and-a-half. I like you that way. I don't want you to get too blamed cynical. You will, if you stay here and meet a little million more of Rases. Tell you something. I went to see that Simms person—your publisher—and I made him admit that he wouldn't publish your book on his own hook in a million years; is only taking it for his percentage on what it costs you. You're coming out to Indianapolis with me and be Mrs. Sam Cody. Sam, he'll be the business agent between you and the world—see?"

And Gwen saw—at last. So she went.

QUEER WEAPONS OF DUELISTS

Steel and Ball Not the Only Things Used by Adversaries on "Field of Honor."

In the latter part of the eighteenth century that prince of charlatans, Count Cagliostro, proposed a duel with poisoned pills. The trouble arose because he had called a physician a quack. Cagliostro, on the ground that "a medical controversy should be settled in a medical manner," proposed that two pills, one deadly, the other harmless, should be put in a box and shaken up. Each was to draw a pill and swallow it.

In due course the duel came off. Cagliostro lived. The other man died.

Some years before the war an American student in Paris, challenged by a Frenchman, chose baseballs as his weapon. There was immense jeering, and the American was accused of everything from insanity to cowardice, the latter on the assumption that no one could possibly be hurt by a baseball. But the American, taking his stand at pitcher's distance, threw with such force and accuracy that the flying sphere struck his opponent between the eyes and laid him out flat, though he recovered later on.

A duel with deadly germs was seriously proposed by a Chicago physician in 1916. The preliminaries were arranged, but at the last moment the challenged party shrank from the ordeal.

As to the Habit of It.

Creatures of habit, such are human beings. They carry along with them a lot of the primitive instincts they had in common with the lower creation in the ages past. A habit is only an outgrowth of an instinct. It is the instinct to do the thing that was done before until the doing of it becomes second nature. The leading psychologists, and the lesser as well, for that matter, agree that the reactions of the human system to environment are limitless and therefore the range of things that may be done habitually is limitless.

When Gold Tarnishes.

In the case of a black mark made by a gold pin upon a white cravat, the discoloration is not due to tarnishing but to friction. Gold jewelry sometimes tarnishes in the shop through being wrapped in cheap tissue paper, placed in boxes with inferior linings or tied up with rubber bands. It will sometimes tarnish in sympathy with unlacquered silver exposed in the same showcase.

Restoring Our Reserve Plant!

A telephone system to be normal and healthy must have a big percentage of its plant in reserve.

There must be spare positions on switchboards, spare cables in underground conduits, spare wires in underground and aerial cables, spare pins on cross-arms.

The plant in reserve must be ample, not only to meet ordinary growth, but to take care of unforeseen development such as the opening of a new car line, the cutting through of a new street, the location of a new industry in a given district.

During the war, through scarcity of material and skilled labor, our reserve plant was depleted as never before. Even necessary maintenance and repair work had to be postponed. Delays in installations were inevitable.

The present problem is to get our reserve plant back where it should be and to overtake vital maintenance and repairs. This must be done while meeting pressing demands for new telephones. These in turn call for new buildings, new switchboards, new conduits, aerial and underground cable, new local and long distance lines.

Our outlay for the year will be upwards of $7,000,000.

We are striving to keep our service up to the best pre-war standard, while at the same time meeting the demands of this busy reconstruction period.

Telephone workers, loyal and faithful as they are, appreciate the courtesy and kindly co-operation of our subscribers, who can help greatly by making sure of the number by consulting the directory before calling; by speaking distinctly, directly into the mouthpiece, and by always answering promptly when the telephone bell rings.

FAMOUS ST. PAUL'S

Historic Edifice Beloved by All Londoners.

In Its Architecture the Building, the Largest Protestant Church in the World, Embodies Ideas of Many Periods.

"Even the war could not stop work on St. Paul's cathedral in London. The famous church, like the English constitution, represents a growth of centuries and not a definite period of construction."

This statement is made in a bulletin of the National Geographic society in connection with a London dispatch which notes a request for additional funds to complete repair work on St. Paul's.

"England's esteem for the historic edifice is shown by the continuation of the restoration work throughout the war, despite the interruption to practically all other building," the bulletin says. "Still fresh in public memory is the notable service of consecration, attended by royalty and distinguished Americans then in London, held in St. Paul's April 20, 1917, to commemorate the entry of the United States into the war.

"St. Paul's is the largest Protestant church in the world. Its dome is one of the most beautiful. The church embodies architectural ideas of many periods, because it is not the product of a generation, or even a century. True, Sir Christopher Wren is credited with the structure as it stands today, but he embodied many features of the famous 'Old St. Paul's,' razed in the great London fire, 1666. Wren did not wish the restoration to be after the 'Gothick Rudeness of the Old Design.' But he was compelled to modify his own plans to a considerable extent. Said he, of the balustrade added over his veto: 'Ladies think nothing well without an edging.'

"To this famous mathematician, astronomer and architect the London fire blew much good. He had commissions to draw plans for rebuilding half a hundred churches. From these were modeled many of the American churches of colonial days. For his masterpiece, St. Paul's, Sir Christopher is said to have received less than the equivalent of $1,000 a year, an amount which might engage the attention of a modern architect of his standing for an afternoon's consultation. The building was paid for by a tax on sea-borne coal to London.

"The motto was appropriate. Some historians believe the cramped Ludgate Hill site originally was that of a Roman shrine of Diana. A Christian church is known to have been built there in the early seventh century. It was burned two decades after William the Conquerer come to England. From the ruins emerged 'Old St. Paul's.' Fire destroyed that building, too, but it was restored on an even more pretentious scale.

"At the 'Old St. Paul's' John Wycliffe faced the charge of heresy, Tyndale's New Testament was burned, Wolsey heard the reading of the papal condemnation of Luther and, under 'Powle's cross,' now marked by a memorial, heretics were forced to recant and witches to confess.

"Even before the great fire 'Old St. Paul's' was crumbling, partly from a succession of lightning strokes and partly from neglect. Wine cellars and workshops were to be found beneath its lengthy corridors. The old building was nearly as long as the union station at Washington. The nave became 'Paul's Walk,' a promenade.

"Two towers, as well as the dome, make the new St. Paul's conspicuous. In one tower 'Great Paul,' a 17-ton bell, booms out daily at 1 p. m. A smaller bell tolls when there is a death in the royal family.

"Tombs of Wellington and Nelson, Turner and Reynolds and of other famous men are to be found in St. Paul's. Over Wren's grave is a plain tablet bearing a Latin inscription counseling the visitor to look about him if he would find the architect's monument.

"Sir Christopher should have become renowned as a city planner as well as a church builder. After the fire he prepared a plan that would have made London a city of wide streets and radiating avenues. But Londoners had become reluctant to relinquish property in family tenure for years, unlike citizens of such newer cities as Baltimore and Chicago. St. Paul's itself has owned a farm in Essex since the seventh century."

Predictions Near Fulfillment.

Napoleon prophesised at St. Helena that there would be no kings in Germany a century after his death. Ten years before the Huns broke loose, Lord Roberts predicted that if a great European war came in our days, Ferdinand Foch, who was then an unknown officer, would be one of the most famous actors in it.

A rather neat prediction was made as far back as 1896 by the redoubtable Frenchman, Henri Rochfort, marquess and anarchist.

"We cannot get Alsace-Lorraine back by ourselves," he told an interviewer. "But one day the German eagle will get drunk with pride and will annoy the British bulldog. Then the bulldog will form an alliance with us to kill the eagle, and we shall recover the lost provinces."—London Answers.

Clams

By DORA MOLLAN

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

"By golly!" suddenly exclaimed Doris from where she stood by the window, "if that job doesn't end soon there won't be a clam left in the cove!"

"Doris!" came the reproachful voice of her mother, "please don't use such unladylike words."

"Find me one as expressive and I won't," responded the irrepressible Doris. "I'm dying for some clams, and those laborers laying the new gas pipes are just digging them all up before I get a look-in."

"But they are busy putting in the pipes, aren't they, dear?" mildly queried Doris' mother. "How can they dig clams at the same time?"

"Oh, they're just stalling on the job, mother, waiting for some more pipe. The little foreman told me so yesterday. Meanwhile they're just digging up all the clams."

"Doris," the mother again started to remonstrate with her lively young daughter, but as often happened, that same daughter took the words from her mouth. "I know, mother, what you're going to say—'Please don't go around talking to that strange young man.' You needn't worry. I've only seen one worth speaking to since we came—and he was clamming, too. Came from over across the cove somewhere. Got a lot, too. If he'd had any decency he'd have offered me some. Goodness knows I hinted broadly enough."

The little mother remarked in a resigned tone: "He thought you were a child, probably, with your bobbed hair and that short, red skirt."

"I should worry what he thought; he's some country clam himself," Doris replied, laughingly. "All the same, I wish my boots would arrive. It was so stupid of us to forget them." Then speculatively: "That water's too cold to go into barelegged."

"I should say so," the mother made haste to reply. "Doris, don't you think of such a thing."

"No, mother, I won't," dutifully spoke the daughter, busily scheming in her impatient young head some way of getting over those clam flats, where at the moment several Italians were industriously digging.

Now, Mrs. Dart, Doris' mother, had purposely omitted packing those boots. She had a rather guilty feeling all day, as Doris watched for the parcels post. This clever, up-to-date young daughter was rather beyond the old-fashioned mother.

She was proud of her, of course, for didn't that same cleverness enable Doris to "hold up the government at the rate of thirty-five per, with a month's vacation," as Doris herself expressed it?

And didn't that weekly thirty-five make possible the yearly vacations at the shore, even if sometimes they had to come at an unheard-of early date? But oh dear! if the child would only care about clothes like other girls and not insist on bobbing her hair with the ridiculous excuse that it saved time.

And then these awful knickers—and boots—that she insisted on wearing out fishing and clamming! But Mrs. Dart preferred not to think about them.

Doris was a wizard at finding a way out of a dilemma. Probably that was why she succeeded so well in business. The only way out of her present one, she decided, was over a bridge farther up the cove.

This bridge had been started with a flourish by some bunko amusement company and finished in a fizzle. It lacked five feet of reaching the flat island in the center of the cove. But on that island were clams—that could be gotten at without the aid of boots.

So on the following day, no boots having arrived and low tide coinciding with her mother's rest hour, Doris got into the obnoxious knickers and, armed with short-handled hoe and a bag, walked over the unfinished bridge, took a flying downward leap—and there she was!

The clams were plentiful. This was a place the laborers had not hit upon. Doris dug and dug, and the tide crept up and up. Clam digging is a time-consuming work; so when the bag was nearly filled the strenuous young lady was relieved to find by a glance at her watch that it was not quite time for her mother's nap to be over. But at the bridge she found, somewhat to her dismay, ten feet of water, shallow to be sure, but growing deeper every moment between the low shore and the much higher end of the bridge.

"Time and tide," quoted Doris, ruefully, as she started bravely through it. The water was knee deep when she managed to throw the bag up onto the bridge; but getting herself up was quite another proposition. The sand was soft and her feet sank into it.

Doris didn't give up easily once she started to do a thing, but when her feet grew numb she accepted the futility of further effort and waded back to the island.

No one was in sight. Even the laborers had gone home. A loud "Hello!" brought the little mother running from the cottage and out onto the bridge, but she was powerless to help.

In the tower windows of a large house situated some distance across the cove a young man, with the aid of binoculars, watched the maneuvers of a seaplane out on the bay. It disappeared up the river and the watcher, taking the glasses from his eyes, glanced indifferently over the immediate landscape.

"Hello! There's that kid digging clams down on the island." He brought the glasses into play just as Doris started for the bridge, and laughed as she made the first unsuccessful attempt to gain the structure. But when the second and third ended in failure his face sobered. "She's mighty plucky, anyway; looks like it's up to me to get a boat out and give her a lift."

Mrs. Dart spied the young man running down toward the cove and pointed at him. Doris ran over to that side of the island. As the boat approached she recognized the occupant as the "clam man."

"Hello, there!" he called up cheerily; "you seem to be in a pickle. Belong on the other side of the cove, don't you? Hop in and I'll take you around. How did you get here, anyway?"

"Jumped off the bridge," returned Doris shortly, for on close view her keen eyes noticed that his corduroy suit and gray flannel shirt were of the finest quality. Her rescuer's thoughts ran something like this: "Pretty as well as plucky—and older than I thought."

Mrs. Dart's anxiety over her daughter's plight had obliterated from her consciousness the abhorrence of knickers. Now, as she stood on the shore where the skiff was making its landing, she became acutely aware of them. Her voice held more than motherly anxiety when she said:

"Hurry right into the house, child, and put on some dry clothes. I will thank the young man." Her thanks included an invitation to come in and have some tea; and, nothing loath, the young man went.

When Doris appeared Mrs. Dale was already on friendly terms with her guest, whom she addressed as Mr. Martin. She invited him to dinner the next day. After he left she showed his card to her daughter, and the latter, glancing at it, exclaimed excitedly, if inelegantly: "Hully gee, mother! He's one of the 'Four Hundred'—a blooming millionaire; and you've invited him to corned beef and cabbage!"

The next winter the following marriage notice appeared in a society magazine: "Married—December 12, 1918, at the home of the bride's mother, Towson Martin and Doris Randal Dart!"

And Sally Dewire, a young debutante, remarked to her chum: "Wonder where he ever picked up that little nobody! But, then, he always was queer. We'll never see her in society, if that's what she's aiming for. He hates it. He's a regular clam."

NOT MEANT FOR CIRCULATION

Volumes in Ancient Library of Alexandria, Egypt, Were Not Infrequently 150 Feet Long.

How would you like to have to read a story written on a sheet of paper 150 feet long?

This task faced those who made use of the famous library at Alexandria, for the universal writing material in that day was papyrus, parchment not coming into use until three centuries later. This collection contained 490,000 books, and when it was burned treasures of the literature and history of ancient days beyond all price were lost. The library was destroyed by accident when flames spread to the shese from the fleet which Caesar had set on fire.

The reed, from the inner covering of which papyrus was made, still grows in Egyptian marshes. Thin strips of it were cut off and laid close together. A sheet was formed by laying strips across these at right angles, after which the material was moistened, pressed and dried. The paper thus made had a fair writing surface, but was not very durable. Unless handled with extreme care papyrus scrolls found nowadays will crumble into dust. The sheets, sometimes made 150 feet long, were called "biblot," from which the modern Bible and book are derived. The ink used was made of gum and lampblack. Papyrus was not only used in Egypt, but a large amount of it was exported. Excavations in the ruins of Herculaneum have brought to light many thousands of these scrolls.

John Boyle O'Reilly.

An Irish-American poet and journalist, born at Dowth castle, County Meath, Ireland, June 28, 1844, John Boyle O'Reilly arose rapidly in his chosen career and came to be beloved for his earnestness of purpose and the human interest which he interjected into his writings. At the age of eighteen he went to London as an agent of the Fenian society, and later was sentenced to be shot by the British government, but this sentence was commuted to penal servitude for 20 years. O'Reilly escaped from western Australia, was rescued by an American whaler and carried to the United States. He settled in Boston and devoted his talents to literary work and public activity, and died August 10, 1890.

The Yosemite Valley.

Geologists have determined, by unerring fact, that the river did by far the most of the work of forming the Yosemite gorge and that the great glacier which followed the water ages afterwards did little more than square its corners and steepen its cliffs. It may have increased the depth from 700 to 1,000 feet, and more. During the uncountable years since the glaciers vanished erosion has again marvelously used its wonder chisel. With the lessening of the Merced's volume the effect was no longer to deepen the channel but to amazingly carve and decorate the walls.

No need now to rub and scrub the life out of clothes and the happiness out of a day on a back-breaking wash-board. You can now have an electric washer with all its advantages at a cost within the means of every housewife. The Kribs Electric Washer is just as efficient as other machines that cost two or three times as much, and soon pays for itself in saving clothes, time and labor.

The Kribs Electric Washer works with a half-turn movement. And is operated by a Robbins & Myers motor, which will last for years. It is also equipped with a special safety release wringer, which releases at both ends instantly when the spring is pressed. This feature is a big advance over the old style one-end release. The cut gears on the Kribs Electric Washer are so superior over the cast gears usually used on low-priced washers that comparison quickly demonstrates the advantage. It washes a tubful of clothes in a surprisingly short time—washes them thoroughly—and costs only a few cents an hour for operation. The price of the machine is only $80.00.

14 Days' Free Trial

During November only, we are introducing a limited number of these machines on a Fourteen Days' Free Trial. Upon request a Kribs Electric Washer will be placed in your home with no expense to you. No obligation to buy. Do your regular washing for two weeks. If it doesn't prove its worth many times over in saving time and labor and its efficiency in washing blankets, woollens, tablecloths, everything down to the flimsiest lace—we don't want you to keep it. But, we are sure you will be so pleased with the washer that you will want to keep it—then we can arrange an easy payment plan for you.

Easy Terms Arranged

During this demonstration sale easy monthly payments to suit every purchaser can be arranged. In fact, you can pay for the machine out of its actual savings. You have all its advantages free.

We want to place as many of these machines as possible this month. The easy terms will suit you fine.

Offer Good Till November 30 Only

We have been allotted only a few washers for this special sale. Therefore we are limiting the sale to November thirtieth. Call immediately and inspect one of these machines. Then have one placed in your home. You can make no mistake in giving a Kribs Electric Washer a trial.

LIFTING THE MANTLE OF DARKNESS

MANY towns and villages in Ontario that were not provided the advantages of electricity previous to 1912, now enjoy the comforts and conveniences of Hydro Power.

Electricity generated in individual plants was not available for these places. Hydro development placed electricity within their means.

In numerous Ontario towns and villages old-fashioned, unsatisfactory lighting gave way to modern, economical electric light.

Now that electricity is no longer a luxury, it is the aim of Hydro to help the people of this Province secure the best results from the current they use. For the most satisfactory service in home lighting the Commission recommends HYDRO Quality Lamps.

HYDRO Quality Lamps are tested in the Commission's electrical laboratories—the most complete in Canada. The brilliancy, long usefulness and low current consumption of HYDRO Quality Lamps are assured. HYDRO Quality Lamps may be had at the Hydro Shop.

Little Sister

By R. RAY BAKER

(Copyright, 1919, by the McClure Newspaper Syndicate.)

Frances Hayden sat at the window of her room and looked out on a dreary, drizzly day—Sunday, March 30. In one hand she held a letter, which was somewhat crumpled, as though she had started to convert it into waste paper and had thought better of it.

Two robins were holding a conversation in the tree whose branches brushed the window. The birds started out as if they were quarreling, but the excited chirping diminished into a sound that was as near cooing as can be expected of robins.

"Wouldn't it be fine to be a bird?" Frances sighed. "They're always happy, it seems."

She looked at the letter and a wry little smile adorned her face.

"He calls me sister," she mused. "That's what they all say when they want to leave you for someone else. 'Little sister'—that's what he says. It sounds pretty, but he used to say things that were prettier."

She stood up and made a motion as though to throw the letter in the wastebasket, but changed her mind again and placed it in a drawer of the dresser. Then she stood before the mirror and surveyed herself critically for several moments.

The person who gazed back at Frances from the glass was not exactly beautiful, but there was something about her that would not permit her to pass unnoticed in a crowd. The eyes were just common eyes; that is, there were no special arches to the brows, and the long, graceful lashes that are considered so desirable were not there. There was a lot of good, wholesome blue in the eyes, which could not be discounted in an inventory of attractive points.

The nose was inclined to be "pug," which gave the face a kind of saucy look, and the hair was nearly stringy, being of a rusty hue; but there was plenty of it, and it was done up attractively, if not up to the minute in style. The teeth were the principal attraction of Frances Hayden's countenance. When she smiled even the least bit they showed, dazzling white and even, and the smile was about as sweet as any girl could hope to offer.

But Frances was unhappy. She had long suspected that Melville Clark had ceased to care for her—in the way he once had cared. But, she told herself, it was hardly unexpected, despite the protestations Melville had made, when he left Glendale two years ago, that he would never care for another girl and that he was coming back "some bright, sunny day" to make her Mrs. Clark. She remembered the apprehensions she had entertained at that time, regardless of his earnest words, that he would come across someone else in the big city. However, Melville had written steadily for a year, and in every letter had reiterated his intentions. During the next year, however, she could not help noticing that his letters alluded more and more to friendship and less to love. Finally they dropped off altogether, until for a period of five months none came at all.

Frances went about her stenographic duties in the real estate office with the usual smile and the same capacity for work that she had always displayed, but when she got home at night she often shut herself in her room and thought hard, and sometimes cried a little.

Frances had given her heart to Melville when he went to the city to make a name for himself and a few coins for his pocket. It was a hard and rocky road, as his letters showed during that first year, and then his communications began to take on a more hopeful tone. "Things are coming, slowly but surely," he would write.

Frances hoped in vain that Melville would return home for a visit. He had said he would come for her when he "made good;" but now, when he was making good, there was no mention of the visit. Then came this letter referring to her as "little sister," in which he told her that he had at last attained the object he had sought. He was a successful stock broker, with an office of his own and a neat sum in bank. But never a mention of coming to Glendale did the letter contain.

Later in the day the sun chased the clouds away and warmed the earth again and Frances went for a walk.

"Maybe this is the bright, sunny day he referred to," she said, as she threaded her way through the village; and she laughed, with a tinge of wistfulness, when she recalled the "little sister" passages of the epistle from Melville.

At the edge of Glendale was a wooden bridge which spanned a silent little brook, wending its way through the valley with many twists and turns. Foliage was beginning to adorn the numerous trees on either side of the stream, which looked delightfully refreshing. Frances leaned over the railing and looked into a miniature whirlpool created by a bend which formed a pool just above the bridge. A fish coming up to dine on an early bug left spreading circles in the water, and it caused something like a sob in Frances' throat. She had seen that same thing happen—perhaps it was the same fish—when she and Melville stood looking over that same railing of that same bridge on the same kind of day two years ago. It was the day on which he asked her to marry him.

A purring sound along the road made her look up the slope and see an automobile approaching the bridge and the village. In the car was Melville Clark, on his way to Jenson City, 15 miles distant, to deliver a proposal of marriage to Julia Armstrong, daughter of Benjamin Armstrong, the wealthy importer, who lived in the same city where Melville had made good in the financial world.

Melville had decided to marry Julia, not because of love but because she would get a dowry that would increase his little fortune at least threefold. A taste of riches had made him hungry for more, and he had set out deliberately to win Julia for his bride. She appeared responsive, and he could see that her parents did not object.

When Julia went away for a week as the guest of honor at a house party at Jenson City and invited Melville to join her Sunday he had decided it was the opportune time to make his proposal. He arose Sunday morning when the watch under his pillow told him it was eight o'clock. Picking up a timetable he made sure that the train for Jenson City left at 9:30, and then he smiled when he saw that one for Pembrook went exactly an hour later.

The smile was occasioned by the realization that his old home town was on the Pembrook line, and because he had never gone back for a visit. Frances Hayden did not enter his thoughts; they were busy with more important matters.

When Melville arrived at the station he had five minutes, according to his watch, and a train was standing on the track. It was a branch station, and he did not have to show a ticket at the gate. It was only after he had been riding half an hour that he discovered he was on the wrong train. That was when the conductor came to take up his ticket.

"Your train left an hour before this one," said the official. "You must have forgotten to set your watch ahead. Shall I let you off at the next station?"

"Can you beat that?" Melville exclaimed in vexation. "I forgot this was the day the daylight-saving law went into effect." He thought swiftly. "I'll get off at Glendale," he told the conductor. "I can get an automobile to take me to Jenson City. It's a 15-mile trip."

As the car approached the little bridge and Melville discerned the girl standing there a strange feeling came over him. The memory of that day two years ago flashed across his mind, and it made him smile with mingled sadness and pleasure.

"Stop a minute," he ordered the driver. "Stop right on the bridge. I used to live here and I want to glance things over."

The machine paused on the bridge and Melville's eyes met those of Frances. There was silence, broken only by the chugging of the motor. A moment later Melville was out of the car and clasping Frances in his arms.

He stood off and looked at her. Yes, she was the same girl. There was the reddish hair, the sincere, wholesome blue eyes, and the flashing, fascinating teeth.

"By George! You look good, Frances!" he said, and he meant it. In the two years he had been weaned from the influence of that smile and those eyes; but now he was back in their power again.

"You mean 'little sister?'" she said, somewhat mischievously.

"Hang the little sister!" he ejaculated. "Let's go down to the little nook on the bank of the river and talk it over." Then to the chauffeur:

"Move ahead and wait beside the road. I'll be back soon."

The driver did as directed. The sun was rather hot, and he pulled his cap over his face. The air made him drowsy and he curled up on the seat. In a few minutes he was sleeping.

An hour later the chauffeur was awakened by a poke in the ribs.

"How much do I owe you?" asked Melville. "I've decided not to go on to Jenson City. I'm going to stay right here for a week."

"Island" in the Air.

Three miles south of the Mesa Encanbada in Mexico is a splendid specimen of fantastic erosion—an "island" in the air; a rock with overhanging sides nearly 400 feet high and 70 acres in area on the fairly level top, indented with countless bays, notched with dizzy chasms. The greater part of the island overhangs the sea like a huge mushroom, and on the top stands a town which for artistic charm, ethnological interest, and romantic history has no peer. This little town of Ancoma is one of the pre-historic Pueblo architecture. It was only with inconceivable labor this island town in the air was built. It was reached by a mere trail up the stem of the "mushroom." The age of the island is not known, except that it was already old in 1540.

Fly Model Planes With the Wind.

As regards the flying of a model plane, the beginner has much to learn, writes William Maclean in the Everyday Engineering magazine. It should always be remembered that while it occurs to the average person that a model should be flown into the wind this in reality is not the case; a model should always be flown with the wind.

Another point to remember is that a scale or reproduction model can never be a long distance flyer as are types of stick models. Further, a reproduction model must necessarily have a propeller or tractor screw out of proportion as a screw to scale is not capable of delivering the necessary thrust to fly a model which must necessarily be too heavy for the thrust developed.

The first telephone ever placed in a private English residence is still to be seen at Marlborough House. It was made in 1878, on board the warship Thunderer, and was subsequently set up between the schoolroom and the boudoir of the Princess of Wales.

Our Nerves Are Electric Systems

THAT nerve energy is simple electricity is a belief now held by many physiologists. Their idea is that the brain is the central power station of an electric system that has for its main transmission line the spinal cord, and for its subsidiary wires, the nerves.

By this means the brain directs and controls all the activities of the body, just as an ordinary power station operates the electric lights, the street cars, and the innumerable machines and mechanical contrivances of a city.

But the electrical system of a human being is far more complex than that of a city. It has a much greater variety of duties to perform, and it is vastly more efficient.

One method of generating electricity is by burning coal. Part of the heat hereby obtained is converted into electricity by means of a dynamo, the phenomenon representing merely the transformation of one kind of energy into another. To utilize it for mechanical purposes a motor is employed.

In your own body the fuel is the food you eat, which is chemically burned, producing heat. A large part of this heat (according to the theory here quoted) is converted into electricity, which is stored for use as it may be required.

One naturally asks, what part of the brain generates the electricity, acting as a dynamo? What part serves as a motor? And where is the electricity stored?

Nobody can answer these questions. The brain is still a profound mystery tothe physiologist, who has managed to find out only a few things about it. He can point out certain "motor areas" on its surface, which control movements of various parts of the body—as, for instance, the big toe, which is wiggled in response to orders from the middle of the top of the cerebrum. He will tell you that the "cerebellum"—a small secondary brain, located behind the ears—has for one of its functions the co-ordinating of muscular efforts. When it comes to considering the business of the "medulla oblongata," which is a great enlargement of the upper end of the spinal cord, just below the brain, he is pretty much in the dark.

There must be a motor somewhere, to drive the machinery of the body. There is the blood to be kept continually circulating through many miles of veins and arteries, and, to accomplish this, power must be applied to the pump which we call the heart. Power must be available for use by the external muscles, and for many other purposes.

Your nervous system is vastly more complex than you probably imagine. Distributed on the spinal cord and along the important nerves throughout the body are knots of brain stuff called "ganglia." These are the subsidiary stations of your electrical system, and through them the activities of the various parts of your body are directed and controlled.

The system is a veritable maze of "wires" extending through every part of your body. Look at the palm of your hand, and observe the wonderfully elaborate arrangement of ridges with which it is covered in curiously convoluted patterns. Each of these ridges is merely a roof to protect a row of tiny nerve-ends. Beneath the outer skin of your palm are hundreds of thousands of these nerve-ends, and the arrangement of their rows is marked by the ridges. The same remark applies to the similar ridges that, in equally complex patterns, cover the sole of your foot.

These are nerves of touch. Suppose that the end of your finger comes into contact with something hot enough to burn. The finger instantly signals to the brain, "Something painful has touched me!" The brain signals back, "Pull your finger away!"

The order, of course, is promptly obeyed. But in the meantime, your finger may be burned badly enough to blister; for it takes an appreciable time to send an alarm to the central power station and get an answer back.

A familiar illustration of this is afforded in operating a typewriter. You know that you are going to strike a wrong key, but you cannot get quickly enough from your brain the order to your finger not to strike it, and so you have a letter to rub out.

Curiously enough, the first hint that nerve energy might be electrical was obtained through observation of a fish—the so-called "torpedo ray," which looks like a magnified skate, and carries an elaborate equipment for generating and storing electricity. So formidable are the thunderbolts with which it is armed that a man who incautiously touches a fresh-caught specimen is liable to be knocked down.

The electrical equipment of the torpedo ray is far more efficient than any constructed by human hands, delivering a much greater amount of electricity in proportion to the size of the apparatus and quantity of fuel (represented by food in the fish's case) consumed.

According to the theory here set forth, the torpedo ray offers merely an illustration of electrical phenomena which are, in all essential respects, reproduced in a human being, though less open to ready observation.

Knitted Gaiters.

Knitted gaiters made their appearance in Paris this past spring. White wool, snugly knitted, answers the purpose of a spat on a low shoe, and appears to good advantage. Mayhap this is a style that will find favor here as the weeks pass. We are told that shoes are going to be higher in price next autumn and leather so scarce that we may find it best to wear low shoes and gaiters. In that case these well-knitted gaiters might be a really useful fad.

Huge Co-Operative Company To Be At Once Started By Farmers

MORE THAN ONE THOUSAND PLANTS INVOLVED IN PROPOSED UNDERTAKING, ACCORDING TO TELEGRAM SENT TO WESTERN COUNCIL OF AGRICULTURE.

WINNIPEG, Nov. 14.—R. M. Johnson, political secretary of the Saskatchewan organization, submitting his report to the council of agriculture, stated that a fund of more than $50,000 had been raised by the farmers, and that a definite federal political organization had been formed to reach cities and towns, within a few weeks. Meetings are being arranged at various places, he said, at which it is hoped Hon. T. A. Crerar, will speak.

The Manitoba report, submitted by W. R. Wood, secretary, indicated that federal action had been taken in the districts of Brandon, Neepawa, Provencher, Springfield and other places, but that no provincial organization is in sight. General opinion, he said, favored the grain growers' organization, instead of establishing a separate political machine.

In the Ontario report, submitted by J. J. Morrison, R. W. E. Burnaby and R. H. Halbert, it was pointed out that while there are only 40,000 in the United Farmers of Ontario, the vote in support of their members at the recent election totalled more than 116,000, showing that the election was more than a mere class movement among organized farmers He estimated that 55 per cent. of the support given farmers was old Conservative backing.

A telegram from Ontario was read reporting a decision on the part of dairy farmers to launch immediately a large co-operative company to take over and operate creameries and cheese factories throughout the province. More than a thousand plants are involved.

Oklahoma Booze Fatal To Many

Made From a Recipe Furnished By Local Druggist.

SULPHUR, Okla., Nov. 25—Two deaths at Purcell, three at Marlow's one in Oklahoma City, one in Kay County, and several others in different parts of the state have resulted from drinking booze made from a receipt of an Oklahoma City druggist, according to claims of officials here. The disclosure was made at the hearing of Bob Churchill, who was bound over to the district court on a charge of selling wood alcohol for human consumption. Police officers promise sensational facts at the trial scheduled for December.

The recipe calls for one gallon of wood alcohol and a cube of magnesia the mixture is allowed to age 20 minutes, after which a match is touched to the stuff. After filtering it is ready t drink. The state chemist testified at the hearing that one ounce was sufficient to cause death in 20 minutes. The liquor is alleged to have been sold by the druggist in almost every county of the state.

JACK CANUCK AGAIN RINGS THE BELL

"Fine Old Time" Had The Prince

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—One of the most cheerful twenty minutes which President Wilson has spent since his illness he thoroghly enjoyed when the Prince of Wales called upon him at the White House. In describing this visit afterwards, Rear-Admiral Carey T. Grayson, the President's personal physician said the two had "a fine old time."

President Wilson sat propped up in a great old-fashioned bed, in which not only Abraham Lincoln had slept, but in which the Prince's grandfather Edward VII had reposed when he visited this country nearly 60 years ago. Even before Prince Edward knew of this his attention was attracted by the great mahogany bed with its towering headboard. He kept talking about it to the President.

The President and his boyish caller laughed and joked the entire time, and Dr. Grayson said afterwards there was no doubt that the visit put the President in splendid humor. It was something of a family party for the President asked many questions about King George, Queen Mary and Queen Alexandra, all of which the Prince was of course, able to answer in detail. He brought the President many personal messages from the Royal family.

Raisin Whiskey Is Sure Death

Latest Victim in Detroit of Bootleg $5.00 a Bottle Brand Died Smiling.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 15.—Alarmed by the increasing number of deaths, due to bootleg liquor, Coroner J. W. Rootacher issued a warning yesterday against homemade and other substitutes.

Raisin whiskey is a brother of deadly wood alcohol, the Coroner said, while he listed either whiskey, juniper gin, Jamaica ginger, hair tonics, "drops" and extracts of various kinds under the same head.

Since the first of the year there have been sixteen deaths according to Wayne county morgue records, due directly to these preparations. In addition there have been numerous cases of paralysis, insanity anr blindness due to liquor substitutes.

As a safety measure, Dr. Rothacher advises avoidance of all this "ersatz." Unless the present craze subsides, the Corner believes there will be many victims.

Six of the sixteen victims are listed as having died either of acute cr chronic alcoholism. Most of these died through the product of amateur distillers.

The latest victim is John R. Ash a fifty-year-old street railway employee. He was found sitting against a tree, a smile on his face and a partly-emptied bottle of raisin whiskey by his side.

With regular whiskey at $15 a quart demand for raisin whiskey has increased to such an extent that there practically is a raisin famine in Detroit. Despite efforts of Government operatives the various stills are turning this out in great quantities and peddlers are disposing of it at $5 a quart.

Cut Heart Out Of League Covenant

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Squarely joining issue with President Wilson, the Senate adopted a reservation qualifying the obligaticus of the United States Senate under Article 10 of the League of Nations Covenant. A solid Republican line-up, reinforced by four Democratic votes put the reservation across exactly as it came from the Foreign Relations Committee, and in virtually the same language which the President declared on his Western tour would cut the heart out of the covenant and mean the rejection of the treaty. The vote by which the reservation won was 46 to 33.

"It has been an honor and a privilege to serve this great Province, particularly during the strenuous war period through which we have just passed, and the future prosperity and happiness of Ontario will be my dearest wish.

D'Annunzio Off On Another Adventure

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

PARIS, Nov. 15.—The American peace delegation here has received a telegram from Vice-Consul O'Hara at Trieste telling of reports there that D'annunzio had left Fiume on the torpedo boat Valloa and landed on the Dalmation coast where he is engaged in another adventure.

Victory Loan May Exeeed Half Billion

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

TORONTO, Nov. 15.—Confidence that the half billion mark will have been passed in the Victory Loan campaign when the subscription lists close to-night is expressed at Loan Headquarters here. The latest returns give the total for all Canada as $478,795,778 but this does not cover all of the provinces to date.

Killed His Comrade With A Shovel

Toronto Police Are Searching for Slayer of Italian Laborer.

TORONTO, Nov. 14.—Struck over the head by a shovel in the hands of a compatriot, for whom the police are searching, Joe Caramandi, aged 35, an Italian, of 72 Terauley Street, died in St. Michael's Hospital yesterday afternoon from a fractured skull.

The two men were employed on an excavation at the Robertson Candy Works, 103 Queen Street, east. In some manner an altercation occurred, and before it could be prevented, a fight ensued. The other man had a shovel in his hands at the time, and he is alleged to have struck Caramanda on the head with such force as to fracture his skull. The assault was witnessed by many men. The foreman of the gang seized Caramandi's assailant, and handing him over to some of the laborers, told them to hold him while he telephoned to the police. Instead of doing this the men allowed the prisoner to go. He disappeared down a lane on Richmond Street. Detective-Sergeants Koster, Young and Wickett were sent out to trace him.

The name of the wanted man is given as Guinara Mastroianin, an Italian, aged 26.

Believe Vast Jewel Fraud Is Thwarted

Men Face Charge Involving $20,000 Worth of Diamonds.

TORONTO, Nov. 15.—A long-distance telephone call saved local diamond merchants probably $24,000 or more yesterday afternoon and resulted in the arrest of G. S. Raidin and J. H. Rothman, who carried cards advertising their place of business at 146 St. James street, Montreal. When Detective Sergeants Charles Young and Frank Wickett picked the two men up on Adelaide near Bay street, they wetfoc dau e,'apE c3 fIT—gtdBBME found loose and set diamonds and other stones, valued at possibly over $20,000 done up in four neat packages. The pair had just arrived from Montreal in the morning and lost no time in getting to work. They were on their way to the station when arrested at 5 o'clock.

Calling on Bernard Allen, a diamond merchant in the Continental Life Building, Raidin negotiated for the purchase of $4,500 worth of loose diamonds. He tendered a cheque which was marked by Molson's Bank for the amount. Allen had previously received an order some three months ago for $2,500 and delivered the stones when the cheque given was presented and paid. This time he took the cheque and handed over the stones.

Becoming suspicious he went to the Bank of Toronto King and Bay streets and called up the Molsons Bank, Montreal. They replied that the cheque for $4,500 had been marked for $45. He then reported the matter to the police. In the meantime the pair from Montreal had visited other diamond dealers. From A. Rosenthal & Co., 125 King street west, they got a diamond cluster and some loose stones and they also managed to do business with several other firms. Another diamond dealer, J. Boas, is stated to have been victimized for $3,500 or over.

On Raidin's card was printed: "Manufacturer and Importer of High-class Jewelery. Platinum Work a Specialty." His overcoat bore the name of a New York tailor and also had the name of 'J. Rapaport, N.Y.' stencilled on it. Rothman bore similar business cards, and both had the same address in Montreal. In all, five diamond merchants of the city were visited. The two men were taken to No. 2 Station and a charge of fraud laid against them.

HUNDRED STITCHES PUT IN HIS THROAT

REGINA, Sask., Nov. 15.—John Wilson, formerly a sub-Inspector in the Dominion Police enforcing the Military Service Act, is in the General Hospital here with 100 stitches in his throat, following an attempt to commit suicide with a small penknife while in a police cell. Mary Wilson, whom he married in Slamanan, Scotland, in 1908, is missing, and has not been seen since September 27, 1918, and is believed to have been murdered by her husband, according to the police, in an automobile near the Borden Ferry across the Saskatchewan River(on the trail to Blaine Lake. On September 29, 1918, two days after his wife left Regina to join her husband by appointment at Saskatoon, Wilson married Jessie Patterson, of Blaine Lake, with whom he had been in love for two years. These are the outstanding features in a mass of evidence being collected by the Provincial police, who are working up a murder case against Wilson.

Last Day Of Campaign Splendid Totals Anticipated

Applications totalling $2,122,750 had been put into the Victory Loan 1919 up to last night for this district.

Returns coming in during today indicate that we have a good chance of perhaps equalling last year's record of nearly $2,700,000 combined team members' and special subscriptions.

A feature of yesterday's canvass was the special subscription of $80,000 put in by the City of Belleville. This gives us 180 per cent. of our special subscriptions objective and brings the total specials from the city up to $105,000.

With the exception of Sidney, Thurlow, Elzevir and Grimsthorpe and Carlow and Mayo, each of the eighteen canvassing districts in Hastings county have wone their Prince of Wales' flags, many of them having crests for an additional 25 per cent over their objective. Mr. W. A. McMurray, Gilmour, canvasser for Tudor, Limerick and Cashel, has now no less than six crests for 263 per cent. This splendid total puts him at the lead for the highest percentage in the county.

Big Day Today.

Today is the big day of the campaign. Every effort is being made to wind up with a flourish. City banks are to remain open tonight until nine o'clock in order to accommodate last minute investors. County Headquarters, 194 Front Street, will be open until 12 o'clock midnight. Every facility is being provided for everyone not to miss this last great opportunity.

Fifty Deep at Banks.

Reports from Toronto at noon today say that there are line-ups outside banks of investors in some cases fifty people deep. The last minute crush to invest is confidently expected to take Ontario over the three million mark. There has been a big rush at local headquarters all day. Special arrangements have been made for writing of applications.

Belleville's Flag.

With the City Hall bell tolling and fire reels clanging, Belleville's Prince of Wales' flag was formally presented to the city by Mr. W. B. Deacon, Chairman of Hastings County Victory Loan committee, today at noon. Acting Mayor W. A. Woodley received the flag in the absence of Mayor Platt and several of the City Fathers were present. Fluttering in the beautiful sunshine the flag makes a pretty picture with its Prince of Wales' Coat of Arms on a white background. It represented 125 per cent. of the city's objective, $695,450 having been subscribed up to last night.

As a token of the splendid way our citizens have again come forward to back up our country with staunch, true patriotism, this flag should long remain a cherished treasure.

Efforts To Settle Miners Dispute

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press Limited

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Operators and miners again faced each other today in an effort to settle the controversy which led to the recent nation-wide strike of soft coal miners. Secretary of Labor Wilson, by whom the conference was called here yesterday, in an address told both sides just what would have to be done for an adjustment of their disputes when the conference reconvened at ten o'cloeq today. The suggestions outlined by Mr. Wilson were the first thing to be discussed by both factions.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Acceptance without qualification by the mine workers of Secretary of Labor Wilson's proposal for the negotiation of a nation-wide scale agreement was announced at the Conference to-day by John L. Lewis, acting president of the United Mine Workers of America.

FOREIGNER KILLED HIS BEST FRIEND

Toronto, Nov. 15.—Frederick Hanson, a Norwegian, the self-admitted slayer of William Hanson, a Dane and who had pleaded guilty in the Assizes to manslaughter, was sentenced yesterday by Mr. Justice Sutherland to twelve years in Kingston Penitentiary The crime was committed while both men and another Dane were on a drinking bout. The prisoner, who had spent many sleepless nights in jail since the occurrence, before sentence was passed, expressed his sorrow for having killed the best friend he had in this country. He and the deceased, he said, had worked together for a long period and never had there been hard feeling or ill words between them. "I will never touch drink again; be lenient with me and I will bless you," pleaded the prisoner, who appeared to feel his terrible position.

No Trace Of Missing Steamer

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Mich., Nov. 15.—As hours passed without no word from the lake steamer John Owen, marine men here clung to the hope today that the ore carrier had put into one of numerous harbors between the Soo and Keweenaw Point and out-ridden the storm that for three days has lashed Lake Superior into a sea of mountainous waves, accompanied by a blinding snow storm. Telegraph Island communication lines were paralyzed but all points reached by the coast guards reported that the Owen had not been sighted. Vessels on the lake were searching for her by wireless while they kept a sharp watch for wreckage from surf boats. Eagle Harbor coast guard statino were dispatched to Manitou Island this morning in an attempt to locate and identify the wreckage reported in that vicinity by the steamer Wilpen. The Owen carried a crew of 20 and was last sighted on Wednesday.

REV. FATHER MEA PRESENTED WITH PURSE OF GOLD

KINGSTON, Nov. 14.—Rev. Father C. J. Mea left last night for New York, from which port he sails next week to spend the winter in Europe. Before his departure he was made the recipient of a testimonial amounting to $3,000 from members of the congregation of St. Mary's Cathedral, as a mark of the esteem and affection in which he is held by them. Father Mea may be remembered as a prominent witness at the civil action in which Sister Mary Basil was awarded heavy damages against Archbishop Spratt and others in the Kingston courts a couple of years ago.

It is also stated here that Father Mea has been summoned to Rome.

President and Madame Poincare have returned to France from their visit to Britain.

Community Campaign Successfully Launched

A representative meeting of citizens was held in the City Building last evening to perfect an organization to assist in a Community Campaign in this city, under the auspices of the Canadian Publicity Bureau. The campaign has been inaugurated and there is every indication that is will be a success. The objects and the benefits to be derived from the campaign aws explained by Mr. Crosby of the Bureau, who is at the head of the organization here.

Those present at the meeting were as follows:

Col. Marsh; Ald. Bone; Ald. Riggs; Messrs. W. W. Elliott; J. A. Marsh; B. J. Jennings; T. H. Coppin; H. F. Ketcheson; Col. O'Flynn; Dr. Marshall; J. A. Higgs; F. Quick; G. Jenkins; J. Cook; W. H. Gilbert; P. C. McLaurin, J. H. DeMarsh; F. S. Anderson; G. Waton; W. S. Cook; F. Smith; J. McFadyen; H. Clarke; J. O. Herity; Ald. Hanna; C. Whalen; J. Elliott; E. McBride; E. F. Dickens; J. St. Charles; J. G. Moffat; A. Jones; Rev. Dr. Scott; J. A. McFee; W. B. Deacon; J. L. R. Gorman; H. E. Fairfield and W. Doyle.

Col. Marsh, President of the Board of Trade occupied the chair and stated the object of the meeting was namely to entertain and carry out a proposition of the Canadian Publicity Bureau to assist in building up Belleville. It is time we all got together to build up the city. A campaign will be inaugurated and carried on for three weeks.

THE ORGANIZATION

Mr. Crosby explained that the Canadian Civic Bureau is linked up with the American Bureau. We are interested in what is done after the campaign is over and what has been accomplished by the city organization. We have in 5 years gone through many experiences and given our men for a worthy cause and today the world is facing new conditions. We have learned much through the war and one thing was co-operation. Within the next ten years some cities will have accomplished much in the way of progress. A small group of men planning and working together for a city can accomplish much. A business man looks forward year to year and plans his business to increase in volume. First it is necessary to have a working organization and a membership responsible to the organization. The method of election is different, as the directors are elected by all the members of the organization and not by a few. The first thing to do after the membership is obtained is to map out a programme as a Board of Director is supposed to draft out the work for the particular concerns they are identified with. The membership is signed for 3 years as one year spells failure whilst 3 years spell success. Belleville should and must grow, but determine carefully in what direction you are going to have the city grow. Are the boys and girls being kept here to help upbuild the city, or are they being educated here to grow up and go away to help build up some other city. Manufacturers will come to a city when the ground has been prepared for its location, in the way of school accomodation, house accomodation, etc. What ig o thave the city grow. Are the boys have in Belleville? This is simply a drive and the idea is to keep the drive going. In the next three weeks the gospel of service will be preached. It is to interest all in the upbuilding of Belleville. This matter must be entered into with whole heartedness. This organization will develop leadership amongst all and not allow the burden of work to fall upon a few, but upon many. The membership will be for three years and the fee will be $25 per years and industries will be asked to contribute towards the organization. It will be found that $25 will not be too much as a fee. Your success is our success and we will work for your interest in this campaign.

Col. Marsh said he felt confident that this organization would be a success and for the next three weeks all should get to work to make this campaign a success.

Ald. Bone—Industrial sights have to be secured in Belleville. He would do all he could to assist in the campaign.

EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE

An Executive Committee of nine was selected by ballot from a list of 75 and the following received the greater number of votes.

Chairman: Lt.-Col. L. W. Marsh; H. W. Ackerman; Ald. Jamieson Bone W. B. Deacon; John Elliott; Ald. C. Hanna; J. A. Higgs; H. F. Ketcheson; E. D. O'Flynn; Ald. W. B. Riggs.

Recommends Internal Bathing for Piles and Constipation

If people who suffer from constipation, piles and the many ills resulting from accumulated waste in the intestines would realize what the J.B.L. Cascade is doing for thousands of people who are being daily restored to perfect health by its use, there would be a J.B.L. Cascade in every Canadian home.

Mr. E. Nighswander, of Green River, Ont., writes: "I purchased a J. B. L. Cascade from you about ten months ago and consider it the best money I ever invested. For years I have been troubled with constipation, ulcers in the bowels and piles, which all the money I spent on medicines and doctors only relieved temporally. My J. B. L. Cascade has completely cured these troubles, and I feel it a duty I owe to my fellow-men to endorse the Cascade in the very highest terms. No amount of money could estimate the value it has been to me. No home should be without one."

The J.B.L. Cascade is the only perfected invention for internal bathing. Keeps the system sweet and clean, cures constipation, headaches, rheumatism, and keeps you fit at all times. It is shown and explained at J. S. McKeown's Drug Store.

ONLY BEARDED ONE IS RANEY OF TORONTO

"Well, I suppose you expected to see a bunch of long-whiskered, long-booted countrymen," said Hon. Peter Smith to a reporter at Government House, while the new Ministers were waiting to sign the visitors' book in the entrance lobby.

"Well, not exactly," replied the reporter, looking at Hon. Manning Doherty, who appeared spick and span in a dark morning coat trimmed with black silk braid.

The only one of us who wears a beard is Raney,' 'continued the Hon. Mr. Smith. "He comes from the city not the farm, and we are going to pass an order-in-Council to make him take them off."

"We should have come in high boots and working clothes," said Hon. Mr. Smith, with a laugh. "It would have been so nice for the photographers and the movies."

USE A LITTLE COMMON SENSE

We read of an old gentleman a short time since who in testifying of some liniment for Rheumatism said: "In forty years this liniment never failed to relieve my rheumatic twinges." These twinges were but the effects of a specific CAUSE. How much more sensible it would have been for the old gentleman to have tried CHIROPRACTIC for his Rheumatism. The CAUSE would have then been adjusted and the result is that the twinges would not have occurred year in and year out.. If there is no cause there can be no effect. Vessels Wrecked In Big Storm

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Nov. 15.—The worst storm in years is sweeping Lake Superior.

Two vessels are lost, the J. B. Owen, with a crew of twenty, and the H. E. Runnels. The Runnels went aground off Grand Marais, between here and Marquette, on the south shore of Lake Superior and pounded to pieces during the gale of last night and early today, according to information received here this afternoon. The meagre details received indicated that the vessel's crew of 17 were rescued by coast guards, who shot a lint to the sinking ship.

No word has been received from Manitou Island, at the tip of Keweenaw Point, where, it was said, wreckage, thought to be part of the upper works of a steamer, was sighted by vessels passing here today.

The steamer J. J. Nessen grounded in a reef in Georgian Bay while en route to Harbor-Springs for a cargo of lumber. The storm is threatening the ship with destruction.

PROVERBS OF BALZAC

Less Ornate and Poetical Than Those of Victor Hugo.

Honore de Balzac, to whom has long been accorded the primacy among the realists of fiction, deserves also the distinction of being acknowledged the leader among novelists whose sententious observations and epigrammatic asides as their plot unfold adapt their works to the quoter's purpose. From Balzac's great romanticist rival, Victor Hugo, more ornate and poetical sentiments could be culled, but they are not of the kind so likely to remain in the memory. Were all Balzac's shrewd little sayings, epitomes often of common sense —sometimes, it is true, with a flavor of cynicism — collected, they would prove not unworthy of comparison with the "Maxims" of La Rochefoucauld. In proof of which there follow two-score, representing half as many novels:

"Noble conduct makes even ignorance seem worthy."

"Hope is the better half of courage."

"Botany came later than flowers."

"In a long run it is with a profession as with marriage—we cease to remark anything but its drawbacks."

"The finest things in life are life's illusions."

"If you count your sheep the wolf will eat them."

"Talent in man is much what beauty is in woman—simply a promise."

"Fame, like the sun, hot and luminous at a distance, is cold as the summit of an Alp when you approach it."

"After Sunday there will come Monday."

"To forget is the great secret of strong creative natures."

"Fear makes for itself idols."

"Power consists not in striking hard or often, but in striking straight."

Gratitude is a fool's word; one finds it in the dictionary, but it is not in the heart of man."

"Humanity, socially speaking, is not placed between good and bad, but between bad and worse."

"The husband who leaves nothing to be desired is a lost man."

"The world always ends by condemning those whom it accuses."

"It often takes two men to make a perfect lover."

"'Legality' is a powerful adverb; it supports many fortunes."

"Fortuneless people must be faultless."

"The sayings of great men are like silver gilt in use; constant repetition destroys their lustre."

"In every poet there is hidden a pretty woman of the worst kind."

"In love first sight is second sight."

"Between doing good and doing evil the only difference is a good or a bad conscience; one is as much trouble as the other."

"The moment the mind becomes finical the manners follow suit."

"We are never so fortunate or unfortunate as people say we are."

"Hope is the flower of desire, faith the fruit of conviction."

"The fall of a great man is always in the same ratio as the height he has reached."

"Glory is a poison best taken in small doses."

"Liberty gives birth to anarchy, anarchy leads to despotism, and despotism brings back liberty."

"Death is the consecration of genius."

"He who can govern a woman can govern a nation."

"Nothing demands more attention than things which seem natural; one is always suspicious enough of the extraordinary."

"All human power is a compound of patience and time."

"Troy and Napoleon are only poems."

"A man who has a vice is always the valet of his enemies when they know how to pull the string."

"Confidence is accepted as power, of which it is the outward sign."

"Mistrust a woman who speaks of her virtue."

"We never lack money for our caprices; it is only the price of useful and necessary things that we haggle about."

"Yes and no—is not that the history of every controversy—religious, political or literary."

SIMPLE GARMENT FOR CHILD

"Gertrude" Petticoat Will Please the Little Maid as Well as Her Proud Mother.

The prettiest of undergarments for children are the little "Gertrude" petticoats, which slip over the head and fasten with one small button on one shoulder. Many of these have the simplest of narrow frills at the bottom and this is edged with a fine crochet lace or bit of Valenciennes. No other trimming is used on the little skirt.

Children, of course, will not remain the same size and length, therefore many mothers run a wide tuck just through the middle of the little one-piece petticoat, which can thus be lengthened as required.

The wash fabrics which do not require ironing, such as cotton crepe and kindred crinkled materials, are much in demand for the small garments. These are often made up in the flesh pink, which always pleases little girls, who are charmed by colors.

POLKA-DOT DESIGN POPULAR

Has Risen to the Distinction of a Fad Among Society Women at the Nation's Capital.

The polka dot in its various expressions, from the tiniest dot to the coin dot, seems suddenly to have "broken out" in Washington. Never a gathering these days of any particular moment that the silken fock with its polka-dot design does not appear.

Miss Bertha Bolling, sister of Mrs. Woodrow Wilson, wears a simple frock of dark navy blue cotton voile marked in the tiniest of dots set very thickly together. A one-piece effect, the frock has a surplice bodice with a tiny inset vest of organdie and cuffs and collar also of organdie. The skirt has rather long swinging hip draperies.

A very smart frock of plain white georgette combined with small polka-dot pattern in coral pink formed an attractive frock the other evening at an informal dinner at one of the suburban "inns" which have sprung up like mushrooms during the past two seasons.

Mrs. Arthur Capper, wife of the senator from Kansas, wears a costume of navy blue georgette with large coin dots of white, the georgette draped over navy blue silk.

An attractive frock worn the other evening at a downtown cafe was of white georgette, the tunic, the bell sleeves and the long draped sash all of sapphire blue georgette coin dotted in white, the dots widely separated.

The hat was a small toque of white satin, the brim a solid mass of black metallic grapes with black satin foliage.—From a Washington Letter in Women's Wear.

Settling on the Land In Palestine.

A glimpse of Palestine in progress from past to future is afforded by an account of the little colony of Yemenians, Jewish emigrants from southern Arabia, who began to assemble a few years ago to live by wood-cutting in the neighborhood of the forests of some 100,000 trees that had been planted in the district of Judea. The forests are part of a large plan for the reforesting of Palestine; and to house the wood-cutters small cement cottages were built at a cost of about 1,000 francs each, each with its garden and its opportunity for the homekeeper to buy his home by installments. Dwellings now stand which house 130 or 140 families, and the colony of wood-cutters is one of several similar groups in which families naturally strongly attached to the soil have been settled in Palestine, cultivating small farms, and progressing toward independent ownership. In some cases the colonies are co-operative; a single large farm is run by several families who share its profits, and at the same time pay wages to additional laborers. The experiments are still too young to be at all conclusive, but they are succeeding in their small way, and they are very likely the beginning of a wide and wholesome development.

Taste.

The sensation of taste, while of common and constant experience, is highly complicated in its nature. What is commonly called taste is not a simple sensation at all, but rather a complex. In addition to the actual functioning of the apparatus properly pertaining to the sense of taste, the tongue receives impressions of various other sorts, all of which go to make up this complex. As finally recorded in the consciousness, the taste of any substance has to do with its heat or coolness, perhaps with a mild amount of pain, certainly with astringency or acridity — which are in themselves further complexes of thermic and tactile sensations—and above all with smell. The reader will probably agree that ice cream and coffee are entirely different from their true selves when served at inopportune temperatures; and it is a matter of record that a person of the keenest taste may make the most ludicrous errors if asked, blindfolded and with his nose stopped, to identify substances placed in his mouth.

Scriptural Names.

Practically all the inhabitants of Little Tancock island, Lunenburg county, Nova Scotia, are named Levy. In the majority of cases the given or Christian name is taken from the Old Testament. The Levys claim to be direct descendants of the men who followed the fisherman's calling on the shores of Galilee in the time of Christ.

Whale With Hind Legs.

A female hump-back whale, having two hind legs, fifty inches in length, has been caught at the Kyukot Whaling Station in British Columbia. Manager Ruck, of the Consolidated Whaling Company, says that in his twenty years of whaling experience he has never heard of whales having legs on the exterior.

OLD KENTUCKY'S BRIEF WET SPELL

LOUISVILLE, Ky., Nov. 14.—Citizens from surrounding towns and States were hastening here to-day by train, automobile and on foot to witness a phenomenon of the dry year of 1919. Whiskey was on sale openly, without stealth or attempt at camouflage.

By virtue of an injunction granted by Federal Judge Evans, two of the biggest distillers in Louisville were permitted to dispose of their stocks in defiance of the war time prohibition measure. The court granted a temporally injunction restraining the Government from enforcing the law against them. These distillers had huge stocks of genuine Bourbon, 100 proof, guaranteed to harbor the well known pre-prohibition punch. It was being sold right off the floors of the warehouses at $70 a case to-day. Everybody was welcome. Everybody seemed to be there. Automobiles glided to the doors, motors humming smoothly, but made the erturn trip groaning and laboring under the weight of a tonneau packed with cases of whiskey.

Wheelbarrows stood nose to nose with aristocratic twelve cylinders. Motorcycles put-putted laboriously from the scene with a case or two strapped on behind. Citizens, both old and young, staggered down the streets under the weight of 12-quart cases. The crowds steadily increased. There was no danger of the whiskey supply running out, it was assured. Some several million gallons were on hand and enough more available to irritate the surrounding territory for miles.

HOME FROM JAPAN

COBOURG, Nov. 15.—Mrs. McWilliams, wife of Rev. W. R. McWilliams, a clergyman of the Bay of Quinte Conference, who is doing missionary work in Japan, arrived at Grafton from the Flowery Kingdom on a visit to her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Wilbur Winter. Mrs. McWilliams was called here because of the serious illness of her mother.

LIGHTHOUSE KEEPER DROWNS AT BIG ISLAND

Quebec, Nov. 15.—Charles Leblanc, who replaced one of the two lighthouse keepers at Big Island, Kamouraska, who were drowned last week, was drowned himself Thursday night when his boat upset. He was making for the shore to obtain provisions when the accident occurred. He called for assistance but sank before it could reach him.

LONDON, Nov. 16.—Emsk, capital of the All-Russian Government, has been occupied by Russian Bolsheviks, a Moscow official communique received here today asserts.

CALL IS RATIFIED

COBOURG, Nov. 15.—Peterboro Presbytery met at Port Hope and ratified the call of Rev. F. W. Anderson, Toronto, to the pastorate of St. Paul's Church, Port Hope. Arrangements were made for his induction on December 9.

The Agile Rhinoceros.

The rhinoceros, notwithstanding its unwieldly shape and short legs, is one of the most agile of beasts. A horseman can scarcely manage to overtake it, and in strength it is perhaps unsurpassed by any animal in the forest. In a single combat no animal but the elephant can stand up against it. To kill a rhinoceros a rifle ball must strike it just behind the shoulder.

Mongolia and the League of Nations.

Although the world at large gives little thought to Mongolia, report from the East indicates that Mongolia highly approves of the League of Nations, and hopes that it will be adopted as soon as possible and will begin to look after Mongolia immediately afterward. Mongolia, in short, is very much worried about the future, for China is preparing to cross the Gobi desert, where only the other day the failure of a badly organized effort to transport troops by motor postponed the advance, and although the nominal purpose of China is to protect her own frontier from Bolshevist invasion, Mongolia suspects an intention of resuming her former dominance over the Mongolian people. Before the Chinese revolution Mongolia was controlled by China; but with the downfall of the Manchu dynasty, and with the help and protection of Russia, the country became independent. Now in turn the Russian revolution has destroyed its protection by one powerful neighbor, and Mongolia anticipates, unless the League of Nations comes to the rescue, that she will again come under the political control of the other. Apparently as a self-governing nation Mongolia did better than many students of oriental affairs expected, and quite as well as was necessary for her own comfort. The Government is patriarchal, embracing a number of tribes, each of which governs itself, and with so few governmental expenses for police, roads, administration, or other elements of a more complex civilization, that it has liquidated a debt of $2,000,000 borrowed from Russia and spent largely, it is said, for 10,000 brass images of Buddha. The Hutukhtu rules ecclesiastically in Mongolia much as the [illegible] rules in Tibet.

U.S, Middies Cheer Prince Of Wales

WASHINGTON, Nov. 14.—The Prince of Wales left Washington tonight, accompanied only by his immediate personal staff, for a three-day stay in a southern winter resort, where he proposes to remain in strict incognito. His next public appearance will be Tuesday, when he arrives in New York to remain there until he sails for England the following Saturday.

The Prince called today on Mrs. Marshall, wife of Vice-President Marshall, who has been slightly indisposed. On his return from a trip to the Naval Academy at Annapolis, Md., he paid a visit to Cardinal Gibbons, the venerable head of the Roman Catholic Church in America. He was received by the Cardinal in the rectory of St. Patrick's Church, and chatted with him for ten minutes. Afterward he drove to the Belmont Home, where he dined privately.

Greets Old Veteran.

At the door of the rectory the Prince was greeted by James Burns, a veteran of the Boer war and a former trooper in the Tenth Royal Hussars, "The Prince's Own." Burns told the Prince that he had formed one of the guard of honor at the wedding of his father and mother.

The Prince discarded his military uniform in honor of his visit to Annapolis, and wore the costume of a Captain in the Royal Navy.

Building Shaken by Cheers.

At the Naval Academy he was introduced to the famous cheer of the Academy. When he entered the great memorial hall where the 2,000 midshipmen were assembled, Mike Curley, the school's cheer-leader, jumped to the platform and called for "four navies and three Princes." The big building shook at the roar that followed.

After a brief address to the midshipmen, in which he paid tribute to the achievements of the American navy in the war, the Prince planted a memorial tree in front of Bancroft Hall.

LONDON MEDS ON RAMPAGE.

"Pussyfoot" Johnston, the noted American prohibition advocate, is having a strenuous experience in England, where beer and bitters and spirits are still strongly entrenched. Captured by students, Johnston was roughly handled in London but not seriously injured. As he is accustomed to strenuous opposition, and being an American appreciates the value of advertising his cause is more likely to helped than hindered by rough-house tactics, and as he was invited to cross the sea and cross swords with the vested liquor interests he will no doubt take the strong-arm methods of his opponents as all in the day's work and merely as an expression of wet humor applied to a dry subject.

LABOR'S GREATEST VICTORY.

Organized labor's greatest victory was in obeying the mandate of the court and calling off the strike of the soft coal miners. The President of the Miners' Union, John Lewis, had it in his power to lead over 400,000 union miners in a defiance of the law and the government of the United States and create a state of anarchy which could not possibly have continued without grave consequences and bloodshed. Fortunately John Lewis was a patriot first, last and all the time, and knew that respect for law and order was the first bulwark in national safety.

"We are Americans and cannot fight our Government," said John Lewis, and the strike was over.

The United States Government and the mine owners can also show the highest type of patriotism and good citizenship by making every effort to meet the demands of the miners in improved conditions and better wages.

OIL TAKES PLACE OF COAL.

The coal strike has emphasized the necessity for providing in season for substitutes for coal. The New York Times in discussing the matter, speaks of the substituting of oil for coal as follows:

"The effect of the miners' strike probably not foreseen by them or their sympathizers and helpers is that it has much hastened the substitution of oil for coal as fuel for steamships. Even before the strike that change was going on as fast as conveniences permitted the laying up of coal-burning vessels, but it was not until the strike of longshoremen brought enforced idleness on many ships that their owners could afford in this day of high freight rates to take the time required for putting tanks in place of bunkers and making the other alterations which the use of the newer fuel requires.

"In recent weeks, however, all the yards at and near this port where such work can be done have been full of vessels receiving the equipment which will make them independent of strikes at the coal mines, here and in other countries. The list of these craft includes many names of large and well known vessels, as well as of many others only familiar in commercial circles.

"The tendency toward the use of oil as fuel for the purposes of navigation has long been marked, and its present acceleration will lead to a decrease in the demand for bituminous coal that will be felt by both the mine operators and the miners and it cannot fail to lower both prices and wages or at least to prevent them from continuing to advance. The exhaustion of the stock of unmined coal will also be delayed by this change, and so certain well-grounded apprehensions for the future will be in some degree allayed."

BUILDERS WANTED.

The development of the vast resources of Canada interrupted by the war will no doubt be renewed with greater enthusiasm than ever now that the war is over and the world is stormily battling its way back to prosperous peace conditions, with the additional and valuable impetus which the achievements of Canada's soldiers overseas and Canada's war efforts at home have afforded. Canada is now a household word in all parts of the world and this last great land of opportunity and "the second chance" will respond to the generous advertising afforded by the war with a rapidly increasing population, expansion of industrial activity and development of resources of land, forest, mine, water powers and transportation facilities. Already new industries are springing up on every hand and capitalists from overseas and the United States are seeking favorable locations in this country.

The citizens of Belleville are not blind to the fact that this is the day of opportunity, when energy and progressiveness can accomplish much in community building and the spirit of progress is only awaiting proper direction.

Belleville City Council and Board of Trade, after thorough study and investigation, have decided to inaugurate a campaign of progress and have enlisted the aid of the Canadian City Bureau, an organization of experts upon community development. The average citizen not in close touch with the leading civic organizations may look askance upon any local movement directed by strangers, but confidence must be reposed in the members of the local organizations who, after close investigation, decided that it would be to the interest of Belleville and district to invoke the aid of experts who have made a close and extensive study of community development along the best lines. Progressive efforts should not be hampered with uninformed criticism and every progressive citizen of Belleville should make it a point as an obligatory civic duty to become fully informed as to the expansion campaign inaugurated under the auspices of the City Council and the Board of Trade, and if found worthy, to help to the utmost.

The development of the resources of Belleville and district have been the subject of unlimited talk, but one ounce of energetic well-directed action is worth a world of words. An active development campaign must be pushed with men and money, and economy in time and money and best results will be obtained through the utilization of experts.

Proper publicity methods must also be used and these can not be effective if based upon a piker policy.

A great and prosperous future can be made a certainty for Belleville and district only if there is a helpful spirit of co-operation manifested and a progressive enterprising policy pressed to the limit.

Get together, everybody, and let the cheerful noise of builders drown out the discordant notes of pessimistic knockers who never can see any good in any movement which does not begin and end at their own doorstep.

Become Boosters for a Better Belleville and the development of this entire district with its wealth of resources.

Our Nickel Policy.

Toronto Star.

There is sensible ground on which critics may stand and question the nickel policy of the province now that the war is over. Nickel not only was, but will be, a war metal, and our supply of it should be shaken out and kept out. The refining of nickel should be entirely done in Ontario, any further supplies of the ore should be retained in public ownership; and the corporations that mine nickel should be taxed in earnest and not merely in a nominal way.

GOIN' DOWN ON THE 5.30 TRAIN

Preacher, professor, stenographer, clerk,
Toiler and storekeeper, just quitting work;
Shoppers and casuals, huddled they wait,
Showing their tickets to get through the gate.
Crowding and crushing for seats at the start,
Dreams in the noddle and hopes in the heart—
All aboard, life in the sun or the rain—
Goin' down home on the 5.30 train!

Newspapers open and heads buried in them,
Magazines open—new stories, begin them.
Neighbors exchanging the day's views of news,

A Laugh or Two

His Reputation.

Willie had swallowed a penny and his mother was in a state of much alarm.

"Helen!" she called to her sister in the next room, "send for a doctor; Willie has swallowed a penny!"

The terrified and frightened boy looked up imploringly.

"No, mamma," he interposed, "send for the minister."

"The minister?" asked his mother incredulously. "Did you say the minister?"

"Yes. Because papa says our minister can get money out of anybody."

He Heard the Truth.

Little Eleanor gazed long and thoughtfully at the young man who was calling on her grown-up sister Kate.

"May I climb up on your knee, Mr. Greene?"

"Yes, of course, dear!" smiled the young man, who wanted to make a hit with the family. "Want to pull my hair, eh?"

"No; I want to see if I can find that word."

"Word? What word?" asked the puzzled visitor.

"I heard our Kate say this morning that if ever a man had the word 'idiot' written all over his face, it was you.

PUT VIM IN JADED MUSCLES

By stimulating and arousing the circulation with light applications of Absorbine, Jr., rubbed in thoroughly. This invigorating liniment acts quickly and surely. It is fragrant and pleasant to use—leaves no greasy residue on the skin.

As Absorbine, Jr., is a powerful germicide as well as a liniment, it is effective for prophylactic and aseptic uses; it destroys the germs in cuts and sores; it may be diluted and used successfully as an antiseptic and germicide for the mouth and throat.

Athletes will find it efficient for limbering sore, stiff muscles. A good formula for a rubdown is one ounce of Absorbine, Jr., to a quart of water or witch hazel.

It is composed of vegetable extracts and essential oils and is positively harmless. Get a bottle to-day and keep it in your desk, in your traveling bag, in your medicine cabinet or in the side pocket of your automobile. It is health insurance of a high type.

GOSPEL OF WRECKING.

The Aims of Bolshevism Clearly Defined.

Defined briefly, a Bolshevist is a person who believes in the immediate overthrow by force of all existing social, political, and economic institutions. Thus writes John A. Embry in Leslie's.

If we ignore the writings of the parlor Bolsheviki which only serve the purpose for which they were written, i.e., to cloud the whole issue, and the writings and public statements of such men as Nikolai Lenine, Leon Trotsky, and Eugene V. Debs, it is not at all difficult to get at the substance of the Bolshevist platform. According to these leaders, the tenets of Bolshevism are as follows:—

(1) The immediate abolition of the institution of private property by means of force. All private ownership of houses, land, and all means of production must be immediately abolished. The owners of these things, because of their exploitation of the proletariat, shall receive no compensation for their loss.

(2) There shall be no wages, in the sense of one man working for another. The only wages will be those paid by the state for productive labor.

There will be no rents, no profits, no interest.

(3) Nationalization of all industries. The workingmen shall have full control of the industries which shall by nationalization become the property of the whole people. The distribution of the products shall be attended to by the state. "From every man according to his ability, to every man according to his needs."

(4) The consumers' goods now in existence, houses, clothing, food, etc., shall be divided up among the working class which produced them. The former owners of these things shall receive a proportionate share only in case they join in good faith the cause of the social revolution.

(5) All who oppose Bolshevism or the social revolution whether members of the propertied class or not, shall have no rights a Bolshevist is bound to respect. Under no circumstances shall they be allowed freedom of press or association. Those who resist the new social order by force must be put down by the most violent means possible in order to strike terror to the hearts of others who otherwise might be led to follow their example.

(6) The social revolution is at hand. It is worldwide. To succeed for long anywhere it must succeed everywhere. The revolution means war to the death with the property-holding classes. The slogan of "Proletarians of all lands unite" must be changed to the battle cry of "Proletarians of all lands to arms."

(7) Family life and family ties must be weakened in every way possible, because the family is the greatest bulwark of that iniquity of iniquities, the institution of private property. This is to be accomplished by extremely lax marriage and divorce laws, public sanction of "free love," or, if, the population can be induced to stand for it, the nationalization of women."

When the Bolsheviki overthrew the Kerensky government in November, 1917, and Lenine declared the dictatorship of the proletariat, Russia entered upon a social experiment, the aim of which is embraced in the political, social and economic planks of the Bolshevist platform I have just outlined. Since that time many Americans have returned from Russia and told of the utter economic ruin that has overtaken the country, the orgy of bloodshed and terror that the leaders of the revolution have instituted, and the indescribable suffering that have been inflicted upon all members of the propertied class in Russia.

Tonic Treatment For The Nerves

Neuralgia and Other Severe Nervous Disorders Cured Through the Blood

In many severe nervous disorders the best remedy is often a tonic. The most active tonic treatment is recommended by the highest medical authority to arrest the progress of such disease. Dr. Williams Pink Pills are a tonic that acts on the nerves through the blood, which carries to the nerves the elements needed to build up and restore them to a normal condition.

Neuralgia, sciatica, nervous headaches and a number of more severe nervous troubles are properly treated by building up the blood with Dr. Williams Pink Pills and are often entirely cured in this way. If you are nervous you can help yourself by refusing to worry, by taking proper rest and sleep, by avoiding excesses and by taking out-of-door exercise. For medicine take Dr. Williams Pink Pills and you will soon notice the beneficial effect of this tonic in every part of the system. Miss Annie L. Johnston, R.R. No. 1, Listowel, Ont., is one of the numerous sufferers from nervous troubles who has found a cure through Dr. Williams Pink Pills. Miss Johnston says:—"For a long time I was a severe sufferer from nervous troubles, with the result that I grew very pale and weak. Medical treatment did not help me, and various medicines had no beneficial effect, until finally a friend advised me to try Dr. Williams Pink Pills. I began their use and took the pills regularly for several months, with the result that I not only gained in weight, but have recovered my full health and strength. I cannot praise Dr. Williams Pink Pills too highly for what they have done for me."

To build up the blood there is one remedy that has been a household word for a generation, Dr. Williams Pink Pills for Pale People. They tone up the entire system, make the blood rick and red, strengthen the nerves, increase the appetite, put color in the cheeks and lips and drive away that unnatural, tired feeling. Plenty of sunlight, good wholesome food and fresh air will do the rest. You can get Dr. Williams Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

DAUGHTER OF THE PHILISTINES

By

LEONARD MERRICK

CHAPTER XVI

Their liabilites had been discharged with such exceeding regularity up to the present that he decided to take the bolder course albeit it remained distasteful to him. He had been obliged to ask landladies to wait longer in his time, but it was one thing to be disappointed as a bachelor, and quite another when one had a wife and baby and nurse in the house. Madam Garin's countenance moreover was of a rather forbidding type and did not suggest a yielding disposition in money fatters; and he was agreeably surprised when she rejoined, 'Cela ne fait rien, monsieur,' after a scarcely perceptible pause as he spoke to her in passing her little office in the hall on Monday morning. Cynthia's relief was immense: it had been quite a serious crisis to her, her earliest experience of having to ask for credit; and to be on the safe side, he had not promised to settle the bill before Thursday. Both trusted, though, that the salary would be forthcoming on the earlier of the dates mentioned by Beaufort for if the nurse wanted anything bought in the meanwhile they would be compelled to temporize with her and that would have its awkwardess.

Beaufort did not refer to the subject on Wednesday and Kent went home with sixty-five centimes in his pocket. He got in late and Cynthia was already at dinner. She glanced at him inquiringly as he took his seat and he shook his head.

"Not yet," he murmured.

She disguised her feelings, and continued to talk chiffons with the woman opposite; but when they mounted to their room, and the proprietress looked out of the bureau at them with a greeting she felt a shade uncomfortable and hastened her steps.

"I hate that bureau," she said as soon as they had reached the haven of the first landing. "The Garins seem to live in it, and you can't get by without them seeing you. Well, he didn't give it to you, eh?"

"No; it will be all right to-morrow though. It's lucky I said Thursday instead of today. Has nurse been to you for anything?"

"Thank goodness, she hasn't! baby is bound to be out of something directly. You do think we are sure of it to-morrow, Humphrey, don't you?"

He said there was no doubt about it and they drew their chairs to the hearth. The night was cold and he went out presently to a grocer's close by and spent sixty centimes on a bottle of claret which was included by the humblest restaurants in the cheapest meal a prix fixe, smuggling it upstairs under his overcoat. In Madame's winelist it figured as medoc at two francs, and she would not have been pleased with him for obtaining it at a shop. They made it hot over their fire in one of the infant's saucepans and, sweetened with the sugar that they kept secreted for that purpose in the wardrobe, they found it comforting. Though their capital was now a sou, they were not unhappy, with the prospect of a hundred and seventy-five francs in the course of twenty-four hours, and once Cynthia laughed so gaily that the nurse came in and intimated that 'the rooms hopening into one another' made the noise very disturbing to her charge.

Kent went to the office next day without a cigarette, for he had smoked his last and he awaited his chief's arrival with considerable impatience. The editor had not been in when he returned to the pension for luncheon, but in reply to Cynthia's eager question he assured her he was certain to have the money in his pocket when he saw her again in the evening. He wanted a cigarette by this time very badly indeed and when three o'clock struck he left his desk and stood pulling his moustache at the window moodily. He began to fear it was to be one of the days when 'Billy' Beaufort did not look in at the office at all.

His misgivings proved to be well founded and dinner at night was agreeable neither to him nor the girl. She had been reluctant to go down to it, on hearing that Madam Garin could not be satisfied, and, though he had persuaded her to do so, sped past the bureau wih avered eyes. I was useless going in search of Beaufort; the only thing of which one could be positive with regard to his movements at this hour was that he would not be at his hotel; but Humphrey promised her to see him before commencing work in the morning and declared that he would send the necessary amount round to her at once.

The editor was staying at the Grand and when he called there Kent learned that he was still in his room. He found him lying in bed and reading his letters. A suit of dress-clothes trailed disconsolately across a chair, and by the window a fur-coat and a hat box had rolled on to the floor. He had not drunk his chocolate, but a tumbler of soda water and something, and a syphon stood on the table beside him, surrounded by his watch and chain some scattered cigarettes and the bulk of his correspondence. He looked but half awake and cross.

"What's the matter?" he murmured "Sit down. There's a seat there, if you move those things. Will you have anything to drink?"

"I won't have a drink, but I'll take one of those cigarettes, if I may," said Kent, sticking it in his mouth and inhaling gratefully. "I'm sorry to dun you, but you told me I could have the money 'Wednesday or Thursday' and I'm pressed for it. I want to send it up to my pension before going on to the shop."

Beaufort put out his tongue and drank some more of the contents of the tumbler thirstily.

"That will be all right," he said yawning; "don't you bother about that."

"But the point is, that I want it now," repeated Kent. "I dare say it would be 'all right,' but 'm in need of it this morning. My bill came up on Monday, and I put the woman off till yesterday—I can't put her off any more."

"What! is this the first week you owe her My boy, a week! I haven't paid my bill here for eleven weeks. Let her wait."

"You haven't a wife," said Kent. "I have. It's damned enpleasant for a girl, I can tell you!"

"How much does the old hag want" inquired the editor with resentment.

"A hundred and sixty, more or less, with extras. I have the interesting document with me, if you'd like to see it."

Billy gasped again.

"Oh, well," he said, "we'll engineer it. You—you tell your wife not to worry herself; and don't trouble any more—don't break your head. I'll see you through."

He settled his head on the pillow and appeared to be under the impression that the difficulty was disposed of.

"It's very good of you," said Kent; as his tone seemed to call for gratitude "I'm glad to hear you say so; but how soon can I have it?"

"Eh? Oh, I shall be able to draw to-morrow. Yiu shall have a hundred and sixty to-morrow. I give you my word of honor on it. I'll work it for you somehow. I won't see you in a hole."

PAINT ON TAFFETA

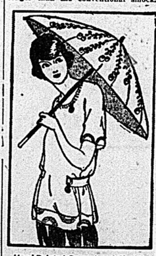
Easy to Produce Novel Effects on Parasols.

Simple Accessories Easily Transformed Into Things of Beauty—Smocks to Be Feature of the Fall Dress.

The sketch presented today shows a graceful, long-handled parasol on Japanese lines, made of dull blue taffeta and hand-painted in purple and black. The handle is black wood. Novelty parasols are decided additions to the summer wardrobe and by the use of hand-painting it is possible for a woman to possess one, or a number for that matter, entirely different from anything the shops may be able to offer. A plain parasol purchased at a nominal price may be easily transformed into a really rich and apparently expensive article by decorating it with painted or embroidered designs. Floral effects are most frequently seen, but vividly plumaged birds are effective. The surface of one lovely parasol noticed recently was pretty well covered with round dots in various sizes and colors, the general effect suggesting floating balloons.

The smock shown may be made of georgette in any preferred color and embroidered with heavy wool in contrasting shade.

Smocks now being brought out for fall emphasize the strong hold this garment has acquired. The Cossack smock is an interesting model. This is cut on straight lines and is somewhat longer than the conventional smock.



Hand-Painted Parasol and Modish Frock.

The jersey weaves either in silk or wool (fiber silk is more frequently employed than pure silk) are popular fabrics, and brilliantly contrasting silk floss, heavy wool or chenille is used to embroider the garment.

One of these smocks will be found excellent for sport wear during the late summer or early fall days. The young college or high school girl will find such a garment matched with a plain wool fabric skirt very useful.

Preparation of the wardrobe of the girl who goes away to school should be begun early. Fortunately fall styles have already been sufficiently settled so that making up simple dresses, blouses, etc., for school wear may be done along next season style specifications.

SOMETHING ABOUT MILK

Mysteries and Marvels in Its Production and Life.

How Milk Is Secreted—Thunder Does Not Sour Milk, But Bacteria Does the Business—Agalactia, or Absence of Milk, Occurs More Frequently With Cows Than In the Females of Other Live Stock.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

A CONDITION known as "agalactia," or absence of milk in the mammae at the time of parturition, probably occurs more frequently in cows than in females of other classes of stock. It may occur in a female in any condition as regards general health, general care and surroundings. The causes, or conditions to which it is due, are not well understood. It occurs even though pregnancy has been apparently normal and has reached full term. It is probably more frequently seen in females which have not bred for a long time, or in those which have produced their first young, though themselves aged. While it may occur in an animal under any conditions, there are conditions that appear to predispose an animal to the trouble. In such cases there appears to be a want of development in the lacteal apparatus, which may have been caused by previous or present chronic disease of the udder, a chronic lessening in bulk, called "atrophy" of the udder, exhaustion following disease, severe labor, insufficient food, either during or immediately after pregnancy, natural debility, emaciation, etc.

The mammae is usually small and soft, and attempts to milk produce only a few drops of a yellowish fluid, in some cases followed by a few drops of a whitish, watery fluid. Treatment is frequently unsuccessful. It consists in feeding liberally on easily digested milk-producing food, massaging the udder frequently and stripping the teats three or four times daily. Great attention should be paid to the digestive organs in order to keep them as normal as possible, and the patient should be kept so that she will take considerable exercise. The writer's experience has been that the administration of drugs is non-effective.

In many cases the gland becomes perfectly inactive, and remains so until after the next parturition, when, in most cases, it becomes normal.—J. H. R., O. A. College, Guelph.

How Milk is Secreted.

No one knows exactly how the cow secretes milk. Various theories have been put forth explaining the process, but none of these are entirely satisfactory. About all we know is that milk is a true secretion of the mammary glands located in what is known as the udder, more commonly called the "bag" of the cow. It is made from blood.

In order that the cow may have plenty of blood, out of which she may manufacture milk. She must be in a healthy condition, be supplied with plenty of pure air, and water, and have an abundance of the right kind of feed.

Some cows are unable to make milk abundantly even though the owner does all he can be expected to do for his cows. In these cases, it is the fault of the cows—they have not the power within themselves of making milk from their feed. They seem to change their feed into blood which is used as a basis for manufacturing beef, instead of milk. In addition, there are cows which apparently do little or nothing with their feed—they neither give milk in paying quantity, nor do they become fat. These are classed as "boarder" cows, and are very unprofitable for a farmer to keep.

The only way to know for certain whether or not a cow is able to secrete milk in paying quantity, is to weigh the milk from each cow for at least three days in each month. Also test the milk for fat at least twice during each lactation period. In this way, the owner may select the good from the poor cows, and thus build up a profitable herd for dairy purposes.—Prof. H. H. Dean, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

Why Milk Sours.

It is a common impression that thunder sours milk, but this is not so.

The reason that milk sours is that minute plants, known as bacteria, act on the sugar in milk, changing it into lactic or milk acid. One scientist, however, says this explanation is not satisfactory. He regards the souring of milk as a result of feeding on milk sugar by the lactic acid germs, leaving behind them what is known as sour milk.

No matter what the true explanation may be in detail, we believe that souring of milk is caused in some way by "germs" or bacteria which are microscopic plants that fall into milk from the air, and get in from many other places.

Like all plants, they must have air, suitable temperature, and moisture, in order to grow. The common plan of preventing the milk going sour is to cool it to 50 deg. F. as soon as possible after milking and keep it cold until it is used. The reason for this is, the cold makes an unfavorable condition for these plants to grow, hence the milk remains sweet, though sometimes it takes on bad flavors, or develops disease producing germs. In order to prevent this, we "pasteurize" milk in order to kill the germs present, by means of heat. If it is cooled and kept cold after heating, the milk will keep sweet for some time and is free from disease germs. This is known as the safest kind of milk to use. "Safety First" is a good rule when buying milk.—Prof. H. H. Dean, O. A. College, Guelph.

Solve this Puzzle!

FOR Johnny's birthday his mother presented him with a dandy rifle, and Johnny took the four targets that came with the rifle and went out to the back yard to try his skill. Shortly after, his mother came out too to satisfy herself that Johnny knew how to use his gun. Upon examining the targets she saw all the holes made by the bullets, and being a quick-thinking woman, she exclaimed: "Why, Johnny, what a good shot you are—and do you know that you have made every target spell a word? Can you tell what each target spells?"

Can YOU Puzzle It Out?

Johnny couldn't, so his mother told him HOW TO DO IT. Each target spells a word. Each circle of each target shows a number of bullet holes, so you can see by the targets, and each circle represents a letter. The number of holes indicates the position of that letter in the alphabet. [illegible]

Music and Drama

What The Press Agents Say

F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest will present George V. Hobart's much discussed modern morality comedy drama of today, "Experience," called by critics the most wonderful play in America, at Griffin's next Wednesday night, enroute from Ottawa to Toronto.

Mr. Hobart has taken the univarsal adventures of mankind, the struggles, the sins the temptations, the elements which persuades man for right or wrong, and has woven them into a play of vital reality. He has aptly called it "Experience", for under that title may be included all the attributes of men and women, good and bad, in their relationship to each other.

In this unique play Mr. Hobart has written one of the most interesting and thrilling of modern dramas. He has directed his appeal and efforts in language and situations so universally accepted as true ,that whoever see or hears the play may know.

"Experience" tells the story of the episodes through which Youth—the average young man of to-day—passes in his effort to achieve supreme happiness, and one is often reminded of "Pilgrim's Progress" while watching the show, although "Experience" is quite modern and up-to-date.

Youth leaves Love, his first sweetheart, and accompanies Ambition into the Highways of Life. He meets Pleasure, a very charming and captivating woman, on the Street of Vaccillation as he enters the city, and fascinated by Pleasure, Youth turns from Ambition, refusing at the same time to heed the call of Opportunity, and with Pleasure visits the Golden Cabaret. 'Experience", his guide, looks on while Youth goes the pace with Passion, Wealth, Beauty and Intoxication.

There are ten scenes showing his downward career and his final regeneration. The play is handsomely staged and will be acted by a splendid cast.

MARY PICKFORD IN
"CAPTAIN KIDD, JR."

As a stage play, 'Captain Kidd, Jr' was a genuine success, a whimiscally delightful offering with the merit of great originality and the added features of freshness and quaint character delineation. As a screen vehicle for the talents of Mary Pickford there is every indication that it will be numbered among her most successful offerings Rida Johnson Young wrote the play from which Frances Marion constructed a photplay that, from alll accounts retains not only the charm of the original but possesses independent qaulity. As a production on the legitimate its quality was the fact that it was pop the most favorable comment from the foremost dramatic critic throughout the country and the best evidence of its qaliuty was the fact that it was popular from the start—one of the most popular of Miss Young's numerous stage successes. In the role of Mary McTavish Miss Pickford is said to have developed new heights of histrionic perfection. She is lovable, delightful, and tremendously effective in the character it is said. The photoplay will be shown at Griffin's this Monday and Tuesday. "Uncle Tom Without the Cabin" is the title of the funny Sennett comedy featuring Ben Turpin which is to be shown on the same program along with Gaumont World News and a new 101 ranch Western story.

"MICKEY" (Mabel Normand) the little girl you will never forget who returns to Griffin's Monday to Wednesday, November 24, 25, 26, Matinee daily, after a four months' engagement at Grand Opera House, Toronto.

"OH YOU WOMEN!"
EXCELLENT COMEDY

John Emerson and Anita Locs, authors of "Oh, You Women" which is attracting immense audiences to Griffin's and which is being shown for the last time to-night have enriched motion pictures with the most extraordinary series of satirical comedies yet produced. They began their partuership three years ago with the production of "H's Picture in the Papers" for 'Doug' Fairbanks. This was followed by "The Americano" "In Again, Out Again" "Wild and Wooly" "Down to Earth" and "Reaching for the Moon" for Fairbanks and "The Social Secretary" for Norma Talmage. In "Oh, You Women" they have treated a most timely subject in a novel and entertaining manner—always with a laugh up the sleeve, but with a very real and interesting purpose behind it all. Ernest Truex and Louise Huff head a capable cast. Five other plays of merit are also being screened on the same program.

NORMA TALMAGE IN
"HEART OF WETONA"

Norma Talmage the beautiful Select picture star is appearing at the Palace to-night in a splendid picturization of David Belasco's stage success "The Heart of Wetona." This is an Indian story by the noted author George Scarborough. A new Lyons-Moran comedy "Almost Welcome," British Canadian News Graphic and the 2nd chapter of the thrilling stunt serial "The Great Gamble" is also being exhibited.

VIVIAN MARTIN AT PALACE MONDAY

Of all the many becoming costumes worn by clever Vivian Martin in her recent photoplays, perhaps the most becoming of all is her costume in the first part of "The Trouble Buster" in which she appears at the Palace this Monday to Wednesday, matinee daily this is a sober, dark-looking peasant girl in a costume which in itself is not attractive, but which as an excellent foil to Miss Martin's piquant beauty and strongly accentuates her charm. Following that, she appears in boys clothes and later in very modish gowns of feminine charm. The 12 chapter of the thrill packed serial "Perils of Thunder Mountain" and a new Luke comedy are also being exhibited.

Lent Starts Feb. 14 Easetr Sunday April 4

With the New Year less than fifty days away interest naturally begins to quicken in the approach of 1920. Already calendars and almanacs displaying the numerals that mark the coming twelve months are to be seen in the stationery shops.

It is almost unnecessary to state that New Year's Day falls on Thursday, for every youngster in Christendom has already consulted the calendar to find out on what day Christmas will come, and has found out that the festival falls on Thursday. Grown-ups being aware that New Year's Day is just one week later, have drawn the natural conclusion.

Old Christmas, the festival that is known by the name of Epiphany, the Fete des Rois, and Twelfth Night, falls twelve days after Christmas in Tuesday, January 6. Lent will come in fairly early in 1920 for the social season will close with the coming of Ash Wednesday on February 18. February will produce another day of interest to the general public, and that will be Sunday, February 29. For 1920 will be Leap Year, though fortunately the twenty-ninth does not happen to fall on a week day this time, so some of the usual merry-making will be omitted.

Easter will come early—on April 4, which will make the dates of the two accompanying holidays, Good Friday and Easter Monday, fall on April 2 and 5.

Fishermen will be delighted to hear that May 24, 1920 will come on Monday, so a week end in the country is assured to those who want it.

The King's Birthday, June 3, a school and bank holiday, will be on Thursday, and July 1, Dominion Day, will fall on the same day of the week School children will be interested in the fact that Labor Day, the first Monday in September will come on September 6, for the public schools in the city ordinarily re-open on the day following Labor Day.

SEVERAL ECLIPSES

Thanksgiving Day is a movable feast and its date will remain undetermined until next September when the Governor-General-in-Council will proclaim the date of the day set apart for general thanksgiving. If the precedent of the last few years is followed the day chosen will be a Monday in mid October.

Christmas, 1920, will fall on Saturday.

The almanac announces that there will be several eclipses both of the sun and of the moon. Two of these will be visible in Canada, a total eclipse of the moon on October 27, 1920 and a partial eclipse of the sun on November 10.

"Pussyfoot" Good Sport Says London Meds

LONDON, Nov. 14.—William E. (Pussyfoot) Johnson, the American prohibitionist, today, as a result of his attitude toward the adventure, is one of the most-talked-of and popular figures of the day. He commanded the biggest headlines in today's newspapers. The general verdict of the headline writers was that he was "a good sport." Mr. Johnson could not have desired a better advertisement than Thursday's incident for his campaign against the liquor traffic, and his future public appearances likely will command attention by reason of the fact that he has announced himself as considering the hazing he underwent a good joke.

The students who marched about with him yesterday, upsetting traffic in a goodly part of the west end, now propose to tender Mr. Johnson a banquet and present to him their tributes of respect.

The Anti-Saloon League opposition in London, it is said, has been based on the feeling that it was impertinent for an American prohibitionist to come across the seas to lecture the English on what they should do.

Baron Birkenhead, the lord chancellor, speaking at a peace celebration dinner, referred to the Johnson incident, and said it was profoundly to be regretted that a citizen of the United States should be subjected to such an outrage.

"Mr. Johnson," he said, "was invited here by an association of English people, who share his views. He was as much entitled to express his opinion as the lord chancellor would be in the United States, if invited there by an American association."

Health For The Baby

The baby to-day is the man or woman of to-morrow. Thus the success of the future man or woman depends upon the baby's present welfare. If the baby is sickly and ill nourished it is not to be expected that he will grow into a strong, active man who will hold his own in the business world a few years hence. Mothers it is a duty you owe the future to keep your little ones well now. This can be easily done if Baby's Own Tablets are kept in the house. The Tablets are a mild but thorough laxative which regulate the bowels and sweeten the stomach and thus make baby healthy and strong. Concerning them Mrs. W. Orser, Elginburg, Ont., writes—"I have a fine healthy boy three years and have used Baby's Own Tablets for him ever since he was a small baby. I certainly think them a splendid medicine." The Tablets are sold by medicine dealers or by mail at 25 cents a box from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

NEARLY BLED TO DEATH

Mrs. Frank White, a resident of Hermon, North Hastings, on Sunday last while using a large table knife cut her left wrist and only for the assistance of a neighbor would have bled to death. The knife severed an artery.

STOLE FROM LIBRARY

Thieves turned their attention to the Carnegie Library at Port Hope on Thursday evening while Mr Farquharson was at supper, and carried off the subscription money to be used in purchasing an X-Ray machine for the Port Hope Hospital. The money was in a wooden box on the Secretary's desk and fastened by a padlock. The thieves smashed the box and removed the change amounting to a couple of dollars.

NEW LUMBERING COMPANY

A new lumbering and manufacturing company known as the Bancroft Lumber and Manufacturing Company have received a charter (a private company) with head office in Bancroft. The officials of the company are Epinatus S. Hubbel, Urbane A. Hubbel, Margaret Hubbel, Dwight A. Davis and Daniel W. Avey. The new company intend operating at Paldash Lake on an extensive scale. A large mill with complicated machinery for the manufacture of timber into various purposes is being erected and will be put into running order as quickly as the machinery is installed.—Bancroft Times.

A SUDDEN CALL

After driving to Bancroft from Baptiste on Monday morning last, Mr. Dan Kelly dropped dead on the street opposite Reid & Thomson's store. He was picked up and taken to Dr. Beeman's office, where life was pronounced extinct. For some time the late Mr. Kelly has had heart trouble and although the end came suddenly, it was a great shock to his wife and friends in town and country. The late Mr. Kelly was 56 years of age and leaves to mourn his loss, a sorrowing widow, and two daughters, besides four brothers and two sisters.

MINISTERS TO HELP

A meeting of the Ministerial Association of the city will be held at the Y.M.C.A. parlors on Monday afternoon in connection with the expansion drive for the city.

CITY SAVES MONEY.

A good investment by the City of Belleville was completed today when $80,000 5 per cent. War Bonds, expiring 1925, were sold and the proceed invested in fifteen-year Victory Loan Bonds, bearing 5½ per cent., which will net the city approximately $11,000

STROKE PROVED FATAL

William Morrison, aged 82 years, an inmate of the House of Refuuge here passed away this morning after a few minute's illness. Deceased arose as usual and partook of his breakfast and was enjoying a smoke when he was stricken with apoplexy, expiring shortly after. Mr. Morrison was born in Sidney Towoship and had resided in this vicinity all his life. He was a widower.

ALL FOR BY-LAW

On Monday the ratepayers of Trenton voted on the by-law to grant exemption from taxation except school taxes, to the Chemical Products Company of Canada, for a period of ten years. The vote was practically unanimously in favor of granting the exemption, only two votes being cast against the by-law and 544 ratepayers voting for it. The vote was polled as follows:

Poll	For	Against
2	111	1
3	64	1
4	59	0

VACCINATED PASSENGERS

Passengers on the C.N.R. train from the northern part of Hastings County to Trenton, were yesterday afternoon at Marmora Village compelled to submit to vaccination owing to the fact that there was a case of small pox upon the train. It was stated, however that the passengers did not mingle with the party who was affected with the disease.

THE MARKET.

There was a good attendance upon the market this morning and good prices were realized for all farm produce offered for sale. Fresh dairy butter sold at from 62c. to 65c. per pound, and strictly fresh eggs were sold at 85c. per dozen, which is a record price here. A few basket lots were secured for a slightly lower figure. Dressed chickens were plentiful, selling at $1.25 to $2.00 per pair; ducks, $1.50 to $1.75 each, and geese, $2.50 to $3.00 each. The ruling price for potatoes was $2.50 per bag. Garden produce was readily disposed of.

INVESTIGATE SUDDEN DEATH.

A man named Reid whose home is in the vicinity of Ormsby, North Hastings, died suddenly on Wednesday night and the circumstances are to be investigated by a coroner's jury. Dr. Gardiner, coroner, has charge of the case, and a jury was empanelled to view the body and later the facts of the case will be given in evidence. Mr. Wm. Carnew, County Attorney, was notified of the occurrence and will attend the adjourned inquest. It is alleged that Reid partook of some beverage which caused his death, hence the investigation. The scene of his death is said to have been a hunting camp in the north woods and there are rumors that several other members of the same hunting party are seriously ill with symptoms of poisoning.

BODY TO ARRIVE THIS EVENING.

It is expected that the body of Mr. George N. Bennett, who died suddenly near Brinklow, in the northern part of this county, will arrive here this evening. It will be interred on Monday afternoon, the funeral being under the auspices of the Masonic Society.

ABUSIVE LANGUAGE CASE.

An abusive language case in which two women were both the complainant and defendant, was investigated by Magistrate Masson this morning. The result was the dismissal of the charge against one of the accused and the other had to pay the costs.

CASE SETTLED.

A case against C. B. Bonisteel, of Sidney, who it as alleged procured an auto and neglected to pay for it, was called in police court today but was amicably settled between the parties involved.

COMMITTED FOR TRIAL.

Joseph Thomas, alias George Brown, the Toronto young man who it is alleged, in company with Cecil Simpson, held up and robbed four Chinamen at the Royal Cafe, in this city, had a preliminary hearing today before Magistrate Masson. The result of the investigation was that Thomas was committed for trial. Mr. Carnew represented the Crown in the case.

KNEW THEY WERE STOLEN

John Kyle, aged 19 years attired in a military outfit stood in the prisoner dock at the police court this morning when a charge was preferred against him of stealing $30 in money, a gold watch and chain and other jewellery to the value of over $100, the property of Mrs. L. Walker. The accused, who was arrested in Montreal and brought to the city stated that he would not plead guilty to the theft of the articles stolen. Kyle alleges that another returned soldier committed the theft and took the jewellery to Montreal and gave it to Kyle who sold it. He claims that this is the first time he ever was in this city. The Magistrate remanded the accused to jail for a week and in the meantime the police will endeavor to ascertain if Kyle's story is true and also if possible to capture the party who committed the theft.

MYSTERIOUS STRANGER GIVEN HOT RECEPTION

Montreal, Nov. 14.—A mysterious stranger with a notebook was yesterday caught watching a secret practise of the McGill football team, which is to meet the University of Toronto tomorrow. The McGill Daily, the college newspaper, today relates the details of the affair and suggests that the man was a spy.

It appears, according to The Daily, that one of the reporters, "who was not lacking in courage," walked boldly up to the intruder and asked him his business. He gave a number of excuses and then tried to run away. The reporter tackled him, to quote the Daily, "midway between the Stadium and the old Molson House." The stranger fell, but "by methods of decency," he knocked out the bellicose reporter by kicking him and escaped.

Terrible Experience of Mr. J. Harrop
It is seldom that anyone who has been continually exposed to every weather condition does not contract some form of Kidney or Rheumatic trouble. In many cases, cold, settling in the kidneys, so weakens those important organs that they are unable to filter the waste and poison out of the blood. The latter is carried throughout the body, causing uric acid to accumulate in the joints, with consequent rheumatism, stiff joints, swollen ankles, lumbago, sciatica, neuralgia, constipation, torturing pains in back and side and head. These ills can all be made right. Gin Pills give quick, certain and sure relief. Read what Mr. J. Harrop writes to us:—
"I have been crippled up so completely that I could not stand. Work was out of the question. A few doses of Gin Pills put me right. I cannot praise Gin Pills too much, and every home should have a box."
Gin Pills can help you. If you suffer from backache, or have that dreadful feeling of lassitude, with floating specks before the eyes, highly-colored urine, stone in the bladder and general debility, get Gin Pills at once. At all druggists or dealers, 50c. Money refunded if you are not relieved. A sample large enough to demonstrate its value, free on request.

What Are "Young Mountains"?

Mountains are wrinkles of the earth's crust, caused by its settling on the cooling and contracting interior. They have been formed slowly and by successive uplifts. From the very first the rising land is attacked by the agents of denudation (i.e., laying bare the rocks through the action of water and the atmosphere); but this attack increases as the mountains grow higher. Glaciers extend down the valleys; streams cut gorges across the ridges, and the durable rocks are etched out into ridges and peaks, while the weak ones are cut away, forming valleys and passes. In this stage the surface is so irregular that the mountains are unsuited for human habitation. Such mountains, of which the Rockies, the Andes, the Alps, and the Himalayas are examples, are called "young mountain." When the uplift finally ceases the denudation continues to broaden the valleys and lower the peaks and ridges; the glaciers disappear, and in time even the highest peaks may come below the timber line. Such mountains, which have lost the ruggedness of youth, may be called "mature." The Appalachians and the mountains of New England, Norway, and Scotland are examples. Their slopes are forested and their valleys tilled. Further lowering reduces the mountains to a series of low, rolling hills, and sometimes to a surface, almost as level as a plain (called a "peneplain," almost plain). The mountains are then "old," and are, like plains, adapted to dense settlement. New York City, Philadelphia, Baltimore, and Washington are situated on such old, worn-down mountains. These ancient mountains, known as the Piedmont belt, extend east of the Appalachians, from New England to Alabama. In Ontario we have no such worn-down mountains, unless it be the Muskoka district, but this has rather been a plateau than a mountain region. All the mountains of Eastern Canada are old mountains. Nova Scotia is almost wholly the worn-down extremity of the old Eastern mountain system of America.

Vessels for England.

Since the Germans surrendered their merchant ships to the allies, at least one hundred of these steamers have arrived at Firth of Forth ports and have been distributed to various British firms at London, Plymouth, Cardiff and Barry, for management. These vessels represent approximately 200,000 registered tons.

SEPARATE PACT WITH GERMANY

Washington, Nov. 15.—The success of the League of Nations has been jeopardised by the adoption of Senator Lodge's reservation qualifying American participation in the League of Nations. The Versailles Treaty itself is in danger as a consequence of the Senate's action. There is now grave doubt that the United States will become a member of the League, but beyond that the Government faces the discouraging prospect of being obliged to negotiate a separate peace with Germany.

THE HOME OF CULTURE

In addition to the pleasure derived from music itself, there is the mark of culture which it conveys.

There can be nothing coarse or vulgar in the home environment where the real spirit of music reigns.

To speak of music in the home is to speak of the piano, for the piano has become the universal instrument. And when selecting a piano care should be exercised that the one selected possesses tone, beauty of line and durability.

LINDSAY PIANOS

possess these three qualifications and many more besides. To see and to hear the LINDSAY is to like it. At its price there is no better piano made today. To purchase a piano without first having seen the LINDSAY is to invite dissatisfaction and regrets. Visitors always welcome.

VOTER'S LIST 1919

MUNICIPALITY OF THE CITY OF BELLEVILLE

NOTICE is hereby given that on the 1st day of November, 1919, I posted up in my office, in the City Hall, a list of the names of all persons appearing by the last revised Assessment Rolls of the Municipality to be entitled to be voters at Municipal Elections, and said Lists will remain open for inspection for thirty days from date of this notice.

Persons who are aware of errors in the said Lists or of changes which have been rendered necessary by reason of the death or removal of any person named therein or by reason of any person having acquired the necessary qualifications of a voter since the return or final revision of the Assessment Rolls, are hereby called upon to give notice of the same.

Returned soldiers and also citizens who have purchased property or become residents of the city since the 1st of January, 1919, should examine the Voters' Lists to see that their names are placed therein.

The time for making complaints as to the errors or omissions in the list shall be thirty days from the date of this notice.

Dated at Belleville this 1st day of November, 1919.

Society Brand Clothes

First With the New Styles

It is through our doorway that the new styles first make their appearance in this city, because it is here that Society Brand Clothes are sold.

At the start of each season men come to us and ask, "What is Society Brand showing?" When we display these new ideas, as we are now doing, it's an opportunity you ought not miss.

Society Brand Clothes
FOR YOUNG MEN AND MEN WHO STAY YOUNG
MADE IN CANADA

These clothes cost a little more, but it costs more to make them. Each garment is cut by hand. Each tailored by hand in accordance with most exacting specifications. Thus the style is in-built. It is not put in with a hot iron. As a result a Society Brand garment never loses its style and shapeliness.

BOOKKEEPERS WANTED—THE MAJORITY of office men are saying: "I simply must make more money." Meanwhile trained accountants earning $2000 to $10,000 a year in Canada are wanted by large manufacturers. Whether you are a clerk, assistant bookkeeper, stenographer, you can graduate into the big paying accountant's position by simply studying at home during your spare time, and this without interfering with your present occupation. We have a booklet, "HOW TO LEARN ACCOUNTANCY," which explains how you can study at home under the supervision of chartered accountants, the best accountancy course in America. We have dozens of students in Toronto alone and hundreds throughout Canada. The book is sent to you free of charge and it may help you out of your present position, placing you where you will be able to get a much larger salary and better position. If you are ambitious, if you wish to make your way in life, then it is up to you to write us and investigate our method. It will not cost you anything to look into our offer, while it may cost you a lot of money by not investigating. So just drop us a line today and read our booklet which will tell you how easily YOU can become an expert accountant. International Accountants Society, Box 362, Toronto, Ont. n3-tfd

Two Explorers.

Martin Killin and Adelbert Gumaer, the last two member of Vilhjalmur Stefansson's Canadian Arctic Expedition to leave the Arctic, are reported aboard the trading schooner Anna Alga, which is working its way toward Nome.

Killin and Gumaer were not members of Stefansson's original party. They were members of a party Storker Storkerson, Stefansson's lieutenant, led on to an icefloe last year in the hope that the Arctic drifts would carry the floe westward to Siberia. After spending eight months on the ice the men found themselves about fifty miles from their starting point. They all came ashore and Storkerson and one other member headed overland for the outside world. Killin and Gumaer boarded the Olga and started for Nome.

Storkerson's trip outside was his first in eleven years. He has been an explorer, trader and trapper along the northern rim of the continent ever since 1908. He expects to associate himself with Stefansson in handling the Canadian Government's proposal to stock the northern tundra plains with reindeer.

Dogs Eat Esquimo Church.

In the Hudson Bay country, where the dogs are half wolves, a band of these famished animals actually ate up a church. The Esquimo Christians had built a tiny chapel to hold twenty people. But the poor converts did not long enjoy the little church, of which they were so pathetically proud. The building was of whalebone, an edible substance, and one Sunday the pagan dogs ate every morsel of the sacred edifice.

The Future Power

By JOE H. RANSON

(Copyright.)

Jimmie Orm of the firm of Strass & Orm, brokers, was dining with his friend, Dr. Edouard Enz.

Between the eyes lingered a pucker that meant that his brain was still digging coldly, mechanically at the problem that had stared at him out of the tangled mass of facts that had been the portion of this day.

Rumors, contradictions, flurries; quick, spasmodic leaps and counters of the fluctuating market; uncertainties, panicky sellings of nervous clients, all had contributed to bring Strass to the point almost of collapse, and had set the junior partner, Orm, grim-faced, to clawing his hair.

"There's going to be the deuce to pay," Orm now spoke coolly, his eyes wandering restlessly over the lighted cafe, "if the conditions that have prevailed today continue. Strass is about all in. I never saw him so upset. It's a bad business for a man with nerves."

He looked across at Enz, who was watching him under cover of cigarette smoke.

"I know very little about finance," began Enz, but Orm interrupted.

"Finance," he snorted. "That's a pretty name. It's chance, Ed, the gambler's god. I wish I were out of it all. But I can't leave old Strass to be buried in the ruins alone. He has always been very decent to me. But what can I do—what can anyone do—that's where I butt into the stone wall every time."

As they ate, Orm delivered himself of the things that vexed and puzzled him.

Enz led him on, asking now and then a question so pertinent that the broker looked up quickly in wonder. Throughout the meal the conversation was nearly one-sided.

The conditions were boldly outlined, graphically depicted by Orm. And always he came back to the elemental point of man's ignorance, his moving always in the narrow lighted space of the hour, beating helplessly against the upreared something which marks the unknown.

"If," he cried out in a kind of mild frenzy, clinching his fists, "if we could only know, see."

Enz interrupted at last. He had finished his coffee and was lighting a cigarette. His face was slightly flushed as he leaned closer to the center of the table and spoke in the lowest of tones.

"Foresight," he said. "That is what you mean. That expresses all that you have said. Imprisoned in the confines of weak, enslaving flesh, man is a puppet, moving in a spot-light, shut in on all sides by elemental darkness.

"Ages have raised him from the skin-clad, herb-eating animal that dwelt in caves and was prey to stronger beasts. He has broadened the circle of the lighted space in which he lives, but he is still the helpless mote, ringed round with mystery."

Orm sat with his cup raised halfway to his lips.

"Jimmie," went on Enz, in the same voice, "do you want to know, would you like to be able to see? Or would you be afraid?"

"When did you do it, Ed?" he whispered.

Without replying, he suddenly slipped his hand into the inner pocket of his coat and took forth a small wallet.

From this he extracted a folded paper, with doubled ends, such as physicians affect for sleeping powders. This he quickly unfolded, and, leaning forward, spilled the contents deftly into the coffee cup which Orm had set before him.

"Jimmie," he smiled, "you may now finish your coffee."

When, at the usual hour the following morning, Orm awoke, it was to the realization of a power that was, in its strangeness, almost uncanny.

Coming out of a state of temporary insensibility, he was terribly, stingingly alive. His first realization of the unusual came to him as he picked up the morning paper. The market pages were hardly more than a rehash of the night editions. He glanced at the date line and was surprised to find that the paper was actually of the present.

The things that it recited seemed to him ancient. Dimly his memory groped back to them, took account of all the facts that intervened. Could it be possible that these things that were so clear to him were as yet unknown to the world?"

He began to chronicle his information. Hunterton would begin his fight today.

From his apartments he took a taxi. He could not wait, though the distance was slight. He even urged the chauffeur to higher speed. He himself threw open the door and pitched the driver a dollar.

Reason told him that the elevators would carry him faster than his legs. Impulse urged him to bound up the stairs. He stamped about the corridor until a car was ready to go up. He was the first one inside.

On the sixth floor he threw open a door upon which no sign was painted. The door was unornamented in any way, conspicuous for its lack of gold leaf. A man sat at a desk inside.

Orm advanced.

"Andrew," began Orm, running his fingers through his rank mane, "how much money can you command this morning?"

The other looked puzzled. Orm's face was quite serious. The other was used to the impetuosity of his visitor, and the puzzled look vanished. He named a sum.

Orm pulled up a chair. He leaned forward and talked rapidly, certainly. There was confidence in the very position of his long body.

The other man listened with interest. Incredulity came first.

Then Orm's voice, Orm's personality, the infection that dwelt in his enthusiasm, in his very self-belief, won. The other man grew excited. He rose and stamped about the office.

"How do you know?" he asked, halting before the other.

"I know," said Orm. "I simply know. I tell you it will happen. It is all as plain to me as though I had read a report of it in this morning's Sphere. Forty-eight hours from now the Sphere will print the story, almost exactly as I have outlined it."

"It seems insane," mused the other, speaking as much to himself as to Orm. "And yet I can't get it out of me that you're right. You've got the dope some way. I don't know how you've got it, and it don't seem hardly possible to me, yet I can't help believing it. That's the queer part."

When Orm left the office he bore with him a check and a note.

And now began that vigil, that long fight, that nerve-racking, heart-breaking, grim strife which is not equaled on any battlefield of mere guns and sabers.

Orm spent the time in his own small room, watching the coil of tape that told the market's history.

Always he had the telephone at his elbow. Always he persisted, against all indications, all seeming certainties that his course was folly.

Strass had succumbed long since to the strain and had been sent home a raving thing. But Orm sat in his tiny office, commanding a campaign that to others seemed that of a madman, and to himself so simple, so certain, that it was as mere child's play, a mechanical following out of set forms.

It had begun with the Hunterton crowd throwing Inter-County in blocks upon a questioning, uncertain, palpitating market. Naturally the price fell like a thermometer thrust into an ice-box.

It was not until this fall had occurred and the stock was dropping out of sight, at the mad moment when it was being avoided as a pestilential thing, that Orm's men began quietly, industriously buying.

Throughout the day they bought. Orm, in his office, commanded by telephone. The outer office was besieged by wild-eyed beings who thought the young broker suddenly gone mad.

Once he threw open his door and stood before them, his hair wildly disarrayed, his great figure towering majestically, his face suffused, the dark frown of an angered Odin clouding his brow, and cursed them for a pack of fools.

A man sat at a desk in a room on the sixth floor of an office building; a room upon the door of which no sign appeared, and read a newspaper.

He read hungrily, not because the story he was reading was news, but because it was so strikingly akin to a story that Jimmie Orm told the day before, the story that Orm had declared was as plain to him as though he had read it in the morning's paper. The thing had come to pass.

The confidence that, in a saner moment, had struck him as the trust of an idiot in the maunderings of a madman, was now justified. It had all happened. The man laid down the paper and looked out of the window.

His money, the money that in his hypnotized state he had confided to the hands of mad Jimmie Orm, had made two millionaires.

It was a fortnight later when Dr. Edouard Enz received a night letter from Chicago. It read:

"The girl from Milwaukee and I were married tonight. Our love for you. Thank heaven this blanked foresight is wearing off. Never again."

Enz smiled as he slipped the square back into its envelope. He stood for a moment before the open bed of coals, holding the telegram in his hand.

"It will be all right," he said to himself, turning to the table with its unopened mail.

"The effect will wear off entirely in about three weeks.

"I fancy it's deuced uncomfortable, though, while it lasts."

Simplifying Labor Problem.

They tell of a young women who wrote to her fiance in France that she had succeeded to his job; that she liked it and was making good, and she intends to keep it even if he does come back—and what is he going to do about it? He replied that he was glad of it; that all he wanted when he got home was to marry her, and he would only be too happy to have her to do the work and let him rest. And didn't she think she ought to be entitled to a raise in salary about July, for it takes more to keep two than one? The real heroes are not going to be hard to take care of after the war—if the women are patriotic and will do the work.—Howard (Kan.) Courant.

Wanted Realities This Time.

"Before I consent, I want to know that you are able to afford the luxuries I shall want," she replied. "What is your income?"

"Would you speak of income at such a time?"

"Yes, indeed. My first husband fed me on promises."

Wonderful Example of the Value of OXO

Interesting letter from Captain Sir J. Alcock, K.B.E., D.S.C.

"You will be interested to learn that OXO was a great "help to us during our Trans-Atlantic Flight; it sustained "us wonderfully during our 16 hours' journey.

"We had found out what a good thing it is when flying "in France, and so decided to carry it with us on this "occasion, and we can assure you that hot OXO is most "acceptable under such cold and arduous conditions. "OXO was the only article of its kind which we carried."

J. ALCOCK, Capt., D.S.C.

OXO steadies the nerves—keeps the brain alert—gives extra warmth to resist cold and exposure—extra strength to fortify against fatigue, and yields an abundance of energy out of all proportion to the amount taken.

Prices same as before the war, 10c., 25c., $1.15, $2.25.

After-war conditions, and the telephone

Keeping Abreast of Progress

THE farmer cannot go back to the scythe or the cradle. He must keep abreast of progress by using binder and tractor for the economical handling of his crop.

So it is with the telephone. It is an important part of the business and social life of the community. We must keep our entire system, local and long distance, in the highest state of efficiency. Old apparatus and old methods must continually give way to new. Extensions must keep abreast of the needs of the business community.

Public services everywhere ran behind during the war. Skilled men and material were scarce. Necessary maintenance and repairs had to wait the return of normal times. Reserves of plant and material were exhausted.

The task of overtaking these postponed repairs, of restoring the margin of reserve plant while keeping service up to the highest standard, is now engaging our earnest efforts. New buildings are being built, new long distance lines, new underground and aerial cable, new switchboards—all in order that the telephone may continue to do its part throughout the difficult period of reconstruction. Our 1919 programme calls for an expenditure of $7,000,000.

Telephone workers everywhere appreciate the kindly co-operation of subscribers in their honest efforts to give an adequate and efficient service.

FALL STABLE CLEAN-UP

The Health and Comfort of Live Stock Demand It.

Need of Ventilation, Light and Cleanliness to Avoid Tuberculosis and Other Diseases—Use Whitewash, Whether Sprayed or Brush-handled, and Brighten Interior.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

THE observance of the laws of health, so vital to the well-being of man, is regarded even in this enlightened age, with considerable indifference in the treatment of animals upon whose good health that of man himself depends to a considerable degree. That animals are not more affected by disease, of some form or another, to a greater extent, is purely providential, for the sanitary conditions under which they are often reared is of the worst. Why this apathy concerning the state of the stables, in which frequently valuable animals are housed, is difficult to understand, since cattle, any more than man, cannot maintain their health and vigor for long in such unfavorable conditions; yet the stockman who keeps cattle for profit must know that to gain maximum returns for his investments and trouble, and to guard against loss from disease and death reasonable care and comfort and sanitary conditions are necessary.

The first considerations to this end are ventilation, light and cleanliness. These essential elements of sanitation should be attended to at least once every year. This may be most conveniently done during the early fall before the cattle are housed for the winter. Effective ventilation is required to carry away the foul air and maintain constant and adequate supply of fresh air. The window space should be ample so that every corner of the interior may be flooded with light and sunshine, the source of health and destroyer of germs. Dirt and filth make productive breeding places for insects and bacteria. Cleanliness gets rid of conditions which produce them and prevents the possibility of infection and contagion, reducing possible loss from disease to a minimum. That much-dreaded disease, tuberculosis, is in a measure the product of dark, dirty, ill-ventilated stables. It is caused by organism or germs gaining entrance into the animal's system with the food. It is not easy to detect, and usually when symptoms become evident it is too late to apply any remedy, hence the necessity of making every effort to secure and maintain sanitary conditions in the stable. Every fall, then, the stable should be systematically cleaned; cobwebs swept from wall and ceilings; accumulated dirt and debris cleared from manger, trough, window-sills and all recesses in walls; the fresh air intakes and foul air outlets put in order; fill all cracks and holes in floor and walls with cement; replace all broken glass in windows and clean them; disinfect the whole stable thoroughly with some good disinfectant, such as chloride of lime, crude carbolic acid, or zenoleum, which can be easily applied with a scrap pump or a watering can with a fine nozzle. Give particular attention to pens or stalls which have been occupied by stock suffering from contagious disease or have been used by animals during parturition.

Then prepare your whitewash and don't postpone it because you do not possess a barrel spraying outfit. The whitewash brush is an effective and efficient tool—use it. Small brushes are best and may take you a little longer time to do. There are many good whitewash recipes. President Grant used the following to whitewash the White House in Washington: Take a bushel of unslaked lime, slake with warm water, cover it during the process to retain the steam, strain the liquid through a fine sieve or strainer; add a peck of salt, the same previously well dissolved in warm water, add three pounds of ground rice boiled to a thin paste and stir in boiling hot, add one-half pound of glue which has been previously dissolved over a slow fire and add five gallons of hot water to the mixture; stir well and let it stand for a few days, covering it up to keep out dirt. It should be put on hot. One pint of the mixture, properly applied will cover a square yard. There is nothing can compare with it for outside or inside work and it retains its brilliancy for many years. Disinfectant may be added or coloring matter may be put in and made to any hue desired.—Prof. J. Evans, O. A. College, Guelph.

Live Stock Scarce In Europe.

France has 2,366,000 fewer cattle than in 1914; Italy, 996,000; Denmark, 345,000; Sweden, 599,000; Germany, 2,200,000; and Austria-Hungary, considerable. These figures alone show a decrease of 6,306,000 head of cattle and many countries which have suffered are not named.

The sheep decrease in France, Italy, Denmark, and Holland alone is over two and one-half millions, and in pigs there has been a wholesale decrease to the number of 24,952,000 in France, Italy, Denmark, Sweden, Holland and Germany. Denmark, Canada's strongest competitor on the British bacon market is 1,873,000 short of a normal supply of pigs. Germany is 19,396,000 short of her 1914 hog population.

These figures should prove interesting to the Ontario live stock breeder. Reserves of food material in the world are very low. Stock with which to increase these reserves is not up to normal numerically. Indications are that a good demand must continue for the finished product of the farm.

Thrift.

Genoa longshoremen recently converted themselves in twenty-four hours from striking workmen to employers of labor. They obtained through the strike a day wage rate of $6.50 and the following day hired other men for their jobs at $2 a day, thereafter living easy lives on the remaining $4.50 for eight hours' management of the $2 a day underling.

An Intermission for Trouble

By W. S. ROGERS

(Copyright.)

"East? Have I ever been East?" said the long-legged Brill. "Well, I should remonstrate. I secretly hope so. If you'd seen me domesticating in Jersey once you'd believe in it. Excitement? Don't mention it.

"The gentle East may be gentle to them that understand it, but I'll take my peace and quietude on the back of an Arizona cyclone and be satisfied with that. No East for me. It's entirely too strenuous.

"It was in New Jersey, and I was waiting for a train. I had surplus time on my hands amounting to three hours, and not being restricted with remorse or anything, I thought I'd naturally move around through some of the jay precincts next adjacent, and see what there was, if anything, coming to me.

"So I rummaged up a long village street, making sinuous reflections and studying the outlook, till I came after a while to a tobacco establishment—a layout, you know, where they had magazines to sell in the window and a lot of disastrous truck for effete people with weak teeth; and I went in and spoke with the young-looking gazelle in charge of these preparations, and asked him for something injurious but smokable, and all the latest news.

"'Shake hands with a sympathizer,' says I. 'Do you live in New Jersey all the time? If so—'

"'Say,' he says, as if it was a bright inspiration that had just come in to him from the shores of nowhere in particular, 'if you haven't got anything useful to attend to right away, maybe you wouldn't mind holding down this diversion here for a minute or two while I go out and see to something. Would you favor a man like that?' he says.

"Well, it sounded reasonable, and I couldn't freely object right off quick to such a thing as that. I only asked him if he didn't think it might be unlawful to trust a perfect stranger with a fifty-dollar outfit on such short notice.

"'Well, all right, Willy!' I says. 'I didn't come East looking for impromptu adventures like this, but of course I'm not going to throw down a nice-looking young man like you just from bashfulness and unknown scruples. So hit the warpath whenever you're ready,' I says, 'and I'll stay behind, and keep perfect order for you.'

"So he went, and I was left there all alone with that messy little cargo of misplaced confidence in the amateur pipe and tobacco line. And I wasn't especially afraid of it nor puffed all up with rapture on account of the way I was suddenly getting on in the world.

"But then, pretty soon it got different—and a lantern-jawed cuss in a white vest and gold-trimmed nose pinchers, wearing considerable of a big brown-looking trunk that they call a grip, was responsible for it. It was him that started things, and says he:

"'I'm the collector.'

"I didn't seem to know much about such a thing.

"'You are?' I says. 'What's that? I never heard of you. What do you make a specialty of collecting?' says I.

"Well, he didn't approve of that way of coming back at all.

"'Don't monkey!' says he. 'Ain't your accounts ready?'

"'Accounts?' says I. 'I don't think so. This is too sudden. I don't seem to remember you at all. What did you say your particular line was?' I says.

"That man begun to jerk himself around and look irritated.

"'I'm not here for conversation,' he says, 'but money. Pony up,' he says, 'and be a little soon about it, too!'

"'You're a trifle overheated, ain't you?' says I. 'Or applying to the wrong address? Hadn't you better take a mild cigar and walk down the street and try to forget it?'

But he wouldn't.

"'I'm after the money!' he snorts up. 'The money! Don't you know what that is? If you don't I'll spell it. I'm after the weekly money,' he says.

"'Oh, the weekly money!' I says. 'I hope you'll excuse me, but it's a little too premature and unexpected. I'll have to think some before I can accommodate you. Would you mind taking a chair for a few minutes while we both reflect?'

"But he wouldn't do that, either.

"He glared at me for about a second, and then he broke loose.

"'Hell!' he says. 'I can't deal with lunatics. Get out of here! I'll close this damn place up!' he says.

"I thought he must be pretty badly afflicted by that time, and when he give me a shove by the shoulder and was going to throw me out in the street, it seemed to me he showed entirely too much self-confidence for a newcomer and I couldn't put up with it.

"I couldn't quite catch myself catering to any such stranger-than-fiction little arrangement so sudden. So I picked up that Pinchers by the collar and the seat of his trousers and waltzed him back to the hind end of our studio, where there was a branch office, a poker booth or something, and chucked him out of sight and locked the door.

"I hadn't scarcely turned around with my face to the street before another grievance came romping in—a gray-haired party in a sack coat, bristling all over with dangerous-looking symptoms and swinging a big cane.

"He came like an earthquake, and he met me half way, making jabs at the air with his elbows, thumping the floor and dancing around there like a warm hen with its head off.

"'Scoundrel!' he says. 'Where's my daughter?'

"That was what he wanted to know; where was his daughter?

"'Well, holy smoke!' I says. 'Are the Jersey lunacy mills broke out?' I tried to make room for him, but he wouldn't have it. He ranted after me and shook his supply of furniture pretty promiscuously close up under my nose.

"'I'm here in time!' he says. 'I'm glad I'm here in time. Wretch!' he says. 'Where is she?'

"'Ex—cuse me, please,' I says. 'I never knew you had a daughter. I'm just a peaceable—'

"'Hah-h!' he says. 'Is she in there?' He heard the Pinchers making fracas with the door panel, and it waked up his susceptibilities and gave him a clew.

"'Villain!' he says. 'Release her!' And he bolted back like a cyclone to the scene of the music.

"I couldn't stop him, and I didn't try to. He just rushed back and grabbed at things. The key was in the lock and he give it a twist and threw the door open and fell in.

"I was about six inches behind him by that time, and I gave him an extra shove as he went through, and he skewed plumb into the arms of the other geezer, and then I slammed the door shut again and locked it and had 'em both.

"'Two of a kind,' I thought, and I hoped they wouldn't kill each other. But I allowed they was likely from the same popular academy somewhere in the neighborhood, and would understand one another's ways and get along. But if not, and there was hair-pulling, I didn't see how I could help it.

"And the next happy thing that flooded the situation was a girl—a Christian young lady looking all half wild and stage frighty—and she came vibrating in, in a blood-and-thunder style, and held me up in the middle of the floor.

"'Oh, Harold!' she says, never stopping to look at me or take breath or anything. 'Oh, Harold!' she says. 'Papa has discovered everything!'

"'What!' I says, moving backward from that female. 'Papa has discovered everything!' I was about ready to jump through the window by that time, but I didn't have a chance.

"She pulled up like a house afire when she got a better look at me.

"'Oh, heavens!' she says. "Where's Mr. Gordon?'

"'Never heard of him!' says I.

"'Oh, oh, goodness!' she says, and then she wheeled around again and bolted.

"'Great castigation!' says I. 'What next, I wonder?'

"I was accumulating new ideas every minute, it seemed to me, and I thought New Jersey wasn't so detrimental slow after all, when it once got up on its hind feet and moving.

"The sanitarium inmates seemed to have cooled down a little for a minute—comparing notes, or something, for the next violent outbreak—and I wondered if I hadn't suddenly better cut loose from that social rendezvous while I had time, and start for home. I felt a kind of a quick longing for Arizona, where life wasn't quite so continuously mixed.

"Anyhow I wished that young youth would hurry back and see what he'd fell heir to—I was afraid maybe my luck wouldn't hold out if I had to go it much longer alone—and I lit another weak cigar and went out on the sidewalk to look for him.

"Well, he was coming, and the girl with him, both in a sensational hurry, and looking scared half way out of their seven senses.

"'Say!' he blurts out, falling all over me when he got in reaching distance. 'Say, has there been an old man here, an old man with a cane?'

"'Wait a minute. Wait one moment, please!' says I. 'What kind of an all-around stew is this, anyhow?'

"'What?' he says. 'Why, it's her father. We were going to get married, and now—"

"'What! Please hold me up for a minute!' I says. 'Married? When? Today?'

"'No, no!' he says. 'But has he been here?' he says.

"'Say,' I says, 'go on and get married—quick! Don't hesitate. Don't think. Don't linger a minute, but go and get married.

"'Leave everything to me and skedaddle. Don't expunge with excuses—don't turn loose any doubts or question marks, but make a record run for a hurry-up preacher and get tied up!'

"'Why—I can't,' he says. 'That's just it. The collector for this cigar business here, you know. The manager comes around today, and he's liable to be falling down here most any minute. I want to resign, too, today,' he says.

"'Oh—oh, yes, the collector,' says I, beginning to feel something give a little. 'Of course. I forgot. Well, you can resign later,' I says. 'That's nothing—just leave him to me. Don't chance it, but skate.'

"Well, he did. He and that palpitating young female went away to get married and be happy forever after, and left me all alone with some incandescent reflections.

"Only I didn't reflect. I believe I sometimes know when to quit. I thought I'd leave New Jersey. And I gently closed up the door of that little cigar emporium, and made a perfectly straight line for the railway station. My train was due in fifty minutes, and I didn't care to miss it. Don't mention fast life to me, please."

KOREAN CIVILIZATION

NATIVES IN NORTH HAVE NEVER SEEN A WHITE MAN.

They Retain All Sorts of Strange Beliefs and Still Drink the Hot Blood of Wild Animals Under the Impression That It Gives Them Strength—Musan Is a Wonderful Ancient City.

BECAUSE of the widespread agitation concerning the future political status of Korea, and the charges of foreign persecution there, there will be special interest taken in the following facts concerning one corner of, "the hermit kingdom."

"Although Korea has a civilization extending nearly 4,000 years in the past, many of the natives in the north have never seen a white man, says Roy C. Andrews.

"They are living among the hills to-day much as did their ancestors centuries ago, worshipping mythical gods in the rocks and trees on every mountain top, keeping their women in semi-slavery and dying in ignorance that beyond the narrow confines of their own peninsula lies a world replete with undreamed-of wonders.

"Wrapped in the mantle of Oriental seclusion, for centuries Korea successfully guarded the secrets of her mountains and her people; but at last the clamor of foreigners at her doors could no longer be stilled and she yielded reluctantly, inch by inch, although realizing that the foundations of her weak Government were crumbling beneath her.

"It was in 1882 that the first treaty with Korea was signed, and foreigners took up their residence with official sanction at Chemulpo, the seaport of the capital, Seoul. Even with this foothold in the new country, the unwelcome visitors pushed their way but slowly into other parts of the kingdom, and as late as 1897 only a relatively small portion had been visited by white men.

"After the Russian-Japanese War of 1904, however, when the country was freely open to foreigners and its railway had been completed, the exploration of the northern part progressed by leaps and bounds, until the only extensive unknown area lay along the north central boundary between the Tumen and Yalu rivers.

"This was said to be a region of treacherous swamps, densely forested plateaus and gloomy canons—a vast wilderness, treasuring in its depths, the ghostly peak of the Long White Mountain, wonderfully beautiful in its robes of glistening pumice. The secret of its summit, where the 'Dragon Prince's Pool' lies far down in the ancient crater, had been learned as early as 1709 by two Jesuit missionaries, coming from the north through Manchuria, but the approaches to its base from the south and west in Korea had never been traversed by a white man.

"Musan was a revelation. Here, on the very edge of Korea, lies this wonderful ancient city, its grim old walls bearing five centuries of history. It was like stepping backward to another world, into a story of the Arabian Nights.

"Few white men have been fortunate enough to wander inland to the gates of this ancient city. During the Russo-Japanese War several Russians took refuge there, and since then a half-dozen foreigners have discovered it; but, except for these stragglers, Musan lies unknown to the Western world. The great central palace, or reception hall, remains intact, and close by, in partial ruins, is the temple guest-house. The smaller public buildings, the gates, the watch towers and, most of all, the walls themselves, each one has its own peculiar fascination, telling its own story or adding a chapter to that of its neighbor.

"We spent nearly three weeks hunting there. These northern tigers are splendid animals, more beautiful than their relatives of India or the Malay Peninsula, and range among the bitterly cold mountains of China, Korea and Manchuria, far up into Siberia.

"On the first day's hunt at Horsando a deer was shot. The bullet, passing through both lungs, filled the thorax with clotted blood, and as soon as the animal was opened, Paik, my Korean gun-bearer, plunged his face into the half-liquid mass, drinking and eating until the last drop was gone; then removing the steaming red liver, he cut it into slices, swallowing them as fast as possible.

"I was tremendously surprised, but learned afterward that the Koreans believe the blood of a deer or any wild animal, if drunk when warm, to be a splendid tonic. Tigers' claws, whiskers, bones and teeth are especially valuable, and preparations made from these materials were often given to soldiers before a battle or any especially hazardous enterprise, since they were believed to indicate great bravery."

TO WEAR WHEN TRAVELING

Frock of Dark Blue Taffeta Has Many Advantages That Are Worth Remembering.

Do you expect to take a trip soon? Then you will need for wear in the car or on the train a frock of dark blue silk, preferably taffeta. Charmeuse is very lovely, but under hard wear it is apt to grow dull looking. Crepe meteor is cool and graceful, but it rumples easily.

Crepe de chine has much to recommend it, but to be a really good quality it must be rather heavy, and this makes it warm. Taffeta crumples a trifle, it is true, but the soft weaves are not bad in this respect. You could do no better than choose dark blue taffeta.

Different vest may accompany this gown, such as batiste, marquisette or organdie. A very pretty vest is made of Madeira embroidery. This is a new idea. A little batiste guimpe may also be worn with this gown.

Experiments have shown that the average speed of an ordinary snail is at the rate of one mile in fourteen days.

THE MERCHANTS BANK OF CANADA

Paid Out in 1918

AN amount of money that the human mind cannot grasp, was paid out by the insurance organizations of the United States and Canada in the year 1918. This sum includes $190,000,000 paid by the American Government to the families of soldiers and sailors who fell in the war.

"An adequate amount of insurance," says the New York Insurance Press, "is now considered a matter of course, not only for the protection of families, but also for the protection and preservation of business enterprises."

The great value of life insurance companies was clearly shown during the course of the influenza epidemic, which cost Canadian and American companies $93,000,000."

Among the companies contributing to the relief of the people in that time of trial the Mutual Life of Canada was conspicuous in this country, about three-quarters of a million being disbursed by us in excess of the normal losses.

There is little reason, therefore, for wonder that this Company has received so many applications for insurance, the amount of business written this year being double that received in 1918.

WOMEN CURED AT HOME

ORANGE LILY

Women's disorders always yield from the very beginning of the treatment to the mild but effective action of Orange Lily. Within two or three days after commencing its use the improvement becomes noticeable, and this improvement continues until the patient is completely cured. Orange Lily is an applied or local treatment, and acts directly on the womanly organs, removing the congestion, toning and strengthening the nerves, and restoring perfect circulation in the diseased parts. In order to convince all suffering women of the value of this remedy, I will send a 40 cent box, enough for 10 days treatment, absolutely free to each lady who will send me her address. As a Man Striveth

By HARRY P. BOWLING

"I wonder what finally became of Adrian Hope?"

Isabelle spoke listlessly; there was no inflection in her voice; her tone was negative.

"Poor Adrian! he was one of the unfit. Nothing ever becomes of such men. They simply cease."

I tilted back my bamboo chair and smiled indulgently at Isabelle. We had been celebrating the fifth anniversary of our wedding day, we had dined comfortably, and now, lounging on the terrace of our Monterey villa, we were enjoying the restful hour of twilight.

A delicious somnolence was stealing over me, the issue of an easy conscience and a good digestion.

Isabelle roused me from my dreamings; there was a tenseness in her voice out of keeping with her former apathy.

"Tell me, Marius, is it a divine or only a human law, that no one woman at one time may make more than one man happy?"

"Sounds like a problem in geometry or an algebraical equation. Send it to the puzzle department," I observed lazily.

She paid no attention to me but continued in the same strain.

"I would never be the cause of suffering to any man—never willingly. If I have been so, it was through an inexorable law."

"Oh, as to Adrian Hope," I remarked airily, tracing her thought to its germ cell, "it was part of his unfitness. You couldn't help it."

"Yet he was in earnest."

"Too much in earnest for other people's comfort. He and his fiddle became a neighborhood nuisance; he had no more music in him than a—er—a bumblebee!"

"Bumblebees are rather melodious," she corrected me. "And I think you hardly do justice to Adrian Hope."

"What! Did you enjoy his music?"

"No, but he tried so hard. I was sorry for him, and it worries me sometimes—"

"Worries you?" I was growing a little impatient. "What worries you?"

"Adrian Hope left California the very day of our marriage and has never been heard of since."

"He went to the East Indies. I have told you so many times—partly for business, partly for pleasure—"

"And wholly for pain. My dear Marius," she continued quickly. "Can I help remembering he was desperately in love with me, and I could never reciprocate his feelings, and he went away broken-hearted, do you call that going for pleasure, and are you jealous because I feel sorry for him?"

"I am not jealous," I answered quietly. "Why should I be? Adrian never had the ghost of a show."

Isabelle leaned her elbow on the stone balustrade which separated the terrace from the garden below, and rested her chin in her open palm.

"The 'Goddess of Reflection'—what a picture! If I could put you on canvas, just as you look now!" I murmured.

She shook her head and smiled sadly.

"You abandoned your brush and palette long ago, Marius. I'm afraid you couldn't do it."

Her last remarks caused me some pin-pricks of conscience. Since, just one year after our marriage Isabelle had inherited a comfortable competence. I had entirely neglected my studio on which I had formerly had to rely for a living. My art had not been art for art's sake.

"Oh, well, it's never too late to mend," I hinted. "You see fate sometimes seems to point in one direction and then the unexpected—"

"But fate and the unexpected are twin brothers," a deep voice broke in with the boom of an ocean breaker.

I jumped to my feet.

Adrian Hope was standing only a few feet from me. I had heard no sound of his approach.

As I stepped forward to greet Adrian she retreated into the shadow of the porch.

"I have been away a long time, haven't I?" Adrian began apologetically. "I trust my sudden return hasn't startled you. It's hardly conventional, I fear."

Adrian shook my hand heartily, but seemed utterly oblivious of my wife's presence.

"Your present life, Marius," he asked, presently, "is it happy, as men call it?"

"Perfectly happy," I assented. "Isabelle will tell you—"

"Ah, yes! and five years ago I imagined myself perfectly unhappy."

Isabelle stepped forward into the moonlight, and I saw that her cheeks were crimson. Adrian addressed himself to me:

"Come, talk to me of perfect happiness, as men see it. You used to be a good talker, as talk goes."

He smiled and wrinkled only one corner of his mouth. His face in the moonlight was the color of dead moss. I paid no heed to his sneering remark. After a prolonged silence he began again.

"I thought once that it was my failure to produce results that put me out of court with Isabelle. She spent many hours in your studio, admiring your pictures, while my music fell on deaf ears.

"For you could paint, while my fiddling, I must confess, was atrocious. Isabelle was always an idealist. Five years ago you occupied the pedestal. How do matters stand now?"

"In the presence of my wife, such remarks are hardly in good taste," I said, inwardly boiling.

He drummed the ground with his foot and hummed a little tune.

"By the by, you fulfilled the promise you then gave? Have you become the great artist?"

"When I married I found something better in life."

"You mean something easier. You thought you could rest on your laurels. How do you suppose I spent the last five years, I, who had no laurels to rest on?"

"I understood you had gone to New Guinea."

"Did you ever hear the purpose?"

"No; it was a queer place to go to, whatever the reason."

"In every way I had been a failure," he declared impressively. "I was resolved to turn that failure into triumph."

"To accomplish which you buried yourself in a New Guinea swamp?"

"Yes, I went to the only real teacher, nature herself. Among the deep morasses and cane-brakes of a reeking tropical swamp I sought for twelve weary months, months of dirt, privation and disease, till from among the acres of rushes I had selected one perfect reed.

"Look at it, Marius—examine it—blow through it! For it represents the five years of life which you have consumed in indolence."

Willing to humor him, I picked it up. It seemed almost to vibrate in my fingers. Blowing into it produced no sound, but a queer sensation passed over me; it was as though I were a piece of slate and someone had rubbed me all over with crumpled paper.

"I haven't the knack of it," I said; dropping it to the ground like a red-hot coal.

The reed gave forth a musical sigh as it struck the stones; Adrian caught it on the rebound and turned suddenly to Isabelle.

"Would you care to hear my one little accomplishment, after five years of the cruelest concentration?"

Isabelle nodded eagerly, but in a frightened manner; her hands were clenched tightly against the tendrils of the honeysuckles, as though she were bracing herself for an ordeal.

I began to laugh nervously. Whereupon Adrian wheeled sharply on his heel and faced Isabelle. Again he blew into the pipe; a low note, the purr of a distant tuning-fork, trembled from the frail reed; it grew in volume till it resembled a broken melody.

At my cry he stepped lightly from the terrace, descended into the garden, and disappeared among the dark shrubberies.

Faint and dizzy I pressed the tips of my fingers against my eyelids to clear my mental and physical vision.

When I raised my head, the terrace and porch were both deserted.

I was alone. Only black shadows in the garden, the sharp outline of the cliff, and an immeasurable coldness of sky and ocean.

The surety that some unforeseen crisis was upon me, like the sting of a whip forced me back to thought and action. I called loudly for Isabelle; descended from the terrace; plunged into the garden. Nothing there but solid darkness, checkered shade, and narrow strips of moonlight.

Of course, Isabelle, unable to endure such an unnatural strain, had slipped unobserved into the house and was probably resting in her own room.

In a leisurely saunter I retraced my steps to the house, entered it by a side door, and half-way up the stairs gave a peculiar whistle, which had always been a private signal between Isabelle and myself.

There was no reply. The house seemed very still.

I repeated the whistle in a higher key and followed it up with a thump on the bedroom door.

Then from the west side of the house I heard once more the sound of the hateful reed and that wonderful medley of which Adrian Hope alone was the master.

I rushed down the stairs and back to the terrace again.

I ran down the drive into the roadway and made for the spot. As I approached the sounds, they drew imperceptibly away from me. When I reached the outside wall, the music was ascending the cliffs toward the broad Pacific.

I started to climb the bluff; at every step the reed grew fainter and the ocean more insistent.

The reed I could no longer hear; but there, on the point of the tallest cliff, one foot advanced to the edge of the abyss, her hands stretched forth in an agony of supplication, I saw Isabelle; saw the shine in her hair, the folds of her frock, even the rings upon her fingers, so clear, so sharp, so definite was the moonlight on that memorable occasion.

"Oh, Adrian, take me! teach me—teach me, too!"

The despair of a lifetime was concentrated in her voice. Her form still shaking with emotion.

I saw her step forward, saw the white flash of her dress, the downward sweep of her arms, and then—beyond the cliff nothing but sky and sea.

A few seconds—they seemed a year—and I was standing on the same spot and gazing fearfully from the tall cliff onto the jagged rocks and broken waters a hundred feet below me.

The waves pounded the sands with cold, mechanical precision; far off in a choppy sea a fishing boat flashed an intermittent sail; wisps of fog were blurring the horizon.

And over all spread the steely, clean-cut brilliance of the desolate moon.

About Eggs.

Ontario, Canada, now has an egg "circle." This egg circle has been organized for the purpose of eliminating the wholesaler and middleman. Its idea is specifically to prevent any person or persons coming between the farmer's supply of eggs and the consumer. More and more as the cold storage warehouse has come between the consumer and his egg, has the consumer suffered from the separation. "Most every one" will wish the egg circle well.

L'AFFAIRE ROCHETTE.

French Financial Swindler Had a Remarkable Career.

Henri Rochette, banker and promoter, has been sentenced to two years' imprisonment and a fine of 3,000 francs for swindling French investors to the amount of more than 10,000,000 francs through the sale of Mexican railroad bonds in 1910.

"L'Affaire Rochette" has afforded Paris a big sensation, which is not to be wondered at, considering the huge amount of money involved. Never in the course of French financial history has there been such an extraordinary successful promoter as Rochette, the man of 43, who not many years ago was a cafe waiter and a barber's assistant. He seems to have been able to raise all the money he required for everything he took in hand. He began life as a messenger boy at a railway refreshment room at Melun. He inherited a small sum of money and went to Paris where he took lessons at a commercial school. He then became a junior clerk in a great French bank, which he left to enter a company promoter's office. On his employer's failure Rochette circularized the creditors, offering to take the business over and manage it with their assistance, undertaking to get their money back for them.

He next succeeded in getting himself financed by a gentleman of large private means, and started the Credit Miner (Mining Bank). From that time forward he became a sort of financial wizard. Companies sprang up at his bidding as though at a command of a magician's wand. In a couple of years the Credit Miner was doing such business that it employed 400 clerks.

There was a continuous stream of promotions of companies of all kinds. There were issued to the public in turn the stock of collieries, copper, silver and gold mines. South American and Mexican land and railway concerns, banks, fisheries, gas-mantle factories, colonial concerns, and various other undertakings. So enormous did the financier's business become that he formed a subsidiary company, the Banque Franco-Espagnol, and started a daily financial newspaper. In his heydey his two offices gave employment to 700 clerks.

In 1906, everything was going on swimmingly, and all that Rochette wanted was the Ribbon of the Order of the Legion of Honor to enhance his prestige. An application was drawn up by some friends of his, and it was initialled by a great political personage; but he got the ribbon of a minor order instead, and the disappointment was intense. Then Rochette launched the Nerva mines, in Spain, with a capital of $4,000,000, but the result was also a disappointment to him, as this venture did not meet with anything like the support that he had anticipated. The "Buisson Hella," another of his undertakings, was a system for giving a wonderfully clear light by incandescent gas at very small expense, but it did nothing that was claimed for it.

It is alleged that M. Rochette spent a very large sum monthly in "hush money." It is stated that the money so paid amounted on an average to between $10,000 and $15,000 per month. Some of his influential protectors are said to have been in the receipt of weekly allowances of $250, $300 and $400 and from the Credit Miner, and it is alleged that, but for their protection Rochette would have been arrested long before he was actually taken in.

Although at first his liabilities were placed at $20,000,000 it was later found that twice that sum would be a more correct estimate.

The whole "affaire" was made the subject of investigations by a Parliamentary Committee of Inquiry, and one of the most interesting witnesses examined was M. Lepine, the Prefect of Police in Paris. In the statement that he made he said that Rochette's method was to float companies in groups. As soon as one got into difficulties another was floated to support it, and was thrust upon the investing public by means of extraordinary advertisement. Seven companies were thus floated in the course of three years, he said, had brought Rochette more than $15,000,000, and by a system of inflating the prices of their shares they had been made to produce, altogether, nearly twenty-five millions. "It is a house of cards," he declared, "having no foundation but the credulity of the public."

Oil Cheaper Than Coal.

The high price of coal and the prospects of it becoming dearer still has resulted in a big demand for oil fuel. It is now cheaper to use oil fuel in ships and factories than it is to use coal. Perhaps before long we shall be using it in our homes, too.

The great coal strikes of 1911 and 1912 made hundreds of big firms turn towards oil, and it is a remarkable fact that once oil fuel has been used coal is abandoned forever.

Oil is not only cheaper than coal, but it is cleaner and less trouble. It is ever so much easier to transport and to supply to engines. A few feet of tubing and a main line express engine, for example, can take in 600 gallons of oil fuel in from four to five minutes. Oil, too, has the advantage that there are so many big deposits of it in various parts of the world that it is not affected by strikes so much as coal.

When proper oil-burning machines are used, here is no smoke attached to it at all, and factories using oil have no tall chimneys, no piles of ashes, no tedious shovelling of coal into the furnace. Just a few pipes, that's all. A few taps regulate the oil supply to the boiler furnace, and, in fact, with oil the grimy coal stokers can be replaced by girls in spotless white caps and aprons.

Beer "Improves."

Bottled beer that was said to be 2.75 per cent. when it left Milwaukee registered from 5 to 15 per cent. alcohol when it was delivered in Chicago. The trucks had been left standing for many hours in the sun, and a chemist says that the sun's rays would cause unpasteurized beer to ferment to such a degree that bottle would explode.

EGG-O
BAKING POWDER

Saves Fuel and Food

The continued high cost of foodstuffs and household supplies require the strictest economy.

The most expensive foodstuffs are used in baking, so always be careful to use the right kind of Baking Powder, otherwise great waste may result.

Many thousands of people recommend

EGG-O Baking Powder

because it effects the greatest economy.

Its double action absolutely assures perfect baking at all times.

Egg-O also helps save fuel because it does not require so hot an oven as is required by other powders.

Always follow the directions—one level teaspoonful to one level cup of well sifted flour. You use from a quarter to a half less powder when you use Egg-O.

When buying Egg-O the larger tins are the most economical size for family use.

Gagged U.S. Senate Busy Ratifying Peace Pact

RESERVATIONS ARE ADOPTED ON THE MANDATES, DOMESTIC, AND SHANTUNG QUESTIONS — BIG MAJORITY FAVORING CLOSURE WAS REAL SURPRISE—MONROE DOCTRINE RESOLUTION PASSES.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Working under is self-imposed 'gag' following adoption of the closure rule by an over whelming vote, the Senate Saturday forged ahead in its work of preparing a resolution of ratification of the peace treaty. Two resolutions were adopted within an hour after the closure became effective—one passing by acclamation only two minutes after the closure vote was announced.

One resolution provides that mandates can be accepted only by action of Congress. The other reserves control over domestic questions, such as immigration, tariff and labor. The new rule which completely revolutionized Senate procedure, was taken good naturedly on both sides. Many amusing incidents occurred. To those accustomed to the rambling freedom of debate in the Senate the order seemed to create a new atmosphere. The decisive vote of 78 to 16 for closure was a surprise.

Despite Accidents Flying is Quite Safe

Col. W. G. Barker, V.C., Declares Airmen Should Not Venture Out in a Fog.

TORONTO, Nov. 17—Commencing on the tragic fate of the two airmen Harry C. Dobbin and James F. Munroe who were instantly killed by a crash while flying for the Victory Loan Col. W. G. Barker, V.C. said:

"Such unfortunate accidents have a most deplorable effect in confirming the public's conviction that there is something intrinsically dangerous in flying. In reality flying is a perfectly safe occupation. My organization (the Bishop-Barker Co., Ltd.), has done between 50,000 miles of flying in Ontario and has not suffered even the slightest accident.

"What should be remembered in the case of these unfortunate aviators who met their death is that they were flying in a fog, which means that a crash is absolutely unavoidable. Consider the case of a motor car which attempted to drive at a speed of 60 miles an hour in a fog. How long would it go before encountering disaster. Or take the case of the numerous large ocean liners which have driven at full speed into an iceberg in the fog. Because such calamities as that suffered by the Empress of Ireland occur, we do not condemn all ocean voyages. The conditions are similar in flying. When such an accident occurs one cannot place the blame on the machine or necessarily say that the pilot is not sufficiently skilled. Municipal aerodromes might help by giving men caught up in a fog a chance to descend.

"I had two planes flying over Toronto for the Victory Loan each night, but very strict orders were issued that if there was any fog or rain or snow, or a strong wind, the men were not to go up."

WOMEN WILL VOTE UPON PROHIBITION

Ottawa, Nov. 17.—Women voters, as well as men, will exercise their franchise in any plebiscite which any province may ask under the terms of the prohibition act which passed Parliament and became law.

It is for the provinces, through their Legislatures, to ask for the plebiscite on the question of banning of the import and the manufacture, save for export, of intoxicating beverages. The Dominion authorities will do the rest.

The lists to be used will be Federal lists and they will need to be specially enumerated considering the fact that while all women over 21 with qualifications as to nationality are now enfranchised he lists used in 1917 contained only such women as were relatives of soldiers. New ones will need to be prepared.

All women will be able to vote. No option to distinguish between them and men is conferred on the provinces, he plebiscite, like all votes under the Canadian Temperance Act being a Federal affair.

To Release Great Stocks Of Liquor

Over 57,000,000 Gallons of Booze May be Available in Two Weeks.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 15.—Enormous quantities of liquor, in fact over 57,000,000 gallons will be released when the war-time prohibition is ended when President Wilson's proclamation is made, probably within two weeks. In the time between then and the first of January when constitutional prohibition comes into force, it is estimated that the owners of whiskey stocks now in bond will clear over $600,000,000.

The lowest estimate is that the liquor will bring $20 per gallon on the average, and even at the figure the consumers will pay about $1,140,000,000 for the stocks now in the warehouse.

The last figures of the internal revenue bureau show that there were in bond on August 1 of this year 67,549,028 gallons of drinkable distilled spirits of all descriptions, including brandy, gin, rum and whiskey. Since this estimate was prepared about half a million gallons have been withdrawn for export. Whiskey has been in bond since the food law prohibition of distilling became effective August 10, 1917, so that all of the spirits are at least two years old, and have suffered shrinkage from evaporation. Much of it is eight years old. It is estimated that the evaporation has caused a shrinkage of 15 per cent., but making deduction on this basis, there is still at least 57,000,000 gallons in bond.

The present tax on liquor withdrawn from bond is $6.40 per gallon. This is double any tax ever paid, as $3.20 was the prevailing rate prior to the cessation of distilling. The Government will receive $634,800,000 in taxes from the last big "jag." This is much greater than Uncle Sam's revenue in the old days, when the tax was only $1.10 per gallon on whiskey, and $1 per barrel on beer, the old days of 15-cent highballs and five-cent schooners.

SUSPICIOUS STRANGERS IN CAR OF GOLD

CRESTON, Iowa, Nov. 17.—A two million five hundred thousand dollar gold robbery was frustrated here when three men were dragged from a Burlington Railroad treasury car filled with gold. The men were placed in jail and have refused to make any statement. Railroaders say it was an attempt to pull off the greatest railroad robbery ever undertaken.

The gold shipmen valued at $2,500,000 was en route from the mines of the West to the East and was in the shape of gold bars and bullion. It was in a "blind baggage" car and was attached immediately behind the engine on the Burlington fast mail train.

When the train reached Creston the express agent found the seal on the car broken. He held the train and called officers who found the three strangers inside the car. They made no resistance to the officers.

Heavy Selling On N.Y. Stock Market

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—The stock market was subjected to another sharp break at noon today when heavy selling was precipitated by the announcement that the United States Supreme Court had decided against the Southern Pacific Railway Company in a suit involving 6,000 acres of valuable oil lands in California.

Pauline Frederick Sues For Divorce

Willard Mack, Actor and Playwright, to Appear in Title Role Again in Court.

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Willard Mack, actor and playwright, once more is to appear in a titular role in the divorce court, papers in a suit for absolute divorce having been served on him by his third wife, Pauline Frederick. The serving of the papers verifies the rumors that have been current on Broadway that the marriage of the couple two years ago was far from a success. The papers in the case were ordered sealed.

Rumors that Mr. Mack, whose real name is Charles Willard McLaughlin, and Miss Frederick had tired of each other, sprang up while "Tiger Rose" was playing in New York. Later it was said their differences had been patched up and they were planning to spend a year in California, where Miss Frederick had a motion picture contract. Life in a bungalow did not last long and soon Mr. Mack was back on Broadway, Miss Frederick remaining on the coast.

Although Mr. Mack's previous matrimonial adventures were failures, two of his former wives will appear this season in plays of which he was co-author. Marjorie Rambeau, who divorced Mr. Mack just before he married Miss Frederick, opened as the star of "The Unknown Woman" at the Maxine Elliott Theatre, last week, and during the performance was called upon for a speech. She suggested that the authors also be called and Mr. Mack made a short address.

Next month Miss Frederick returns to the stage in "Lady Tony," a melodrama written by Mr. Mack. The actor-playwright's first wife was Maude Leone, who played in stock on the Pacific coast and in vaudeville playlets with Mr. Mack.

WOMEN'S INSTITUTES ASK UNIFORM DIVORCE LAW

Ottawa, Nov. 17—A delegation from the Federated Women's Instiutes of Canada waited on Hon. C. J. Doherty Acting Prime Minister, and presented a number of resolutions passed by the federation at its recent meeting in Toronto. The resolutions advocate a uniform divorce law: hat the salaries of husbands guilty of desertion, shall be paid to the wives they have deserted; that railway compaies place conveniences for women on trains: that, when naturalization is granted it be marked by an appropriate ceremony; and also resolutions dealing with the age of consent and the sale of narcotics. Judge Doherty promised consideration by the Government of the resolutions.

Conservatives Get Majority Of Votes

U. F. O. Candidates Come Out Third, with Liberals Second.

TORONTO, Nov. 17.—As already pointed out, the official Ontario election returns are not yet complete and even six out of the 107 contested constituencies have not sent the necessary documents to the Parliament buildings. Taking the unofficial figures of the half-dozen seats, however, gives a good indication as to how the votes were cast, and the following table will be of interest, showing as it does that the Conservatives throughout the province secured 2,826 more votes than the coalition candidates.

	Number of candidates	Candidates elected	Votes polled
Conser'tives	102	25	386,706
Liberals . . .	70	29	336,715
U. F. O. . . .	x73	45	256,874
Laborites . .	22	11	127,096
Ind.	15	1	46,086
Totals . .	282	111	1,153,567

x Eight of these were candidates endorsed by both the U. F. O. and Labor.

The two old parties between them obtained 723,7111 out of the 1,153,567 votes polled, but secured only 54 seats while the coalition, with 383,970 votes, captured 56 seats. The popular majority of the old parties over the coalition candidates is 339,741.

Finish It Soon Says Blinded Bank Robber

TORONTO, Nov. 15.—Blind, trembling and exceedingly nervous, John Putwain, who was shot while trying to rob the Agincourt branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia, was led up the stairs by Constable Hyers and Dennis to answer two charges before Magistrate Brunton. The man, who is of slim build, continued to tremble during the court proceedings. When asked how he wished to be tried on a charge of entering the bank with intent to burglarize, prisoner who was assisted to his feet said in a low voice; "Finish it as soon as you can."

"You are also charged with unlawfully shooting Robert Laing with intent of doing bodily harm," said the magistrate.

"I had no intention of doing so, your Worship," said accused. "I prefer to be tried by you."

Magistrate Brunton, however, sent the case to a jury.

"Is the man blind?" asked his Worship, whereupon accused nodded his head.

Robert Laing, the bank manager, was then called and related the story of the Agincourt shooting.

"I had my revolver ready. He shot, then I shot. The prisoner was hit, reeled over against the desk. He was shot just below the eye. I didn't fire any more shots at him," said Mr. Laing.

GOMPERS BLAMES DRY MEASURE FOR UNREST

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Foisting of prohibition on the United States was a blunder charged with danger and loaded with disastrous probabilities, declared Samuel Gompers, president of the American Federation of Labor, in discussing its probable relation to unrest among working men in some parts of the country. "By adopting prohibition," he said, "we have chanced the wrecking of the social and economic fabric of the nation. We have invaded the habits of the workingman and this is what has happened. We have upset that man, unsettled him. Uprooting one habit uproots others." Gompers asserted that the man who formerly was satisfied to go home at night and converse and read, has become discontented and restive. He now goes into the streets to meet other men restless and unsettled like himself. They compare mutual grievances and there are sparks and sometimes fire. I believe Bolshevism in Russia began in prohibition."

WHEN THE WHISKEY GOT IN THE SECRET LEAKED OUT

London, Ont., Nov. 17.—Seventy-five cases of whiskey, addressed to Winnipeg, were found alongside the C.P.R. tracks, just east of the city, by the police. A lineman, who discovered the whiskey, sampled it, and, becoming intoxicated, told of the find, causing confiscation of the entire consignment before the bootleggers for whom it was intended could get it away.

Oshawa Church Destroyed By Fire

Overheated Furnace Believed to be Cause—Loss About $60,000.

OSHAWA, Nov. 16.—Simcoe street Methodist Church, the largest edifice of that denomination in town, was practically destroyed by fire which started yesterday afternoon, and was burning till about five o'clock this morning. Only the walls are left standing, and the damage is placed at about $60,000.

The blaze appears to have originated in an overheated furnace in pipes beneath the organ. Two young ladies preparing hymn sheets for an anniversary service in one of the rooms nearby were the first to perceive the fire and gave the alarm.

Prof. M. M. Stevenson of Toronto, the organist and choirmaster, was giving a lesson to one of his pupils in a room upstairs and had barely time to get out.

The piano which Prof. Stevenson was using, as well as another one, was destroyed, but a third was saved. The organ, which was completely destroyed, cost originally $15,000 and was remodeled last year as a cost of $5,000 more.

The entire main body of the church was wrecked, as well as the Sunday School building attached. The church was built in 1912. The present pastor is Capt. Rev. John Garbutt, who served overseas as Chaplain of the 116th Battalion.

The fire brigade responded promptly but it seemed impossible to play the water upon the seat of the blaze, the organ structure pouring a strong draught that defied the firemen's efforts for a long time, gas and smoke also making the work very difficult.

One of the firemen, Walter Roughly was hit across the chest by falling timber, and rendered unconscious for a time. He was taken home, but it is believed he is not very seriously injured.

There is $35,000 insurance carried on the building. The whole plant is worth about $100,000. There is still a mortgage of $10,000 on the Sunday school building.

Prohibition Leader May Lose An Eye

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

LONDON, Nov. 17.—The injury to the eye which William E. Johnson, the American anti-Saloon League Organizer received last week during a demonstration by students in which he was the central figure is proving more serious than was at first thought. It is feared it may be necessary to extract the eye.

Over One Million Dollars From Belleville Citizens

VICTORY LOAN TOTALS FOR CITY AND COUNTY ROLL UP SURPRISING FIGURES — HONOR FLAGS FOR EVERY SECTION.

Hastings County has subscribed nearly $200,000 more to the Victory Loan 1919 than it did to the Loan last year.

It is now a certainty that the County totals will amount to more than $2,800,000.

Belleville's returns will amount to considerably over a million dollars combining the team members with the specials. Last year, this total was only $876,500.

As final returns will not be complete until later this afternoon it is impossible to give exact figures at the time of going to press. It is probable on this account that the totals already known will be enlarged. They have been estimated on a most conservative basis.

Up to the present, every canvassing district out of the eighteen, have won Prince of Wales' Honor Flags with the exception of Sidney, Thurlow, Carlo and Mayo. It is believed however that these may all obtain their objective when the final results are known. Carlo and Mayo may have won theirs already but owing to the difficulty of communicating with Mr. James Douglas at Fort Stewart, it is impossible to know this until the mails arrive. County Chairman, W. B. Deacon and County Organizer, W. B. Evans are very hopeful that all will go over the top.

BEATS OTHER COUNTIES

Hastings has beaten the other Counties in the Bay of Quinte Division and left them behind some distance. This is very gratifying after having lagged at second and third place throughout the campaign. In no previous campaign have we obtained such a lead of the surrounding districts.

UNEXPECTED

Three weeks ago there were few people in Belleville who would have believed that their city would subscribe over a million dollars and the County $2,800,000 to this Loan. Those most optimistic spoke hopefully of us attaining our objective which was cut down slightly on account of the loss of R.A.F. at Camp Mohawk and the explosion at Trenton. The first week of the campaign was poor. The canvass improved somewhat during the second week. Up to last Wednesday it was a song and dance affair. On Thursday we turned in over $500,000 and, on Friday and Saturday subscriptions piled in with increasing volume. It has come very much as a surprise but no little credit for it is due to the untiring efforts of the County Executive. By their efforts Hastings County has made a name for itself and has added much lustre to another bright gem for the Crown of Canada. Citizens in Belleville and throughout the County will feel the benefit directly from the witness of their investment choice.

To-morrow final returns will be published.

Soft Coal Miners Slow Returning To Work

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 17.—Operators in the soft coal industry today considered calling upon the Department of Justice to enforce more vigorously the Federal Court mandate against the striking miners and to force resumption of work in those districts where the men walked out on November 1.

All Soft Coal Seized By Fuel Administrator

DRASTIC GOVERNMENT ACTION IS TAKEN TO PROTECT PUBLIC UTILITIES AND ESSENTIAL INDUSTRIES FROM A THREATENED FUEL FAMINE —EXPORT FORBIDDEN.

TORONTO, Nov. 17.—Provincial Fuel Administrator H. A. Harrington has taken over all bituminous coal in the province of Ontario, under an order which he issued Saturday night. This order follows closely on the heels of instructions sent out from Ottawa by the Canadian Trade Commission to customs authorities throughout the Dominion, placing an embargo on coal shipments from this country. This action, although somewhat drastic, has been taken in order to protect public utilities and essential industries in the country, in order to meet any conditions that may arise as a result of the recent strike of coal miners in the United States.

In the order which Mr. Harrington has issued coal dealers are forbidden to deliver any bituminous coal without having the written permission of his office. It does not apply, however to coal now in transit or in storage for use in public utilities, hospitals, food manufacturies or newsaper publishing offices, nor to domestic supplies. There are large quantities of coal stored at Nobel, Trenton, as well as elsewhere in the province that will be taken over under this order.

'How will this affect industries that are not classed as essential?" Mr. Harrington was asked.

"It is not my policy to see them suffer," he replied. "We don't want to do anything to prevent as much coal coming into Ontario as is possible, but the public utilities and essential industries must be protected."

Magrath Takes Charge

Mr. Harrington also issued the following statement last night from the federal fuel controller, C. A. Magrath, who only a few days ago again took charge of the Dominion situation:

"All orders-in-council under which the fuel control was administered during the war are still in effect, although they have not been enforced since the fuel control organization was discontinued on March 31 last. In view, however, of the critical situation now obtaining in the matter of coal supply, the government have requested the fuel controller again to assume charge of the fuel situation, and in connection with the imported supplies he has been fortunate enough to secure the co-operation of the Canadian Trade Commission.

"Canada is advised by Washington that this country will be treated fairly; but as long as the present situation induced by the recent strike in the bituminous coal fields, remains acute, coal can go only to public utilities and essential industries in actual need. It is, therefore, useless for Canada to look for coal from the United States under existing conditions unless in absolute need; and it is the United States administration that must be satisfied on that point. It is quite impossible for the provincial fuel administration to create an organization sufficiently large to examine the coal yard of each industry, dealer or importer. Under these circumstances the only thing to be done in cases where an industry or public utility requires soft coal, is for such concern quickly to make out an application for additional coal on forms as prescribed by the fuel administration.

Tobacco Habit Dangerous

says Doctor Connor, formerly of Johns Hopkins Hospital. Thousands of men suffering from fatal diseases would be in perfect health to-day were it not for the deadly drug, Nicotine. Stop the habit now before it's too late. It's a simple process to rid yourself of the tobacco habit in any form. Just go to any up-to-date drug store and get some Nicotol tablets; take them as directed, and lo! the pernicious habit quickly vanishes. Druggists refund the money if they fail. Be sure to read large and interesting announcement by Doctor Connor soon to appear in this paper. It tells of the danger of nicotine poisoning, and how to avoid it. In the meantime try Nicotol tablets; you will be surprised at the result. (6)

Belleville High School War Memorial Fuud

TO PERPETUATE THE NAMES OF THE BELLEVILLE HIGH SCHOOL BOYS WHO WERE KILLED IN THE GREAT WAR.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer.

Sir,—As treasurer of the Great War Memorial Scholarship fun of Belleville High School, I wish to think through your valuable paper, the 700 subscribers who have contributed the magnificent sum of $1557.65. As our objective is $2,000, it is necessary for us to receive $442.35 in order to complete the amount. It is just possible that during our canvass to date, including the canvass on Armistice Day, November 11th, that some who would like to subscribe have not been called upon. Subscriptions will therefore be received by the Treasurer of the fund until the objective is reached. We wish to invest this amount ($2,000) in Victory Bonds and use the interest annually for a scholarship to perpetuate the names of the Belleville High School boys who were killed overseas. The names of all subscribers will be published in due time in the local press and I trust that any errors in reporting any names or amounts or any emissions will be reported in order that corrections may be made. The response to our canvass has been magnificent and I feel sure that the citizens of Belleville will enable us to reach our objective before this year closes.

Yours sincerely,
P. C. MacLAURIN,
Treasurer, Great War Memorial Scholarship Fund.

Y.M.C.A. Notes

BELLEVILLE DELEGATES TO Y.M.C.A. CONVENTION

Representing the Belleville Y.M.C.A. the following delegates, Messrs. F. S. Deacon, E. P. Frederick, and P. F. Brockel will leave on Tuesday, November 18th for Detroit to attend the Fortieth International Convention of the Young Men's Christian Association which will open Wednesday, November 19th with more than 5000 delegates in attendance from all parts of the world and will continue until Sunday, November 23rd.

As this is the first convention the Y.M.C.A. has held since 1916 it will deal largely with the changed conditions the war has brought about, reviewing the experiences gained during the war and setting forth the program for the immediate future. The five days at Detroit will be days of vital concern to every state, country, railroad, student, and city Y.M.C.A. in the country as the scope and policy of the whole future work will be passed upon.

Two important phases of future policies deal with the world wide expansion of the Y.M.C.A. in responses to the requests that have come from more tan thirty countries and the problem of wether or not there is a place for the army type of "Y" hut as a community center.

The Belleville delegation will bring back with them the program decided upon including such features as community singing, community athletics, citizenship, the possible employment of women Red Triangle secretaries, first used in war work at home and abroad the relation of the Y.M.C.A. to the churches and the place of the "Y" in the industrial life of the community.

Is your boy hard on boots? Go to Gorman's Boot Shop and you will get boots gurranteed to give absolutesatisfaction.

Sudden Death Will Be Investigated

Deadly Beverage Alleged To Have Been Introduced in Hunting Camp.

A rumor which was freely circulated in the city on Saturday that three persons were dangerously ill as the result of partaking of some beverage at a deer hunting camp in North Hastings, was to some extent exaggerated. William Wellman, of Marmora village, who it is alleged partook of the beverage, is dangerously ill, and it is a fact that James Reid of Cowson's Crossing, between Coe Hill and St. Ola, is dead. An inquest was on Friday opened on the deceased by Dr. Gardiner of Eldorado. The taking of evidence was adjourned until Friday, the 28th inst. at St. Ola station. Mr. Reid leaves a widow and family. He conducted a general store at Cowson's Crossing. It has been stated that the stomach of the deceased has been sent to Toronto for analysis.

Hunters Found Companion Dead

Belleville Commercial Traveller Died Alone in Hunting Shanty.

The body of Mr. George N. Bennett, of this city, who on Thursday last died suddenly at a deer hunting camp near Brinklow, in North Hastings, arrived here on Saturday evening. It appears that on Thursday, the morning after the deceased arrived at the camp, he was not feeling well and did not accompany the members of the party on their search for deer. When they returned to camp about noon they were horrified to find Mr. Bennett dead. Revs. Messrs. Terrill and Martin, Methodist ministers, were members of the party at the camp, and as speedily as possible sent word to this city of Mr. Bennett's death.

PRINCETON TIGERS EAT UP OLD ELI'S SONS

New Haven, Conn., Nov. 15.—A football tossed in the air as a bit of Yale strategy tonight was the treasured trophy of a sensational Princeton victory. The Tiger team won from Yale by 13 to 6, in its biggest game of the season, by turning an intended Yale trick into a Princeton touchdown and consequent goal. It was Bud Scheerer a sub called into play only a few minutes before, who upset the Yale tactics, broke a tie score, and gained for himself lasting fame with the football enthusiasts of Old Nassau by scoring Princeton the first victory over Yale since 1911. His feat outdid that of Sammy White, the Tiger hero of that year. Both were the result of emergency handling of a loose ball.

Neville of Yale, rushing from his own 31-yard line, had gained several yards, when he was tackled by Bigler of Princeton. Instead of downing the ball he swung it over his head to Kempton, who was following fast behind. Scheerer shunted Kempton aside as he strained to reach the flying pigskin, then followed its course himself. A broken field of Yale players who had been reversed from offence to defence by the turn of the play, and Scheerer running fast and using a good straight arm, crossed the line with the touchdown that was the measure of Princeton's victory.

BUYING LUMBER TO BURN IN HOMES

Calgary, Nov. 17.—Every pound of domestic coal mined in Alberta is urgently wanted, and it is stated that in some parts of Saskatchewan the distressed citizens are buying lumber at $40 a thousand feet to burn in their homes in order to keep warm.

Practically all the mines in the Drumheller Valley complain that they are still unable to secure nearly enough cars to take care of their output.

According to information reaching the office of Coal Commissioner Armstrong in Calgary there are no cars whatever at the mines of the Midland, Western Gem or Scranton mines, and none of these mines worked Thursday.

Complaints from other mines in the Drumheller field were also received.

Wedding Bells

DENYES—McPHERSON

A pretty wedding took place on Wednesday, November 12th, at Bonnie Brae Farm, Sidney, when Annie Mabel, eldest daughter of the late James and Mrs. McPherson was united in marriage to Mr. Shelby A. Denyes of Odessa, Ont.

Promptly at the hour of 12 o'clock to the strains of the wedding march played by Mrs. J. A. McPherson, the bride entered the drawing room which was prettily decorated with white chrysanthemums and potted plants, leaning on the arm of her brother. She looked charming in a gown of ivory crepe de chene, with seed pearls trimmings. Her veil was of embroidered net, wreathed with orange blossoms, and her bouquet a shower of sweetheart roses, and white carnations. She wore the groom's gift, a gold wrist watch.

The bride's sister, Miss Violet McPherson of the Peterboro' Nromal School, was her only attendant, and wore a dress of old gold silk taffeta and georgette, with gold lace trimmings, and carried a bouqueta of pink chrysanthemums. The groom was supported by his brother, Dr. S. F. Denyes of Odessa.

During the signing of the register, Mrs. Frank Aikens sang sweetly, "O Promise Me." The groom's gift to the bridesmaid and pianist were gold bar pins set with anyx and pearls. After the ceremony a dainty buffet luncheon was served. The costly and numerous presents attested the popularity of the bride. The happy couple left on the C.P.R. for Ottawa and Montreal, amid showers of confetti and best wishes for a bright and happy future. The bride travelled in a navy blue serge suit with hat to match ,and black fox furs.

On their return they will reside in Odessa, where the groom is a prosperous young farmer.

MERRIAM—BOWES

Recently at New Haven, Conn, Mrs Fanny Bowes, formerly of Picton, Ont was married to Mr. Geo. Merriam of New York City. Rev. Dr. Merritt conducted the ceremony. The bride wore her travelling suit of navy cloth with hat to match, wearing also the groom's gift, a handsome necklace. She was unattended. Dinner was served at Hotel Caff after which Mr. and Mrs. Merriam left for New York and other points They will reside in Meriden, Conn., where the groom is engaged in business.

Active Christianity Will Mend the World

THE United National Campaign—representing the co-operative feature of the simultaneous, but independent, Forward Movements of the Anglican, Baptist, Congregational, Methodist and Presbyterian communions invites all followers of our common Lord and Master to pray earnestly for the peace and well-being of Canada and the world, and for a renewal of the Christian spirit of sacrifice and service.

Thirteen National Conventions

Thirteen National Conventions are about to assemble at the call of the United National Campaign. The dates arranged, and the places of meeting here follow:—

November 24th and 25th	Toronto and Montreal.
November 25th and 26th	Montreal and Moose Jaw.
November 26th and 27th	Regina.
November 27th and 28th	Saskatoon.
December 1st and 2nd	Edmonton and St. John.
December 2nd and 3rd	Calgary, London and Halifax.
December 4th and 5th	Charlottetown and Vancouver.

The Objects of the Conventions

1. To give thanks to God for Victory.
2. To rouse the Canadian people to a keener sense of their religious privileges and national responsibilities.
3. To stimulate the practice of prayer for individual and national needs at this difficult period.
4. To re-affirm the principle that the Gospel of Christ is the only cure for those conditions which produced the world war, and the only foundation for ensuring national stability, social welfare and individual happiness in the day of peace.

The Reason for United Action

His Grace, the Archbishop of Canterbury, preached the opening sermon of the Church Congress held at Leicester, England, on October 14th, 1919. On that occasion, he said:—

> "We ought to be able to make more of the real oneness, which, thank God, is already ours, the oneness, both in faith and in potential action, of all who can and do kneel to Christ as their living Lord. We want to dwell upon and foster the power of that fellowship for united . . . impact upon the world, or penetration of the world, at an hour so inexpressibly difficult as this. That need not, it will not, interfere with completest loyalty to the distinctive truths, which in our smaller circles within the Church of God we conscientiously hold dear."
> "The corporate life which belongs definitely to our own Churchmanship claims our whole-hearted allegiance. But that allegiance acquires an element of peril if it becomes so disproportioned as to obliterate or mar our loyalty to the larger whole, the Christian fellowship, the God-guided life and energy of all who profess and call themselves Christians."

WHAT THE PRESS AGENTS SAY

Pilgrim Progress

The spectacular morality play, "Experience" which has been aptly called "America's Pilgrim's Progress", will be presented by F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest at Griffin's this Wednesday night, enroute from Ottawa to Toronto, where it is to be presented for the fifth time. Certainly George V. Hobart achieved a new classic when he adapted the framework of the ancient morality play to the modern stage, but instead of imitating the old bogies of Bunyan's day, the Giant Despair and "Death on a pale horse", he peopled his play with modern types, who talk up-to-date "wise chatter" instead of the doleful, stilted blank-yerse dialogue of the old-times.

Messrs. Comstock and Gest, original producers of "Experience," have provided for its sixth season revival a complete equipment of novel scenic and lightning effects and what will interest the ladies more, brand new costumes of the latest imported Paris and London models, such as have not been seen even on Broadway as yet.

MARY PICKFORD IN "CAPTAIN KID, JR."

Once before has Mary Pickford played a Scotch role in "His Pride of the Clan," one of her most popular pictures. In "Captain Kid, Jr." which will be shown at Griffin's tonight and Tuesday night, she is again Scotch, but transplanted from the heather to "Somewhere in America,' as the granddaughter of Augus MacTavish, keeper of a curio and bookshop where the buried treasure which is basic idea of the story, is first noised about; and Mary is said to be the most winsome, close-fisted, lovable and at the same time, irritating little person you would find from one coast to the other. She keeps Jim Gleason, engaged in writing a novel, dangling till the very end; and she is a demon at a trade, so that when a book with the secret plan of the buried treasure appears, she is one of the foremost in arranging for the search which takes them to Cabbage Center—thereafter the tale is one of the most engrossing, amusing and whimsical characters. On the stage, this play by Rida Johnson Young was a great success. In the films with Mary Pickford in the lead it seems destined to create even a greater furore. A wonderful cast supports 'Our Mary'.' Douglas MacLean is the leading man, "Uncle Tom without the Cabin" is the title of the funny Sennett comedy being shown on the same program along with Gaumont's World Wide News, and a 2 reel 101 Ranch Western drama.

"THE TROUBLE BUSTER"

"The Trouble Buster" is being shown at the Palace tonight to Wednesday, matinee daily, brimful of optimism and charm. Vivian Martin is widely known as "Miss Merry" for her sunny disposition, while Tom Forman's smile is famous. Thus it would seem that the name was exceptionally well chosen and that a happy hour's entertainment is insured in "The Trouble Buster."

A new Luke comedy, Pathe Review in Pathe color, and a new chapter of Vitagraph's whirlwind serial "Perils of Tunder Mountain" are also being exhibited on the same programme.

HIS WIFE MARRIED HIS RIVAL

If you returned home after a disappearance of five years, and found your wife married to a former rival, would you disappear again and permanently to save her suffering, or would you remain, denounce the second marriage, and claim her as yours? That's the problem that confronted a mining engineer of the great North-west. He solved, it to set forth, in "Wolves or the Night" a special Victory picture to be shown at Griffin's this Thursday to Saturday, with a matinee Saturday. The idol of millions, William Farnum, and charming Louise Lovely, portray the leading roles. Five other selected comedies and topicals are also being shown on the same program.

"EXPERIENCE" MATINEE

The box office at Griffin's has been deluged with inquiries from theatregoers in Belleville and vicinity regarding seats for 'Experience' the great morality play which comes to Griffin's this Wednesday. The Griffin management has received assurance of a large contingent from Trenton and Picton, while the plan of seats for the attraction does not open till to-morrow morning at 10 a.m., it looks as if every available seat will be taken before the performance Wednesday evening. In order to give all an opportunity to see the play, arrangements have been completed with the management of the 'Experiece' company to give a special matinee performance Wednesday at 2.15. Doors opening at 1.45 p.m.

GARDEN OF EDEN NOW A WILDERNESS.

We are all familiar with the story of the old lady who found much comfort in the word Mesopotamia. During and since the war it has been described as the future granary of the world and the new Garden of Eden. Sir George Cunningham-Buchan, writing in the London Times, says that for practical purposes it is useless to dwell on Mesopotamia's glories of the past. The greater part of Mesopotamia is today a miserable wilderness of barren desert alternating with vast swamps. There are stretches of cultivation along the river banks, on the outskirts of the marshes, and here and there considerable patches of irrigated land, especially on the Euphrates side of the country; but in 1917, out of a potential area of twelve million acres, the total area under cultivation in the whole of Mesopotamia was considerably below a million acres.

Most traces of ancient civilization, he says, have disappeared. "Ancient Baghdad is represented by a vast area of broken bricks and rubbish, while the inhabitants of Mesopotamia, who used to be numbered in millions, aggregate at the present time one to one and a half million souls. Between Basra and Baghdad all that can be seen is a vast alluvial plain, unrelieved by a single hill or natural eminence of any size. There are no trees other than the date palm, and no stone of any description, and the climate is divided between intense heat in the summer and considerable cold in the winter. The mean annual rainfall at Baghdad is 8½ inches.

The Times writer says he does not wish it to be understood that there is no future for Mesopotamia, but he does not believe in spending money for visionary and philanthropic enterprises. Too much money has been spent already, he thinks. No doubt something can be done in the way of development, but a little cold water may serve to check extravagance.

KNOCKING AT OUR GATES.

The Farmers' Sun, in dealing with the question of immigration from continental Europe, takes the ground that there are only two alternatives, either exclusion or assimilation into the life of the Canadian Commonwealth. Says the Sun:

"Before a selection of alternatives is decided upon, at all events before we decide for exclusion, it will be wise to consider all the consequences involved in such a course. Looking merely to the immediate future, who is to build our railways, dig our sewers and do the rough work in packing plants and other factories if a certain type of continental immigrant is excluded? Those who clamor most loudly against the alien would be the last to accept such employment for themselves. But these alien immigrants, if allowed entry, will bring with them more than muscular strength. They will bring ideas as well. England would not be the nation she is were it not for the mixture of Norman and Saxon and Danish blood that has contributed to the making of modern England. In the time of Elizabeth, as Wrong tells us in The British Nation, the arts of lace-making, silk weaving and improvements in cloth manufacture were carried to the British Isles by refugees from the Low Countries and France who sought freedom from religious persecution and the devastation carried by invading armies—twin evils then ever present on the continent. These immigrants contributed quite as much as island insularity to the maritime and manufacturing supremacy England long enjoyed.

"Under our own eyes we have seen another nation build up in much the same way that Britain was built up centuries ago. The United States, the greatest industrial nation in the world today, has been made by an even greater fusion of races than occurred in the case of England. Roosevelt, perhaps the most typical American of his time, with his mixture of Dutch, Huguenot, Irish and other blood, was a striking illustration of the value of the melting pot in the creation of a virile people. The marvellous development which occurred in the Western States in the second half of the last century was due in greater degree to the migration of Germans that followed the popular upheaval in Germany in the forties, and to the inflow of sturdy peasants from Russia and the Scandinavian countries that came later than it was to the original Puritan stock of the Thirteen Colonies. Our own West is being developed in large measure by an overflow from the mixture which created the Western States and by direct movement from continental Europe. The marvellous strides that Alberta is making in dairying is perhaps mainly due to the work of a few Danes like Marker, Alberta's dairy commissioner.

"It is a great problem by which we are faced. It is one calling for careful study instead of passionate declamation. It is more than a national problem. It is as broad as humanity since, if we break down racial antipathies in the free soil of America we shall, by example, greatly assist in breaking down like antipathies in the nations of the old world where they have their source."

NATURE'S MIRROR

When a woman is well and healthy—there's a sparkle in her eyes, a rose tint in her cheeks, and she has rich red blood. There's elasticity in every movement and a spring in her step. Love comes to every woman who has bounding health—but when she is pallid, dull eyed, languid, she has no magnetism nor does she appeal to any man.

Such a change in feelings and looks!

After suffering pain, feeling nervous, dizzy, weak and dragged down by weaknesses of her sex—with eyes sunken, black circles and pale cheeks—such a woman is quickly restored to health by the Favorite Prescription of Dr. Pierce. Changed, too, in looks, for after taking Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription the skin becomes clear, the eyes brighter, the cheeks plump. It is purely vegetable, contains no alcohol.

Druggists sell it in tablets or liquid. Send Dr. Pierce, Buffalo, N.Y., 10c for trial package.

Other Views

Needing a Snickersnee.

Hamilton Times.

Last week was "Good Speech Week" in the United States. The youngsters were told how wrong it was to say "it ain't," "he done it," "I swear," "I have seen," and such like. We have a few of these and other idioms in Canada that might be weeded out.

The Work Day.

New York Evening Sun.

The miners who prefer a six-hour work day five days a week may regard work as an enemy. Thoughtful men regard work as a friend. What men think of work, however, matters as little as what they think of the weather. Inexorable nature says "work or die."

It is good for man to work. A man without work, whatever his income, is no man at all. Work is health, appetite, sound sleep. It is health to the mind also. And in deep sorrow the Great Physician's best prescription is work.

Rural Power.

Winnipeg Free Press.

The Farm and Ranch Review, of Calgary, has reached "the conclusion that the date upon which the farmer assumes control of Federal administration will be determined merely by the date upon which the next Federal General Election will be held." This, it may be said, is no wild guess. It is quite within the range of possibilities.

In support of its argument that this result is inevitable, the Review says:

"The farmer vote is approximately 56 per cent. of the total vote of Canada. But the significant feature of the situation lies in the fact that, owing to the greater density of population in urban centres, this 56 per cent. of votes controls approximately 75 per cent. of the representation, provincially and federally. This, of course, is a tremendous factor in favor of the farmer movement. It is, therefore, reasonably clear, that the farmers, acting together, can easily command—and will command—a majority in the federal and provincial parliaments."

That is to say, the farmers had a preferred position with respect to voting powers. The predominant position of the rural vote is an historical incident; not the result of planning. It arises primarily from the rapid growth of urban communities during the past half century.

The Sweetest Sound.

Peterborough Examiner.

The Port Hope Guide and The Lindsay Warder have been indulging in a little sparring match over the vexed subject of train whistling within the town limits. The Guide having complained of the G. T. R. locomotives creating a disturbance in Port Hope by their whistles, the Warder remarks that both G. T. R. and C. P. R. trains whistle in Lindsay, and no one says a word. As an impartial outsider may we add our testimony that the sweetest sounds we ever heard in either Port Hope or Lindsay was the whistle of the train that was to take us back to Peterborough.

Proved It.

"And you call yourself a lover of peace?" said Mr. Rafferty.

"I do," answered Mr. Dolan.

"After intentionally droppin' the brick on Casey?"

"Yes. Have ye iver known Casey to be so peaceful as he was just after I dropped that brick?"

Kent stared at him. On the morrow a second week's salary would be due and on the next day but one, a second account from Madame Garin. He pointed the fact out to Beaufort quietly, but with emphasis. He said that, if matter were financially complicated it would be well for him to understand their position, in order that he might realize his outlook and if essential make a temporary removal to a pension where he could live more cheaply. He did not want to badger him he explained but Beaufort's own programme was not capable of imitation in his own case and as a family man, he must cut his coat according to his cloth.

"If you want me to let part of my salary stand over for the next few weeks, and it's unavoidable, I suppose it is unavoidable," he said finally; "only, I can't be left in the dark about it. Am I to gather that what you propose is to pay me a hundred and sixty francs, to-morrow, instead of three hundred and fifty? Or shall I have the lot?"

What he received was a peaceful snore, and he perceived that 'Billy' Beaufort had fallen asleep. He contemplated him for a minute desperately and lit another cigarette. The thought of Cynthia sitting at home in the bedroom and waiting in suspense for a messenger's knock at the door, nerved him to upset a chair, and Beaufort opened his eyes with a grunt.

"What can you do?" demanded Kent, briefly this time, lest slumber should overtake him again. "Can you give me any money before I go?"

"I've told you I'll do my utmost. You shall have a hundred and sixty francs to-morrow; I can't give it you now—I haven't got it. If I had, you may be sure you wouldn't have to ask twice for it. I'm not a chap of that sort, Kent. By George! I never desert a pal!......If a louis on account is any good, I can let you have that."

"Well," said Kent, seeing that there was no more to be done, "I rely on you, and—thanks—I'll take the louis to go on with."

He went down and out to the boulevard ad set Cynthia a petit bleu, saying: "Got something. Balance to-morrow." and wondered gloomily whether Madame Garin would continue complacent when she discovered that after all, he only suggested paying one week's bill instead of two. Perhaps it would be easier to arrange with the vivacious daughter.

He resolved to try and 'Madamoiselle' was all smiles and 'Mais perfaitment, monsieur,' when he spoke to her. He congratulated himself on having had the idea; but, though Beaufort provided him with money agreed upon next day, and repeated that he 'never deserted a pal' with an air of triumph he did not make up the deficit and instead of being able to square accounts with the Garins, the subeditor gradually found himself getting deeper into their debt. From its being a doubtful point whether he would receive his salary in full, it became a question whether he would get any of it at all; and when he obtained half, he learned by degrees to esteem it a fortunate week. Beaufort overflowed with promises and protestations. Everything was always 'on the eve of being righted,' but the day of righteousness never dawned. 'Mademoiselle' began to stop 'Monsieur Kent' in the hall, and convey to him with firmness that her mother had very heavy obligations to meet, and Cynthia sat in the dining-table in constant terror of the old woman coming in and publicly insulting them.

One morning when the laundress brought back their linen, Humphrey had to feign to be asleep, while Cynthia explained that 'monsieur had all the money, and was so unwell that she did not like to wake him.' The poor creature was sympathetic and went away bidding madame not disquiet herself—it was doubtless only a passing indisposition; but after she had gone, the girl begged Kent to take a loan on her engagement ring and after some discussion he complied. Everything is more valuable in Paris than London until one has occasion to pawn it, and then it is less so, especially jewelry. From the mont-de-piete Kent procured about forty per cent. of what a London pawnbroker would have advanced. However the loan was useful. Though it did not clear them, it went some way toward doing it, besides paying the nurse's wages, which were due the same day and afforded temporary relief. Cynthia said she had become so 'demoralized'—she used a happy term now with a frequency he would have found astonishing if he had recalled how she talked when they first met—that a substantial payment on account 'made her feel quite meritorious' and there was a week in which they went to the theatres again and walked past the bureau erectly.

March had opened mildly and people were once more beginning to sit outside the cafes, and Mrs. Deane-Pitt was returning to England. Kent had kept his resolution not to enter the yellow drawing-room in Avenue Wagram when it could be avoided—partly no doubt, because of the anxieties he had to occupy his mind, but partly also by force of will. When he heard that she was leaving, though, he could ant replied she was at home, that he to do less—than call to bid her au revoir and he was conscious as the servant replied she was at home, that he would have been disappointed otherwise.

Her gown betokened that visitors were expected; teacups demonstrated that visitors had been. She welcomed him lanquidly, and motioned him to a seat.

"I thought you must have gone to London, or to Paradise," she said "What have you been doing with yourself?"

"I've been fearfully busy," he answered lamely.

"On the paper?"

"Of course."

"I don't hear good reports of the paper," she said. "I hope they aren't true."

"The paper is as good as it always was," responded Kent—"neither better nor worse. May I ask what you hear?"

"I heard that Sir Charles Eames is getting tired of it:–says he is running a journal that nobody reads but himself, ad he 'don't read it much.' He told a man in confidence in his club, who told it privately to another man, who told it, between him and her, to a woman who told me—I wouldn't breathe a word of it to anyone myself—that 'if the price didn't improve soon he should scratch it.' What will the robin do then, Mr. Kent?"

Humphrey looked grave. This was the first plain intimation he had had that 'The World and his Wife' was likely to collapse, and badly as the post was paying him now, it was more lucrative than any that awaited him should it terminate. He thought that Mrs. Deane-Pitt might have communicated her views more considerably.

"The robin will manage to find crumbs, I suppose," he replied: "I wasn't born on 'The World and his Wife.'

"May I offer you some tea and cake in the meantime?"

"No, thanks."

Her tone annoyed him this afternoon it was hard and careless. He fancied at the moment that his only feeling for her was dislike and sneered at the mental absurdities into which he had strayed. There was a lengthy pause—a thing that had seldom occurred between them—followed by a brief interchange of platitudes.

"Well," he murmured at length getting up, "I'm afraid I must go."

She did not press him to remain.

"Must you?" she said. "I dare say we shall meet again. It's a little world in every sense."

"I hope we shall. Au revoir, and bon voyage, Mrs. Deane-Pitt."

"If you should go back yourself, you'll come to see me? You know where I live."

STOLE TWO LAMBS

Mr. P. J. Campbell, butcher of Lindsay, suffered a loss of two fine large, dressed lambs Friday night, when thieves entered his slaughter house, which is located a mile or two north of the town on the bank of the Scugog river.

CARS BROKEN INTO

On Friday night, two loaded cars on the siding at the British Canadian Canners plant, Cobourg, were broken into and two cases of canned goods smashed. From two of the cases two cans of tomatoes were taken and from another nine cans of corn. That the parties were evidently hungry is evidenced by the fact that two of the cans of corn were afterwards found by Chief Ruse partly emptied.

IMMIGRATION INSPECTOR

On Saturday, Mr. Wm. P. Skitch of Cobourg received word from Ottawa that he had been appointed immigration inspector for the port of Cobourg in place of David Ewing deceased. The position carries with it a salary of $1,000. Mr. Skitch is a returned soldier, having gone overseas in 1915 with the Queen's University Field Battery and was shell-shocked during the big allied offensive on the Somme.

An endeavour will be made to have the Associated Boards meet in Belleville next year.

TO EXAMINE OFFICIALS

It is reported that a medical examination is being made of all of the officials at the Kingston Penitentiary in order to determine their physical fitness for the positions they hold. Such an examination has not taken place for many years and the older members found suffering from defects are likely to be retired with a gratuity, as there is no system of pension in force that is applicable to prison officials. The examination was ordered by Superintendent of Prisons, Brig.-Gen. W. S. Hughes.

Nahan F. Dupuis, professor of mathematics at Queen's made such a calendar by which he correc day week and year migh be obtained for any time in the past or future. This calendar invented by Prof. Dupuis was similar to that described as having been discovered by the Italian father.

MUNICIPAL REFORMS

The Kingston branches of the Army and Navy Veterans and Great War Veterans have formed themselves into a Veterans' Municipal Committee for the purpose of endeavoring to give the city "the best possible and most efficient system of municipal government combined with reasonable economy and without distinction of class, creed, or original nationality." The veterans will endeavor to secure representation in the City Council without seeking to establish a privileged soldier class. They will oppose acclamations by arrangement. They will also work for selection of the best possible material for the Board of Education and the Board of Health. They want the City Council to establish a fair price committee for the prevention of unjust inflation of all things essential to decent living and will stand for fair honest and equitable assessment of all property so that the burden of taxation shall be equally distributed. They will ask from the Dominion Government imbursement for all losses in taxation on Government property.

AUTO ACCIDENT

Mr. and Mrs. F. B. Potts of Smithfield were on Sunday the victims of an auto accident, but fortunately none were seriously injured. The party were enroute to Stirling when something went wrong with the stearing gear with the result the car went into a ditch and turned upside down. Mrs Potts and children were considerably bruised but no bones were broken.

MOTOR FIRE TRUCK.

The arrival at Brockville of a standard motor fire truck for the Brockville Fire Department marked the opening of a new era in local fire fighting, which will undoubtedly have its effect in more efficient handling of fires. The truck, which was built in Toronto, was given its first tests and will be subjected to most exhaustive examination before being accepted.

CHILD DIED FROM BURNS.

Frederick L. Standen, aged one year and twelve days, son of Mr. and Mrs. Alfred Standen, of Brewers' Mills, was on Thursday playing with fire in the kitchen while the mother's back was turned. Its clothes got in the flames, which were extinguished by the mother. The child was rushed to the Kingston Hospital, but passed away Friday morning.

DEER HUNTERS HOME.

Local deer hunters have returned home from the woods, bringing with them their complement of the fleet-footed animals. The general impression appears to be that deer are not as plentiful this year as last year, the reason given by many being that the killing of two last year by each hunter was one too many. Some hunters advocate that there be a close season or two in order to replenish the woods of Ontario, but others state that the game laws should be strictly observed, as at the present time many deer and other game are being killed out of season.

INTERESTING WILL CASE.

An interesting judgment was delivered on Saturday by His Honor Judge Wills, Judge of the Surrogate Court, in the estate of the late Robert Hiram Reid, who died June 27th, 1917. The deceased made his will on June 4th, 1917, and on June 23rd, 1917, created a joint account in the bank of all his available cash with his father, Andrew Reid, who was an executor of his will, and immediately prior to making the will handed his father $600 in cash. The will left his entire estate to his children with a life estate to his widow. The investigation before the court was instituted by the widow and the children for a declaration that the $600 given by the deceased to the father belonged to the estate and also the moneys in the joint account created before the death of the deceased, namely $2,690.00 belonged also to the estate, and that the gifts were not valid to the father. A great deal of evidence was submitted, about fifteen wtinesses were examined and affidavits from the West where the deceased had lived for some time were filed. The judgment of the court was that the executors, Andrew Reid and Clayton Reid restore to the estate the $600 and $2,690 and interest from death of deceased at 33 per cent. payable half yearly and pay the cost of the investigation personally, except the cost of the audit on restitution being made. Major R. D. Ponton for Olive I. Reid and Joseph A. Reid, infants; E. J. Butler for Mrs. Annie Reid, widow; W. C. Mikel, K.C., for Andrew Reid and Clayton Reid, executors.

Mrs. M. Peck Has Gained 25 Pounds

Nine Years Trouble Ends And She Is Well And Happy, Now.

"I have gained twenty-five pounds since I commenced taking Tanlac, and the troubles that have been making life miserable for me for nine years have been completely overcome," said Mrs. Minnie Peck, who lives at 9874-82nd Ave., Edmonton, the other day.

"When I commenced taking Tanlac," continued Mrs. Peck, "I was so weak and run down that I was hardly able to get about. Everything I ate disagreed with me, and I would suffer for two or three hours after every meal on account of gas forming and bloating me up. I would have severe cramping pains in the pit of my stomach. I was very nervous, so much so that the slamming of a door would upset me terribly, and a good night's sleep was out of the question for me. I would actually get out of bed every morning feeling more tired and worn out than I did the night before. This condition just kept getting worse all the time until I got to where I was compelled to stay in bed most of the time.

"Then I decided to give Tanlac a trial, and it's the honest truth, I commenced to feel better before I had finished my first bottle of this wonderful medicine, and my condition just kept getting better until I am now as well as I ever was in my life. I never have a sign of stomach trouble now, and I have a fine appetite and eat just anything I want. I have gotten back all my strength and can easily do all my housework. My nerves are in perfect condition, and I sleep like a child every night. It is simply wonderful the way I have gained in weight, and in fact, I just feel fine all the time. Yes, Sir, Tanlac is a wonderful medicine and as long as I live I will never lose an opportunity to say a good word for it."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto, by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell, and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakley.

In buying toilet articles, etc., stamped French Ivory, the public should be careful, as many of the cheapest gardes of Ivory are stamped Solid French Ivory, as the name represents nothing. The best brand of Ivory is stamped ORIENTAL IVORY, the difference in quality being easily distinguished. Every piece of Oriental Ivory is uniform in color and will last much longer than any other.

CHILDREN HELP CHILDREN

The Management Board of the Children's Shelter was pleased to receive the sum of $30.65 per Miss Margaret Walker, Queen St., City. They appreciate very much indeed this kindly assistance and the more so because of the way in which it was raised. Margaret Walker, Dorcas Walker, Jean Brimmer, Grace Brimmer, Helen Lattimer, Alice Lazier, Ella Robertson, Catharine Robertson, Shela Taylor and Marjory Taylor, all of them school children, set to work and made goods and fixed up a bazaar at which the articles met ready sale, the result being the above named splendid donation. This illustrates what fortunate little folks can do to help little ones who are unable to help themselves. It was indeed a splendid act of these little girls and worthy of many imitations.

RE-UNION OF 80TH BATTALION

PARALYTIC NEURITIS

CANADIAN SOLDIER REGAINS THE USE OF HIS LEFT ARM THROUGH USING T. R. C.'S.

"I would advise all persons suffering from Neuritis or Rheumatism to try T.R.C.'s," writes Pte. Bawley of Beaverton, Ontario. Quoting from his letter:—

"In August, 1916, after suffering some considerable time from the loss of the use of my left arm, I determined to come to Toronto and see a specialist, as our local doctors had done me no good. One said I was suffering from paralysis and must take a long rest; another started giving me electric treatment and ice applications; but all efforts failed and I got worse instead of better, so I came to Toronto.

"While walking down King Street I chanced to see the testimonials in your window and on reading them became convinced that you were doing for others exactly what I needed for myself. I determined to try T.R.C.'s and purchased six boxes of capsules. I am prepared to state that long before I used up the medicine I was completely cured." Ask your druggist for a box. Mailed anywhere for $1.04. (Templetons Ltd., 142 King St. W., Toronto). Druggist, 252 Front St. Phone 138. Sole Agents for Belleville, Dolan, the

In addition to the pleasure derived from music itself, there is the mark of culture which it conveys.

There can be nothing coarse or vulgar in the home environment where the real spirit of music reigns.

To speak of music in the home is to speak of the piano, for the piano has become the universal instrument. And when selecting a piano care should be exercised that the one selected possesses tone, beauty of line and durability.

OWNER OF MOTOR MUST PAY $2,500

Toronto, Nov. 17.—After fifteen minutes' absence from the Assize Court last night a jury returned a verdict for $2,500 damages in favor of James Dougherty, who sued Mary B. Hance for $5,000 for injuries he sustained when he was run into by defendant's car near Clarkson, on the Toronto-Hamilton highway, while he was lighting the rear light on his own auto. The smash occurred on November 29, 1917, but the trial was delayed owing to the absence of Dougherty on war service overseas. Defendant denied negligence and attributed the accident to an eastbound car striking her auto and forcing it into Dougherty's car. The jury decided that the driver of the Hance car as guilty of negligence when he did not come to a stop behind the stationary auto.

TWO DRINKS—TWO YEARS

Toronto, Nov. 17.—In passing sentence for two years less one week at the Jail Farm upon Jas. O'Hearn who pleaded guilty to manslaughter, Justice Sutherland said: "Motor accidents make fixing sentences a matter of great difficulty. You are apparently a competent, capable and intelligent young man in every respect and it is evident that you are not addicted to drink."

Prisoner, who is a young man while intoxicated motored into and killed Matthew Plumb, who was working at King and Church streets, early on Labor Day. Ald. Ramsden, Chairman Hambly, of the Board of Education and Alfred Coyell, City Relief Officer, gave character evidence.

O'Hearn is a Bachelor in Applied Science and in the electrical supply business. He had been at a wedding and had departed from his usual temperate habit by taking two drinks.

FIREBUG IS CAUGHT.

Sydney, N.S., Nov. 17.—The Francis Xavier College, Antigonish, firebug was caught red-handed at the college. He is a young student belonging to Cape Breton. He was led into a trap by two other boys who pretended to act as his accomplices in another attempt to burn the college down. He was caught in the basement getting ready to set another fire. The boy, who is now in jail, has confessed to setting the fire on September 25 which damaged one of the college buildings, but was discovered in time to prevent the building being destroyed. He also stated that he intended to use dynamite as well as fire this time. When pressed for his motive in setting fire to the college the boy said he wanted to get home.

City Poll Tax Will Be Remitted To Recently Returned Soldiers

ALL SOLDIERS DISCHARGED IN 1919 WILL BE EXEMPT FROM POLL TAX, CITY COUNCIL DECIDES—WILL ADVERTISE FOR GAS DEPARTMENT MANAGER.

At the Council meeting last evening the business transacted was chiefly of a routine nature. A motion was adopted to comply with the request of the G.W.V.A. to remit the poll tax for 1919 for returned soldiers. It was also decided to advertise for a manager for the gas department. Rev. Mr. Dyke addressed the Council relative to the Council giving a grant to the Free Consumptive Hospital at Muskoka. The matter was referred to the Executive Committee.

Members present, Mayor Platt, Aldermen Woodley, Hunter, Bone, White, Hanna, Treverton, Simmons and Ostrom.

Minutes of the last meeting were read and confirmed.

Reports of committees, communications were laid upon the table and on motion the Council went into committee of the whole on reports, etc. Ald. Simmons in the chair.

The accounts recommended to be paid by the various committees were passed and the following recommendations were disposed of:

That the Board of Trade be given permission to put up banners and posters on Front streets to assist the Chamber of Commerce Campaign.—Adopted.

That the Council secure six plans of houses to be constructed under the housing scheme from an architect, said plans to represent houses worth $2,500 and $4,000 each. Adopted.

That the same remission of taxes be made to the local Y.M.C.A. as in former years.—Adopted.

That a Bylaww be prepared defining the duties of the engineers at the pump house.—Adopted.

POLL TAX

The G. W. V. A. of the city wrote the Council asking that body to remit the poll tax to returned soldiers for this year.

Ald. Hanna—I have a motion to cover that matter.

New Industries

The G. W. V. A. also unanimously endorsed the action taken by the City Council, Board of Trade and Inrustrial Commissioner for industries they are bringing to Belleville, and the Association desired in every way to co-operate in every way of making the city progressive.—Ordered to be filed.

The Committee rose and reported. Report received and adopted.

Enquiries

Ald. Hanna—Has any effort been made to put Isabel Street in a proper condition?

Ald. WoodleyI have tried to get the contractor who laid the sewer to do something.

Ald. Treverton—What is the tax on outsiders coming into the city selling goods.

Ald. Woodley—The tax is $50 for a foot peddler and $100 for a horse and vehicle.

Ald. Treverton—It should be $500, as it works against our merchants.

Ald. Bone—Is it not advisable to advertise for a gas manager.

Ald. Simmons—Yes. Or get a person to be both manager of gas and water works.

Ald. White—Will a granolithic walk be built on Bettes street?

Ald. Woodley—Some kind of a walk will be provided.

Ald. Hanna—Is the auditor through with the gas department audit?

Ald. Simmons—The report is ready for presentment.

Ald. Simmons—Will something be done to make repairs on east Bridge street hill?

Ald. Woodley—Yes.

Motions

Ald. Bone moved, seconded by Ald. Hanna, that the electors be asked to vote on the question of daylight saving at the next civic election.

Ald. Bone—Other cities are doing this.

Ald. Woodley said there was much confusion this year over the daylight saving. He was in favor of the scheme.

Ald. White was not in favor of the scheme for those who have to go to work at 7 o'clock and he was not prepared to vote for the motion. We should be governed by the Government of the country.

Mayor Platt—The Canadian railways had to fall in with the United States railways.

The mition was withdrawn.

Ald. Bone moved, seconded by Ald. Hanna, that this Council as a body and also individually, heartily support the campaign now in progress to form a Chamber of Commerce here with a permanent office and paid secretary.—Carried.

Moved by Ald. Bone, seconded by Ald. Hanna, that the City Clerk write the clerk of Hastings County, assuring him of our desire to co-operate in the matter of a permanent highway between Belleville and Foxboro, this being the main highway for roads leading to Madoc, Frankford and Stirling.

After Ald. Bone had spoken in support of the motion it was carried.

Ald. Hanna moved, seconded by Ald Woodley, that the Union Foundry Company be given permission to operate a moulding shop in the old school bdilding on Jones street.—Carried.

Ald. Hanna moved, seconded by Ald. Woodley, that this Council remit the poll tax on all members of the C. E. F. who were discharged during the year 1919, on production of their discharge papers.—Carried.

Ald. Ostrom moved, seconded by Alld. Simmons that an electric light be placed at the junction of Moira and Wallbridge street.—Carried.

Ald. Simmons moved, seconded by Ald. Treverton, that the city clerk be authorized to advertise for a manager of the gas department.

Ald. Ostrom thought the Council might be able to run the department for the remainder of the year.

Ald. Bone—It is important that a manager of the gas department be secured as soon as possible.

The motion was adopted.

Unfinished Business

Under this head Rev. Mr. Dyke addressed the Council relative to a grant to the Muskoka Free Consumptive hospital. The Rev. gentleman referred to the good work being accomplished. There were at present 268 patients in the hospital and of this number only 68 were contributing aything. None pay the cost of their maintenance. Today it cost $14 and $15 a week per patient. There are 200 free patients and the cost to maintain same is great. The gifts from municipality is voluntary. 2 patients for Belleville there now.

Ald. Bone said he contributed towards this hospital, and it was a commendable institution.

Matter referred to the Executive Committee.

Resigns Chairmanship

Ald. Simmons after speaking about the Council accepting the resignation of Mr. Gardiner as gas manager stated that he (the speaker) had not been properly treated in the matter. He tendered his resignation as chairman of the Gas Committee and asked same to be accepted.

A bylaw will be prepared appointing Ald. Ostrom to the position.

Council adjourned.

BRUSSELS, Nov. 18.—From twenty-five to twenty-seven seats in the Belgian Chamber of Deputies have been gained by Socialists, according to estimates by neutral newspapers.

Weary of War.

DORPAT, Denmark, Nov. 18.—M. Litvinoff, former Russian ambassador to Great Britain and head of the Bolshevik delegation conferring with representatives of the Baltic states here, had his initial meeting with other delegates this afternoon, credentials being exchanged. Although the present discussions cover merely the exchange of prisoners, they are regarded as most important, as the attitude of M. Litvinoff on that question will probably indicate the position of the Bolshevik on the subject of an armistice and peace.

Press Baiting Premier.

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The morning newspapers express sharp disappointment with Premier Lloyd George's statement in the House of Commons yesterday regarding Great Britain's policy toward Russia. The London Times says it is almost ashamed to comment on the debate, which went far to undermine the prestige of the British name in Eastern Europe. The Telegraph says it awaits with misgiving the political consequence of a policy which means an immediate accession to the prestige of the vilest tyranny in Europe. The Morning Post says Mr. Lloyd George announces in fact the defeat of the Allies in the East.

Prince Charming Is Quite An Athlete

WHITE SULPHUR SPRINGS, W. Va., Nov. 18.—The Prince of Wales spent the first of his three days of rest here Saturday by walking ten miles, spending an hour in a swimming pool golfing three hours, and dancing for three more. At the conclusion of this program he seemed to have recovered considerably from the fatigue of his strenuous four-day visit to Washington.

The Prince won his golfing match, played with Sir Godfrey Thomas, his private secretary, and again proved his title as an athlete when he turned a somersault from a platform twelve feet high into seven feet of water in the swimming pool.

The desire of the Royal visitor for three days' rest incognito was only fulfilled partially. The whole population of this little mountain resort was at the railroad station when the special train arrived, but the news of his intended visit had been kept carefully enough so that only a handful of strangers were present.

At the mammoth hotel where the Prince was lodged there were scarcely 100 guests, and throughout the day the Prince was able to move about with freedom of a private individual.

The visit to the swimming pool was made after the Prince had spent the morning tramping over the Appalachian Mountains. Practically unrecognized, the Royal bather laughingly challenged the professional swimmer in charge of the pool to a diving contest, and, according to the professional, beat him at his own game.

The afternoon was spent in golf, and in the evening the Prince witnessed a movie given in the hotel. He danced afterward until midnight.

St. Thomas Episcopal Church was thronged at Sunday morning's services which were attended by the Prince of Wales.

President Threatens to Pigeonhole Treaty

WASHINGTON, Nov. 18.—On the eve of the final vote on the Peace Treaty, President Wilson gave the Senate to understand today that unless it modified the reservations already adopted he would take the treaty back to the White House and lock it up in his desk.

The first effect of the warning was to stiffen the lines on both sides of the Senate fight. Then compromise proposals of many kinds were thrown out by the Democrats in a final effort to break into the majority program. They found the treaty's Republican friends all of whom had voted for the reservations, disposed to listen but to promise nothing, and the life of the treaty seemed to hang upon a slender thread.

Bolsheviki Claim Sweeping Victories

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The Bolsheviki claim the capture of ten generals and more than one hundred other officers at Omsk, according to an official statement issued today by the Soviet Government at Moscow. Kolchak's army is being pursued in an easterly direction, the statement adds.

Clinic Conducted In Marmora Town Hall

MARMORA, Nov. 17.—At the clinic held in the Town Hall here for the benefit of the school children of Marmora, and the surrounding district, 27 operations were performed for the removal of tonsils and adenoids. The day before the clinic the auditorium was filled with cots, and presented quite a creditable hospital. The stage was converted into an operating-room. Dr. W. G. Mackenzie was the operating surgeon, assisted by Dr. Thomson and Dr. Crowford. Miss Campbell, graduate nurse, was head nurse, and was assisted by Miss Watt of Deloro and an efficient staff of practical nurses from Marmora. The Women's Institute served lunch in a room down stairs for all connected with the clinic and the parents of the children who were being operated upon.

In the evening the doctors and nurses went to Deloro and operated upon six children in the hospital there.

600,000 CONSUMERS STRIKE IN NEW YORK

An Effort to Bring Down the Price of Milk—Form a Council of Defence.

New York, Nov. 18.—More than 600,000 consumers in greater New York went out on a "milk strike" yesterday, according to Miss Mildred Taylor, executive secretary of the Community Council of Defence, which is directing the boycott to bring down the price of milk. Two hundred delegates from the district councils at a meeting last Friday voted to abstain from the use of milk on Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday of each week, until the producers reduce prices. As a health precaution a concession was granted to exempt children under seven years of age.

The Central Federated Union of Women's Clubs, representing a membership of 500,000, promised today to cooperate in the boycott, Miss Taylor said. She estimated the decrease in sales caused by the "three-day abstinence" will result in a weekly loss of over $300,000 to the producers.

Auto-Thieves Rob Bank Of $50,000

Bound and Gagged Officials, including Women, and Looted Vault Swift'y.

RANDOLPH, Mass., Nov. 18.—The Randolph Savings Bank was raided yesterday by four armed men who bound Treasurer N. Irving Tolman, a woman clerk and a customer stripped the vault of bonds, cash and valuables estimated at $40,000 to $50,000 and fled in an automobile in which they had come. They left no clue except the automobile registry number which is assigned to a man at Greenfield. The men were of foreign extraction, Treasurer Tolman said.

TRI-WEEKLY TRAIN ALLOWED BY BOARD

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—In a judgment granting the request of the Irondale, Bancroft & Ottawa branch of the Canadian National Railways System to be allowed to reduce the passenger service from a daily to a tri-weekly basis, the Railway Board indicates its policy in regard to reduction in the services given by a Government road, which is not paying cost of operation.

"Where the branch line service is not paying," says the judgment, "and the parent company is characterized by such deficits as have been pointed out, the only result of directing the daily service to be continued would be to add to the burden of deficit which the Canadian people have at present to take care of in regard to the Canadian National Railway System. Under these circumstances, the tri-weekly service, unsatisfactory as it is in many ways, may be will have, it is regretted to be allowed."

The judgment in pointing out the striking increase in the cost of operation of a branch line of this character, as compared with pre-war days, states that the monthly wages for the train crew in 1912 amounted to $223, whereas in 1919 they had grown to $1,200.

Expansion Movement Grows Endorsed By Civic Bodies

CITY COUNCIL ON RECORD AS HEARTILY APPROVING CHAMBER OF COMMERCE IDEA—ENDORSED BY MINISTERIAL ASSOCIATION—COMMUNITY CONFERENCE WILL BE HELD.

"That this Council as a body and also individually heartily support the Board of Trade Expansion Campaign now in progress."

The above resolution moved by Alderman Jamieson Bone and seconded by Alderman Charles Hanna was carried unanimously at the meeting of the City Council, Monday evening. The members of the Council and Board of Trade are working together in perfect harmony to make this expansion movement a thorough success and the prospects are excellent.

CLERGY ENDORSE MOVEMENT

A special meeting of the Ministerial Association of Belleville was held Monday afternoon at the Y.M.C.A. to hear the plans for the reorganization and expansion of the Board of Trade. H. B. Haskell, a member of the campaign staff, outlined the campaign and explained what the movement would mean to Belleville.

Following Mr. Haskell's talk, a number of questions were asked and at the conclusion, these present passed the following—resolutions unanimously:

"Be it resolved that the Belleville Ministerial Association cordially approve of the movement undertaken by the City Board of Trade for the advancement of the city's welfare."

Those present at the meeting were: Revs. W. Elliott, A. H. Foster, D. C. Ramsay, A. S. Kerr, Adjt. Goodhew, Dr. E. N. Baker, Y.M.C.A., Sec. P. F. Brockell, Asst. Sec. A. Buchanan, Capt. T. D. Ruston.

COMMUNITY CONFERENCE

The Campaign Headquarters of the Board of Trade at 8 Campbell street, is a busy place these days. Yesterday over twelve hundred invitations were sent out from the office for a Community Conference. The subject to be discussed is "Belleville in 1925." Plans for Belleville for the future will be discussed by speakers who are specialists on the subject. Ladies are especially idvited to be present. It was also announced that the invitation was a general one and not confined to those who received cards. This will be the first opportunity that the general public have had to know in detail the plans now being made by the Board of Trade to put and keep Belleville at the front in the way she deserves.

Canadian Nurses Killed In Automobile Accident

SIX NURSES AND DRIVER OF CAR KILLED NEAR BUFFALO —STRUCK BY EXPRESS ON GRADE CROSSING NONE ESCAPED.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

BUFFALO, N.Y., Nov. 18.—Seven persons were killed when a New York Central Railway passenger train struck an auto at a grade crossing on the eastern outskirts of the city early today. The dead are: William Mummery, his daughter Doris Mummery, and Fannie Breeze, of Buffalo; Myrtle Hodgins, St. Catharines, Ont.; Jennie McMillan, Tavistock, Ont.; Myrtle Nunn, Fenwick, Ont.; Jean Scott, Galt, Ont.

The six women were nurses at the Homeopathic Hospital. Last night they attended a party at Lancaster, a western suburb, and were returning to Buffalo in Mummery's automobile when the accident occurred. An eastbound freight train held the machine at the crossing of the main line of the New York Central. As soon as the last car of the freight cleared the crossing Mummery sent his machine ahead, unaware that the passenger train was approaching on the next track. Mummery attempted to clear the crossing when he realized the danger, but it was too late. The pilot of the engine caught the automobile between the front and rear wheel and carried it down the track a quarter of a mile, spilling out the occupants and crushing them to death. All seven were dead when the members of the train crew found them.

Music and Drama

(What the Press Agents Say)

"EXPERIENCE"

The theme of "Experience" George V. Hobart's modern morality comedy drama of today, which F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest will present at Griffin's to-morrow (Wednesday) matinee and night, enroute from Ottawa to Toronto, is the vivid story of Youth—the average young man of today—his temptations, pleasures, hopes, ambitions, tragedies, reverses and successes. In fact, all of Youth's impulses and moods. The story is an intensely human one, and is one that has been written from the trenches of life. The play has received the most enthusiastic commendations of press and public and like old wine, is better as the years go by. The famous "Experience" organization with a large cast of noted players comes here with the mangement's fullest endorsement. The reports from every city in which it has appeared this season are record-breaking audiences. No better time could be chosen for the coming of such a play than the present, when everything is being done to safeguard our young men and make them examples of clean and healthy manhood. The production is one of the largest scenically and numerically that has been presented on a local stage in many a season the play is in ten gorgeous scenes.

WHEN ONE MAN FIGHTS THREE

When a man enters a business office not his own, locks the door behind him and faces alone three men who have done him vital injury, it is safe to say that the preceedings will be on an interesting —even exciting —character. William Farnum is the man who locks the door. This is a sensationally powerful scene in "Wolves of the Night" one of the season's finest screen offerings which is to be presented at Griffin's next Thursday to Saturday with a matinee Saturday. Five other comedy and topicals are also announced for exhibition on the same program.

PARLIAMENT MAY BE SPEAKER

Toronto, Nov. 17.—Premier Drury, and members of his cabinet were in conference in the premier's office during the entire Saturday forenoon. They did not admit a formal meeting of the cabinet and said they were merely taking their bearing. One settled fact came from the meeting, viz., that Nelson Parliament one of the H. H. Dewart's supporters will be proposed as speaker of the legislature when it meets The feeling seems to be that the assembly may not be called together before February.

G.W.V.A. Notes

The meeting of the Hastings and Prince Edward Branch Great War Veterans' Association of Canada was held in the association rooms, Monday evening, November 17th. The President, Comrade R. D. Ponton, occupied the chair. The meeting was well attended and a number of new applications were received and accepted as members of this Branch, the total membership now being over 700.

A very eloquent address was delivered by Mr. Crosby and Comrade Scott, representatives of the City Bureau, these addresses were appreciated by all present.

A letter was read from the Provincial command, in reference to the association entering politics, a referendum vote is being taken on this question, further particulars of this vote may be seen in another part of this issue.

A report from the City Council in regards to poll tax for all returned soldiers was given. The City Council passed a resolution that all returned men are exempt from poll tax and all that have paid may have same remitted by applying at the City Office. The following resolution was passed to be forwarded to the City Council: Moved and seconded that the Belleville Branch Great War Veterans' Association extend a vote of thanks to the City Council for the action they have taken in regards to poll tax.

During the evening, cigars, cigarettes and tobacco were passed to all the members and after general business was over, waiters were appointed and refreshments came on the scene, which were enjoyed by all comrades present.

Ritchie Employees Guests of Firm

Staff Enjoyed Social Event in the Ritchie Store Last Evening.

The large spacious mantle-room of the Ritchie Store was the scene of merriment and sociability last evening when the staff of the big store were the guests of the management. The department was prettily decorated for the occasion in red white and blue color scheme. The entire evening was one of helpfulness as well as pleasure, for the gathering was treated to a masterly address by Mr. John Elliott, Manger of the Standard Bank. Mr. Elliott's remarks were timely and to the point as well as wonderfully instructive and helpful. He dealt with problems that young people have to face in the Business World and as a successful banker he imparted much valuable knowledge to all his hearers. A hearty vote of thanks was moved by Mr. F. Thompson to Mr. Elliott and seconded by Mr. Harry Bryant.

The musical part of the programme was of a very high standard and was arranged entirely by the Ritchie employees. It was as follows:

Piano Solo—H. Poste.
Male Quartette—Messrs. Bryant, Post, Hickey and Buchanan.
Solo—Miss Foxton
Reading—Mr. Reid
Reading—Miss J. Bishop
Solo—Hope Swayne
Reading—D. Montgomery
Solo—Miss Anderson
Solo—Miss Vera Blaind

Refreshments were served at the conclusion of this extensive programme and from then on until midnight, the party indulged in games or dancing as pleased their fancy. Mr. C. M. Reid, General Manager of the Ritchie store made a genial chairman for the evening's program.

DIVORCE MILL TO BE KEPT BUSY.

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—The divorce mill promises to be kept busy at the next session of Parliament, several applications being received each week. Those appearing in the Canada Gazette this week include: Frederick T. Clark, Peterborough, Ont.; Edith Ellen Holmes Austin, Toronto, from her husband, Reginald Norbert De Bruneau Austin; Harry Davis, Toronto; Frederick Miskip, Toronto; Harry Ernest Wright, Toronto; Albert G. Ellison, Toronto, and Marion Olive Booth, of Hamilton, from her husband, Chas. D. G. Booth, civil engineer, new residing in New York.

DYNAMITE AND FUSE UNDER G. T. R. BRIDGE

NIAGARA FALLS, ONT., Nov. 17.—Children playing yesterday afternoon around the Grand Trunk bridge on Victoria Avenue, found dynamite placed with a great quantity of fuse with fitted detonators. Again this morning a further quantity was found at the same place. The police are investigating. The theory is that some of the foreign workmen on the Hydro construction have stolen it and left it there.

Sir Robert Horne Makes Reputation in England As Minister of Labor

In the session of the British Parliament just ended two members have created big reputations for themselves. They stand out head and shoulders above their fellows.

One is Sir Robert Horne, the Labor Minister, who has stepped without any apparent effort into the very front rank of parliamentarians, and whose abilities as an administrator are second to none in the Government.

He gave up £8,000 a year at the Scottish Bar to become a member of the Government at £2,000 a year. He first wooed and then won the confidence of Labor in hundreds of conferences and personal interviews, and lately has been responsible for the firm handling of the Labor situation by the Government. He has the well-deserved nickname of "Hail, Smiling Horne."

The other success of the session is an old member in a new coat—Lord Robert Cecil, who since his return from the Paris Conference has added daily to his reputation.

He is the mystery man of Parliament. Once looked on as the type of Tory aristocrat in politics, he now seems ready to out-do the democrats in democracy. He has a large band of enthusiastic young Unionist followers. The Labor men hail him as one after their own heart. Which way will he turn? What party will he lead? No one but himself knows. His mind plans some destiny while men are wondering.

Two other figures have marched with some degree of distinction across the Parliamentary page. Sir Donald Maclean, the leader of the lone band of Independent Liberals, is the Admirable Crichton of politics, compelled by the scarcity of his followers to speak on every subject. And he does it at times so brilliantly that he has given a full heart of hope to a party that no longer desires the return of Mr. Asquith to lead it.

Mr. Clynes has achieved distinction as a Labor member. He is easily the best of that party. Honorable mention must be made also of Sir L. Worthington Evans for his work at the Pensions Ministry; of Sir Tudor Walters and Sir Kingsley Wood for their work on housing; of Mr. J. S. Holmes for his able exhortations on finance and economy; of Mr. Kennedy Jones for his work on London traffic and other matters; of Mr. Godfrey Locker Lampson for his grapple with income tax problems; of Mr. McCurdy for knowing something about food control; and of the Geddes brothers for knowing all about everything.

Finally, after diligent search, there may be discovered on the back benches two modest new members out of all the hundreds arriving full of hope last January who deserve encouragement, namely, Capt. Elliot, a doctor who has dissected politics with considerable skill, and Sir Park Goff, the most accomplished traveler in the British House of Commons, who told his fellow members that most of them were uncertain whether Budapest was an Indian god or a new plague.—London Daily Mail.

"Pubs" To Be Improved.

Better public houses, an improved tone for saloons, is the newly announced policy of the British liquor trade.

Rear Admiral Sir Reginald Hall, a member of Parliament, who was recently elected to the directorate of one of the leading brewing companies of the kingdom, said that representatives of all sections of the trade had drawn up a bill embodying such principles as promotion of sobriety, restriction of drunkenness, reduction of the number of licenses where they are excessive and enlargement of premises so as to provide greater opportunities for social amenities.

"Recreation, including reading rooms, facilities for writing, music and games, should be provided," Admiral Hall said. The entry into the trade of those who would set up and maintain a high social standard should be encouraged to the exclusion of those who might bring discredit on the industry.

Lady Arabella Stuart.

The history of Lady Arabella Stuart was a succession of romantic incidents and disasters. She was the daughter of Charles Stuart, Earl of Lennox, and being in the line of succession to the throne, was the object of jealous care by Queen Elizabeth, who attempted to marry her off to some European prince, some of whom believed that the line of succession to the throne, says an exchange. When she was 33 she married William Seymour, son of Lord Beauchamp. Her marriage had been secret, and when Elizabeth heard of it she had Seymour committed to the tower, while Arabella was detained as a prisoner in the house of Sir Thomas Parry. Both lovers escaped, but poor Arabella was caught and brought back and placed in the tower, where she remained until her death in 1615.

One pint of water converted into steam means that the latter would require as much space as 1,700 points of water.

More Money Than Last Year Hastings Strong For Victory Loan

EVERY CANVASSING DISTRICT WON PRINCE OF WALES' FLAG—COUNTY AND CITY WON TWO CRESTS—BELLEVILLE CITY SUBSCRIBES OVER A MILLION.

Hastings Totals.

Combined . . .	$2,639,200	$2,950,000
	1918.	1919.
Teams	2,473,200	2,770,000
Specials . . .	166,000	180,000

Combined percentage—155.26.

Nearly half the total team members' application in Hastings County were applications in Hastings County were the Victory Loan campaign, $1,043,550 having been subscribed last Friday and Saturday. The final spurt which brought Ontario's total up to $354,000,000, gave us a lead of $320,000 over our combined results last year.

Every one of the eighteen canvassing districts has won the Prince of Wales' flag. Both the county and the city of Belleville won two crests. This is the first time such a record has been attained. With few exceptions nearly every canvassing district has won crests. This is the first time such a record has been attained. With few exceptions nearly every canvassing district has won crests, Bancroft, under Dr. A. T. Embury and Mr. D. H. Morrison leading the county with nine crests, and Tudor, Limerick and Cashel under Mr. W. A. McMurray, in second place with eight.

Belleville alone put $1,105,150 into the loan. This includes $105,000 specials from the corporation.

Twenty-seventh Place.

Out of fifty-six counties and a few small cities throughout Ontario, and not including Toronto, Hamilton, Ottawa and London, Hastings county is twenty-seventh from the top on the list of percentages. For a county so large and with so many isolated canvassing districts this result is more gratifying than appears, good as it is. The local organization is very pleased with the results. Everyone connected with the county organization has given splendid support, many at considerable monetary loss. Chairman W. B. Deacon and County Organizer W. B. Evans, and Publicity Organizer A. C. H. Andrews are most grateful to the many who have unselfishly set aside their own interests to help the loan and whose work has been untiring throughout.

DEATH OF A FAMOUS DUCK

Peggy of Rouen, N. J., Laid 325 Eggs in a Single Year, and Was Easily World's Champion.

The death of Peggy, the famous duck of Rouen, New Jersey, comes as a reminder to us that we would do well to follow the principles which guided the life of this excellent bird. Peggy was celebrated in two hemispheres as the champion egglayer of the world, the New York Evening Post states. Peggy, in one year laid as many as 325 eggs. Yet, celebrated as she was, noted wherever eggs were laid or scrambled, head of her glorious profession, what was her attitude after we entered the war? Did she rush into print, airing her opinion as to what the president ought to do? Not at all. Despite numerous tempting offers from fowl fashions and other magazines, she refrained from utterance and continued contributing her daily drop to national victory. Even when the Germans opened their recent peace drive Peggy did not turn hysterical and demand that they at once surrender all the Strassburg geese. She, still in silence, went on with her lay. It is related of her that on the morning of her demise she quietly produced an egg, and, indicating her satisfaction with a feeble quack, keeled over and [illegible]

Scriptural Names.

Practically all the inhabitants of Little Tancock island, Lunenburg county, Nova Scotia, are named Levy. In the majority of cases the given or Christian name is taken from the Old Testament. The Levys claim to be direct descendants of the men who followed the fisherman's calling on the shores of Galilee in the time of Christ.

Whale With Hind Legs.

A female hump-back whale, having two hind legs, fifty inches in length, has been caught at the Kyukot Whaling Station in British Columbia. Manager Ruck, of the Consolidated Whaling Company, says that in his twenty years of whaling experience he has never heard of whales having legs on the exterior.

Settling on the Land In Palestine.

A glimpse of Palestine in progress from past to future is afforded by an account of the little colony of Yemenians, Jewish emigrants from southern Arabia, who began to assemble a few years ago to live by wood-cutting in the neighborhood of the forests of some 100,000 trees that had been planted in the district of Judea. The forests are part of a large plan for the reforesting of Palestine; and to house the woodcutters small cement cottages were built at a cost of about 1,000 francs each, each with its garden and its opportunity for the homekeeper to buy his home by installments. Dwellings now stand which house 130 or 140 families, and the colony of woodcutters is one of several similar groups in which families naturally strongly attached to the soil have been settled in Palestine, cultivating small farms, and progressing toward independent ownership. In some cases the colonies are co-operative; a single large farm is run by several families who share its profits, and at the same time pay wages to additional laborers. The experiments are still too young to be at all conclusive, but they are succeeding in their small way, and they are very likely the beginning of a wide and wholesome development.

The first telephone ever placed in a private English residence is still to be seen at Marlborough House. It was made in 1878, on board the warship Thunderer, and was subsequently set up between the schoolroom and the boudoir of the Princess of Wales.

Good Pipes From Paper Material.

"Pertinax," one of the most important of substitutes for metal, is a compressed paper material, which has been used in place of lead and copper for pipes for gas, oil and other purposes From a British war trade report, it appears that these pipes can endure three or four times as great a pressure as lead, while their weight is only one-ninth as great, and they are water-tight, insoluble and unaffected by temperatures up to about 200 degrees Centigrade. The tensile strength of the material is 14,000 pounds per square inch, nearly equaling that of the best stamped, sawed-out and drilled, and as an electric insulator approaches porcelain in effectiveness.

How to Tame Hubby.

Modern wives, here are a few tips on how to keep that husband of yours from becoming a wild man. Mrs. Gene Holmes of Evanston, named by Mrs. George Remus as the other woman in Chicago's latest triangle, is sponsor for the tips.

Need we explain Mrs. Remus is seeking a divorce from her husband? Here are the tips:

Give the husband all the rope he wants—he'll never hang himself. Never, never try to curb his liberty; make him happy; keep the home cozy and attractive; always appear cheerful and pretty—always; feed him well, pet him, humor him—these three things alone will keep him from causing you any trouble; never look upon him as a mere provider—they should be treated like pets.

"If," says Mrs. Holmes, "after doing all these things the husband does not want to stay at home—he isn't human, that's all."

Find a Moth Exterminator.

Experiments of the bureau of entomology, United States department of agriculture, have demonstrated that naphthalene is uniformly effective in protecting woolens from clothes moth infection and in killing all stages of the insect, says the Des Moines Register. A red cedar chest readily killed all adult moths and showed considerable killing effect upon young larvae. It did not prevent the hatching of eggs, but killed all of the resulting larvae almost immediately. Red cedar chips and shavings, while not entirely effective in keeping the adult moths from laying eggs on the flannel treated, appeared to protect it from appreciable damage when used liberally.

Beatrice was invited to a birthday party and, womanlike, she wanted a new frock. Her mother, finding the child's party dress in good condition, refused to buy another. Her father, trying to console his little daughter, said: "Let me see the dress, Beatrice."

She brought it and he said: "Why, Beatrice, it is very pretty! I've never seen it before."

"Well," responded the child, "I'se seen it offn."

Fraser River Fished [illegible]

Fraser river fishermen and canne agree that the sockeye salmon on the Fraser this season has be a flat failure. The conviction is ing forced, too, that British Columbia's noblest fishing stream can longer be expected to make a profitable yield. In other words, that the Fraser is fished out. In good seasons, ten years ago, as high as a million cases of fish were packed This year's fish crop will be less than a tenth of that amount.

The end of the Fraser's production came in sight six years ago, when Canadian Northern contractors dynamited a mountain of rock into the river at Hell's Gate Canyon, and altogether prevented the salmon from ascending to the spawning grounds. From the time the sockeye heads toward the Fraser, American and Canadian traps, nets and seines lie in wait over an ocean highway of three hundred miles, the salmon has only about one chance in a thousand of getting through.

On the Skeena and other Northern British Columbia rivers, the salmon are running in record numbers. Fishermen there are making as high as five hundred dollars a week.

Woman Confesses To Brutal Murder

MINEOLA, N.Y., Nov. 18.—Mrs. Maria Warren, who said she formerly was Miss Maria Berlin of Indianapolis Ond., yesterday confessed she murdered Mrs. Clara Branch near Yynbrook, Long Island, Friday, District Attorney Weeks aounced today.

The alleged confession came after Mrs. Warren had been grilled for hours by Weeks ad his assistants.

The murder was one of the most brutal in Long Island police history.

Mrs. Branch, housekeeper for "Captain" Henry Wright, a fisherman was found ead in her bedroom. Her body had been hacked with a hatchet which was found on the bed.

Strands of hair, clutched in the dead woman's hand, were said to be similar to Mrs. Warren's.

POLITICAL PIKERS AT WASHINGTON.

President Wilson's health has been sacrificed upon the altar of national service. The war President was confronted with tremendous tasks and grave responsibilities. His efforts helped materially to exalt the United States to a proud position as a leader of nations, but the poison of partizan politics, "dollar" diplomacy and a desire to cater to the un-American vote seeks to break down and destroy all the good work overseas of President Wilson. The action of the United States Senate in endeavoring to "cut the heart" out of the League of Nations covenant, as the President expressed it, can not result otherwise than to injure the United States as a world power and degrade a great nation in the eyes of the other nations.

EUROPE AND AMERICA.

Mr. Frank H. Simonds, in the American Review of Reviews, presents the European view of the attitude of Rumania and other questions arising out of the war. First, he says that Rumania is not, as is commonly supposed, one of the little States of Europe. It has become a nation with an area as great as that of Italy, and with a population of sixteen millions, with a considerable army, and with important resources in agriculture, oil, and minerals. Second, Italy and a large portion of the French people favor Rumania's course. Italy regards the Rumanian invasion and occupation of Hungary as a precedent by which Italy may benefit. French sympathy with Rumania is based upon two things—a traditional and historic friendliness between the two Latin nations, and a profound desire to preserve this friendliness, this alliance of recent months, in any future European crisis.

The French, he says, have no confidence in the League of Nations—in the balance of power. They want to preserve an alliance with Italy, Rumania, and other European countries as a bulwark against the millions of Germans, Hungarians and Bulgarians.

TILE THE DOORS—KEEP OUT DISEASE.

Toronto's scourge of smallpox should be a warning to other communities, and every ounce of prevention possible should be used to prevent similar conditions elsewhere. Smallpox patients are moving about the country, one was discovered last week on a train near Trenton, with the result that all of the passengers were obliged to submit to compulsory vaccination.

Diphtheria and other contagious diseases are also very prevalent, one village in Prince Edward county being quarantined, almost every house bearing a diphtheria placard. Fortunately Belleville has maintained thus far a high record of public health, but this should not lead to over-confidence, and the local Board of Health and M. O. H. should take all possible preliminary precautions and be prepared to cope with any emergency. We have had ample warning and there will be no possible chance for an excuse if precautions are not taken in time.

YANKS ARE PICKING OUR POCKETS

From the rapidity with which Canada is being stripped of its pulpwood by the United States it will not be very long before Canadian newspapers will be purchasing their paper supply from the United States mills, while mills in Canada will be scrapped for lack of raw material.

It is true that export of pulpwood has been forbidden by governmental decree from Crown Lands, but judging from the amount of pulpwood exported to the United States it would look as if the amount of pulpwood still remaining on Crown Lands was very little. The Americans long ago decided to conserve their own fast dwindling pulpwood reserve and raid Canada for supplies, and they have been singularly successful with the easy-mark Canucks, particularly so with Quebec, which permits an immense pulpwood export to be carried on, and many vessels are engaged transporting the logs to various U. S. ports for transshipment to the mills. Passengers on the excursion boats passing down the St. Lawrence remark the great piles of short logs to be seen on the shore near Ogdensburg, N.Y. The logs are the relics of Quebec forests soon to be transformed into yellow and other papers for the many million newspaper readers in the United States, and were unloaded from ships engaged regularly in this traffic, Ogdensburg being one of the chief pulpwood depots for transference from boat to train.

Not only Quebec, however, but Ontario is being gouged of its pulpwood to save the standing timber of the United States against the day when Canada's forests are depleted. Even in North Hastings there is a lively business in pulpwood export to the United States.

The most amazing thing to frank Americans who visit Canada in connection with the pulpwood trade is that this country should permit the pulpwood to be freely exported instead of protecting Canada's forest wealth with restrictions which would stop the export of pulp and pulp wood and compel its manufacture into paper in this country, thereby giving employment at good wages to thousands and building up our own country by preventing our rich resources from being exploited for the benefit of another nation.

It is high time a halt was called to this reckless extravagance and criminal ignorance in dealing with Canada's forest resources. Make the paper mills of the United States move to Canada if they want our pulp wood—and they have to have it.

Something to be Cheerful About.

Pessimist—If you died today, the sun would shine just as brightly tomorrow.

Optimist—Oh, well, it's nice to know that you have a decent day for your funeral, anyway.

Reasonless.

Secretary of Club—One of our members lost his reason last night.

Member—How dreadful! How did it happen?

Secretary of Club—Why, he had one when he left the club, but he forgot it before he reached home.

A Weighty Problem.

Boss—What makes you so sleepy in the office?

Clerk—It's my sense of duty.

Boss—What?

Clerk—Yes; I lie awake too long at night thinking about my work.

Beyond Him.

"Did you call me a bonehead?" asked the six foot man with a menacing light in his eye.

"No," answered the little fellow glibly, "I merely referred to you as an example of cerebral ossification."

Appeased, but wondering, the six-footer went in search of a dictionary.

When a woman tells how successful her husband is in business it's a safe bet that he isn't.

Even the man who is unable to keep a horse may afford a nightmare.

A man can't be as wise all the time as the woman is some of the time.

Pretty Good.

"Has our client a good case?"

"Good for several thousand dollars."

Didn't Believe Him.

"I tell my wife she's perfect, but she evidently doesn't agree with me."

"What makes you think that?"

"This bill for false hair and cosmetics. She's always adding improvements."

He Needed It.

"I envy the man who sang the tenor solo."

"Why, I thought he had a very poor voice."

"So did I; but think of the nerve he has!"

Lost Opportunity.

"My first patient called on me today," said the young doctor. "He's rich, too."

"Congratulations!" replied the elderly doctor. "What was the matter with him?"

"Nothing. I couldn't find a thing wrong with him?"

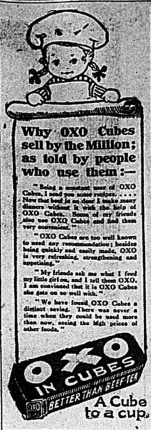
"Ah, my boy, you still have a great deal to learn about your profession."

Not a Gambler.

Clarissa—Our Minister is so good that he won't even perform a marriage ceremony.

Melissa—What's that got to do with him being good

Clarissa—He says his conscience won't let him participate in any game of chance.



Why OXO Cubes sell by the Million; as told by people who use them:—

"Being a constant user of OXO Cubes, I send you some recipes. . . . Now that beef is so dear I make many dinners without it with the help of OXO Cubes. Some of my friends also use OXO Cubes and find them very convenient."

"OXO Cubes are too well known to need any recommendation; besides being quickly and easily made, OXO is very refreshing, strengthening and appetising."

"My friends ask me what I feed my little girl on, and I tell them OXO. I am convinced that it is OXO Cubes she gets on so well with."

"We have found OXO Cubes a distinct saving. There was never a time when they could be used more than now, seeing the high prices of other foods."

PICTURESQUE.

Belleville the Beautiful
  Picture of Shadows
Old are thy trees and thy sun-dimpled ways,
Here are discovered
  Thy secrets so charming,
Here in a dream are the long away days.

Belleville the Beautiful
  City of Maples
Crimson and gold sunny Autumn has made,
Over the tree tops
  Thy steeples revealing
Keys of the past all around in the shade.

Belleville the Beautiful,
  Where are thy children?
This is their home tho' they wander afar,
Out o'er the Quinte
  The Town Clock is calling—
Calling them back from wherever they are.

The above verses were composed by a former Belleville boy, Wallace D. Robb, who received his inspiration from a photograph of Belleville taken from an aeroplane.

CANADA'S CALL.

No more the blast of bugle nor rallying roll of drum
Sends forth a call to battle, a strong, insistent "Come!"
For the swords are turned to plowshares, and the knives to pruning hooks,
And the sun of peace is shining in all the vales and nooks.

But Canada's call is sounding again from shore to shore
To her sons and to her daughters, as she oft has called before;
Not this time to martial music does she call her sons to tread,
Nor to stain a valiant sword with a foe's blood streaming red.

But she calls her sons and daughters, us who dwelt at home secure,
When the battle loud was raging and the Hun was at the door;
She calls on us to succor the boys who fought and bled,
Maimed and crippled, halt and broken—those who suffered in our stead.

Time is past for warlike service, but she calls each patriot now
For his gifts upon her altar, gifts of gold, with solemn vow
To defend his native country with his brain and brawn and gold,
For the sake of those who suffered war's grim terrors manifold.

Do you not hear her calling, a strong, insistent "Come"?
Does your heart not beat in answer, like the roll of martial drum?
Your King and Country need you still, as in days of war now past,
To complete a glorious victory—one that shall forever last.

—Helen B. Anderson.

IT TAKES SO LITTLE.

It takes so little to make us glad,
Just a cheering clasp of a friendly hand,
Just a word from one who can understand,
And we finish the task we long had planned,
And we lose the doubt and the fear we had—
So little it takes to make us glad.

JIM LARKIN HELD
FOR THE N.Y. GRAND JURY

NEW YORK, Nov. 17.—Jas. Larkin, Irish labor leader, and Benjamin Gitlow, a former Assemblyman, charged with advocating criminal anarchy, were held for the grand jury by Chief Magistrate McAdoo. Before announcing his decision, Mr. McAdoo scathingly denounced the activities of radicals in this country.

CHAPTER XVII

"Thank you; I shall be very glad."

But as he went down the stairs Kent was surprised to perceive that he felt suddenly mournful. The noise of the door closing behind him was charged with ridiculous melancholy, and there appeared to him somethinb sad in this conventional ending which had the semblance of estrangement. The sentiment and impression of the hour that he had spent in the room after Variettes recurred to him and contrasted with it their adieu became full of pathos. He questioned reproachfully if, in his determination not to be more than a friend, he might not have repaid her own friendship by ingratitude and so have wounded her. He decided that he would send her a letter and made his way through the Champs Elysees reflectively and once half obeyed a violent temptation to turn back. He would have obeyed it wholly but that he felt its indulgence would be laughable or that Mrs. Deane-Pitt would be likely to look upon it in that light. So he restrained the impulse. But he could not laugh himself.

The respite afforded by the mont-de-piete was grief and all that Kent received from Beaufort in the next three weeks was twenty francs. The Garin's faces in the hall were very glum now, and the sum against 'Notes remises' at the top of the bills that came up to the bedroom on Monday mornings and were perforce ignored, had swelled to such disheartning dimensions that the debtor no longer gave himself the trouble to decipher the various items. In addition to this, the affairs of 'The World and His Wife' had reached a crisis and he learned from the editor that it was doomed. An interval of restored hope succeeded the intelligence, during which the life of the paper hung in the balance and it looked likely that the Baronet would continue it, after all, and then they went to press no more.

Beaufort declared that Kent's claim would be discharged without delay and knowing the ex-proprietor's position, Humphrey could not believe that he would be allowed to suffer. That the Baronet was ignorant his claim existed, and it was 'Billy' Beaufort who had to find the money for him he had no idea; any more than he had suspected, when he took Cynthia to the Nouveau Cirque, and applauded the contorions of Mdlle. Veronique, that the artiste who stood on her head and kissed her toes to them was in part responsible for their plight. 'Billy' realizing that the matter must be squared somehow, if things were not to become more unpleasant, spoke reassuringly of Sir Charles' being momentarily in tight quarters and Humphrey in daily expectation of a check made daily promises of a settlement to the Garins while he discussed with Cynthia what should be their next move.

To remain in Paris was useless, and they decided that they would go back to England as soon as the check was cashed. Perhaps it was fortunate, after all, that No. 64 had not been let. In London he must advertise again, and a post might be easier to find now that he could call himself a subeditor in the advertisement. The days went by, however, and Beaufort, whom he awoke, like an avenging angel, at early morning, and tracked in desperation from bar to bar until he ran him to earth at night, still remained 'in hourly expectation of the money.' Both Cynthia and Kent had the fear that their inability to pay was known to everybody in the house, even to the servants; and they imagined disdain in the face of the Italian who waited on them at meals, and indifference in the hearing of Etienne when he laid the fire. The chambermaid's 'Bon jour, m'sieur et madame,' had a ring of irony to their ears, and on Mondays, in particular, they were convinced that she sneered when she put down trays.

The thought made the girl so miserable that Kent took an opportunity of asking Miss Garin if it were so, and she informed him that he was mistaken.

"Nobody's 'as been told, monsieur," she said; "oh, not at all! But monsieur, it is impossible that you can remain longer, you know, if your affairs do not permit of a settlement. Your intentions are quite honorable—well understood; but my mother cannot be able to wait for the payment. Her expense is terrible 'eavy 'ere; and—and my mother 'as an offer for your rooms, and she require that you and madame locate yourselves elsewhere, monsieur, on Saturday."

After an instant of dismay, Humphrey was, on the whole, relieved by the idea of being allowed to depart in peace, and to await his check where the situation would not be strained. It was rather a nuisance, having to make a removal for so short a time; but when it was effected he felt that they would be a great deal more comfortable. He replied that they would, of course do as they were asked and that Madame Garin could depend upon his sending her the amount he owed the very second that his arrears were forthcoming. He said he thoroughly appreciated the consideration she had shown them, and could not express how deeply he regretted to have inconvenienced her.

"Yes, monsieur," murmurmed Miss Garin. She hesitated, and then added in a slightly embarassed tone: "You now, monsieur, my mother must keep your luggage 'ere. Her lawyer 'as advised that."

"What?" said Kent. "Oh, my dear Miss Garin! I will give your mother an acknowledgment—a promissory note—whatever she likes! She will only have to trust me a few more days; I am perfectly certain to have the money in the course of a week. She won't keep the luggage surely? My—my dear girl, think what it means with a wife and child!"

Miss Garin spread out her hands with a shrug.

"It is always 'a few days, monsieur' she said. "My mother will permit that you take your necessaries for the few days, and the things belonging to the little one. No more."

"Can I see her?" inquired Kent, rather pale.

"Oh yes; she is in the bureau."

"The servants can hear everything that goes on in the bureau," he demurred. "Can't I talk to her in her room?"

Miss Garin preceded him there and he tried his best to wring consent from the old woman, but she was as hard as nails and would not listen for long. An 'acknowledgment of the debt,' certainly—the lawyer had advised that too, and he would prepare it—but their luggage, jamais de la vie! The baby's box and the bassinet; and for madame and himself such articles as were indispensable for a week. She would agree to nothing else.

Cynthia was upstairs with the baby on her lap and Kent went in and shut the door that communicated with the nursery.

"What is it" she asked, after a glance at his face. "Is anything wrong?"

He wondered if he could soften the news, but it did not lend itself to euphemisms. He told her what had occurred in as light a tone as he could acquire.

"It won't be for any length of time and we can easily make shift for a bit" he said. "It isn't as if the kid's things had to be left behind, you see. A handbag will hold all we really need for ourselves. What do we want, after all, for a week. It isn't a serious matter, if one comes to look at it. It sounds worse than it is, I think."

She sat startled and still. Then she cuddled the baby close and forced a smile.

"My brown frock will do," she assented; "I shall go in that. Oh, it isn't so dreadful, no. Of course just for a moment it does give one a shock, doesn't it? But—but, as you say, it sounds worse than it is. Were they nasty to you?"

"The old lady wasn't very affectionate," said Kent; "the girl wasn't so bad. It's cussed awkward, darling I know. Poor little woman! I was funking telling you like anything. It took me ten minutes coming up those stairs and I nearly went out for a walk first"

She laughed; she was already quite brave again.

In Memoriam

In proud and loving memory of Pte. J. T. Hutchinson, No. 412121, who died of pneumonia in Glasgow, Scotland, Nov. 18, 1919:

Just one year ago today,
Since our darling son passed away,
Left us all who loved him well,
But we know with whom he dwells.

His body lies so far away,
In a grave that we cannot see,
But my boy, we love you still,
As thoughts of you our memory fill.

Four long years he served in Flanders,
Never shirked at duty's call,
Did his bit with many others,
And for us he left his all.

I remember the day I said good-bye,
The grief and pain in your eyes I still recall,
And the sound of your dear voice still echoes,
As you uttered that last farewell,
Bravely bidding me be cheerful,
And to pray for you while away.

The last good-bye was spoken,
My arms you gently put aside,
Telling me you'd return some day,
And that God would be your guide.

Oh how our hearts yearned for you,
The lonliness, the pain will linger in our hearts for ever,
And we'll love and cherish your memory,
It will ever be in our hearts enshrined
As long as life and memory last,
We'll remember thee, brother mine.

Sadly mourned by, Mother, Father and sisters.

In Memoriam

GRAVES—John Wesley Graves—In loving memory of my dear husband and our loving father, who left this earth just two years ago today, November 18, 1917.

He sleeps the sleep that knows no waking
By the golden river shore,
And our hearts do yearn with sadness
as think of him once more.
Sweetly too, the angels carol tidings from our loved one afar
That he does still hover over us, and will be our guiding star.

We loved him, yes we loved him,
But Jesus loved him more
And he gently called him to Heaven's shining shore.
The golden gates were open,
He gently whispered "Come"
And with farewell unspoken
He calmly entered home.
Mrs. John Graves, Shannonville, Ont.

EMPLOYMENT STATISTICS

The Government Employment Bureaus of Ontario report for the week ending Nov. 8 applications for work from 1211 returned soldiers and 1520 civilians, a total of 2731 men. Vacancies notified by employers number 3,842 and placements include 829 returned soldiers and 1189 civilians, a total of 2018 men.

In the Women's Department 290 women applied for regular work, and 234 for casual employment. Employers asked for 391 regular workers and 284 day workers, and 128 women were placed in regular employment and 378 by the day.

These statistics show no special change in employment conditions during the week. The demand for workers throughout the province continues greater than the supply in many kinds of employment. It is only in clerical lines that there are more men than jobs. This is true of the women's applications as well.

The 125th anniversary of Lundy's Lane Methodist Church was celebrated by special services.

A slight downward trend in the cost of living is reported by The Labor Gazette for September.

Martial law has been declared in Batum, on the Black Sea, where British troops are maintaining order.

J. Bilous, a Ukranian, aged 26, was buried and suffocated in the Holliger mine.

Wanted To Die And Take Wife Along

ST. JOHNS, Nfld., Nov. 18.—Kenneth Stickland and his wife, Evelyn, are in the hospital here, in a precarious condition, as the result of an attempt by Stickland to cut his wife's throat and afterwards end his own life by cutting his own throat. No satisfactory cause, so far, has been ascertained for the rash act on the part of Stickland. He was sitting in the kitchen with his wife and one daughter, when he took a sheath knife from the cupboard, sharpened it on the edge of the stove, remarking, "I think it is now sharp enough to cut your throat" and without more ado he seized her and slashed her across the throat. In the struggle to escape, she was badly cut about the hands and arms. The daughter struggled with the father until he desisted. She then assisted her mother to a neighbor's house where medical attendance was summoned. On the girl's return to the dwelling she found her father lying on the floor, bleeding freely from a wound in the throat, self inflicted.

Both were conveyed to hospital.

The children say that their parents lived without any apparent disagreement of a serious nature and the father's act is unaccountable. He has been out of work for several weeks and was somewhat despondent during the past few days.

WINTER IN ALGONQUIN PARK

As a winter panacea for coughs and colds Algonquin Park cannot be equalled. Two thousand feet above the sea it is always dry and cold. Days spent in snow-shoe tramps, tobogganing or ski-ing and in skating, together with evenings spent in social converse around the cosy warmth of an old fashioned log fire; these slip away unnoticed but those who have once experienced them return to their avocations with renewed energies. The "Highland Inn" owned and operated by the Grand Trunk Railway offers comfortable accommodation at reasonable rates. For all particulars apply to N. T. RED ROSE TEA "is good tea"

W-S-S

WE were among the first to put up tea in sealed packages.

We were the first to use automatic electric weighing machines so as to insure accurate weights.

We were the first to make known the qualities of the now world-famous ASSAM teas.

And we are now the first to adopt a new package for the better protection of these fine quality teas.

The lead package has served its purpose well for generations, but it was easily broken or torn, allowing not only a loss of tea from the package but exposing the tea to the air, odors and dust that it was so necessary to protect the tea against.

Our new package—the waxed board carton—is stronger, more secure and more completely air tight; altogether the best container for tea that has yet been devised.

'IT SAVED MY HAND.'

"I am a blacksmith. I contracted a sore finger, which led to blood-poisoning.

After three months of doctoring, the finger had to be cut off.

It was too late! The poison had spread to my hand and arm. My hand was opened and the bone scraped. No use! Doctors said hand would have to be taken off.

I refused, and began to use Zam-Buk. I used it regularly and freely for a few weeks. It subdued the blood-poisoning and by the time I had used 7 boxes of Zam-Buk my hand was quite healed.

"Zam-Buk surely saved my hand, and I firmly believe it would have saved my finger too had I used it at first."

These facts were sworn to by Mr. John Evans of 87 Lawrence St., Halifax, N.S., before Supreme Court Commissioner O'Hearn, and the sworn statement may be seen by any person so desirous.

Jails Crowded With I.W.W. Agitators

SAN FRANCISCO, Cal., Nov. 18.—Raids on Industrial Workers of the World and other radical organizations begun as the result of the killing of four former service men at Centralia, Wn., last Tuesday, continued during the night and down the Pacific Coast and as a result scores of additional prisoners were in custody today.

At Los Angeles, a number of former service men said to be mainly members of the American Legion, broke into I.W.W. headquarters, cut and bruised with clubs three men and wrecked the place before the police could respond to a riot call. In San Francisco, "The People's Institute" and I.W.W. headquarters were raided by the police and nine men held in default at $1000 bond on charges of vagrancy.

REDS MISLED CHILDREN

These raids followed receipt of information, the police said, that school children were visiting "The People's Institute" and obtaining radical literature which they carried home. Police Captain O'Meara, who conducted the raids said all Industrial Workers of The World must leave San Francisco or go to jail.

At Eureka, Calif., local headquarters of the Industrial Workers of the World was raided by the police and large quantities of radical literature seized. John Golden, secretary, was arrested and charged with criminal syndicalism and sabotage. He was held in the county jail.

At Seattle Henry White, Commissioner of Immigration, made formal announcement that alien Industrial Workers of the World rounded up at Centralia, Wn., as a result of the shooting of former service men on Armistice Day would be deported if they were not held on murder charges by the county authorities.

Fifty-three members of I.W.W. were taken into custody by Seattle police in several raids.

Spokane officials breathed easier after a night spent in a state of preparedness against a threatened "Invasion" by Industrial Workers of the World from Montana, Idaho and other parts of the Northwest, which did not materialize.

CENTRALIA, Wash., Nov. 18.—Arrangements are made to file murder charges against eleven men, ten of whom have been arrested following the attack of alleged members of the Industrial Workers of the World on the Armistice Day parade which resulted in the deaths of four former service men. Public memorial services for the four victims of the shooting were held under the auspices of the American Legion.

Search was continued in nearby towns for sixteen alleged Industrial Workers of the World, who were reported en route to Centralia bearing arms.

The failure of the coroner's jury to fix responsibility for the deaths of the four former soldiers, C. D. Cunningham, assistant county attorney declared, would not effect the cases of the I. W.W. held in jail. He said the prosecution had witnesses who were in the front ranks of the parade and who insist shots were fired from the I.W.W. hall before any of the marchers started toward the building.

Half Million To Starve In Cacausus

PARIS Nov. 18—Half a million persons will starve in the Caucasus this winter, unless immediate relief be provided is the opinion of Colonel William N. Haskell, Allied high commissioner in Armenia, who left Paris last night for Tiflis, after having conferred with delegates to the Peace Conference for the past two weeks.

One million Russian Armenians and 300,000 Turkish Armenians now are living a terrible existence in the Armenian republic he says.

There will be no harvest this year, there are no cattle, houses have been destroyed and there is neither medicine nor clothing, according to Col. Haskell, who says the homeless families are living in desperate poverty.

"Twenty thousand orphans are totally supported in 49 orphanages. Eighteen hundred beds are provided in hospitals. We have maintained bread lines and soup kitchens which have supported countless thousands. In Alexandropolis alone, twelve thousand under nourished children receive food daily. The starving children by thousands are gathered into compounds by Armenian officials and we have taken care of as many as possible.

"During my visit of inspection I saw 33 children carried out of one compound dead. We rescued the remainder."

Rabbit is Now in Demand

A MOVEMENT is observable in the United States to page the rabbit in an effort to compete with the high price of foodstuffs. Twenty years ago there was a tremendous boom in many parts of the continent, including Canada, to put the Belgian hare on the market. As most people are aware, the Belgian hare is a rabbit of a brownish red color, weighing ten pounds or more, bred primarily for grace of outline and richness of coloring, and, secondly, as a substitute for beef and other meats. In California the Belgian hare boom must have reminded the old-timers of the boom in 1849. Everybody took to breeding Belgian hares. The climate was eminently suitable, for the hares could remain outdoors the year round. Tremendous prices were paid for breeding stock. Several hundred dollars were freely handed over for a prize buck. There were innumerable shows. Then the boom collapsed. It was found that to breed successfully required much skill and attention. This discouraged those who had rushed into the business without any particular aptitude or training for it. In those days, too, meats were cheap, and there was practically no demand for rabbit skins on the part of the Buntings.

The new rabbit boom is caused as much by the insatiable demand for cheap fur as for cheaper food. At the recent New York sales tremendous numbers of rabbit skins were sold. A few years ago, when wild animal furs were more abundant, or when the demand for them was smaller, there was no market for the rabbit skin. It is not a strong skin; it tears easily. Two years of not too careful use would make a rabbit skin coat not worth the moth balls that preserved it from one season to another. In those days when one bought a fur coat he, or rather she, expected it to last for the best part of a lifetime. Now, since styles have seized upon furs as they formerly seized upon silks, ladies get tired of a particular fur coat in a season or two. Durability has no greater attraction for them than piety. They want change, and if a rabbit skin coat will only look smart for a year, it will be held to have given service. As cheapness is another advantage, for a rabbit skin coat can be bought for from $65 to $150.

Ermine and seal are no longer available except for those of great wealth, and every year finds mink and otter and beaver and other furs that once were as common as the old fashioned buffalo robes, becoming more scarce. This has led to the advance in price and fashion of such furs as muskrat, skunk, cat and rabbit. The muskrat, when dyed and clipped, looks very much like seal at a distance of a hundred yards and under the name of Hudson seal sells for several hundred dollars a suit. There is also another difference not visible to the naked eye. A genuine sealskin coat would last almost a lifetime, or even longer if it happened to be a short and merry one; a muskrat coat will last about half as long. As observed, a rabbit skin coat may last almost as long as a rabbit that lives next door to a terrier. It is to be noted, too, as Frederic J. Haskin points out in the Pittsburg Gazette-Times, that the skin of the American rabbit is too tender for use as coats and it is only the European rabbit skin that can be thus employed.

The tanning of rabbit skins is a brand-new industry, and a result of the war. With the great fur-producing countries, Russia and Canada, engaged in the war, they were practically sealed as sources of supply. This suggested to a Belgian in the United States that use might be made of tanned rabbit skins as trimmings. In Belgium he had been long familiar with the process, and so he hired a barn in New Jersey, advertised for rabbit skins and set to work. In 1915 he is said to have made $250,000. This year he is advertising for 10,000,000 hides. As pointed out, the rabbit, unlike several other domestic animals, is useful both for its pelt and as food. The flesh is delicate and nourishing, and with the prices of pork and beef at their present altitudes, there is a greater demand for rabbit flesh than can be supplied. The rabbits are extremely prolific, as everybody knows, except Mr. Ellis Parker Butler, who wrote an American classic called "Pigs is Pigs," under the delusion obviously that it was not a rabbit but a guinea pig that held the record in this respect.

These domestic rabbits, whether Dutch, Belgian, Siberian, Lop Ear, English or Flemish, are not to be confounded with the true English hare, even though some of them are called hares. Nor is it to be supposed that their names are derived from the countries of their origin. If the Belgian hare ever saw Belgium, there is not much chance at least that the Siberian ever saw Siberia. All these varieties and a dozen more have been bred, some of them for centuries, some for only short times as domestic pets for show purposes. The smallest and prettiest, perhaps, is the Dutch rabbit, with its black, blue, fawn or grey body and ears, its white collar, breast and feet and the white blaze down the face. The largest is the Flemish giant, weighing twenty pounds. Then there is the French rabbit, with its snowy white, fleecy wool, and the English lop ear, which cannot jump high enough to get its ears off the ground. But it is not to be expected that boys will aid in the effort to popularize rabbit flesh and rabbit skins, the boy's idea being that all rabbits ought to die, if at all, through hardening of the arteries, and be buried with pomp and affection in a flower bed.

After-war conditions, and the telephone

Keeping Abreast of Progress

THE farmer cannot go back to the scythe or the cradle. He must keep abreast of progress by using binder and tractor for the economical handling of his crop.

So it is with the telephone. It is an important part of the business and social life of the community. We must keep our entire system, local and long distance, in the highest state of efficiency. Old apparatus and old methods must continually give way to new. Extensions must keep abreast of the needs of the business community.

Public services everywhere ran behind during the war. Skilled men and material were scarce. Necessary maintenance and repairs had to wait the return of normal times. Reserves of plant and material were exhausted.

The task of overtaking these postponed repairs, of restoring the margin of reserve plant while keeping service up to the highest standard, is now engaging our earnest efforts. New buildings are being built, new long distance lines, new underground and aerial cable, new switchboards—all in order that the telephone may continue to do its part throughout the difficult period of reconstruction. Our 1919 programme calls for an expenditure of $7,000,000.

Telephone workers everywhere appreciate the kindly co-operation of subscribers in their honest efforts to give an adequate and efficient service.

Try This If You Have Dandruff

There is one sure way that never fails to remove dandruff completely and that is to dissolve it. This destroys it entirely. To do this, just get about four ounces of plain, ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it gently with the finger tips.

By morning, most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone, and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it, no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop instantly, and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silky and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive, and four ounces is all you will need. This simple remedy has never been known to fail.

OTTAWA WOMAN DIES IN POLICE CELL

Ottawa, Nov. 18.—Mrs. Sarah Maria Shipman, 16, Tormey street, died in a local hospital Saturday afternoon and her death is the cause of a considerable stir among the police force and civic officials. Deceased was taken from a street car in the Albert street car barns on Friday in a helpless condition, and the police sergeant in charge diagnosed her case as drunkeness, allowing her to remain in a cell overnight. The sergeant who came on duty next morning however, at once saw that the woman was suffering from a stroke and ordered her removal to a hospital.

No effort was made by the police to identify the woman, who is prominent in church circles, until the inspector of detectives asked the under-officials at the station in regard to identification. Her name and address were contained in a muff which had been left in the hands of the police and relatives were immediately notified. No explanation is forthcoming from the police, as to why efforts were not made to identify Mrs. Shipman, as is the law when a prisoner is registered.

An investigation is to be held, following an inquest.

A FALSE ALARM

At 8.25 this morning the fire brigade was called out, it being reported that a C.P.R. car was on fire at the east yard. Smoke eminating from a pile of ashes over which a car was caused the alarm.

OATLAND SINKS

The steamer Oatland sank Saturday morning at the Montreal Transportation dock at Kingston as a result of being badly knocked about in the heavy gale. The boat had on board 42,000 bushels of grain, and it is feared that a large part of it may be destroyed.

CARS COLLIDE

At a few minues after 9 o'clock last evening a collision occurred on Front street between two autos driven by Mr. G. L. Collier of Picton and Mr. H. Hitchon of this city, with the result that some damage was sustained to both cars, but no person was hurt. It was alleged that the collision occured by the drivers being at the time on the wrong side of the street.

UNWELCOME INTRUDERS

Two foreigners last evening went to apartments on Front street and without announcing their arrival opened the door and prepared to make themselves at home. The police responded to a call and placed the men under arrest as they were both under the influence of liquor and did not appear to know where they were. Their names taken from identification cards were Hjalmar Kanerva and Johan Niemi and are Finlanders.

FINED $300 AND COSTS

Thomas Cornell, who is well known about the city appeared before Magistrate Masson this morning on a charge that he did have liquor in a place other than his residence, namely his person on Front street in the city. He pleaded guilty claiming that he found the liquor which was a square face gin bottle filled with gin. A fine of $300 and costs was imposed or in default three months in jail at hard labor. Cornell went to jail as he was unable to pay the fine.

FOREIGNERS INTOXICATED

Hjolmar Kanerva and Johan Emil Niema, two foreigners, this morning appeared before Magistrate Masson, charged with being drunk. One who was able to speak English slightly pleaded guilty but could not tell where he obtained the liquor. The other was unable to speak English. A remand to jail for one week was the decision the Magistrate arrived at.

OLD LONDON BELL FOUNDRIES

Relics of Many of Them Are Still to Be Found Scattered Through the British Capital.

In the days before clocks, to say nothing of watches, were common the bells of London occupied a much more important position than they do today. 'Prentices depended on this bell and that to call them very unwillingly to work of a morning and release them very willingly from work of an evening, whilst bells were requisitioned for all manner of special purposes. And so there were many bell foundries in the city. Relics of them are found in many places, even if it is only a street name, such as Billiter street, which, as Mr. Landfear Lucas points out, was undoubtedly Bell-sitzers or Founders' lane. Then Belsize probably owes its name, he declares, to a bell foundry on the lower part of Hampstead hill. Something of this sort is all that remains of many of them, but others, like the Whitechapel Bell foundry, which has been charged with retuning and rehanging the bells of Westminster abbey for the peace rejoicings, have continued to do business through the centuries. The foundry commenced business in 1570.

Timely Suggestion.

A Brooklyn lady who bought some get-rich-while-you-sleep oil and mining stock recently, is now just too provoked for anything because she didn't examine the shares more closely. Some of them are red, some yellow and some green. She tried to paper her kitchen walls with them after the president of the company disappeared, but the artistic effect was not satisfactory.

In doing your spring shopping for worthless securities, insist on getting stock certificates that harmonize in color. Then you can use them for decorative purposes after the company goes to the wall.

An old piano box covered with the shares of deceased corporations makes a pretty good clothes press, provided the stock matches nicely in shade and texture. Persons who are color blind should be extremely cautious with their wild-cat investments these days.

ENGINE DRIVERS.

Men Who Have Travelled Some Millions of Miles.

The city man who journeys thirty miles a day to and from his office would probably be astonished to learn that a single year's travelling would take him as far as Calcutta, and that every three years he covers a distance greater than that around the earth at the equator, says London Answers.

And yet he is a "stay-at-home" compared with hundreds of men who seldom give a thought to their performances. Many an engine driver and guard has a mileage running into seven figures. When Benjamin Jeans stepped down for the last time from his footplate on the London and Birkenhead express, he could boast that he had travelled 4,000,000 miles, having reeled off his "world circuits" at the rate of approximately three a year for fifty-four years. Another express driver on the L. & N.W. Railway, Thomas Beck, had completed a record of 3,000,000 miles when he retired.

When that fine old skipper, Captain Greenstreet, turned his back on the sea a few years ago, he had crossed the equator 75 times and the Cape of Good Hope 95 times. He had made 92 voyages to and from Australasia and had left behind him 2,500,000 miles of sea-roaming.

And even that wonderful achievement was eclipsed by H. Stevens, a steward on board Cunard liners, whose record of Atlantic crossings reached a total of 3,400,000 miles.

Compared with such astounding feats of globe-trotting, pedestrian records seem insignificant. But there are several men living to-day whose tramping has covered hundreds of thousands of miles. Among them, W. Moore, a letter carrier, walked 270,000 miles in thirty-two years over Yorkshire roads, and Richard Williams, in six years more, placed the enormous journey of 415,000 miles to his record as a Shropshire postman.

Protecting Airplane Propellers.

An aluminum plating for airplane propellers has been devised for the purpose of protecting the wood from the influence of the weather, which has been a serious problem heretofore. The plating is a thin leaf which is incorporated in the finish of the propellers, and the idea was developed by the forest products laboratory at Madison, Wis., and placed in production by the war department. The process is practically 100 per cent effective in preventing absorption of water, particularly in the storage stage. A French authority states that 80 per cent of the French propellers produced are rejected by the pilots mainly because they are out of balance. This difficulty is due largely to unequal absorption or distribution of moisture and can be greatly reduced by an effective water proofing coating.

Obsequies

GEORGE N. BENNETT.

Yesterday afternoon the obsequies of the late Mr. George N. Bennett, of this city, who died suddenly while on a deer hunting expedition in North Hastings, took place, and were largely attended. The funeral was under the auspices of the Masonic fraternity, of which deceased was a member, and a large number of the brethren were present to pay their last tribute of respect to their departed brother. At the family residence, Dunbar street, Rev. Rural Dean Swayne, Rector of Christ Church, conducted a brief service, after which the body was taken to Christ Church, where the burial service of the Anglican Church was conducted by Rural Dean Swayne. The choir assisted in the service. Interment took place at Belleville cemetery. Prominent members of the craft took part in the burial service of the Society, namely, Rt. Wor. Bro. C. J. Symons, D.D.G.M.; Rt. Wor. Bro. Col. Ponton, D.G.M.; Rt. Wor. Bro. H. F. Ketcheson, Wor. Bro. W. Cook, W.M. of Moira Lodge; Wor. Bro. H. A. Morgan, and Bro. Rev. Swayne. The bearers were Masons, namely, Rt. Wor. Bro. Col. W. N. Ponton, Rt. Wor. Bro. H. F. Ketcheson, Wor. Bro. J. E. Walmsley, Wor. Bro. Geo. Waddell, and Bros. J. Elliott and Leon Walmsley. The floral tributes were beautiful and numerous, the contributors being as follows:

RUMORED BONANZA IN THE YUKON?

LONDON, Nov. 18.—The Liverpool Post's gossip writer asserts that it is whispered that one reason for the Chancellor of the Eqchequer's present optimism is a vast discovery of gold on the British side of the Yukon.

EDWARDS WON'T EXPLAIN

Kingston, Nov. 18.—Dr. J. W. Edwards, M.P., in a letter to the local branch of the G.W.V.A. says he has no explanation to offer for his opposition to a further cash grant to war veterans. He declares that the veterans have no right to ask for an explanation and that none will be given.

Fun And Mystery In Capt. Kidd Jr.

Mary Pickford Charming as Ever As a Treasure Hunter.

The charm and personality of Mary Pickford never were more delightfully in evidence in any of her previous screen portrayals than were manifested by her in her quaint Artcraft picture, "Captain Kidd, Jr." which was presented with unusual success at Griffin's last night. The photoplay which is based upon Rida Johnson Young's famous stage success of the same name, proved itself a charming vehicle for the popular star and its reception by the big audience last night was in the nature of a triumph. As a nearly-grown up Scotch Lassie, Mary MacTavish, who runs a curio and book store with her grandfather, Angus MacTavish, Miss Pickford presented a deliciously refreshing portrayal—one wholly distinct from the famous characterizations with which her name has been associated for years past. When she drives a hard bargain in the sale for $75 for a set of books which had cost her only $4.50, and which, by the way, had been brought to her shop by mistake, she supplies some highly entertaining moments for her admirers. Then this transaction later involves the girl and some of her friends in a treasure hunt with all the difficulties such a task presents, Mary MacTavish proves herself fully competent to take care of herself and her interests. To tell the story of "Captain Kidd, Jr." would be eminently unfair to the admirers of Mary Pickford in that it might detract from their interest in the picture. It is perhaps sufficient to say the story is a delightful one and with its visualization by Miss Pickford and her staff of unusually competent players, it is highly diverting. Douglas MacLean, who plays opposite to Miss Pickford in this production give an artistic portrayal of the role of Jim Gleason a struggling author. "Uncle Tom without the Cabin", a funny 2-act Sennett comedy featuring Ben Turpin and Marie Prevost, Gaumont World-Wide-News, revealing many important events of interest, and a thrilling Western play completes a splendid varied program, all of which will be repeated again tonight.

VIVIAN MARTIN AT PALACE TONIGHT

One of the cleverest bits of action in Vivian Martin's new picture which is being shown at the Palace tonight and Wednesday, matinee and night is found in her friendship and devotion to "Blackie" the newsboy who befriended her in her hour of need. Blackie lost both his eyes in a fight with another newsboy, and, being a very independent young man who had always earned and fought his way in the world, he greatly resented being dependent upon charity. Vivian Martin, as Michelna, his friend, resolved to help him and thought of the models he had made out of bits of clay. He refused to try to work on them, being ashamed of his clumsy groping. Michelna discovered a certain cleverness in her own fingers and unbeknown to him, she finished several of his models for him and took them to an art exhibition where they excited much favorable attention. A new Luke comedy, and a splendid chapter of the popular serial "Perils of Thunder Mountain" are also being shown on the same program.

LOOK FOR GRAVE AND GOLD

Two Reasons Which Actuate Explorers Searching Among Santa Barbara Channel Islands.

Again the rugged and little-frequented Santa Barbara channel islands are being explored for the burial spot of Juan Cabrillo, the intrepid Spaniard who visited the California coast in the sixteenth century. The search centers in San Miguel island, the property of J. P. Moore, a wealthy resident or Florida.

Cabrillo died on one of the islands, it appears reasonably certain, and San Miguel is generally believed to be the isle where he met death. One legend has it that Cabrillo died of a fever, another that he met a violent death at the hands of a warrior from one of the Indian tribes then inhabiting the channel islands.

He is said to have been secretly buried at night in a cave, in a spot inaccessible except at low tide.

Not all the romance that is associated with San Miguel grows out of the supposed tragic death. For generations Californians have heard of the fabulous sums of gold hidden there by sea rovers.

Treasure is said to have been buried on the isle by Sir Francis Drake, after he had stripped Spanish bullion-laden ships. Drake, so the legend runs, left hurriedly and neither returned nor gave a key to the secret cache.

Several of the Spanish and Mexican outlaws that overran southern California in the Spanish regime, and even after the Americans came, are said to have made the islands their meeting place and to have buried there a fortune in gold and silver coin.

IN STRIKING COLOR SCHEME

Rainbow Effect Employed for Many Things Besides the Costumes for Bridals and Parties.

Rainbow effects are much in vogue, and there are rainbow weddings now at which the bridesmaids all appear in gowns of the same design, but each in a different hue. And there are rainbow party dresses that are much in demand among the younger girls. But these rainbows are not always of the regulation sort. The people who plan them have a different color scheme.

Take, for instance, a very charming trousseau set offered in one of the smart shops. It contains, aside from the usual supply of lingerie, so-called, all sorts of dainties for the boudoir—chaise longue covers, clothes hangers, shoe trees, cushions, bags, etc. These are developed in a rainbow that consists of pastel green, yellow, blue, ivory white and shell pink. Not a bad combination of colors, to be sure, and perhaps under the circumstances a better color scheme than nature's own.

Belleville Board Of Trade Will Be Reorganized

Realizing the need of a larger and more representative organization in which every branch of the community and every interest will be fully represented, the Belleville Board of Trade has embarked upon an Expansion Campaign which gives promise of beneficial results. This campaign has been endorsed by the City Council and other civic organizations, and in order to enlist the co-operation of every progressive citizen the Executive Committee of the Belleville Board of Trade today issued the following:

To the People of Belleville:—

In carrying out the plan for more thoroughly organizing the city of Belleville, it is the feeling of the Council and the members of the Board of Trade that the desired end can best be accomplished by a complete re-organization of the present Board of Trade.

In this re-organized Board of Trade there should be enrolled not only those who are now supporting it but a larger representation of all the interests and all the elements of the city. A broadly representative, thoroughly efficient agency is what Belleville requires.

Our decision has not been hastily reached. Careful consideration has made us feel that the purpose and ambitions of the city of Belleville will be served well only by changing the type and methods of work of the present Board of Trade.

Further than this, we have been prompted not only by our knowledge of the value of such an institution as a means for promoting the civic, industrial, commercial and agricultural development of the city and its surrounding territory, but by the urgent need at this time for united service by all our people in the great tasks of reconstruction and re-adjustment brought by the close of the war.

The plan of organization as presented by the Canadian City Bureau has been considered and endorsed by a special committee of this board, composed of four members from the City Council and four members of the Board of Trade with the President of the Board of Trade as chairman.

The City Council and the Board of Trade are a unit in this matter and members of both bodies are doing individually and collectively everything they can to make this campaign a great success and to bring greater prosperity to Belleville, and their report has been approved and accepted by this Board of Trade. Accordingly a vigorous campaign will be immediately entered upon, and to its successful prosecution we pledge our hearty endeavors.

When the membership has been enlisted, the new body will be organized under the plan which has been successfully employed in other cities, involving, of course, the adoption of new bylaws and the election of officers in which the entire membership will be required to participate.

We ask all thinking citizens of Belleville to join hands with us in this movement to give Belleville first rank among cities of its size in community action and unity.

Names Crerar For Premiership

LINDSAY, Nov. 19.—At a convention of the U. F. O. for Victoria county held here, the chief address was delivered by Rev. Mr. Watson, M.P.P.-elect for North Victoria. Mr. Watson traced the history of the U. F.O. and the birth of the Grain Growers' Association in the West, of which Hon. T. A. Crerar is President. He also made the somewhat prophetic remark: "And I want you all to do all you can to help Mr. Crerar and speak a good word for him, for he is going to be the next Premier of Canada."

The speaker said that in the past Governments had been in the control of men who were not heart and soul for democracy and government for the people but were controlled by corporations.

FIND OUT OWNERSHIP

He also stated that he knew the Government was going to find out who really owns the big newspapers, The Globe, Star, Telegram, Mail and Empire, and other papers, to see whether when they announce certain drops in pork or other products Sir Joseph Flavelle is not behind it all, and getting the price of the salt.

JUMP TO ATTENTION

He also stated that there was not a single commodity the farmer used or ate that was not controlled by some corporation; but the farmers were organizing and would take their proper place. It would not be necessary for them to take a trip to Ottawa with their hair properly combed in order to get a hearing, but just as soon as the telephone rang and Ottawa found out that the farmers were on the other end of the line, Ottawa would jump four feet to give attention.

He predicted that the farmers would cut a wide swath for the rights of the people.

Greenwich Village Had Terrible Shock

"Daughter of Czar" Suddenly Undraped Herself and Fled From Studio.

(Montreal Gazette)

NEW YORK, November 17—In the psychopathic ward in Bellevue Hospital to-day is a young woman who in the small space of one hour gave Greenwich village more shocks than that community has experienced in its entire career. In fact, it will be hard to compete with the record established by the village's latest sensation. Had not Policeman Burke arrived—but that's another story.

Here is what transpired during the sixty minutes the stranger held forth in studio and street while every male who could get near enough craned his neck for a better view and women turned away and blushed.

Walton de Pellaton, in his studio at No 72 Washington Square, had just started rehearing some twenty-four young men and women for a performance in his studio was opened and a young woman expensively gowned and with hair bobbed in conventional "village" style, entered.

"I am the daughter of the Czar of Russia; I am Princess Bertha. I have had a hell of a night. I have been in jail and compelled to sleep on the flour.

De Pellaton and his twenty-four guests looked abashed, but their discomfiture was nothing to what was later, when the uninvited guest took more liberties. To continue coherently, however, 'Princes Bertha' said she wished to become a member of the threatrical company. This could not be done, for each of the players had already been coached and already prepared for the initial performance.

Over in one corner of the studio was a baby grand piano. Spying it, the "Princess" sauntered over and, seating herself, played in the bold stormy mood of a Beethoven, in the calm manner of a Mozart and continued until she had played selections of every great composer of note, ending her repertory with Hungarian Rhapsodies by Liszl.

"She's a genius," said one. "Her art is perfect," ejaculated another. Then things happened so rapidly that none of the twenty-five persons could keep track of the events. Those twenty-five young men and serious thinking young women know this much—that their entertainer left the piano, jumped upon the stage, and before anyone could prevent her, divested herself of all encumbrances such as wearing apparel, while she demonstrated the true art of acting.

Suddenly one of the young men present bethought himself of his overcoat. This he placed about the undraped form of the young woman. Then crying out that she must have air, the bobbed haired one darted from the studio into Washington Square, followed by the twenty-five villagers.

All this happened at three o'clock crowded with women and children. They ran but their places were taken by men who, thinking that somethin gnew yas bein gtried out in the neighborhood of oddities, craned their necks to get a good look at the latest "idea."

Policeman Burke, who is by no means a prude, but who believes Eve belonged in only one garden, caught sight of the fleeing "Princess."

Breathlessly de Pellaton told Officer Burke all that had transpired and after a posse was formed it closed in on the "Princess,' 'and she was taken back to a studio, where a doctor from Bellevue Hospital advised that she be taken to that institution for examination.

According to the police, the young woman gave as her name that of a prominent family on Fifth Avenue. This, however, proved to be fictitious. Her name was withheld, but it was stated her breakdown was caused by overstudy.

FIVE CHORUS GIRLS ILL EATING CANNED SALMON

St. Thomas, Nov. 19.—Four chorus girls in the Gus Hill (Briging up Father in Society) company, which arrived in St. Thomas yesterday afternoon, were taken ill shortly after their arrival in St. Thomas, and it is believed they are suffering from ptomaine poisoning caused by eating canned salmon which they partook of just prior to leaving Hamilton, enroute to this city. They were unable to go on with their parts and the fifth was taken ill during the matinee.

A compromise which will eliminate the preamble requiring the assent of three Powers to the United States reservations is possible. The last two committee reservations add two others proposed by individuals were defeated.

Dummer Still Is Caught Again

Owner Matthew Lytle Fined $500 With Three Months in Jail.

PETERBORO, Nov. 19—The famous Drummer still, that operates without a license, will remain idle for some time—at least three months—while its chief shareholder, who claims to be the sole owner, spends that time in the county jail performing hard labor.

This manufacturer is Matthew Lytle, who pleaded guilty to this charge before Magistrate Dumble at Police Court and was fined $500 with $101.10 costs, besides a sentence of three months. In default of payment he must spend six additional months in jail.

Both Matthew and his son, Charles, were charged with the manufacture of liquor contrary to the Inland Revenue Act, but the father shouldered all the blame, declaring his son was not even an accomplice in the crime.

The Crown withdrew the charge against the son on the father pleading guilty.

About a week ago Mr. Buller, collector of inland revenue, informed the police of this illicit manufacture and members of the force spent a considerable time in the swamps of the back country searching for the still, which they finally discovered last Thursday.

Dry Majority Is Very Large

TORONTO, Nov. 18.—Practically complete figures in the Referendum have now been received from every constituency in Ontario. The answer to question No. 1 is a sweeping endorsation of the Ontario Temperance Act and even on question No 4, the verdict is so decisive as to be overwhelming the majority being nearly one-quarter of a million against the slightest modification of the present prohibitory law that would in any sense weaken it as a temperance measure.

The final figures are as follows:

	Yes	No	Majority
First ..	365,365	772,041	406,676
Second ..	408,266	733,621	325,425
Third ..	383,727	747,920	364,193
Fourth ..	447;146	693,829	246,683

Gov't Must And Will Have Coal

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

Washington, Nov. 19.—Speaking with the authority of President Wilson's Cabinet, Fuel Administrator Garfield told the representatives of the bituminous coal operators and miners here today that "The people of the United States need, must have, and will have coal," and as long as the Government stands they will not be prevented from getting it by "anything the operators or miners may do." Dr. Garfield explained that his purpose was to furnish the conference with the data which he would use in determining what wage advances, if any, agreed to by the operators and miners could be borne properly by the public.

Make Peace Pact Operative At Once

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Great Britain and France are considering whether they are not compelled to proceed with the carrying out of the German peace treaty and the operations of the League of Nations independent of the United States, pending the decision of the American Government on its course. It is pointed out that matters are continually arising under the treaty which need immediate attention, such as the operation of various plebiscite commissions, and it is considered that because of this fact it is not longer possible to delay making the pact operative.

MOSTLY ILLEGITIMATE

London, Nov. 19.—Officials of the British National Baby Adoption Society say more baibes in this country are offered for adoption than can be placed in suitable homes. Many of these children are illegitimate.

Some are children of demobilized soldiers whose wives have died or left them. Since the war, it is said the desire to adopt children is more widespread than ever before.

Stocks And Crops Destroyed By Australian Drought

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—Australia, especially New South Wales, is suffering the most devastating drought since white men have resided in the country, even the drought of 1902 being surpassed, according to a Sydney despatch to the Daily Mail. Stocks and crops have been destroyed, and it is doubtful of there will be enough seed wheat for next season's sowing. Hundreds and perhaps thousands of settlers have been ruined. Northwestern New South Wales is described as deserted, being stripped of everything green; paddocks are littered with skeletons of cattle and even rabbits are dying in vast numbers.

Assassins Threw Bombs At Admiral Kolchak

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Nov. 19.—An attempt to assassinate Admiral Kolchak head of the all-Russian Government, which up until recently maintained its capital at Omsk, is reported in a wireless despatch received here from Moscow. Hand grenades were thrown at Kolchak, six soldiers being killed and twelve wounded.

Petworth Dam Again Blown Up

Explosives Placed Under Dam by Unknown Persons—Third Time Dam Has Been Blown Up.

KINGSTON, Nov. 19.—The Petworth dam, which has been a bone of contention for years and 50 per cent. of which is now owned by the Hydro Electric, was totally destroyed shortly after midnight on Saturday night, being blown up by some high explosive placed no one knows by whom. The entire seven piers—each of which is 7 feet long, 5 feet wide and 5 feet deep, were completely destroyed, as was also the whole face of the dam, which was 80 feet across.

This is the third time that the dam has been blown up. The first time the attempt was not successful; the second time, however, it was successful, and as a consequence the entire dam had to be rebuilt. Now, this third explosion has created even greater havoc than the second one and has left practically not a vestige of the dam.

At least 18,000 acres were affected by the dam and the property owners have all along protested very strenuously against its erection.

EXCLUDE FARMERS FROM EIGHT HOUR DAY

Washington, Nov. 19.—With recognition of the general principle of the 48-hour week, the special committee of International Labor Conference will now have before it cases of exceptions. It already has been announced that the committee has rejected the Labor proposal to make the convention applicable to commercial establishments. The proposal had been made that farmers be included. The committee has not yet reached a decision on this point, but it is generally expected that farm workers will be excluded.

The convention will therefore apply to industrial establishments only. As is usually the case in statutes or organisms limiting labor hours there will be special provision for abormal circumstances.

Some of the small countries like Greece are asking for special consideration in view of their backward industrial development.

TORONTO'S OLDEST CITIZEN IS IN HIS 109TH YEAR

Toronto, Nov. 19.—Various cities throughout the Dominion have laid claim to having the oldest citizen in Canada, the latest being Vancouver, whose oldest resident has reached the mature age of 104. Toronto, apparently, can also lay claim to that honor, for at 49 Rainsford Road lives Mr. John Mantell, whose years of life number 109. He will be 110 next May. At the last election Mr. Mantell voted four times "No," and for the election of the Conservative candidate in his constituency. In spite of his years Mr. Mantell is quite active and during the summer months spends many hours each day among the flowers which he grows in his garden.

$100,000 RUBY OWNED BY RUSSIAN LABORER

New York, Nov. 19.—After carrying it as a "luck stone" for twenty years John Mihok, a Russian laborer at Omaha, has discovered that he possesses the largest pigeon blood ruby in the world, weighing 24 karats, and valued at more than $100,000. When a friend of his suggested some time ago that he consult a jeweller as to whether the stone was worth anything Mihok did so, and was advised to send it to a Chicago gem expert, who announced its real value almost immediately.

Wedding Bells

TUCKER—MITCHELL

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Mark Tucker, Commercial street, Belleville, on Thursday, November 13th, when their only daughter Gladys May was united in marriage to Mr. Frederick Roy Mitchell of Regina, Sask. The ceremony was performed by Rev. A. H. Foster of West Belleville Methodist Church.

The bride who was give away by her father, entered the drawing room to the strains of 'Longhrins Wedding March' played by Miss Ida Scott of Wiarton.

The bride looked charming in a gown of white silver cloth with trimmings of tulle and silver lace and carried a bouquet of white roses. The bridesmaid, Miss Blanche Lott of Trenton, Ontario, cousin of the bride wore a dainty gown of maize georgette with tulle trimmings and carried chrysanthemums. Little Doris Vandevoort of Trenton, Ont., acted as flower girl. She wore a dainty little frock of white crepe de chine trimmed with pink and carried a bouquet of roses.

Mrs. Mark Tucker, mother of the bride wore a beautiful gown of black Dutchess satin with red roses.

After the impressive ceremony was concluded, the entire company was invited to the dining room, where a dainty luncheon was served by eight of the girl friends of the bride.

The groom's gift to the bride was a Beaver scarf, to the bridesmaid a pearl pin, to the flower girl a gold bracelet, to the pianist a silk parasol, to his cousin, Mr. Gordon Lillico of Toronto who acted as groomsman, a gold watch chain.

The father's gift to the bride was a substantial cheque.

The bride's travelling dress was a suit of brown tricotine with beaver hat and veil to match.

The guests from out of town were: Mr. and Mrs. Luther Denike, Campbellford, Ont; Mr. and Mrs. Mason Thorpe and son, Stanley, of Binifton; Mr. and Mrs. Jess Ames of Oshawa; Mrs. N. Doxsee, Toronto; Miss Pearl Tinkess of Wiarton.

The happy couple left on the 5.15 p. m. train for Toronto and Buffalo and on November 22nd they will start for their new home in Regina, Sask. The best wishes of a host of friends will follow them.

Torture of the Inquisition

A Modern Example of Suffering

People suffer—suffer torments—with help at hand. Gin Pills can overcome pain in the most marvelous way—all the suffering which follows in the wake of weak or diseased kidneys, such as rheumatism, sciatic neuralgia, stone in the bladder, excruciating backache, stiff and swollen joints and ankles, yields quickly to the soothing, healing, strengthening power of Gin Pills, which contain Juniper and seven other valuable diuretics and antiseptics.

Mr. Arnold McAskell, of Hants, N.S., writes as follows:

"For a long time I suffered from a pain in my back and could not move without agony. I grew worse until confined to bed. A friend advised me to use Gin Pills. Before I had used one box I began to feel better. By the time I had finished two, I was completely cured. I cannot say too much in favor of these pills and I recommend them strongly to anyone suffering from kidney trouble."

Mental Work Needs a Stomach

Great Mistake to Imagine You Can Work Better and Faster on the Starvation Plan. Eat What You Like, But Follow With Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Mental work uses up energy fast. And energy comes from food. To eat little or nothing in order to do more work is a fallacy that has created an army of dyspeptics. A better plan is to eat the regular portions of food such as make up the average meal and follow each meal with Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

You will then get a double benefit—energy from food and sociability with meals, for as a rule, the light eater or those who skip meals, get into a bad habit, a rut of hermit-like isolation. Do not be afraid of gasiness, sour stomach, heartburn, heavy feeling or coated tongue after meals. Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets arouse the stomach to secrete the juices necessary to relieve these troubles that so frequently distress the mental worker. They contain harmless ingredients which act with an alkaline effect, so you may eat the rich things of the banquet or the savory sausage for breakfast with utmost freedom.

Get a 50-cent box of Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets at any drug store, eat freely of what you like and you will do more and better work than on a skimpy diet. Try this plan.

SINCLAIR'S

Very Neat, Very Smart Very Warm

—and what more is there to ask of a Plush Coat? These coats, of Salt's Esquimette, with its long silken pile, will make Milady's winter comfortable, and stylish. There is a difference of opinion as to lines and trimming, but most of these coats agree that there must be belts, buttons or fur somewhere in their makeup. Linings of flowered silks are quite as attractive as one would expect in these coats. Full or three-quarter length.

Prices $39.50 to $125.00.

Heavy Wool Stockings

Two special lines in Heavy Wool Stockings are marked at prices to clear them quickly.

Made In Belleville Is A Mark Of Superiority

NEW INDUSTRY WILL CONFORM TO HIGH STANDARD SET BY OTHER BELLEVILLE MANUFACTURERS AND PRODUCE HIGHEST QUALITY FOOD PRODUCTS—"THE SIGN OF THE JUDGE" GUARANTEES THAT THE GOODS OF THE JUDGE-JONES MILLING COMPANY, MADE IN BELLEVILLE ARE PURE AND WHOLESOME AND "BETTER THAN THE BEST."

"Pure and Right" as a righteous Judge, emblematic of Justice and a Square Deal, the food products of the Judge-Jones Milling Co. have always proudly sustained their unique trade mark, and English Judge in stately wig and flowing gown. Belleville is now the home of the Judge-Jones Milling Co., the plant having recently been moved here from Montreal; in fact there will be concentrated in Belleville the machinery of four plants which formerly supplied the demand for Judge-Jones cornmeal, oatmeal, corn flour, rolled oats, etc.

The Belleville plant is located on Albion street, in the large factory building formerly used by the Graham Co. In addition to this building a large elevator is being constructed which will have a capacity of 45,000 bushels. The frame of this building is completed and the finishing touches are now being added.

The Judge-Jones Milling Co., of Belleville, when in operation, which will be very shortly, will have a daily capacity of two hundred barrels of white flour, 200 barrels of corn flour, 500 to 1000 bags of cornmeal, and 100 barrels of rolled oats. In addition to this four machines are being installed for the custom grinding trade and a specialty will be made of quick handling of farmers grist. The machinery is now all in the mill and is being rapidly installed. Only the most modern machinery is used by this company and the milling plant includes a flour purifier machine which preserves the old-time strength and health-giving qualities of flour.

Over three hundred horse power of electrical energy will be required for the industry and everything pertaining to the plant will be the last word in modern machinery installation.

The Judge-Jones Milling Co. were particularly fortunate in their Belleville site, the mills being situated alongside the city spur of the G. T. R. which with the inter-switching privileges gives direct connection with the three transcontinental railways, besides direct rail connection with navigation at the Government wharf.

Mr. George B. Jones, who for a number of years has been a partner and Sales Manager with the Judge Grain Co., is the resident manager of the Judge-Jones Milling Co. business at Belleville. He is an expert flour and cereal miller and flour tester and has for several years been experimenting on processes to make improved quality of flour, rolled oats, corn meal and all kinds of flour, cereals, and feeds. Mr. Jones has associated with him some of the best millers, millwrights, etc., and the Judge-Jones Milling Company will have one of the best equipped mills in Canada. There will be none better and few as good.

Mr. Judge has been in the flour and grain business in Montreal for over fifty years, being now in his eighty-ninth year and is still actively connected with the management of the Montreal office.

Mr. R. J. Graham of Graham Ltd., Belleville, is President of the Judge-Jones Milling Co. Mr. Graham is one of the largest figures in the food product manufacturing business in the world to-day and the Graham factories are located in many places on the North American continent from the Atlantic to the Pacific, both in Canada and the United States, affording a steady and unfailing market at highest cash prices for the fruit and vegetable products of the farming communities.

May the Judge-Jones Milling Company thrive and prosper in Belleville so that its buildings may eventually cover many acres and may its products always live up to their present high standard and fully justify the benign countenance and square deal expression of the English Judge, the trade mark which marks all Judge-Jones products as high grade, dependable and just a little better than the best and a whole lot better than the average.

Did you ever notice how perfectly white the Ivory goods look on your friend's dressing table, while those of your own are turning a dull yellow? If so, you will also notice that the Ivory goods of your friends are stamped ORIENTAL IVORY, which is the only brand of Ivory which will not fade in color. Ask for the "Real Oriental Ivory' 'and you will not be disappointed.

DANGEROUS ANTISEPTICS AND GERMINCIDES ARE UNNECESSARY

A dependable antiseptic has come to be considered a necessity in most homes. Especially is this true since Absorbine, Jr., has had such a wide introduction, because this liniment is not only a powerful antiseptic and germicide but it is absolutely safe to use and to have around the house. It is not poisonous and it cannot do harm even if the children do get hold of it. That is a big point to consider.

Absorbine, Jr. is concentrated and is therefore economical. It retains its germicidal properties even diluted one part Absorbine, Jr. to 100 parts water—and its antiseptic properties, one part Absorbine, Jr., to 200 parts of water.

The antiseptic and germicidal properties have been repeatedly tested and proven in many prominent chemical laboratories. Detailed laboratory reports mailed upon request.

Absorbine, Jr. combines safety with efficiency. $1.25 a bottle at most druggists or postpaid.

KINGSTON ADMIRATION FOR BELLEVILLE

The spirit of unrest which is so marked the world over as one result of the reaction from war conditions is not always reactionary. Unrest manifests itself in various ways, from revolution to reformation, in which crowns and thrones and governments are engulfed and from which arise new systems and new governments and new leaders. No one is satisfied with present conditions, hence the desire for a change. In this connection the most hopeful feature is an awakening of the spirit of enterprise and community spirit in which old feuds and differences can be forgotten in combined effort for the general good. Belleville citizens have embarked upon a progressive campaign and already there are results giving promise of great benefit. That other communities are watching Belleville's progressive movement very closely is indicated by the following "call to arms" in the Kingston Standard:

STOP, LOOK, LISTEN !

When the City of Belleville is able to take from under our very noses the H. A. Wood Mnfg. Co., manufacturing air-tight valves, employing at least 300 men—the president of the concern being a Kingston man and the stock being held by Kingstonians to the amount of thousands of dollars—it is high time that the city and the citizens of Kingston wakened up and asked themselves what it all means and whither it all tends.

We have recently lost several industries long-established here, and now we have lost one that might have been established here, but was not, merely because as a city we did not bestir ourselves to get it, while other neighboring cities, including Belleville and Peterborough, were on the job, morning, noon and night. Belleville won out—and she won out because, small as that city is, it had an alert, live, paid industrial commissioner who does not let the grass grow under his feet, but moves, lives and has his being with an eye single to the advancement and progress of Belleville.

Here in Kingston we have no Industrial Commissioner—no one man whose duty it is to hustle to keep ahead of the other cities and to get in touch with prospective and possible enterprises that are seeking a location. With us it is a case of what is everybody's business is nobody's business, and then it is that golden opportunities are constantly slipping through our fingers, and that we are losing industries instead of gaining them.

For this reason The Standard is very much concerned, as are many citizens, as to the character and quality of next year's City Council. For this reason also The Standard believes, as likewise do many citizens, that we should without delay proceed to engage a paid Industrial Commissioner for the city—not a cheap man, but a high class man, even if he had to be paid anywhere from $3,000 to $5,000 a year. Such a man would easily earn his salary if he succeeded in landing only one industry a year such as that which we see now going to Belleville and which, being a Kingston concern, should have been located here and would have been had we been alive instead of asleep.

If ever there was a time when not alone the Board of Trade and the City Council, but the citizens generally should "get together" and "start things" that time is now.

The magnificent subscriptions in Kingston to the Victory Loan show not only that Kingston has plenty of money but that as a city it is amazingly prosperous. Let us make it more prosperous!

INTELLECTUALISM AND RELIGION.

Three artists talking around a club fireplace declared calmly that they were not interested in the Church. Said one: "I used to go regularly, but the time came when I lost interest. It seemed to me that the dullness of sermons increased from month to month."

The second, a man of international reputation, and of gracious personality, said that he had no special criticism of the idealism of the Church. He added that the picturesque side of ritual appealed to hmi, but he found a matter-of-course-ness in dealing with mystical subjects that was repellant.

The third said that he "just stopped going," not for any particular reason, but as a matter of habit.

It is unfortunate that some men of fine character and sensitive temperament allow themselves to be turned away from the one institution organized to cultivate spirituality. The tendency has been remarked in England and has been the occasion of a famous poem of lamentation which ends with these lines:

"For the good are so harsh to the clever,
The clever so rude to the good."

In an age of sophistication, men of wide reading are inclined to say to themselves, "Why should I take advice from a clergyman? I am as well educated as he is, and I believe I have more common sense."

Leaving aside the tinge of self-consciousness in such a statement, one may inquire if the grace of leadership grows out of bookishness. It is admitted that man is a trinity of body, mind and spirit. Just at it is possible for a person of brilliant intellect to have a frail physique—like Robert Louis Stevenson—so is it possible for him to have an untrained and uncouth spiritual nature—like George Bernard Shaw.

It would be unreasonable for an intellectual to despise a suggestion on physical training from Jack Dempsey. So also it is unreasonable for him to be contemptuous of advice from a man of experience in prayer and other spiritual gymnastics.

Many clergymen utterly incompetent to discuss science with a scientist, or art with an artist, are more than competent to instruct either in the grace of right living and the discovery of happiness.

Most men who enter the ministry have natural spiritual gifts. These are refined and given a higher potency by academic education and by special training in divinity. But the lay intellectual, believing that all fullness dwells in reason and cold mentality persists in neglecting the training of the emotional nature, which undoubtedly is the core of man, the Ego of eternal persistence and of eternal mystery.

"Jack Dempsey cannot knock me down. I am better educated than he." That is an absurdity. But no more an absurdity than this other thought. "An Archbishop can teach me nothing. I know more about biology than he."

The gospel of the Man of Nazareth was foolishness to the Greeks of His generation. The "Greeks" of today are similarly minded, not because of the gospel but by reason of their own inability to see more than two phases of men. The Inter-Church Movement should do something to bestir educated people, to turn their eyes to spiritual values.

Intellectual pride is a sturdy fortress, but it has been breached before by the simple gospel of soul-values.

No modern Doctor of Philosophy—even from Harvard—is prouder than was Saul of Tarsus, honor graduate of the University of Jerusalem under President Gamaliel. Yet that pride was transformed to a beautiful humility. Saul regenerated marched straight to sainthood and an unfading influence in the world.

Christianity aims to make an equilateral triangle—body, mind and spirit equally developed. Spirit is the base of completeness. The intellectual is a narrow isosceles, sharpened to a hideously acute angle and with no base to speak of. This may be "harsh to the clever," but how many weary times have the clever been rude to the good!—J. E. Middleton.

Other Views

Better Than Strikes
Guelph Herald.

The spirit of compromise in arbitration, based upon mutual understanding of each other's difficulties, in the end works more for mutual welfare and good will than costly strikes, no matter which side is victorious and which perhaps might have been fairly settled, were this the guiding principle.

Almost Invariably.
Ohio State Journal.

It may be laid down as a general rule that whenever anyone makes a ring-tailed simian of himself in public life he thinks the newspapers are subsidized.

Awakening of the Countryside.
London Daily Mail.

In every hamlet ex-soldiers with pensions are wondering what to do with the partial capacity that the war has left. The countryman is up against change, cheek by jowl with it, as never before since the Reformation; and the result is a very new intellectual vivacity, palpable in every village, street and hall. Those who live in daily contact with the new spirit know that it is good, and that when the spacious flood of grumbling has gone down England will be a more fertile field—in the produce of the ground and in ideas, which are the produce of the mind.

What About Good Roads?
London Free Press.

What will the new Ontario Government do with the good roads policy of the Hearst administration? That is one of the first questions likely to come up for settlement, since the late Government had made considerable progress with the policy, and if the idea of a permanent highway is to be abandoned, as many of the farmers demanded, it may be necessary to take prompt action. It is reported that contracts have been awarded for a large supply of cement, which may not now be required.

David F. Houston, secretary of agriculture for the United States, says the cry no longer is "Back to the farm," but rather "Keep farmers on the farm," and one of the means to this end, he contends, is good roads. The Federal and State authorities in the republic have $700,000,000 to spend on the improvement of roads. Farm and rural life, he says, cannot be made attractive with mud roads. The farm must be in closer touch with the centres of activity. This cannot be if for protracted periods the avenues of travel are uncertain and sometimes impassable.

Grotesque Distortions.
Toronto Globe.

The Ladies' Home Journal says England required three years to get 2,000,000 men to France, while the United States got as many men there in half the time. The same periodical says the Central Powers won the war for four years less ten days, and then Marshal Foch, "with the United States troops in the vanguard" won his way to victory in 115 days. Canadians know that these statements are grotesque distortions of the truth, but do intelligent Americans like to see history maltreated in this way?

Income-Tax Dodgers.
Hamilton Spectator.

Income-tax dodgers would do well to make a mental note of the fact that a Pembroke druggist has been fined $1,000 for makeing a false statement as to the amount of his income. If this man had told the truth he would have had to pay more income tax than he wanted to, but as it is he will have to pay the full amount due and $1,000 besides.

A Laugh Or Two

It Got a Rise Out of Him.

"Why, Johnnie, you've got a lump on your head. Have you been fighting again?"

"Fightin? Not me!"

"But somebody struck you?"

"Nobody struck me. I wasn't fighting at all. It was an accident."

"An accident?"

"Yes. I was sitting on Tommy Brown's head and I forgot to hold his feet."

Will It Come to This.

With a wild shriek the train dashed through the country station without pausing.

"I say, porter," cried a startled passenger, waiting at the station, "isn't that the 4.15 to Newtown? Why didn't it stop here?"

The porter shook his head.

"It don't stop here now, sir," he explained. "The lady engine driver has quarreled with our station mistress."

Not a Safe Bet, Anyway.

The French Premier Clemenceau was chatting with a guest at a social occasion, who commenced one of his remarks thus: "I bet she will—"

M. Clemenceau promptly interrupted him. "Never bet that 'she' will do anything," he said. "You can never tell what a woman will do."

"You interrupted me too soon, monsieur," answered the guest. "I was going to say that I would bet she would do the unexpected."

"Don't do it!" retorted Clemenceau. "Even that is not safe to bet on."

A Sure Method.

Two sailors at a dog show were gazing at a valuable Skye terrier, which had so much hair that it looked more like a woollen mat than a dog.

"What end is 'is 'ead, Tom?" asked one.

"Blowed if I know," was the reply, "but, 'ere, I'll stick a pin in 'im, and you look which end barks!"

Poet's Corner

SYMPATHY.

Is the way hard and thorny, oh, my brother?
Do tempests beat, and adverse wild winds blow?
And are you spent and broken at each nightfall,
Yet with each morn you rise and onward go?
Brother, I know, I know!
I, too, have journeyed so.

Is your heart mad with longing, oh, my sister?
Are all great passions in your breast aglow?
Does the white wonder of your own soul blind you,
And are you torn with rapture and with woe
Sister, I know, I know!
I, too, have suffered so.

Is the road filled with snare and quick-sand, pilgrim?
Do pitfalls lie where roses seem to grow?
And have you sometimes stumbled in the darkness,
And are you bruised and scarred by many a blow?
Pilgrim, I know, I know!
I, too, have stumbled so.

Do you send out rebellious cry and question,
As mocking hours pass silently and slow?
Does your insistent 'wherefore' bring no answer,
While stars wax pale with watching, and droop low?
I, too, have questioned so,
But now, I know, I know!

To toil, to strive, to err, to cry, to grow,
To love through all—this is the way to know.

—Ella Wheeler Wilcox.

POSSE IN SEARCH OF I. W. W. SNIPERS

Centralia, Wash., Nov. 19.—A posse of loggers and former soldiers left here for Hannaford Valley, 18 miles northeast of Centralia to renew the search for a number of Industrial Workers of the World who are believed to have participated in the shooting of members of the American Legion during the Armistice Day parade last Tuesday

Bert Bland, believed by the authorities here to be the man who shot and killed Warren Grimm, commander of the local American Legion Post, on Armistice Day, and a man named Hadsen, also suspected of complicity in the shooting are reported to be among those hiding in the valley.

Hansen was damed in an alleged confession of L. Roberts, an I.W.W. as having been in the group which fired on the Centralia paraders.

The U. S. Congress passed the Railroad bill providing methods for setting disputes between employers and employees, extending government aid to the roads after their return to private owners and granting new powers to the Interstate Commerce Commission.

A Coated Tongue? What it Means

A bad breath, coated tongue, bad taste in the mouth, languor and debility, are usually signs that the liver is out of order. PROF. HEMMETER says: "The liver is an organ secondary in importance only to the heart."

We can manufacture poisons within our own bodies which are as deadly as a snake's venom. The liver acts as a guard over our well-being, sifting out the cinders and ashes from the general circulation.

A blockade in the intestines piles a heavy burden upon the liver. If the intestines are choked or clogged up, the circulation of the blood becomes poisoned and the system becomes loaded with toxic waste, and we suffer from headache, yellow-coated tongue, bad taste in mouth, nausea, or gas, acid dyspepsia, languor, debility, yellow skin or eyes. At such times one should take castor oil or a pleasant laxative. Such a one is made of May-apple, leaves of aloe and jalap, put into ready-to-use form by Doctor Pierce, nearly fifty years ago, and sold for 25 cents by all druggists as Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

HOW ESKIMOS LIVE.

Material Used for Houses Costs Nothing.

It takes only about six hours to build a first-class winter residence in Eskimo Land. The material, which is snow, costs nothing.

But the snow must be carefully selected. The bank that serves as a quarry must have been formed by a single storm, to be sufficiently solid and homogeneous. It must yield blocks of fine grain, yet soft enough to be easily cut with saw or snow knife.

Two men do the work, one cutting while the other builds. It is best, if practicable, to attack the side of a steep drift, making parallel cuts and lifting out the blocks as fast as detached. The blocks are three or four feet long, two feet high and six to eight inches thick.

Instead of laying them in parallel course like bricks, the blocks are so placed as to form a spiral, inclined inward to form a dome-shaped structure, with the culmination of the spiral in the middle of the top, where two or three triangular pieces are put in to close the hole. This is a highly ingenious method of building a dome without the aid of a scaffold.

In order to reach high enough, the builder makes a snow bench inside, on which he steps while finishing the upper part of the structure. Finally the joints are made tight by pressing snow-mortar into them, the idea being to prevent warm air inside the house from escaping.

When finished the house is ten or twelve feet high and twelve to fifteen feet in diameter, and has the appearance of a hemisphere of snow set on its flat side. A sort of entrance hall is added outside, with a passage big enough to crawl through, and on either side of it cubbyholes for the storage of harness, spare food, etc.

A window is cut in the wall of the building and covered with seals' intestines sewed together. Being translucent, they admit daylight or, as an alternative, a slab of clear, fresh-water ice may be set in the wall. This affords an excellent substitute for glass, and can be counted on not to melt in that frigid latitude.

The house is lined with the skins which form the covering of the summer Eskimo dwelling, the object of this arrangement being to prevent the warm air inside from melting the snow roof; for between the skins and the wall there is always a layer of cold air. At the top, for ventilation and to provide a draft for the family lamp, a small hole is cut.

On the side of the house opposite the entrance (within) a broad snow bench is built, with a long pole for an edge. This is the family bed. For a mattress a thick layer of shrubs is spread upon it and over these many deerskins. Clothes, when taken off, are rolled up and put under the skins for pillows. One blanket of skins serves to cover the whole family.

It is very warm inside, for, in effect, the snowhouse is an inhabited oven. A shallow semicircular dish of soapstone, with a wick of fat-saturated moss, serves as a lamp, deriving its oil from the drips of a piece of seal blubber suspended near the flame. Above the lamp is hung a pot for cooking, and aloft, over the pot, is a network of thongs containing articles of clothing, put there to dry in the ascending warm air.

The lamp gives a brilliant and beautiful light; it cooks the food, it dries the clothes, it heats the house and, not least important, it melts the snow for drinking water. Water, and lots of it (for drinking, not for bathing) is to the Eskimo the greatest of luxuries, for he lives in a country where, through most of the year, the normal condition of H2O is that of a rock.

All the life of the Eskimos may be said to revolve about the family lamp, which makes it possible for them to dwell in an otherwise uninhabitable region. They depend for their very existence upon this household utensil. The lamp is the recognized property of the woman head of the family, and when she dies it is buried with her.

A Whale Worth $15,000.

A full-grown bowhead whale is today worth $15,000 merely for the whalebone it carries in its mouth.

This is the species that furnishes the bulk of the commercial supply of whalebone, which is now worth $7.50 a pound. It is a denizen of Arctic seas.

The bowhead, like other whalebone whales, has no teeth. Instead its jaws are furnished with a series of long, tapering slabs of a horny subastance fringed with hair. Of these slabs, which are the whalebone of commerce, there may be as many as 600.

The biggest of them are ten or twelve feet long and they are inserted in the gum of the upper jaw, from which they hang. They serve as a sieve to strain out the whale's food. Swimming along, it takes huge mouthfuls of squids and other pelagic small fry. Then the huge trap is closed and, the slabs entering and fitting into grooves in the lower jaw, the water is expelled.

A Tout.

A benevolent old lady in one of the streets which still retain the red-brick houses of old-time Toronto looked out of her parlor window the other day and saw a man walking along the sidewalk, apparently in great dejection. There was something so pathetic and appealing in his manner that she took a dollar bill, put it in an envelope, and wrote on the envelope, "Never Say Die!" She slipped out of the house in the most casual manner and handed the envelope to the man as they passed. Next day the melancholy man called at her house and presented her with $10. "It's funny," he said; "you're the only one that backed that horse called Never Say Die."

Willing to Oblige.

Magistrate (to talkative prisoner)—Now, what have you got to say?

Prisoner—I've got a good deal to say, guv'nor, if you'll only give me time to say it.

Magistrate—Certainly, six months.

KILLING THE WALRUS.

Will This Mammal Follow the Buffalo to Oblivion?

The killing off of the walrus had far more than anything else to do with the peril of starvation which menaced the very existence of the Eskimos only a few years ago. Reindeer, imported from Siberia, have saved them, but to them the loss of the gigantic marine mammal is a really dreadful misfortune.

The walrus is one of the most useful creatures provided by a bountiful providence for the benefit of mankind, and since time immemorial it has been the main dependence of the Eskimos.

There are to-day comparatively few walrus left alive, and the prospect is that before long this valuable species will be virtually exterminated. Persistent slaughter has reduced its numbers to such a point that there is no longer much profit in hunting it for commercial purposes—wherein lies the only hope for its survival.

Hunters seek the beast for its tusks, which are of very fine ivory; for its hide, which makes first-rate leather, and even for its whiskers, which furnish picks for opium pipes. To the Eskimo it is (or was) food, clothing, house, utensils (from bones and tusks) and most other necessaries of life.

More than half a century ago the whalers, responding to a commercial demand for ivory, turned their attention to the walrus and proceeded to wipe them out systematically. Sometimes as many as 2,000 of the animals were slaughtered on a single cake of ice merely for their tusks. Thus to-day a walrus is hardly to be found in waters where the creatures used to be so numerous that their bellowings were heard above the roar of the waves and the grinding of the ice floes.

The poor animals had no chance at all. Usually the method adopted was to approach a herd of walrus on the ice, and after picking off the most alert bulls from a safe distance with rifles, slaughter the rest at leisure.

A Pearl Diver.

He was just out of the army. His thoughts were on the future. His old clerking job had no appeal for him. He wanted no more prosaic counter-jumping. The war had given him a new point of view. His new work must be in the great outdoors and touched with romance and adventure.

Pondering his problem as he walked the street, his eyes fell upon a building, the front of which was covered with placards. It was an employment agency. He glanced with casual interest over the assortment of odd jobs offered. He thrilled with sudden excitement as he encountered a sign which read:

Wanted—Three pearl divers; $15 and board.

There was the job for him. He immediately thought of the romance of the South Seas, of diving into crystal ocean depths and bringing up lustrous pearls destined to gleam on the ivory throats of beautiful women in the palaces of the rich and noble.

"I'd like to try one of those pearl diving jobs," he sputtered.

"Have you had any experience as a pearl diver?" asked the agent.

"Not exactly, but I'm a darned good swimmer."

"What are you trying to do, kid somebody?"

"No, that's a fact. I'm a good diver, too. I've held my breath under water 45 seconds. Where is this pearl diving job. Samoa or the coast of Ceyon?"

"It's down King street, in a restaurant. A 'pearl diver,' silly, is slang for 'dishwasher.'"

The war veteran in quest of romance fled.

British Supremacy.

F. W. Wile, formerly Berlin correspondent of the London Daily Mail, addressed the Halifax Rotary Club recently. He said he was preaching the doctrine of an Anglo-Saxon entente, and he did it strongly, but in the course of his speech he alienated the regard of two British seamen who were in the company, by saying that the financial supremacy was passing from London to New York, and that the supremacy of Great Britain in the merchant marine was moving in the same direction. The captain of the British steamer Wabana, cried out, 'no," to the first assertion, and to the second he shouted "not on your life"; the chief officer of the Sachem doing the same thing. The crowd then took up the protest in regard to the shipping and there were cries of "no, no," from all over the dining room, more than half the company joining in the protest. Mr. Wile did not persist in his assertion, but turned it off with a laugh by saying that the objectors to what he had stated must have "inside information."

The Pond Skater.

Insects that walk on the water by means of pneumatic floats are the familiar spider and the pond skater. The pond skater really walks on pneumatic floats. There are tiny hairs on the feet of this insect, so fine that they cannot be seen, that are arranged to collect air. The amount collected in and about these hairs is sufficient to allow the insects to walk or float on the surface of the water. As each foot is put down it forms a cuplike depression, or tiny pit, in the water. The foot does not sink because the air bubble that has been formed is too light to let it. A fine covering of hair protects the water spider, too, and even if it is submerged in the water it is never really wet; the hair keeps a layer of air between its body and the water. It looks like a white pearl when below the surface.

The re[illegible]ort of the city assessment department shows a falling off of 124 in Galt's population, which is given as 12,434. It is felt that soldiers returning more than make this up. The assessment now reaches $10,805,612, an increase of $57,701. There is a slight decrease on income assessed.

"We shall get through it all right," she declared. "Where shall we go? We might go back to the hotel where we stayed the first night, mightn't we? We paid there."

"I thought of that," he replied; "but it was rather dear, wasn't it? We had better spend as little as possible; there are our passages and we can't arrive in London with nothing. I'm afraid we shan't be able to get your ring out in any case."

"That can't be helped," she said; "I'm sorrier about your watch and chain. A man is so lost without a watch. Saturday, of this week will be micareme, won't it? We shall celebrate it, nicely......Oh! She sat upright and stared at him with frightened eyes. "Humphrey—nurse!"

His jaw dropped, and he looked back at her blankly.

"I'd forgotten her," he said.

"To see our luggage detained—it could only mean the one thing. Humphrey, what would she think? What ever can we do? She mustn't, mustn't know; I should die of shame."

"No," he said; "she mustn't know, that's certain. Good Lord! what an infernal complication at the last minute! I don't know what's to be done, I'm sure. Take the child into her and let us consider."

He filled a pipe and puffed furiously until Cynthia came back.

"Couldn't we" he suggested—"couldn't we say, as we're on the point of going home, that we don't think it's worth while carting the heavy trunks to another place for a week? Madame Garin has "kindly allowed us to leave them here in the meantime," Eh?"

Cynthia mused.

"Then what are we going to another place ourselves for?" she said.

"Yes," said Kent; "that won't do. Hang the young woman! she's a perfect bugbear to us; we're all the time struggling to live up to the teapot. I wish to heaven we could rid of her altogether!"

"That," answered the girl, after a pause—"that is the only thing we can do. We must send her away, and I'll take baby."

"You? A nice job for you! You could never go down to a meal; and travelling too—imagine it!"

"I can do it; I'd like it. Anything, anything rather than she should see us turned out and our luggage seized. That would be too awful! Yes, we must get her away, Humphrey. We must get here away before we leave here. Whatever happens afterwards is our own affair. She'll be gone and now nothing about it."

"That's very good," he said thoughtfully. "But there'll be her wages and her passage back. Great scot! and another month's wages because we don't give her proper notice! How much would it come to? I've got two francs fifty, and I've pawned my match-box I'm afraid we must think of something else."

"We could send her second-class on the boat as well. Yes, certainly second class. What does that cost? Have you got the paper you had? Look for it do; it used to be in your bag."

Kent searched and found it. He felt also that their lot would be comparatively a bed of roses if they were spared the astonished inquiries of the nurse.

"Second-class tickets are twenty-five and sevenpence," he announced, "and two months' wages are four pounds. Say five pounds ten. Well, my dear, I might as well try to raise a million.

He blew clouds and waited for an inspiration while she walked about the room with her hands behind her.

"If we could get it," she remarked, breaking a heavy silence, "I don't know what reason we could give for pacing her off so suddenly. It would look rather a curious proceeding, wouldn't it?"

"We could say," said Kent, "that we have decided to live in Paris permanently. She'd want to go then."

"Yes," said Cynthia, "we could say that. But why in such a gasping hurry?"

"Yes it would be rather a rush, it's a fact. Well, I'll tell you. We are going on a visit to some friends in the country, and they haven't room for another nurse. Mr. Harris's nurse will do all that's needed while we're there ......but five pounds ten! I can see Beaufort and make the attempt: but the man hasn't got it till the draft comes. You can't get blood out of a stone."

"Let him go and pawn his match-box, then, and his watch and chain, and his engagement-ring. He must find it for you. Humphrey, tell him you must have it. Say—it's a matter of life or death. Think of what we've gone through already, trembling in case she suspected what a state we were in. The blessed relief it will be to be alone and have no pretences to make! I shall feel newborn......

"I'll see him to-day," said Kent, catching her enthusiasm. "He's often in a place in the Rue Saint-Honore about four o'clock. What time is it now? Go in and ask her; she's the only one among us with a watch. Tell her mine has stopped—unless it has stopped too often."

"Yours is 'being cleaned.'" She disappeared for a second and returned to say it was half-past three. "Hurry and you may catch him now," she continued; "and—and, Humphrey, be very firm about it, won't you? If he hasn't got it, make him give you a definite promise when you shall have it. To-day's Tuesday—say you must have it by Thursday, at the latest. And come back and tell me the results as quickly as you can. Wait; here's a kiss for luck."

Kent kissed her warmly—she had never before seemed to him so companionable, such 'a good fellow,' as she did in this dilemma—and picking up his hat and cane, he ran down the stairs and made his way to the buffet in the Rue Saint-Hodore at his best pace.

Beaufort was not to be seen in the bar when be pushed back the door nor was he in the inner room, but upon inquiring at the counter, Humphrey learnt that a gentleman there was now waiting for 'Billy' who had made an appointment with him for a quarter to four. This was very lucky, and Kent took a seat on the divan and ordered a bock. Rolling a cigarette he debated how he could put the matter strongly enough. He had expended so much eloquence of late without driving any benefit from the interviews that he did not feel very hopeful of the upshot However, he was resolved that he would not fail for any lack of endeavor and after Beaufort came in, a little before five, he sat watching him wearily until the other man took his leave.

WINTER IN ALGONQUIN PARK

As a winter panacea for coughs and colds Algonquin Park cannot be equalled. Two thousand feet above the sea it is always dry and cold. Days spent in snow-shoe tramps, tobogganing or ski-ing and in skating, together with evenings spent in social converse around the cosy warmth of an old fashioned log fire; these slip away unnoticed but those who have once experienced them return to their avocations with renewed energies. The "Highland Inn" owned and operated by the Grand Trunk Railway offers comfortable accommodation at reasonable rates. For all particulars apply to N. T. Music and Drama

MARY PICKFORD AND VIVIAN MARTIN

There is nothing quite so fascinating as a search for buried treasure, whether in a story book, on the screen or in real life and "Captain Kidd, Jr.," Mary Pickford's splendid screen vehicle which is being shown on the double feature bill at the Palace tonight is builded around a buried treasure. But it really isn't the kind of treasure one would expect to find after digging for days. Yet it is treasure in its way and the great army of Pickford enthusiasts will extract a great deal of joy out of this charming photoplay. Vivian Martin appears on the same program in a splendid five-act offering the "Trouble Buster" and some splendid comedies, also the 12th chapter of the whirlwind serial "Perils of Thundel Mountain" are also being shown on the same program.

THRILLS, LAUGHS, TEARS IN "MICKEY"

Everyone knows her—she is fast becoming a household word. She is on the lips of the whole world. You will be singing, dancing and playing "Mickey." Powerful, smashing, gripping, that's Mickey. A great triumph of the screen, thrill upon thrill in these suspense incidents is just a little better than the last; climaxes that fairly bring you to your feet with sheer enthusiasm. You'll laugh, you'll cry; not a dull moment in the entire production. You will forget al lyour business worries and troubles as she carries you through her wild and lovable career. "Mickey" will be shown at Griffin's next Monday to Wednesday, with a special bargain matinee daily.

"SAMSON OF SCREEN"

William Farnum, known as the "Samson of the Screen" will be seen in his latest De Luxe production, "Wolves of the Night," said to be the most powerfully dramatic picture in which this great star has been seen. The story is of a mining engineer who having sought in vain for copper ore in his land in the northwest, has converted it into a sheep ranch. Adjoining is a mining plant in full operation owned by three men who covet his property. The hero, Bruce Andrews, portrayed by Mr. Farnum, is sent to Chile to investigate some mines. While there he is imprisoned in a mine through an explosion, and news is conveyed to his wife that he has been killed. He escapes after days, but is crazed by his sufferings. The document of the story, according to report is one of the most dramatic ever seen on the screen. Five other selected comedy and topicals are also being exhibited on the same program.

FROM MINE WORKER TO MINE OWNER

CARDIFF, Wales, Nov. 19—By a sudden turn of fortunes' wheel George Morgan, working in a colliery in the Rhondda Valley, is now suddenly the owner of a steam coal seam having an estimated yield of 20,000,000 tons. He is a man of 58 years, living in humble circumstances.

When the correspondent saw him he explained that he was born at Lane End, in the Forest of Dean, a mile out of Coleford. His family had occupied common land in the district for generations past. About forty years ago he and five others pegged out a claim to certain land. Morgan has outlived a rival claimant and is the sole surviving owner.

The Government has at last acknowledged his claim and forwarded him title deeds with the benefit of all mineral rights and turnout. The only stipulation as to royalties is that he pay four cents a ton on all coal worked. The land forms part of the Tenchard seam, which varies in thickness from three to seventeen feet.

TO SEEKERS OF HEALTH

While it is true that the Chiropractic idea is comparatively new, the work is spreading rapidly, due alone to the real merit in it. So phenomenal has been the progress of the science, that prominent health students have been compelled to look carefully into it and make known the results of their findings. Among such men of note is Dr. Alfred Walton, of Philadelphia, late professor of medicine at Harvard University, who after studying the question of the spinal column in relation to disease made the following statement publicly:

"Untold millions of human beings have suffered al ltheir lives and died in pain, the cause of which having never been understood. Thre are at present other millions seeking relief which can only be met by removing pressure of nerves responsible for their trouble and this the Chiropractors are constantly doing." CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Nov. 18.—With over 700 cattle on sale yesterday at the Union Yards, the market was very active, the demand was good for all classes, and prices generally higher. The biggest advance in prices was shown on the good cattle, that is, the heavyweight, finished steers and the good to choice finished steers and heifers.

Taken all round, and in view of the big runs of inferior cattle we have been getting the market has stood up remarkably well, and only indicates in some degree the great outlets and immense capacities of the local packing plants. While a certain number of cattle were left over yesterday, there was a pretty fair clean-up.

With a run of 7916 sheep and lambs, the market for lambs was steady to strong with last week's prices, the bulk of the sales going at around 13½c to 13¾c, with extra choice lambs at 14c, and a trifle better. Sheep held steady, the best sheep selling at from 5¾c to 8c; heavy sheep, 7c to 7¾c.

Choice veal calves sold up around from 17½c to 19c; medium calves, 14c to 16½c, and grassers and common at 5½c to 7c per lb.

The hog market held steady at last week's quotations, but for today's loading the buyers for the local plants are planning a sharp decline, at 15½c f.o.b., 16¾c fed and watered, and 17c weighed off cars.

CHICAGO LIVE STOCK.

Chicago, Nov. 17.—Hogs, receipts 34,000; active, 25c to 35c higher; to $14.85; bulk, $14.40 to $14.80; heavy, $14.25 to $14.80; medium, $14.40 to $14.85; light, $14.40 to $14.80; light lights, $14.35 to $14.75; heavy packing sows, smooth, $13.75 to $14.25; packing sows, rough, $13.50 to $13.85; pigs, $14.25 to $15.

Cattle, receipts 34,000; weak; beef steers, medium and heavyweight, choice and prime, $18.40 to $20.50; medium and good, $11.25 to $18.40; common, $8.75 to $11.25; lightweight, good and choice, $14.75 to $20; common and medium, $8 to $14.75; butcher cattle, heifers, $6.85 to $15; cows, $6.75 to $13.50; canners and cutters $5.75 to $6.75; veal calves, $18 to $19. Stocker steers, $6.25 to $10.25; western range steers, $7.75 to $15.50; cows and heifers, $6.50 to $13.

Sheep, receipts 37,000; mostly 25c lower; top, $14.75; lambs, $12.25 to $14.85; culls and common, $8.50 to $12; ewes, medium, good and choice, $6.85 to $8.35; culls and common, $3 to $6.75; breeding, $6.50 to $11.75.

EAST BUFFALO LIVE STOCK.

East Buffalo, N.Y., Nov. 17.—Cattle, receipts 6,700; heavy, 25c lower; others strong. Prime steers, $16 to $16.75; shipping steers, $15.50 to $16; butchers, $10 to $15; yearlings, $14 to $15.50; heifers, $6 to $11.50; cows, $4.50 to $10.50, bulls, $6 to $11; stockers and feeders $6 to $10.25; fresh cows and springers, $35 to $170.

Calves, receipts 1,700; 50c higher; $5 to $20.50.

Hogs, receipts 15,200; steady to 10c higher; heavy, $15 to $15.15; mixed and yorkers, $15 to $15.10; light do and pigs, $15 to $15.25; roughs, $13 to $13.25; stags, $8 to $11.

PLANS FOR HART HOUSE

WILL INTRODUCE NEW ERA AT TORONTO UNIVERSITY.

Important New Buildings Have Just Been Opened Where Students Can Get Together and Acquire That Culture Which Can Only Be Found In Community Life and Which Is Quite Distinct From the Influences of Academic Teaching.

THE story of the University of Toronto is a part of the history of Upper Canada. In 1791 Sir John Simcoe before leaving England for the unbroken wilderness wrote to Sir Joseph Banks, the president of the Royal Society, suggesting that "a college of the higher class would be eminently useful in Upper Canada, and would give a tone of principles and manners that would be of infinite support to Government." The arms of Governor Simcoe with those of eight other famous founders of education in Ontario, appear grouped about the arms of the University of Toronto in the south window of the dining hall of Hart House, which was formally opened on November 12. Grouped with Sir John Simcoe are Sir Charles Bagot, Sir John Colborne, Sir Peregrine Maitland, the Earl of Elgin, Bishop Strachan, the Hon. Edward Blake, the Hon. Robert Baldwin, and Dr. Egerton Ryerson. The arms of the university are placed between those of Ryerson and Colborne, while the arms of John Strachan appear between those of Blake and Baldwin. The historical importance of the names selected and their grouping may well stimulate thought among future generations of students who will dine in this magnificent hall. What is really significant is that the new institution is to be connected in the minds of its founders with the history of the Canadian people and is to realize the ideals of the great statesman of the past.

Hart House is a gift from the Estate of Hart A. Massey to the University of Toronto. The original scheme was conceived in 1910, and was at first intended to be a building containing a Students' Union, a hall and a Y.M.C.A. This conception has since been extended in all directions, and the beautiful building presented to the university includes gymnasia of all kinds, one of the largest swimming pools on the continent, a dining hall which will seat about three hundred, a theatre to seat five hundred, a small chapel, a library, music room, billiard room, club and committee rooms of all kinds—in a word, accommodation for every form of student life and activity apart from the strictly academic work of the class-rooms. The opening of this wonderful building synchronizes happily with the termination of the war and with a new era in the history of the University of Toronto. It will be possible to give to the students returning from military life and to the younger generation who are coming up in so great numbers, a social and a communal life which has not hitherto existed at Toronto. The old era is ended when students drifted through college entirely unsupervised and exposed to the temptations of life in a large city, never coming in contact with their professors except in the class-room and learning little there except the matter required for examinations. Hart House is designed to bring students and staff together upon common ground; it teaches very definitely by the silent symbolism of its walls that life is more than learning and personality more precious than mind.

And so the whole university will gradually be compelled to alter its attitude towards the student. He is neither raw material in the commercial sense nor an employe as the employer understands the term, nor a private as the militarist uses that word, nor is he any longer a mere pupil or a child; he is a man and not yet a grown man, and the full duty of the professor will be performed only when in addition to forming the student's mind he binds him to himself as a friend. Life in the University of Toronto in the years before the war was often very barren and very desolate for many students who came up young and unformed and received unhappily more scorn than sympathy. Hart House has set itself a great and noble task.

One lingers longest in the Great Hall with its magnificent windows and soaring roof. A noble quotation from Milton's "Areopagitica" runs around the wainscot, singularly appropriate to the room and to the experiences of the recent war. Although the ends of the hall are adorned with the arms of various universities richly painted in heraldic colors on the panels of the wainscot, it is upon the severe effect of line that the beauty of the hall depends. The oak ceiling is to be left to weather to a natural color, unstained by paint. In the windows, however, there is much of imagination, for there have been inserted at irregular intervals quarrels of the greatest diversity of design and suggestion. Indeed, in every part of the building there is evidence of the most careful thought and personal supervision. The idea which was in the minds of the donors has been woven into the fabric of the whole. Infinite pains have been spent upon details, and as in the old Main Building the architect succeeded in expressing and making articulate a beautiful academic spirit, so in the domestic beauty of Tudor Gothic the very spirit which it is hoped will be fostered among the students.

With all the appliances of a luxurious club Hart House is not a club; it is a community to which the whole body of male students will belong.

Doctor Tells How to Detect Harmful Effects of Tobacco

Try These SIMPLE TESTS

New York.—Doctor Connor, formerly of Johns Hopkins Hospital, says: Many men who smoke, chew or snuff incessantly, and who are seemingly healthy, are suffering from progressive organic ailments. Thousands of them would never have been afflicted had it not been for the use of tobacco, and thousands would soon get well if they would only stop the use of tobacco. The chief habit-forming principle of tobacco is nicotine, a deadly poison, which when absorbed by the system slowly affects the nerves, membranes, tissues and vital organs of the body. The harmful effect of tobacco varies and depends on circumstances. One will be afflicted with general debility, others with catarrh of the throat, indigestion, constipation, extreme nervousness, sleeplessness, loss of memory, lack of will-power, mental confusion, etc. Others may suffer from heart disease, bronchial trouble, hardening of the arteries, tuberculosis, blindness, or even cancer or the common affliction known as tobacco heart. If you use tobacco in any form you can easily detect the harmful effects by making the following simple tests: Read aloud one full page from a book. If in the course of reading your voice becomes muffled, hoarse and indistinct, and you must frequently clear your throat, the chances are that your throat is affected by catarrh, and it may be the beginning of more serious trouble. Next, in the morning before taking your usual smoke walk up three flights of stairs at a regular pace, then stop. If you find that you are out of breath, your heart beat is forced, trembling or irregular, you may be a victim of functional or organic heart trouble. If you feel that you must smoke, chew or snuff to quiet your nerves you are a slave to the tobacco habit, and are positively poisoning yourself with the deadly drug, nicotine. In either case you have just two alternatives—keep on with the self-poisoning process, irrespective of the dangers, and suffer the consequences, or give up the habit and escape the dangers. You can overcome the craving and stop the habit in a very short time by using the following inexpensive formula: Go to any drug store and ask for Nicotol tablets, take one tablet after each meal, and in a comparatively short time you will have no desire for tobacco, the craving will have left you. With the nicotine poison out of your system your general health will quickly improve.

Note.—When asked about Nicotol tablets one of our leading druggists said: "It is truly a wonderful remedy for the tobacco habit; away ahead of anything we have ever sold before. We are authorized by the manufacturers to refund the money to every dissatisfied customer, and we would not permit the use of our name unless the remedy possessed unusual merit." Nicotol tablets are sold in this city under an iron-clad money-back guarantee by all up-to-date druggists. (1)

FIRST SNOW

The first real snow storm this season occurred last night and today. The children are delighted with the anticipation of a sleigh ride in the near future.

VICTIM OF A STROKE

Mrs. Philip eDnyes, residing on the Front of Sidney, was a few days ago the victim of a paraletic stroke and her condition is such that fears are entertained for her recovery.

BABY TAKEN ILL ON TRAIN

Mrs. Thomas and her eight month old daughter (colored) are in the Port Hope hospital, the baby having suffered from several severe convulsions while on the C. P. R. train enroute from Detroit to Montreal Monday morning.

NAME OMITTED

The names of Mr. and Mrs. W. H. Gilbert were yesterday omitted from the list of those who contributed flowers for the late Mr. George N. Bennett

PORKERS DECLINE IN PRICE

Live porkers this week declined in price over that paid a week ago. Last week the price paid was $16 25 and today $16 was the highest figure. At the latter price, Mr. D. Scott and son shipped a large number to Montreal.

QUIET IN POLICE CIRCLES

In police circles today everything was quiet. No arrests were made last night and there was no business today for the Police Magistrate.

VICTORY LOAN BALL

Many Belleville young people are planning to attend the Victory Loan Ball in the Armories at Picton on Tuesday evening, November 25th, under the auspices of the Women's Institute and Victory Loan Executive, the proceeds in aid of the Prince Edward County Hospital. Music will be supplied by a five piece orchestra dancing will commence at 8.30.

SHOOTING ACCIDENT

On Friday afternoon last while duck shooting at Rice Lake, in company with his father, Col. N. F. MacNachtan, and Rev. Mr. Bremmer, Ted MacNachtan, of Cobourg, accidentally discharged the gun he was carrying, the charge entering his arm tearing away the flesh and shattering the bone. Medical assistance was secured at Roseneath and on investigation it was feared that amputation would be necessary, but fortunately such was averted.

PASSED CENTURY MARK

The death occurred Saturday of Hope Township's oldest resident, Sarah Oughtred, who passed the century mark by over nine months. Deceased was born at Bewdley but has resided at Wesleyville nearly all her life. The old lady retained all her faculties up to the time of her death and was able to be about the house until two weeks ago.

AUTO PERFORMER FINED

Walter Green, of Trenton, who did the loop the loop act with his automobile on Port Hope Main street the other night appeared in court Monday morning and was fined ten dollars and costs for his pastime. Walter denied that he had been drinking and told the court that the steering gear of the car was out of order. Those who witnessed the exhibition were of the opinion that Green's own steering gear had altogether too much oil.—Port Hope Guide.

OUR HISTORICAL HERITAGE

In a lecture to Miss Templeton's class at St. Andrew's Church, Colonel W. N. Ponton, K.C., read from an Intelligencer of 1838 (with same motto as today as the headline) containing many interesting references to the Rebellion then quelled. The Kingston Standard's recent Anniversary edition contains much of interest to descendants of Bay of Quinte settlers. Col. Ponton produced among other old documents, a Patent of a Sidney farm, with the Great Seal, signed by Isaac Brock, President—just a few weeks before he was killed at Queenston Heights. The first Patents in Sidney and Thurlow are dated 1797—the first Patents of Town Lots in Belleville 1816. St. Thomas Church and St. Andrews Church and the Grammar School lands were granted about 100 years ago. Zwick's Island known to all Indians as Battle Island at the mouth of the Saganaski River was owned by the Morris family, decendants of the Mary Morris, who with her husband and Beverley Robinson and many others, were condemned to death by the Americans as U. E. Loyalists because they adhered to King George, his flag and his armies. The speaker renewed his protest against the 'demobilization' of Zwick's Island a great asset of the community being wasted despite pledges given. The two oldest stone houses are now, one on Dundas Street near P. M. Gillen's and the other on the Bay shore near the School for the Deaf and owned by Col. Ponton. The historic first brick house in Canada on Meyer Hill has disappeared. Trenton was in the old days known as The [illegible]. Letters from Scotland before the days of envelopes in 1833 were shown, postage via N. Y. 2s. 9d. The lecturer received a hearty vote of thanks.

HORSESHOES IN DEMAND

At the Canada Steel Co., plant, there is every indication of business expansion, it being impossible to supply the demand, in some of the branches of manufacture, particularly in the output of horseshoes.

GATHERING IN THE BOOZE

On Monday night and Tuesday morning, Inspectors Taber and Sykes of Brockville seized on G. T. R. express trains, 16 suitcases and 280 bottles of whiskey in transit from points in the province of Quebec to supply thirsty Ontario people. The liquors seized by the inspectors would retail in Ontario for a sum in the neighborhood of $1,500. No arrests were made.

BUSINESS BOOMING

Business as usual and also an unusual volume of business marks the plant of the Elliot Woodworking Co., which recently moved from Toronto to Belleville and is now located in the buildings known as the Burrel factory. The firm lost no time installing their machinery and report a large and increasing demand for their products.

IMPROVED STEERING WHEEL

In connection with the new industry the Wood Mfg. Co., which will shortly begin the manufacture of high pressure valves, a new department will be added the patent rights for and improved steering wheel for automobiles having been secured. This will mean a larger pay roll and it is important that no obstacles should be permitted to stand in the way of this industry being located in Belleville.

INDUSTRY HELD UP

Directors of the Wood Mfg. Co., inspected the building known as "the Cannery" on Pinnacle street south, which had been optioned for the new high pressure valve industry. In the absence of sewer connections the directors decided that the building would be unsanitary and unsuitable with so many men employed and would not even comply with the Factory Act. Under the circumstances the directors refuse to consider the property and have stopped shipment of $100,000 worth of machinery. There is no doubt but that the City Council will get busy at once and assure the company of necessary sewer conditions.

CALLED BY DEATH

MRS. HELEN GARRETT

As the result of an attack of pneaumonia, Mrs. Helen Garrett, widow of the late Mr. James Garrett, passed away Monday night at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Wellington Fletcher of Roslin. Deceased was in her 82nd year and was born in Scotland. For many years she had resided in Hastings County. Mrs. Garrett was a member of the Presbyterian Church. She is survived by one son, James of Toronto and two daughters, Mrs. Thos. Leslie of Alberta and Mrs. Wellington Fletcher of Roslin.

MRS. HENRIETTA J. FENN

Yesterday, Mrs. Henrietta J. Fenn died at the residence of her daughter, Mrs. Robt. Empson of Thurlow Township. Deceased was the wife of the late Mr. James Fenn and was born in England 85 years ago, being a daughter of the late Mr. Edward Cox. Mrs Fenn was taken seriously ill a few days ago. Deceased had been for years a member of the Methodist Church and a lady much respected by all who knew her. Three sons and two daughters survive. The sons are Edward of this city, George and Walter of Saskatchewan. The daughters are Mrs Robert Empson of Thurlow and Mrs. Samuel Pope of Thurlow.

JOHN K. MOTT

Mr. John K. Mott, an aged citizen residing on Howard street, city, passed away at an early hour this morning. Deceased was 92 years of age and for many years was engaged in farming in this county. Of late years he had lived a retired life.

MADAME TOURGIS

On the 30th of October, 1919, there died at Wallington Surrey, England a lady who had many friends in Belleville, Madame Tourgis, who lived here a number of years and was highly esteemed. Her husband, Philip N. W. Tourgis was a local druggist and about seventeen years ago the family left Belleville and returned to their old home across the sea, Guernsey Island. Madame Tourgis was a talented musician and occupied the position of organist of the Reformed Episcopal Church while here. She died at the home of her daughter, Mrs. Conquest at "Stammer", Wallington, Surrey England in her 74th year. Mr. Tourgis while in Belleville was a member of the staff of the James H. Hambly Drug Store.

DONALD ROBERTSON.

The death of Donald Robertson, a highly respected and life-long resident of Tyendinaga Township, occurred at his home near Roslin on Friday, Nov. 7th. His demise was not expected as he had been sick a long time, but all his pain was borne with patience, and all that loving hands could was done to lighten his suffering. He was beloved by all who knew him, for he had a cheerful disposition and his home was always noted for kindness and hospitality, to strangers as well as friends. In 1870 he was united in marriage to Martha Elliott, who survives him, with five children: Simon Elliott, at home; Wm. D., of Shannonville; Mrs. Geo. Vance and Mrs. James Vance, of Roslin, and Mrs. Richard Cross of Bloomfield. One daughter, Mrs. John Elliott, predeceased him some sixteen years ago. He is also survived by ten grandchildren. The funeral, which was held Sunday afternoon at the Methodist Church, Roslin, was largely attended. The casket was covered with floral offerings. Rev. Mr. Merrick conducted the service. The procession followed the remains to Thomasburg, where interment took place in the family plot.

Captain Adams Was Taken By Surprise

Improvement So Remarkable After Taking Tanlac He Hardly Knows Himself.

"For one whole year before I took Tanlac there was hardly a day that I didn't have a severe headache and hardly a night that I got over an hour or two sleep," said S. S. Adams when he called at the Owl Drug Store in Vancouver, B.C. Mr. Adams served as Captain in the English Army and at the time he made this statement he was registered at the St. Frances Hotel, 600 Cordova, West, Vancouver. Mr. Adams further stated that he would leave for the Orient in a few days to accept a managing position with an English firm in Japan.

"For the past year," continued Mr. Adams, "I had gastritis in its very worst form, and gas would press against my heart and make it palpitate so bad that I would get dizzy and sometimes while I was eating I would get to feeling so dizzy that I would have to get up and leave the table without finishing. My appetite was almost completely gone and even the smell of food would sometimes turn my stomach, and I had to be extremely careful about what I ate so as not to suffer from gas. My nerves were shattered and the least little noise out of the ordinary would upset me completely.'

"I tried medicine after medicine but nothing would do me any good, and I was about to give up trying to find anything else when my attention was called to a testimonial in the paper about Tanlac. I decided to try it, and I want to say right here that it took me by surprise and that it is simply remarkable how I have been restored to health. I have a splendid appetite and no matter what or how much I eat I never suffer from stomach trouble in any form. My nerves are quiet and steady, and I can sleep all night long. I am not troubled with headaches or dizzy spells any longer, and I feel so different in every way that I hardly knew myself. I am leaving for the Orient in a few days and before I go I feel that it is my duty to make this statement and let the people know that Tanlac is a great thing and that it will do every bit of what they say it will."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto, by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Madoc by J. Will Vance, in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell, and in Thomasburg by J.

It Worked.

McMackerel was defending a man in a murder case, according to an exchange. The case looked hopeless; the prosecution was soon done. Then McMackerel rose. In a quiet conversational tone McMackerel began to talk to the jury. He just described in vivid colors a pretty country cottage hung with honeysuckle, a young wife preparing supper, and the rosy youngsters waiting at the gate to greet their father on his return home for the evening meal. Suddenly McMackerel stopped. He drew himself up to his full height. Then striking the table with his fist, he cried, in a voice that thrilled every bosom. "Gentlemen, you must send him back home to them!" A red-faced juror choked and blurted out: "By George, sir, we'll do it!" McMackerel without another word, sat down, and ten minutes later the jury brought in a verdict of acquittal. The prisoner wept as he shook his counsel's hand. "No other man on earth could have saved me as you have done, Mr. McMackerel," he sobbed. "I ain't got no wife or family, sir."

The Powder He Wanted.

Sir Arthur Currie is fond of telling the following story:

In the early days of the war, says Sir Arthur, an old farmer, living way back on the far Western prairies, was feeling rather out of sorts, and sent his eighteen-year-old son, George, to the nearest settlement, ten miles distant, for a seidlitz powder.

Arrived there, George promptly enlisted. He fought right through the war, was twice wounded, rose to commissioned rank, and returned recently to the farm, his breast covered with medals and decorations, including the V.C. and the French Croix de Guerre.

"Well, dad?" concluded the returned hero, after briefly and modestly recounting his exploits.

Then the old man replied:—

"George," he said, "wot have ye done with my seidlitz powder?"

What About It?

While polling one of the Toronto wards during the recent election campaign a canvasser, after enquiring for the man of the house and learning that he was not at home, asked the following question of the woman who had answered his knock: "What party does your husband belong to?" This was the reply: "I'm the party my husband belongs to. What about it?"

"Conscription has, maybe, saved the country," growled the Tommie, "but what I object to is the company it drives a man into. I'm a plumber by trade and an honest workman, yet I'm compelled to suffer the society of such professionals as a lawyer, a minister and an auctioneer." "Not a bad selection at that, Bill," remarked his friends. "Oh, maybe not in a way; but when the minister and the lawyer start an argument on Egyptian law in the middle of the night across half a dozen beds, what chance has even a plumber of stopping the gas leak?"

400 Men United For Belleville In One Common Cause

CAN ACCOMPLISH ANYTHING WITHIN REASON FOR BELLEVILLE, SAY SALDERMAN BONE, AND THIS WILL BE DEMONSTRATED IN BOARD OF TRADE MEMBERSHIP CAMPAIGN — BELLEVILLE BOOSTERS ARE ORGANIZING—BELLEVILLE BUILDERS ARE GETTING BUSY.

Arrangements are complete for the Community Conference to be held tonight in the City Hall. Alderman Bone, the chairman of the Executive Committee of the Reorganization and Expansion Campaign of the Board of Trade, will preside. Robert Crosby, the campaign director, will address the meeting, giving an outline of the proposed plan of reorganization and stating some of the problems which Belleville will be called on to meet in the next few years. There will also be short talks by some of the prominent local men who are interested in the present campaign to efficiently organize Belleville for 1925.

"Intensive Week."

This morning Jamieson Bone, chairman of the Executive Campaign Committee, announced that the week beginning December 1st would be known as "Intensive Week" and that it would be during this week that the citizens of the community would be approached for membership in the reorganized Board of Trade.

Four Hundred Members.

Mr. Bone also stated that the goal for membership in the new organization would be 400, and he added a phrase which will undoubtedly become a slogan during the campaign, that "400 men united in a common cause can accomplish anything within reason for Belleville."

Majors Get Busy.

Necessary machinery for soliciting citizens of Belleville is being quietly set up. Last night Col. E. D. O'Flynn, O. H. Scott and Wm. R. McCreary, who are to act as majors, met at Expansion Campaign Headquarters and selected a number of men to assist them in the campaign. Working during the Intensive Week there will be fifteen teams, composed of five men each. In this manner the task of covering Belleville will be so divided as to make a minimum of work for each man.

Citizens Should Turn Out.

Chairman Bone also stated that a little later in the week a more detailed statement of the proposed organization of teams would be announced. He also requested that prominence be given of the meeting tonight, as he felt that all citizens should be present, not only to hear the plans but to express views as to what they felt should be done to put Belleville on the map of Canada in the way she deserves.

Yesterday a banner appeared across the street at the corner of Front and Campbell Streets, bearing the inscription "Reorganization and Expansion Campaign—Belleville Board of Trade. Plan now—for Tomorrow." A hand on the sign indicated the Campaign Headquarters at 8 Campbell Street.

Necessity Of Coal Economy

OTTAWA, Nov. 20.—According to advices received here, only the utmost economy of bituminous coal reserves in Canada will enable the various industries dependent upon that coal to keep going all winter. Production of bituminous coal in the United States will not be normal for a month and perhaps longer, and many miners are refusing to return to work.

The bituminous coal received by Canada from April 1 to October 31 this year was 8,600,000 tons, only 70 per cent. of the amount received in the same period last year. More than that not a ton has come in since November 1. To supply needs in Western Canada from Regina east only 1,400,000 tons came in through the Great Lake terminals at Fort William from mines in the eastern United States as against 1,660,000 tons the previous year and 2,330,000 tons in 1917.

As soon as navigation closes this source of supply will be closed. The situation is made worse in that the Alberta fields only supplied half the usual output on account of labor troubles. In October the railroads carried 30 per cent. more than in the same period last year. If this is kept up the situation may be saved. In the eastern and western coal fields, miners are working steady as yet.

The Dominion Government will only permit exports to the United States in the same proportion as the United States lets bituminous enter central Canada. Ships will be allowed to bunker at Canadian ports to encourage the Dominion foreign trade.

United States Senate finally sidetracked peace treaty and adjourned till next month.

Campaign Is Coming To Ban The Cigaret

Report Will Be Made on Suggestion That "Smokes be Driven Out."

GUELPH, Nov. 20.—Intimation that the convention would be asked to prepare immediately for a big campaign to have for its aim the driving out of cigarets from the Province was made at the opening session of the forty-second annual convention of the Ontario W.C.T.U. at Norfolk Street Methodist Church today. Several of the speakers spoke of the evils of cigaret smoking, but the "fags" received a scathing denouncement from Mrs. Jennie Walters of Hamilton, head of the anti-narcotic department. She advocated an immediate campaign for legislation which will drive the cigarette out of the province.

The convention, which will last for four days, decided not to discuss Mrs. Walters' report until later. Delegates are present from all over the province, with Mrs. Hattie A. Stevens, president of the union, presiding.

Premier To Return To Ottawa Nov. 27

Will Confer With Admiral Jellicoe on Naval Defence.

OTTAWA, Nov. 20.—Sir Robert Borden will return to Ottawa to confer with Admiral Viscount Jellicoe, who will arrive here about Nov. 27. Admiral Jellicoe is engaged in the consideration of the measures which should be taken to co-ordinate the naval defence of the Empire. He will be met by the Prime Minister and practically the whole of the Government when he comes to take up Canada's part of the scheme of defence.

Bank Of Montreal In Excellent Shape

To Help Country Through Period of Unforseen Financial Problems.

MONTREAL, Nov. 20.—The advantages of Canadian banking have perhaps never been more strikingly shown than by the way Canadian banks quickly met the unprecedented situation arising out of the war and the manner in which they are now helping the country in the difficult period of reconstruction.

The annual statement of the Bank of Montreal for the fiscal year to October 31 is the first report to be issued for a full year since the armistice. On this account it contains many changes that indicate a gradual adjustment of special Government undertakings of the war period and a marked expansion in the general business of the country.

INCREASE IN DEPOSITORS

During the past few years there has evidently been a record increase in the number of depositors and business accounts in banks and there are many indications that this growth will within a short time result in the total business of the banks even passing the large totals touched during the war period.

Among the outstanding features of the statement now going forward to Bank of Montreal shareholders is the increase in current loans and discounts in Canada, and the continued large increase in the interest-bearing deposits. These would seem to indicate that the Canadian people are steadily adding to their savings. In the last six months of the year, the gain in savings deposits amounted to approximately $44,000,000.

IS IN EXCELLENT POSITION

An analysis of the general statement of assets and liabilities shows that the bank is in an excellent position to help the country through the period when the whole world has to meet so many unforeseen financial problems. With the adjustment of accounts following the war period there is of necessity a decrease in total assets as compared with a year ago, but a marked gain is reported as compared with the first six months of the present fiscal year. Total assets now stand at $545,304,809, as compared with $558,489,271,197 on April 30 last. As usual the bank has consistently maintained a very strong liquid position. Liquid assets amount to $337,980,858 and are equal to 67.99 per cent. of the liabilities to the public.

HOLDINGS HAVE INCREASED

In the liquid assets the principal accounts showing changes are Dominion notes, which now stand at $49,865,151 down from $68,531,236 a year ago, and call and short loans in Great Britain and the United States which now amount to $78,255,625, as against $97,029,549 at the end of last year. At the same time there has been an increase in the holdings of Dominion and Provincial Government securities to $63,984,255, as compared with $46,870,586 a year ago reflecting the assistance the bank has given the Government. The expansion of trade and commerce in the country is indicated by an increase in the total of loans and discounts, amounting to $164,182,581, up from $146,028,861 at the end of last year.

Since the close of the last fiscal year the bank has also completed the absorption of the Bank of British North America, without inconvenience to the public and both capital stock and rest account have been increased to $20,000,000 respectively, as compared with $16,000,000. The profit and loss account in turn reflects the larger business handled, the total profits for the year amounting to $3,314,227. The percentage earned on capital is 16.57 per cent.

Failed To Capture Vladivostock

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

VLADIVOSTOCK, Nov. 20.—Revolutionary forces who tried to seize control of this city have been defeated and their leader wounded and captured. The Government forces control the entire city and have occupied the railway station, the last revolutionary stronghold. The execution of prisoners has already started.

There was again heavy trading on the New York Exchange, but prices were falling all day until a slight rally occurred near the close.

TORONTO, Nov. 20.—John Putwain, a participant in the attempted bank robbery at Agincourt appeared before Sir William Mulock in the Assizes yesterday afternoon and pleaded guilty to a charge of shooting with intent to kill and of taking part in the attempted robbery of the Bank of Nova Scotia at Agincourt.

His plea was entered, and he will be sentenced on Friday.

In the meantime the authorities are looking for a suitable place of confinement. The prisoner is blind, and his physical condition requires special attention.

Whiskey Deluge In British Isles

Government Releases 115 Million Gallons From Restriction.

LONDON, Nov. 20—One hundred and fifteen million gallons of whiskey, besides a quantity of other spirits in bond in Great Britain, were released from war-time restrictions on Wednesday and may be distributed to all comers who can persuade the dealers to sell.

The announcement of the removal of the restrictions, which was made without warning in the House of Commons by the Food Controller, Tuesday, came as a surprise to the members, who greeted it with loud cheers.

The liquor trade was equally surprised, and was beseiged by the well-to-do among the public as soon as the unexpected news spread. Many others of from fifty to a hundred dozens were placed immediately in addition to numerous commissions for smaller quantities.

Although it is figured that enough spirits has been thus freed to supply every man woman and child in the country with 36 bottles apiece, it is doubtful if the public will find it easy at present to increase consumption to a great extent. The Government maintains control of the maximum price, which, for whiskey is ten shillings and six pence per bottle, and it is not believed that the dealers will sell much below that figure as the existing high duty will remain.

Ontario Election Accounts Passed

TORONTO, Nov. 20—The Ontario cabinet ministers held their third council yesterday afternoon and "only routine business transacted." was again the report of Premier Drury at the end of the two-hour session.

Much of the routine matter was of importance to judges and others who are looking forward to being paid for work done in connection with the provincial elections and the referendum.

A large number of orders-in-council, which were necessary before payments could be made, were passed. Considerably over a million dollars is involved and the accounts are numerous. Many complaints have been made regarding non-payment, but the officials concerned declare that the delay was unavoidable. With the holding of the elections and the referendum on the same day a new situation, was of course, created. Then there was the change of government to contend with, so that those to whom money is due may really be fortunate in that the new administration has so quickly taken the matter up.

PETERBORO P. M. DEAD

James Edgar, postmaster of Peterboro, died yesterday morning at his late residence there. Before his appointment as postmaster eight years ago, Mr. Edgar was an alderman of Peterboro for two years. He was born in Ireland fifty years ago, and he came to Canada when a young boy. In religion he was an Anglican, being a prominent member of All Saints Anglican church, Peterboro, where he served for some time in the capacity of rector's warden and also people's warden. He was a staunch Conservative and had lived in Peterboro about 20 years. Besides his widow, he is survived by two brothers, Ald. John Edgar of Peterboro, and Joseph Edgar of Sundridge, Muskoka District.

U.S. Senate Adjourns Without Ratifying Treaty

WHAT WILL PRESIDENT DO?—HIS THE NEXT MOVE—CONGRESS MEETS AGAIN DEC. 1 AND NO FURTHER MOVE MAY BE MADE UNTIL THEN.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—The fate of the treaty of peace with Germany and the League of Nations, so far as the United States is concerned, is today again in the hands of President Wilson. Failure yesterday and last night of all efforts to have the treaty ratified in some form by the Senate brought the situation just where it was six months ago when the pact was submitted to the Upper House of Congress, and technicaly peace is no nearer than it was on Armistice Day, more than a year ago. With the much-debated and much contested document thrust back upon him, the next move is up to the President, and today there was no intimation what course he would pursue. In any event it was not believed there would be any development until Congress re-convenes on December 1st in regular session.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20.—After a desperate Parliamentary struggle the United States Senate, just before 10 o'clock last night, by a vote of 51 to 41 rejected the Treaty of Peace with Germany by defeating the Lodge resolution with the drastic reservation of the Foreign Relations Committee majority.

The defeat of the treaty was brought about by Administration Democrats aided by eight of the irreconcilables among the Republicans. Earlier in the night, the Senate, by a vote of 55 to 39, had defeated the Lodge resolution. It came up again, however, after various Parliamentary moves, during which the Administration forces endeavored vainly to substitute resolutions embracing reservations of their own.

Immediately after the last vote, which spelt the doom of the treaty so far as this session of Congress is concerned, Senator Lodge, the majority leader, offered a concurrent resolution declaring a state of peace to exist between Germany and the United States this being done so as to pave the way for an independent treaty with Germany.

Inasmuch as the House had adjourned sine die, the Lodge resolution had to go over until the next session of this Congress which meets December 1. The Senate after disposing of the treaty last night, also adjourned sine die.

Last Minute Telegraph Briefs

Canadian Press, Limited.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Rates of foreign exchange again dropped to a new low level in the local market today. The pound sterling brought only $3.99½, which is 1¼ cents below yesterday's lowest quotation: franc checks were quoted at 9.79 for the dollar, five centimes below yesterday's prices.

Stock Market Stronger.

NEW YORK, Nov. 20.—Regardless of greater weakness of foreign exchange, which was also ascribed to the defeat of the peace treaty and further unfavorable industrial conditions arising from the coal situation, the market soon strengthened in all quarters. Rails showed advances of 1 to 13 points over yesterday's close. U. S. Steel and affiliated issues also recovered easily. Call loans opened at ten per cent., the lowest initial rate of the week.

New York, Nov. 20.—Hope that an agreement for the ratification of the peace treaty will finally be reached among the warring Senate factions, is expressed by most of the newspapers here in commenting editorially upon the abrupt adjournment of the United States Senate.

IS APPOINTED JAILER.

Kingston, Nov. 20.—Joseph Hawkey, late C.E.F., many years member of the County Council, and ex-reeve of the Township of Kingston, is understood to have been appointed jailer, succeeding Lieut. Topping, who resigned. He served overseas with the 21st Battalion.

Falls Out Of Windo w Is Instantly Killed

MONTREAL, Nov. 20.—Charles L. Schainwald of New York, sixty-five years of age, Canadian representative of the Standard Paint & Oil Company, fell from the window of his suite in the Ritz-Carlton Hotel here at noon today, at a height of eight stories from the ground, struck on a projection on the second story and dashed out his brains, being instantly killed. Mr. Schainwald, who was a sufferer from asthma, is supposed to have opened the window to get air when he was attacked with a fit of coughing, overbalanced himself and fell through the window.

Mr. Schainwald, who is said to have been a well-known philanthropist, had occupied the suite at the Ritz for the past three of four years.

The body was taken to an undertaker's and an inquest will be held.

FIREBUG AT BATTERSEA

Another fire occurred at Battersea on Monday night. A firebug is blamed for this and three other fires which have occurred since last Wednesday and the neighborhood is very much stirred over the affair, and are asking that an investigation be made. About ten o'clock on Monday night the barn of Bethuel Clark was totally destroyed and it is stated that there was evidence of the barn having been set on fire in two places. Mr. Clark and his wife have been living in Renfrew for some time and the property has not been occupied. This makes three barns and one house which have been destroyed inside of six days. The home of Mrs. Isaac Lake was destroyed Sunday night on Friday night William Holder's barn was burned and on Wednesday night the barn of William Anglin was destroyed.

Wedding Bells

BOLTON—ALLISON.

"Charleshurst," Mr. and Mrs. C. B. Allison's fine old home in Picton, was the scene of a very pretty wedding on Monday, when their daughter, Geraldine, was married to Joseph Samuel Bolton, son of Mr. and Mrs. Herbert F. Bolton of Sophiasburg, the Rev. Alfred Brown officiating. The wedding was particularly interesting, as the bride and groom are representatives of the county's good U. E. Loyalist stock. The bride, who was given away by her father, wore a gown of white satin, with sleeves of silver lace, the square court train being encrusted with the silver lace also, and, like the skirt, hemmed up with pearls. A string of pearls was about her throat, and silver shoes and a veil of silk net completed a lovely tout ensemble. The matron of honor was Mrs. John Ferguson Tenney of New York, the bride's cousin, known to the musical world as Gena Branscombe, and her strikingly simple gown of pink satin was made on French lines, the soft folds of the material falling to a point at the right side, while the left side of the skirt was filled with pink Georgette. Silver lace, upon which were embroidered silk roses, filled the bodice where the folds of satin crossed over and also formed the sleeves, while from one shoulder fell a wisp of Georgette, widening as it swept towards the floor. The groomsman, Capt. Gerald Allison, M.C., is the bride's twin brother, and another interesting note in the wedding was the fact that the bride cut her wedding cake with the sword belonging to her grandfather, Capt. Crandall, of the old Prince Edward Militia. Miss Marjorie Forsyth of Toronto, played the wedding marches, and the bride's cousin, Mrs. R. B. McKillop, of London, sang "I Love You," one of the songs written by the bride herself. After the ceremony Mrs. Allison received, wearing a handsome black gown and necklace of jet, and Mrs. Bolton was in beige satin with Georgette sleeves. Mr. and Mrs. Bolton left for New York, motoring to Belleville on the first part of their journey.

NOISY "COWBOY WEDDING."

New Zealand Couple Travelled 13,000 Miles to Be Married.

A couple were married not far from London the other day, who a few weeks previously had had a "flip" at Hendon together, says Answers. They enjoyed their first aerial trip so much that they booked the aviator to take them on their honeymoon then and there. The machine in which they departed on their wedding trip of two hundred miles was a limousine, and the cabin in which the happy pair were seated tandem fashion—the only drawback—was decorated with a bouquet of roses.

It was two thirty when the machine left the shadow of the church. Luggage was stored in the back of the machine, and the lady had a book to read, although it is not on record whether she read it or not. The machine arrived at Fowey at 7.30, stopping at Bournemouth and Plymouth en route. The actual flying time was two hours and thirty-five minutes.

A honeymoon down a coal pit sounds a bit weird and dark, but that, at least, was the first trip made by bride and bridegroom after the church ceremony. The bridegroom was a coal pit manager, and his new wife had never been down a coal pit or even seen one till the wedding day. At her own request they went from the church, donned suitable attire, stepped into the cage, and were taken to the bottom of the shaft, where they had a rousing reception from miners armed with pick and shovel.

At one of the Canadian camps there was a cowboy wedding lately, and enough cowboy gear — radiant shirts and neckwear, with the inevitable sheepskin "trews," not to mention the six-shooters — could be found to rig out an escorting band which would not have disgraced the Wild West. After the ceremony the cowboys, who were all suitably mounted on untamable buckskin mustangs and bronchos, gave vent to a fearsome yell, and wildly escorted the happy pair to the train, firing salvos all the way. It was said to be the noisiest wedding on record.

A thirteen-thousand mile honeymoon is a pretty long one, but a good many happy brides are having it now in returning to Australia with their colonial husbands. Yet this is not new. Before the war a couple, both hailing from Auckland, New Zealand, came to a little village church in Cumberland to be married. It was the church where the bride's parents had been married just twenty-five years before. The couple had come thirteen thousand miles to be married in that church, and they set off on their honeymoon back to Auckland.

Lord Reading is nothing if not original. His honeymoon was quite unique. He told his friends that after being called to the bar he was to be married and spend his honeymoon in Spain. That sounded extravagant for a budding barrister, probably not over-burdened with pocket money. But he was business-like even then, and it was found later that a certain firm of solicitors had given him as a wedding present a commission to take evidence in Madrid. So he took his wife with him, and combined business and pleasure.

A young professor of physical culture married a beautiful and athletic pupil of his in the suburbs of Paris. The couple appeared before the mayor in tennis costume, and after the ceremony the wedding party sat down to breakfast on the banks of the Seine. Hardly was the coffee finished than, on a given signal, the whole party retired, and reappeared in bathing costume. Fancy the hardihood of a swim after wedding cake! Later the couple started on a bicycle tour for a honeymoon.

A demobilized man had a honeymoon brain-wave the other week during the hot weather. He arranged to spend his honeymoon under canvas, just to let his new wife see how nice it was. They had a perfectly "dry" time, and the young wife thinks she would like to live under canvas always—instead of returning to a house where rooms need cleaning and windows washing. She says a tent saves labor. But, then, her honeymoon was in summer, and there is the winter to face. Her hubby said: "It's all right, my love, but stop till it snows!"

Land for Soldiers.

Portions of nine Indian reserves in the prairie provinces, comprising 68,000 acres, have been secured by the Soldier Settlement Board of Canada and will be made available for soldier settlement.

The land taken over is all of good agricultural quality and within easy reach of transportation facilities. As much of this land was bought en bloc a readjustment of prices will be necessary after subdivision, all the land in the various blocks not being of the same agricultural value. The necessary survey work and sub-division valuation are causing some delay. A special effort, however, is being made to have the land ready for disposal to soldier settlers as early as possible. The price paid to the Indians averaged from $10 to $20 an acre. The nine parcels are located as follows:

Big River Reserve, 980 acres, northwest of Prince Albert. Mistawasis Reserve, 16,548 acres, northwest of Prince Albert. Piapot's Reserve, 11,600 acres, and 14,730 acres north of Regina. Kakeswistahaw Reserve, 1,903 acres, northeast of Broadview, Sask. Cowessess Reserve, 320 acres, northeast of Broadview, Sask. Ochopawace Reserve, 18,240 acres, northeast of Broadview, Sask. Poorman's Reserve, 8,080 acres, Touchwood Hills, west of Yorkton, Sask. Bobtail Reserve, 6,620 acres, south of Edmonton.

How Much One Eats.

It is not easy to estimate the amount of food consumed by each person in a year, but one dietetic expert who kept a record of his meals during twelve months declares that he ate 180 loaves of bread, 180 pounds of meat, drank sixty-one gallons of milk, and ate no fewer than 300 eggs.

It is promised that Helen Keller, the famous blind and deaf woman, is to appear in the "movies."

RETURN OF "MICKEY"

When a song writer with an international reputation writes and dedicates a song to a motion picture production, he must indeed think well of the production, and then to find out his song has swept the country, that the sale and popularity of the song are phenomenal must be very gratifying. Bands playing it, all makes of phonograph records adopting it, soda fountains naming special ice cream concoctions and florists naming flowers on it proves that "Mickey" must be a great motion picture. "Mickey" has been enjoying record breaking attendances in all the large cities throughout the United States and Canada, since its previous exhibition in Belleville, especially the Grand Opera House in Toronto, a solid four months run, or 250 performances, a run which has never been known for a motion picture before. The Griffin management has again arranged to screen this super-production next Monday to Wednesday, matinee daily. Five other selected comedies and topicals will also be shown.

WHEN ONE MAN FIGHTS THREE

William Farnum puts one of the most dramatic and intense fights ever staged into the thrilling ending of his new photoplay, "Wolves of the Night" a fight into which Farnum throws himself with the agility of an athlete and child and fortune from devilish schemperate man resolved to win back wife, child and fortune from deilish schemers, he locks himself in an office, attacks three who attempt to coerce him with a pistol and there, in as stirring an encounter as has ever been picturized, baffles them. This fight which is just one of the many tense scenes in that compelling photoplay of love and finance, "Wolves of the Night" showing at Griffin's to-night to Saturday, matinee Saturday, is one more demonstration of the surprises Farnum has up his sleeve. It proves that Farnum popular, handsome, magnetic, though he is, is no mere matinee idol, but a man's man for all his charm and a man of power into the bargain. Five other selected comedies and dramas are also being exhibited on the same program.

Starting Something.

The household was comparatively quiet when the ten-year-old son looked up from the last page of a recent issue of the News and inquired of both parents sitting near: "What's funny about this here 'Abe Martin?' 'There's never anything t' eat in a home where th' wife is on an allowance.'" "The joke, my son," his father replied, "is that instead of spending the allowance for eats, the wife blows it in for clubs, clothes, candy and conventions." "No, son," said the mother, "the fact is that the allowance is not large enough to provide a hotel menu, though the men seem to think it is. And that is no joke, either."—Indianapolis News.

Bullet in Brain Twenty Years.

After living for 20 years with a bullet in his brain, Edgar Wilgus, an insurance broker of Trenton, N. J., was killed by a 5-foot fall on the granite steps of a New York hotel. The medical examiner, discovering the bullet in the man's brain, thought at first that he had been unaccountably shot, but learned by telephoning to his home how long he had carried the bullet in his head.

POTATOES UP TO $1.90.

Winnipeg, Nov. 20.—The wholesale price of potatoes in Winnipeg jumped to $1.90 per bushel yesterday. Wholesalers predict that before Christmas the $2.00 mark will be reached. A year ago the price was 85c. per bushel. The early frost in Manitoba and the West caught millions of bushels in the ground, and to this is attributed the big jump in prices.

To Start Campaign Against Smokers

SARNIA, Nov. 20.—Members of the W.C.T.U. announced that in all likelihood a campaign would shortly be inaugurated to wage war on tobacco and the selling of cigarettes to the fair sex, and coupled with this statement, officers of the Liberty League stated that they would come out into the open with renewed energy and battle the W.C.T.U. and its followers.

Women members of the W.C.T.U. claim that in Western Ontario smoking among women is increasing to an alarming extent, and that at the next meeting of the association it is likely a petition will be prepared to send to Ottawa asking that a law be passed to prohibit the selling of "smokes" to the fair sex.

The Liberty League members here are calling a general meeting, and the officers state that everything possible will be accomplished to frustrate the W.C.T.U. organization in its efforts to reform Ontario.

TEACH TEMPERANCE IN PUBLIC SCHOOLS

Guelph, Nov. 20.—One of the chief matters of importance which came before the Ontario Women's Christian Temperance Union Convention was the teaching of scientific temperance in the public schools of the Province. The question came up when the committee dealing with this presented its report and it is expected that when the Committee on Resolutions presents its report some definite line of action will be announced. It is certain that the new Ontario Government will be approached and the matter laid before the Minister of Education.

Mrs. Moore of Teeswater in making the press report called attention to the wonderful contributing factor the press had been assisting on the referendum "Just how wonderful it has been we cannot estimate, and the pity of it is we do not often try, for, like the blessing of fresh air and sunshine we take it as a matter of course and forget to even say an occasional thank you," said Mrs. Moore.

It may be laid down as a general rule that whenever anyone makes a ring-tailed simian of himself in public life he thinks the newspapers are subsidized.

WIVES NOT PROTECTED.

Bigamy is Increasing Rapidly in Great Britain.

Increase in bigamous marriages throughout the United Kingdom, much more pronounced since the end of the war, is causing grave concern and there is a growing disposition to treat bigamy as a venial offence.

Sir Bernard Mallet, the registrar general, is credited with the statement that English marriage laws afford less security against bigamy than the laws of almost any other civilized state. His department has prepared proposals for their amendment, but nothing has been done to carry them into effect. A new act of Parliament is necessary, and Sir Bernard suggests as a preliminary that some plan be outlined by which accurate information concerning the principals in a proposed marriage may be obtained by the competent authorities before the ceremony can be performed.

For marriage by license in England it is required that both parties make solemn declaration that they know of no impediment to this union, that they have resided for fifteen days in the district and, if they are minors, the consent of guardian or parents has been obtained. But no solemn declaration is required for such material particulars as name, condition as to marriage, age, rank and residence.

Shakespeare's Will.

We are indebted to an English publication for a copy of the last will and testament of the late William Shakespeare, says the Thrift Magazine. In the course of this document, we observe the following sentence: "I gyve onto my wief my second best bed with the furniture."

We have no desire to find fault with the successful poet and dramatist of Stratford for this apparent discrimination against the Widow Shakespeare. What disposition he made of his first best bed is a matter that is not revealed by the copy of the will of the versatile author whose last testament is reported in the columns of our alert London contemporary. However, we don't think Mr. S. showed just the right spirit in gyveing onto his wief his second best bed. O, why did he not gyve unto her his first bed, or his tee potte or his punche bole with the gilt butter-flyes, or his favorytte wigge, or his safety razor, or fountain penne, or bicycle—anything, in fact, but his second best bed.

No doubt Mr. Shakespeare had gone to bed with his boots on many a Saturday night in that very second best bed and yet, hallowed as it was by such memories, one cannot but feel that the widow was treated unfairly. Perhaps Will's folks influenced him. As a co-writer we have only the highest regard and esteem for him. But we don't think he acted right about friend wief.

London-Paris Air "Express."

Those who think there is any pause in the great work of conquering the air simply because transoceanic flights and projected flights no longer supply columns of "copy" to the daily papers are greatly mistaken. With a celerity and a silence wholly appropriate, the airplane and the airships are steadily making good their position in the great transportation service of the world. There is, for instance, a decided air of "settlement," in the recent almost routine account which appeared in the London Times of the air service between London and Paris. Three flying "expresses" instead of the normal two, declared the Times, were required on a certain day to deal with the loads presented for despatch by the London-Paris air service. One carrying two passengers and a quantity of parcels left London at 12.20 p.m. and reached Paris at 2.55 p.m. From Paris the ordinary scheduled machine left at 12.30 p.m. and a relief machine at 12.40 p.m., each carrying passengers and parcels—the latter including an urgent consignment of millinery from a Paris costumier to a leading West End shop. Both these "expresses" ran through to time, one landing at Hounslow at 3.10 p.m. and the other at 3.20 p.m. London-Paris air service has already, it would seem, almost reached the point where it is taken for granted.

The Government of Nauru.

Nauru has declared overwhelmingly by ballot for British rule. The importance of the decision does not rest on the size of this former German possession—it is about six miles long by two and a half miles wide. Nor is the population so dense as to deserve attention, there being 1,250 Nauruans and 300 Kanakas. Nauru, moreover, does not offer climatic attractions, as it is a few degrees south of the equator and is subject to terrific heat. The secret of Nauru is its immense deposits of phosphates which lie upon a rough coral floor, and are so absorbant that ten inches of rain will vanish almost instantly, making the distillation of sea water necessary. Fortunately for Nauru's hopes, the Peace Conference has decided that Britain, Australia and New Zealand shall administer it by mandate.

Canadian Writer Honored.

His Majesty the King has graciously accepted a copy of "The Maple Leaf's Red Cross," by Mary MacLeod Moore. Their Majesties have shown a keen interest in the work of the society and are well posted in its activities. On one occasion when visiting a large military hospital the Queen spoke to a Canadian soldier and asked if he had a Red Cross visitor, as she knew that through the Information Bureau, under Lady Drummond, all sick and wounded soldiers were visited and cared for. The King, it will be remembered, lately co-operated with the Red Cross in giving Bushey Lodge and Hospital for the use of the ailing children of London.

King George has traveled more widely than any other king who ever occupied the British throne.

Plumb Plan and the Author

GLENN E. PLUMB has become famous in a fortnight. A little while ago his name was practically unknown outside of railway circles. It is now familiar throughout the United States and Canada, and no doubt has been heard by millions in other countries. Mr. Plumb leaped to sudden distinction when the railroad brotherhoods of the United States declared that they wanted the United States to extinguish private ownership in the railroads of the country and operate them in accordance with the "Plumb plan." Then everybody began to ask what was the Plumb plan, and who was Plumb. In brief, the Plumb plan is a plan whereby the Government takes over all the railroads of the country, guaranteeing the private owners a certain percentage of interest upon their investments, and then turns their operation over to a board composed in equal numbers of Government representatives, representatives of the management or high officers, and representatives of the drivers, firemen, conductors, and so forth. The profits are to be divided equally among them — please don't laugh—and the deficits are to be the exclusive affair of the public. Under this plan it is claimed that the roads will be more economically operated than at present, the men will be able to get all the wages they want, and the public will get cheaper transportation.

It's a great plan, and seems to put Mr. Plumb up in a class with Bela Kun. It is not, as might be supposed, the scheme drawn up in half an hour by a demagogue whose only acquaintance with railroads was formed from the brake beams. It is the carefully-though-out solution of the railroad problem of a man who has had wide and specialized railroad experience, who has been a corporation lawyer, a railroad receiver, and finally the general counsel of the Organized Railroad Employes of America. He was born in Iowa in 1866, but spent his boyhood in Illinois and graduated from Oberlin College, receiving the degree of Doctor of Philosophy. Later he spent one year at Harvard, but decided to complete his legal education in the West, and graduated from the Northwestern University. He then entered a law office in Chicago, his firm representing the Milwaukee and St. Paul Railroad. In the five years he remained he learned the rudiments of railroad law. This enabled him in 1900 to secure a retainer as attorney for the General Railways Company of Chicago, and while holding this position he is said to have matched his wits time and again with Charles T. Yerkes, owner of the other traction properties in Chicago, and one of the keenest railway men of his day.

For three years he was attorney for the receiver of the General Railways, manager of the road and receiver, being in complete charge when the road was reorganized and handed over to the consolidated traction enterprises that took charge of all the city's traction properties. In 1905, when Mayor Dunne, of Chicago, made his effort to straighten out the city's traction difficulties, he retained Plumb as special counsel for the city. It was in this period, it is said, that he began developing the ideas that have now appeared before the world as the Plumb plan. For a short time afterwards he was president of the Calumet & South Chicago Railroad, a street railway with some two hundred miles of track, and when this road was absorbed by the Chicago City Railway Co., Mr. Plumb went back to the practice of law.

It was his theory of railway valuations that attracted the attention of the brotherhoods, and in 1917 Mr. Plumb was retained to represent the railway brotherhoods before the Inter-State Commerce Board. This spring he became counsel for the ten other railroad labor organizations and therefore is entitled to speak for all American railroad organizations, just as Mr. Gompers is entitled to speak for the American Federation of Labor. In May, Mr. Plumb went to Washington to direct his propaganda and educate the public as to what the railroad employes want. He established a weekly paper and gathered round him some clever writers and cartoonists, all of them having a marked radical, not to say Bolshevist, slant. He now is at the head of a powerful organization which in a single fortnight prepared and despatched 1,500,000 pamphlets setting forth the Plumb plan. There must be plenty of money behind him, and Mr. Plumb says that in a year he will have cash contributions amounting to one million dollars.

Recently Mr. Plumb appeared before a Congressional committee and explained his plan. In the course of this examination he asserted that he had never read a book on Socialism, and did not know what a Soviet was. To which it might be retorted that he was quite capable of writing a book on railway socialism, and that what his plan proposes is the Soviet government of the railroads. It has been pointed out that his propagandists are writers noted for their radicalism, and that none of them has ever had any connection with railroad affairs. His own knowledge of railroad matters is not to be questioned, but all this knowledge appears to have been left to one side when he made the suggestion that there were likely to be profits under such administration as he proposes. On the other hand, he can point to the wrecking of railroads under private operation and Wall Street manipulation. If the American Federation of Labor supports the demand of the railroad brotherhoods for the Plumb plan, the author thereof may take his place as one of the momentous figures in American history.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 20—The scale committees of the bituminous miners and operators in the central competitive field went into executive session today to negotiate a wage contract, after Federal Fuel Administrator Garfield had urged him them, the necessity for adjusting their differences and producing the coal the country needs.

Appearance and Manner Made Sir Arthur Currie A Very Typical Canadian

STANDING six feet four inches, weighing close on to two hundred and forty pounds, built in proportion, Sir Arthur Currie merits the name of "big Canadian" no less from his physical attributes than by reason of his qualities as a soldier and a man. Not a wrinkle mars the smoothness of his round, youthful face. A pair of big blue eyes look out from his broad and open countenance. Born at Strathroy, Ont., in 1875, he is a native son of Ontario from the soles of the big field boots which he constantly wears in preference to riding boots or puttees, to the parting in the middle of his blonde, grizzling hair. His deep voice is the voice of a Canadian, untinged with any trace of the swank and affectation to which, alas! more than one in the C.E.F. has succumbed. In manner and bearing he is just the same Currie who sold real estate in Victoria before the war.

The Canadian corps commander impresses all who meet him with his simplicity and straightforwardness of manner. So much so that many marvel how this can be the man who became lieutenant-general at 42, the commander of 200,000 men, and one of the most successful leaders in France.

"Somehow he looks like a stalwart civilian who has put on a uniform. He lacks the brass-hattiness and the barrack-room air of the stereotyped general," is the tenor of the comment made by strangers discussing him after their first introduction. But Currie's blue eyes can flash fire on occasion, his voice snap out commands, and his apparently easy-going manner undergoes a lightning change when there is work to be done. Casual visitors only saw him off duty. Shrewder judges of men had sized him up soon after the First Canadian Division landed in France, and marked him out for promotion. Gen. Byng, the idol of the Canadian corps and the victor of Vimy Ridge, wanted Currie as his successor.

GEN. ARTHUR CURRIE.

Gen. Currie talked very freely to Canadian newspapermen. He would invite them into his battlefield hut at Vimy, hard by the deep, dark dugout dungeons which served as First Division headquarters, or later, when occupying some old chateau, into the lofty chamber, with its antique furniture and four-post bed, and there unbosom his mind to the press as he could not do to anyone else in France. Most of such conversations were strictly confidential, and not for publication.

In London, during his short and infrequent visits of a day or two to confer with the Overseas Minister of Militia or the War Office, pending some great development, or on his still less frequent leaves to see his wife and children, the Canadian corps commander moved about as unostentatiously as a private on furlough. He frequently carried neither cane nor gloves, and when his towering figure rose above the crowds on the Strand, it was only the rank badges on his shoulders and on the straight, old-fashioned and uncomfortable-looking cloth tunic collar which he alone of all the generals wore, that restrained vigilant A.P.M.'s from stopping him and inquiring the reason for this reprehensible lack of gloves and walking stick, without which every officer was deemed "improperly dressed."

Bluntness rather than diplomatic suavity characterizes Currie. He speaks his mind freely. A royal personage—not the Prince of Wales—who was at one time attached to the Canadian Corps, delights to tell a story in this connection. The royal soldier, one inky night, made use of his electric torch to pick his way through the mud at the gate of Canadian Corps Headquarters, then located at the Chateau of Camblain l'Abbe. A Canadian sentry, not observing who the transgressor was, exclaimed angrily: "Put out that torch or you'll have Heine dropping bombs on us. A fellow would think you were the corps commander." Royalty promptly extinguished the torch and next day at the mess related the story with gusto. "Huh!" exclaimed Currie with a quiet smile. "I wouldn't be such a d—— fool as to flash a torch like that." The royal raconteur, a great admirer of the general, considered this last addition, one on himself, the tit-bit of the whole story and cherishes it among his anecdotes.

Miss Hester Leavenworth, Trumbull, descendant of John Alden and Priscilla Mullens, was married at Litchfield, Mass., recently to Miles Standish, Jr., of Boston, who traces his descent directly from Capt. Miles Standish of the Plymouth colony. The bride's line is through Faith Robinson, wife of the famous Jonathan Trumbull, of Connecticut. Mrs. Standish is the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. William Trumbull, of Litchfield.

VARIOUS KINDS OF CHARITY

And Greater Far Than the Giving of Alms is the Practice of Charity of Thought.

Someone has said that "Charity is the highest tree in heaven." It is a saying that we can well believe, for not only does charity cover a multitude of sins but it also covers its devotees with its solace and comfort.

It is to be feared, however, that there is a misconception as to the full meaning covered by the word charity. Many people seem to understand that charity consists solely in the giving of alms. And the fact is that almsgiving is merely one form of charity.

There is a charity that we can practice toward those of our fellow men who stand in no need of alms. There are, indeed, many who are well provided with the goods of this world who stand in great need of charity. The charity of our thoughts is what we stand in need of.—Los Angeles Times.

Diamond Cutters.

There are 25,000 diamond cutters and polishers in the world. Of these only about 675 are in the United States, and these have come mostly since the outbreak of the European war, which crippled the industry in Amsterdam and Antwerp, the world's greatest centers. There were at the beginning of the present year 36 diamond-cutting establishments in this country. This is exclusive of shops where all kinds of precious stones are cut.

The number of Germans employed as diamond cutters did not exceed 600 before the war, and of these only 75 per cent worked for establishments in Germany. During the war 600 or 700 Belgian cutters emigrated to England and organized as a branch of the London Diamond Cutters' union. They did work principally for Belgian and Russian houses.

LED TO RESCUE BY DREAM

Tug Captain's Confidence in Vision He Had Proved Fortunate for Two Fishermen.

Guided by a dream, Capt. Adam Paczocha of a Lake Michigan tug found two men who had been drifting about helpless in a broken motor-launch for four days. The rescue was just in time to save the men's lives, for the feet of one were frozen and the other's hands were frostbitten and they were exhausted from cold and hunger.

Captain Paczocha had his dream while taking a nap at his home in Milwaukee one afternoon. When he awoke he described to his family how he had seen a launch drifting about helpless in the storm-swept lake and how he had swung his boat alongside and saved two men.

"I'm going to find them," said the captain, after telling of the dream vision.

He set out the next morning and by midafternoon he had located the launch. The two men in the launch were George Costigan and Joseph Budsiecz, Jones Island fishermen who had met with misfortune while out hauling in their nets. Driven about by a sudden storm that arose on the lake they sought to make shore until the gasoline engine in the launch gave out. Then they drifted about helpless.

The rescued men's first request was for cigarettes. They had been unable to smoke for four days because their matches had become wet

An Army In Peace.

At the end of the fiscal year the cost of the Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-Establishment will run up to $57,000,000, and probably a like amount will be required to continue the work for the next two years. While the war is practically over and demobilization almost complete, we are maintaining another army, who are being trained in the arts of peace and not in the arts of war. These are disabled men and minors who are being vocationally trained. That army numbers to-day 19,290, each one of whom draws pay and allowances ranging from $60 to $150, according to the number of dependents, while taking a course of training averaging seven months. Moreover, we have 6,556 receiving free medical treatment with pay and medical allowances at our hospitals, and 12,000 more receiving free medical treatment without pay and allowances.

CANADA'S AGRICULTURAL POSITION.

The Hon. S. F. Tolmie, Canada's new Minister of Agriculture, has summed up the outstanding facts of Canada's agricultural position in an article appearing in the November number of The Agricultural Gazette. He presents statistics showing the growth of Canada's financial burden during the past five years and points out means by which our national debt will be reduced. He says in part "I am confident that this Dominion, through the development of her natural resources, will in time wipe out her debt. Forests, fisheries, and mines all contribute their part of the revenue but by far the greatest returns will be derived from agriculture, which industry we must continue to establish in permanency and increase in magnitude. One of the greatest responsibilities that falls on either the federal or provincial departments of agriculture is the conservation of the great wealth that lies in the virgin soil. Innumerable considerations are involved in this one problem, but the whole affair can be accomplished if we engage in mixed farming with live stock as a basis. This is the fundamental principle underlying success in agriculture.

LORD CECIL'S WARNING.

It would be difficult to exaggerate the gravity of the international situation, said Lord Robert Cecil in the British House of Commons this week, when the Government's Russian policy was under debate.

It was impossible to ignore, either, the serious news from the United States, he said, in referring to the action of the Senate on the German Peace Treaty. He did not desire to express an opinion of the legitimacy of the Senate's action from the American viewpoint, he declared, but the reservations that had been provisionally accepted amounted almost to the repudiation of the covenant, and the repudiation of the covenant meant the repudiation of the treaty.

"At the best," continued Lord Robert, "nothing is to be expected but a long period of negotiations and the possibility of further rejection when the negotiations are concluded. We desire American co-operation, but if the United States decides not to share in this great international effort we must go on, and the burden would be the greater upon us and the other nations."

Lord Robert declared that Bolshevism at its best was oppressive tyranny and at its worst bloody, brutal despotism. He said it appeared impossible to crush Bolshevism by force, and that the Russian people only desired peace. He was convinced that foreign intervention was useless and expressed the hope that General Denekine, l ader of the Anti-Bolshevik forces in Southwest Russia and Admiral Kolchak, head of the all-Russian Government, would abandon the attempt to reach Moscow and endeavor to establish a stable government in the territoreis already occupied. This, Lord Robert asserted would have an overwhelming moral effect on the neighboring Bolshevik country.

THE FUMBLERS.

Yale lost and Princeton won because of a fumble. Thus many prizes in life are won and lost. The physician and the lawyer profit from the fumbles of others. In speculation the bull makes on the fumbles of the bear, and the bear makes a living out of the fumbles of the bull. The brothers of Joseph fumbled and Joseph won an imperishable place in history. Lot's wife was too curious, fumbled and was turned to salt. Nero fumbled and lost his crown. The fugitive Kaiser fumbled and lost his empire.

Life is a game in which some win and others lose—some gain the prize because others fumble. Perhaps the fumbler is a necessary part of the scheme of things. Philosophers say evil is necessary, for without evil there would be no good.

Be that as it may, there is nothing essentially bad in the fumblers of the world. They merit neither condemnation nor scorn provided they fumbled in a good cause. To lose a battle is no disgrace. He who bravely loses, even if he fumbles, is none the less a hero.

The man who fumbled at New Haven deserves to be considered not as a vanquished player but as one who fought to his utmost, lost and yet smiles.

'Tis easy enough to be smiling
When the world moves along like a song;
But the man worth while
Is the man who can smile
When everything goes dead wrong.

Yale and Princeton are noted for being good sports because they are good losers. They cheer their fumblers who do their best. If the fumblers in life's battles all possessed the virtue of doing their best, defeat would be less hard to bear—victory a less taunting triumph.—New York Herald.

Strike action, in its disastrous effect on the general public, is well termed "industrial barbarism." It, at least, is one human evil that should be easy to control by the common sense of arbitration, backed by law.

Strike Loss in One Year.

Hamilton Times.

Assuming the same relation between wages and value of output as shown in the Census of Production for 1917, strikes in Canada have caused a total loss in wages and output of workers and factories directly affected of close to $100,000,000, says the Canadian Reconstruction Association. This figure takes no account of the loss to factories indirectly affected through interruption in orders and curtailment of production nor of the commercial and community loss through dislocation of business.

LITTLE BROWN BUSHY-TAIL.

Little brown bushy-tail lived up a tree
And mossy and snug was his nest,
Acorns and beechnuts in plenty had he,
And he scarcely knew which he liked best.

He was cheery of temper and agile o limb,
And his own little will was his law;
For what was the world and its worries to him,
When he held a plump nut in his claw

As he cracked it, he twinkled his knowing black eyes,
The kernel picked out bye and bye
Then he ate it, and looking uncommonly wise,
Said, "Folks may be worse off than I."

"For I'm sure I'm content with my portion of life,
And of nuts I've a plentiful store;
With my little brown babies, and little brown wife,
What on earth could a squirrel want more?"

He had lots of near neighbors, as merry as he;
They were cheery and playful each one;
Don't they show us that happy 'tis easy to be,
If good humor we keep in our fun?

Content with the blessings our Father may give,
How happy would all of us be,
If we tried with our friends and our neighbors to live
As the brown squirrel did in the tree'

Erzberger Is Assailed

REVELATIONS are the order of the day in Germany. During the last few weeks almost every major statesman of the Fatherland hurled a rhetorical or journalistic hand grenade or two right into the reputation of his neighbor, and some of them scored regular hits, with the audience wildly applauding. The fun started on July 25, when, in the National Assembly at Weimar, the Conservative representative, von Graefe, staged, as the Kolnische Zeitung puts it, a dashing cavalry charge against the Government, and in particular against its supposedly weakest defence; that is, the person of the Vice-Premier and Minister of Finances, Erzberger. He said that the forces backing the present Government were largely responsible for Germany's breakdown in the war and attacked Erzberger for ruining the German treasury. The Kolnische Zeitung reports: "All that which in the course of time had been charged against the balance sheet of the revolution was industriously collected and dished up by Graefe."

Ever since the signing of the Peace Treaty there were rumors that the Conservatives, or, as they now call themselves, German Nationals, would start a general offensive against the Government, attempting to fix the entire blame for the disastrous outcome of the war on the men who went to Versailles, and thus shielding the junker politicians and generals really responsible for the catastrophe. The objective of such a campaign was, according to the press friendly to the Government, to discredit the coalition of majority Socialists, Democrats and Centrists and pave the way for a Conservative and counter revolutionary victory at the next elections.

One of the first big shots was fired by Count Botho Wedel, the former German Ambassador at Vienna, who, in an article published in the Hamburger Nachricten, brought a series of grave charges against the Vice-Premier and Minister of Finance, Matthias Erzberger. Count Wedel's article dealt chiefly with Erzberger's famous peace visit to Vienna in 1917, and proceeded to prove, first, that the enterprise of the Centrist statesman had lacked authorization; second, that by indiscretly communicating to the Entente Count Czernin's confidential report about the desperate situation of Austria Erzberger wrecked the prospects of a favorable peace.

Count Czernin's report, Count Wedel alleges, which was forwarded to the Kaiser's headquarters at Homburg by Count Ledochowski, was intended "to shatter the German Government's confidence in a favorable outcome and to induce Germany to make a peace of concessions, thereby acknowledging defeat." Count Wedel continues:

"On a visit to Hamburg the Emperor Charles and Count Czernin suggested that Germany should return Alsace-Lorraine to France. Austria, it was said, was ready to yield territory, to join Galicia, considered lost at any event, to Poland, and to cede Poland with Galicia to the German sphere of influence.

"At German General Headquarters this report did not make the impression desired by the Austrians, chiefly because of its exaggerations.

"An article published on July 2 of this year in the Deutsche Allgemeine Zeitung spread the impression that Chancellor Bethmann-Hollweg had, in April, 1918, confided the contents of Count Czernin's report to Erzberger and sent him to Vienna with the purpose of bracing up the Emperor Charles and preventing a precipitate peace action, an errand successfully executed by Herr Erzberger.

"I understand now that Herr von Bethmann-Hollweg denies that he ever communicated the contents of Czernin's report to Erzberger. Such confidence, I may add, would have been inexplicable on his part.

"Herr von Bethman-Hollweg also denies the allegation that it was he who sent Erzberger to Vienna. There was no necessity of such special mission, as the German Embassy in Vienna and the Austro-Hungarian Embassy in Berlin were at the Chancellor's disposal."

Count Wedel now turns to an exposure of Erzburger's methods. The Centrist leader, he charges, frequently undertook, during the war, trips abroad. He did so on his own initiative, but in each instance he called, before leaving Berlin, at the Chancellery or Foreign Office, with the purpose of gathering information.

Erzberger got acquainted with the contents of Count Czernin's report on a visit to Vienna, Count Wedel says, and continues:

"It was both for Berlin and Vienna a most painful surprise when one day a discussion of Count Czernin's report was published in a Rhineland newspaper. It appeared that Erzberger had made use of the report in a meeting held, if I am not mistaken, at Frankfort-on-Main."

Wedel found his match, however, in the shrewd Centrist politician who answered with a long and unusally bitter indictment of Conservative strategy and policies. "Whatever charges Graefe had made against the revolution now were hurled back by Erzberger at the German-National party," the Kolnische Zeitung says. It was the famous speech, extensively reported in the cables, in which the one-time peace mediator told about the attempt of England in 1917 to obtain peace through the good services of the Pope—attempts which foundered on the uncompromising attitude of the German war lords. Erzberger named the then Imperial Chancellor Michaelis and Gen. Ludendorff as the persons chiefly responsible for the failure of the peace move.

There is anxiety in Europe following the action of U. S. Senate rejecting the peace treaty. It is thought in some quarters the Germans may get the Kaiser back and start the war again, says London despatch.

ENGLISH ADVERTISING.

War's Aftermath as Found in the Newspapers.

When an Englishman wishes to focus public attention upon his pet schemes; when he wants to start a new religion or propagate an old one; when he wants money or a new collie pup, he advertises in the columns of his favorite newspaper. There is a wealth of human interest in those advertising columns of the great British dailies. None of the usual British reticence is there. The lady of quality and the charwoman, the jobless and the wealthy, all unite in the effort to gain the public eye and ear.

House-hunting also, is done through the advertising columns. There is more than a dash of the Canadian verbal comments on May 1, visible in some of the efforts to attract attention. The following is a typical example:

Un-British cruelty — No medium-size houses to let, outskirts London, for invalid, disabled, or war-strained gentle-born. Did all considerate landlords die on Aug. 4, 1914? Will noble survivors (if any) kindly reply, with particulars. "Invalid," Box F, 141, the Times.

The propaganda "ad" is also common. Religious subjects occur frequently, and the opponents of vivisection also lose no opportunity to keep their hobby before the public. An example of the religious appeal follows:

"What shall it profit a nation if it win a great war and lose its own soul? Send 1½d for a copy of a leaflet bearing this title to A. E. McAdam, 45 Leepark, S.E. 3."

Every housemaid airs her secret aspirations to ladyship. In her search for employment she is never a "woman." A "lady" wishes to undertake a "post" as "Cook general" and she volunteers the rather surprising information that she is thoroughly "domesticated." For this work she "requires" wages of £35 to £40 or, approximately, $144 to $180 for the year.

Householders in the best parts of London, on the other hand, reveal to the world the innermost secrets of their menage. One may readily ascertain how many maids and menservants are maintained, the number of appetites that must be satisfied, the frequency of guests and similar matters. The English servant is also cautious to a degree, for many prospective employers take pains to forewarn applicants that there are "no knives or boots," and often that there are no coal fires, that parlor and scullery maids are kept and that charwomen are employed twice weekly, etc.

References are very much more important than in America. Practically no position is open except to those who can furnish "characters." It is the same whether the place demands a man with a salary of many hundreds or a shopgirl with a guinea a week.

Until the expiration of the war the demand for "Lady Shorthand-Typists" was heavy and a system of yearly or half-yearly bonuses was instituted. The requirements would be extraordinary in this country, and particularly at the low wages of $13.50 in the following offer:

"Merchant's Office — Shorthand typist (lady) required in merchant's office. Permanent position. French, Spanish essential. Salary £3 week; bonus half-yearly. Hours 9.30 to 6. Wire, stating age, experience, speeds, to Pim, 19, Bury street, E.C. 3."

For lesser accomplishments the rate falls to £2 and £2 10s.

Another aftermath of the war is visible in the many appeals for aid. The personal columns often reveal the tragedies of the Flanders Field or of the lone watches in the North Sea, or of the "spurlos versenkt" policy. There are the minor tragedies of the demobilized and crippled soldier who cannot find employment, of the men who are no longer fit for their trades, and of many others. There are also the gloomy, despairing appeals such as this one:

"Lady, with two young children left penniless under most tragic circumstances, implores help. Particulars and references. Box G 26, the Times."

Another influence of the war is apparent in a great many "ads." In two or three inches of a column it is possible to find men who wish to go to South Angola or Demerara or New South Wales, and the established colonies like India and South Africa also furnish much desired fields. These efforts to obtain employment reflect the industrial status of the mother country at this time, because most of those men who wish to emigrate are discharged officers with records of capable and efficient service, the class of men that seldom has difficulty in finding employment at home.

Measuring the Earth.

An effort is being made to induce the Commonwealth and its six states to combine to provide £3,000 for measuring the earth, that is, for obtaining an accurate determination of Australian longitude by means of wireless signals sent out from Aden and Darien (Panama) to Sydney, New South Wales, and Greenwich. Dr. J. M. Baldwin, Victorian Government astronomer, says that in order to measure the earth it is necessary to have two wireless stations at places called A and B. The exact local time at each station having been observed by the stars a series of wireless signals is sent from a third station C and the difference in times of reception of the signals at A and B enable the determining of the longitude in hours, minutes and seconds, which can be easily worked out as degrees, minutes and seconds. Similar experiments in 1913 showed that the meridian of longitude at Washington was one-twentieth of a second out and the imaginary line had to be moved about fifty feet.

IT ENDS THE PAIN

Children who have once had Zam-Buk applied, cry for it when hurt. They know it ends their pain. Mothers should always keep Zam-Buk handy, for not only does it soothe the injured place, but it prevents any danger of festering or blood-poisoning, and heals quickly.

Not only in the home, but in the office, store and factory, Zam-Buk should be kept handy to apply immediately an injury is sustained. It's the best safeguard against serious developments.

Zam-Buk is equally good, too, for all skin troubles, eczema, rashes and boils. It destroys all germs and replaces the diseased tissue with new, healthy flesh. That's why Zam-Buk cures are permanent. There isn't a trace of disease left to break out again. All dealers, 50c. box.

Beaufort expressed pleasure at seeing him, and asked him to have a drink. Kent did not refuse the invitation for it would be easier to talk there in the corner than if he had to dodge by his side among the crowd in the streets and he opened fire at once. He felt that his best card was absolute frankness and explained the situation without reserve. Billy was sympathetic. He romanced about Sir Charles but was subsequently truthful. A draft from the Baronet might be delivered any morning or evening; but supposing it did not come in time, he would straighten matters out himself. 'He was damably short, but he had arranged with a pal to jump for him. If he touched a bit to-morrow—of which there was, humanly speaking, no doubt—Kent should have a hundred and forty francs at night and the balance of what was owing to him early in the week. Damon, would repay himself when the draft arrived.

Such devotion demanded another drink and though this left him with less than a franc in his pocket he went back to the pension in much better spirits and feeling that he had good news to impart. Cynthia looked upon the tidings in the same light, and, as the nurse might learn from the servants that their rooms were to be vacated Saturday, they decided to speak to her without delay. Kent informed her that they were going to friends in the country, preparatory to settling in Paris for two years, and that she must make her preparations to return to England on Saturday morning. This gave a margin for delay on Beaufort's part. The young woman was taken aback, and though she did not wish to stay, there was real feeling in her voice as she said how sorry she would be to leave the baby. She hung over the bassinet and tears came into her eyes. Then Cynthia choked, and began to cry too, and Humphrey found her five minutes later with her face buried in her pillow, sobbing that she felt ashamed to have told lies to such a conscientious, nice-minded girl.

Kent's appointment with Beaufort next evening was for half-past eight, outside the Cafe de la Paix. The sous remaining after the conversation in the Rue Saint-Honore had gone for a nursery requirement, so he was unable to sit down while he waited. His man was very late, and he walked to and fro before the stretch of tables on the Boulevard wearily for nearly an hour, tacitly confessing himself penniless to every idler in the crowd of chairs. When 'Billy' arrived at length, he began by saying that his news was not altogether unsatisfactory, wherat Humphrey's heart sank within him and when details were forthcoming, it appeared to him about as unsatisfactory as it could be. Stripped of the circumlocution by which the speaker sought to palliate its asperities, the news was that the completion of his business had been deferred till Saturday and while he was confident of 'touching' then he feared he and Cynthia must leave the pension by noon and get the nurse out of the way and into the train by ten o'clock in the morning Saturday sounded as hopeless as Doomsday. He explained the urgency of the situation afresh over a petit verre and, after reflection Billy thought that, assisted by somebody else's signature he could raise a hundred and fifty francs in another quarter. When he had had a second petit verre he was sure of it, and bade Humphrey meet him again on the morrow at a quarter to two.

The morrow was Thursday, and when Kent descended about eleven, Madame Garin requested that the document her lawyer had drawn up should now be signed. After that had been done and duly witnessed—one may do anything one likes in France excepting not pay—Kent told her that his wife wished her to view the contents of the baby's trunk before it was closed. As a matter of fact, it was rather a large one, and they were anxious to avoid the possibility of its giving rise to any remark in front of the servants in the hall at the moment of departure She replied that such an examination was not necessary; it would be sufficient if they instructed their nurse to pack nothing that did not belong to the little one. This led to his informing her that the girl was quitting their service and, to Kent's horror, Madame Garin said frigidly:

"You know to what I have consented monsieur? The things of the child for madame and yourself what is essetial for one week. Besides that—nothing."

"My God!" exclaimed Kent with a gasp; "you don't mean to say you won't let the girl take her box?"

"But certainly I mean it," she returned. "What I have said. It is perfectly understood. I have already been too liberal."

"But—but—heavens above!" he stammered, "the girl doesn't owe you anything! My wife is dismissing her, so as to keep our humiliation from her knowledge, madam. If you refuse to let her box go, the exposure is complete."

The proprietress shrugged her shoulders:

"That is nothing to me," she answered. "Once more, for the little one and your own necessaries—that is all. There!"

This time Kent literally had not the courage to tell Cynthia what had occurred. He went out, and dropped on to the first bench he came to, sick in his very soul. What was the use now if Beaufort did bring the money when they met? The girl could not be sent home without her luggage, and they would have to make a clean breast of the whole affair to her, and beg her to be tolerant with them. Cynthia had been very plucky; she had taken the disappointment of last night like a brick, and was at the moment full of hope for the result of the appointment at a quarter to two, but he felt that this unexpected blow would surely crush her. It was the death stroke of their scheme and entailed even more mortification than they had originally feared. He was at the foot of the Champs Elysees and he sat staring at the passers-by with wide eyes—at the bonnes, big of bosom, with the broad, bright ribbons depending from their caps; at the children with their hoops and the women in knickerbockers, flashing through the sunshine on their bicycles. Paris looked so light-hearted that woe was incongruous in it, but its air of gaiety seemed to turn his empty pockets inside out.

Now, it happened about half an hour subsequent to his leaving the pension, that Cynthia decided to go with her baby and the nurse for a walk. Halfway down the stairs it was perceived that something had been forgotten and, she continued the descent alone. To her dismay she saw the gaunt figure of Madame Garin standing at the office door, and as she came timorously down the last flight, the proprietress stood at the bottom with folded arms watching her. Perhaps her nervousness was very evident, perhaps the other had been sorrier for her than she had shown, but as the girl reached the hall the grim old woman moved toward her, and, with a gesture that said as planly as words, "Oh, you poor little soul!" took her face between her hands and kissed her on the forehead.

"Listen," she said; "that's all right about your servant's box. Rest easy."

Cynthia murmured a response to her kindness without realizing what was meant, but presently Kent became aware that among the stream of nurses and infants flowing up from the Palace de la Concord were his own nurse and infant, and that Cynthia accompanied them. She recognized him before they reached the bench and came over to him with surprise, and sat down, and then each spoke of what the other did not know.

"What a half-hour you have had!" she cried, when she understood. And he exclaimed:

"But the relief! Heaven be praised you came this way!"

Their fate now hung once more on what 'Billy' Beaufort would have to say, and Humphrey sped to the rendezvous with restored energy. By the clock in the middle of the road it was twenty minutes to two when he reached the Cafe de la Paix and as before, it was impossible for him to sit down. He rolled a thin cigarette with a morsel of tobacco that remained in his pouch and paced his beat smoking.

How To Make Your Hair Beautiful

Ten Minutes' Home Treatment Works Wonders, Stops Falling Hair and Dandruff and Makes the Hair Soft, Brilliant, Lustrous and Fluffy

Better than all the so-called "hair tonics" in the world is a simple old-fashioned home recipe consisting of plain Bay Rum, Lavona (de Composee) and a little Menthel Crystals. These three mixed at home in a few minutes, works wonder with any scalp. Try it just one night and see get from your druggist 2 oz. Lavona, 6 oz. Bay Rum and ½ drachm Menthol Crystals. Dissolve the Crystals in the Bay Rum and pour in 8 oz. bottle. Then add the Lavona, shake well and let it stand for an hour before using. Apply it by putting a little of the mixture on soft cloth. Draw this cloth slowly through the hair, taking just one small strand at a time. This cleanses the hair and scalp of dirt, dust and excessive oil and makes the hair delightfully soft, lustrous and fluffy. To stop the hair from falling and to make it grow again rub the lotion briskly into the scalp with the finger tips or a medium stiff brush. Apply night and morning. A few days use and you will not find a single loose or straggling hair. They will be locked on your scalp as tight as a vise. Dandruff will disappear. You will find fine downy new hairs sprouting up all over your scalp and this new hair will grew with wonderful rapidity.

Any druggist can sell you the above. The prescription is very inexpensive and we know of nothing so effective and certain in its results.

MONTREAL.

Old Days Compared With City That Prince of Wales Visited.

Reign on, majestic Ville-Marie!
Spread wide thy ample robes of state;
The heralds cry that thou art great,
And proud are thy young sons of thee,
Mistress of half a continent,
Thou risest from thy girlhood's rest;
We see thee conscious heave thy breast
And feel thy rank and thy descent.

Sprung of the saint and chevalier!
And with the Scarlet Tunic wed;
Mount Royal's crown upon thy head;
And past thy footstool, broad and clear,
St. Lawrence sweeping to the sea;
Reign on, majestic Ville-Marie!

The city of a million!

That is what Montreal is reaching out to be—not, perhaps, through reasoned purpose so much as by the natural and inevitable factors in the case.

When the grandfather of the present Prince of Wales visited Montreal, points out the Gazette, the population was 70,000 people. All was country above St. Catharine street or thereabouts. In 1860 the then prince worshipped in Christ Church Cathedral; and that sacred edifice had been built upon ground over which the boys used to shoot snipe.

A lady of the time, remonstrating with her husband for having bought a house west of McGill College avenue, said that she was not going to live in the country.

McGill University was the outstanding feature of the West End of the city at the time of the visit of the Prince of Wales.

The grounds originally went down to St. Catherine street. Few, indeed, were the buildings; but Sir William Dawson used to say of it, even in the primitive and restricted days, that it was "a beam in darkness"; adding—"let it grow."

None of the great buildings which now dot the campus were in evidence at the time of the prince's visit; but, nevertheless, the city was finding its soul.

Education, which had been neglected, was beginning to be systematized; the fame of McGill was spreading; music was cultivated in intimate and charming circles—small, indeed, but select, and which, removed from the clamors of trade, was a means of grace in the residential sections. The great competitive enterprises made possible by Confederation, which came to pass later, had still to be born; and leisure was possible in a small world and an easy day.

The citizens struggled home at night by the fitful glimmer of the gas lamp, situated at widely separated intervals on the narrow streets. If one were at all under the weather he ran the risk of imminent death. People, indeed, who knew they would be out late provided themselves with lanterns; and it was a common thing to wear these lanterns at the side when one got out of the theatre and had some distance to go. The quivering lights seemed to add to the Cimmerian gloom, while the condition of the streets was beyond description.

An "old residenter" remarked to the Gazette recently that it was as much as your life was worth to slip off the sidewalk and be engulfed in the mud of the streets. This especially applied to Craig street, off which Cote street went northward — that dismal old street where the Theatre Royal held forth and witnessed the triumph of a Siddons, a Sothern (Sen.), a Booth, and the leading lights of Themis, in the palmy days of the old playhouse, when Shakespeare and the legitimate drama occupied the boards, when the "gods" were critical, and the general pabulum was the classics.

When the theatre was over the people, if it happened to be a dark night, trimmed and lighted their lanterns and wended their way homewards; but the younger element loved to stay behind and pay a visit to the old historic beer garden at the corner of Cote and Craig streets. There the artists mingled with the common herd and imbibed porter and beer and sausages, told stories, danced and played and proved that

The best of all ways to lengthen your days
Is to steal a few hours from the night, my dear.

Had a powerful tramway company then threatened a rise in price of tickets it would not have mattered to the people, who lived in what we would now call the centre of the city.

They could and would walk. There was no distance then in a city in respect of whose dimensions the Hotel Dieu was deemed to be out of civic bounds.

To-day the threat of a rise in the price of tickets occasions something like a panic. The city has been made over. It is new and adventurous. It has pushed out and out, and to-day many thousands of people travel from five to forty miles every day to and from their work.

Ste. Anne's is considered at the elbow. Hudson, fifty miles distance, is no hardship. St. Eustache is even considered a suburb. Great populations east and west and north live in what was the country a few years ago, and are dependent on the cars.
—W. B. Lighthall.

Turkish Crescent.

The Turkish crescent, although now regarded as essentially Mohammedan in significance, is, it appears, of Christian origin. A crescent moon was the emblem of the Byzantine Empire and of the Eastern Church. The Turks adopted it as a badge of triumph after the capture of Constantinople in 1453. With reference to the crescent, the story of the origin of the crescent-shaped Vienna roll is of curious interest. It arose in the sixteenth century, when the Turks were besieging Vienna. Failing to carry the city by assault, they began to mine the walls. At that period the bakehouses were in the walls under the fortifications; and when the mines were almost through the sound of the work was heard in the underground bakehouses and an alarm was given. To celebrate this event the bakers of Vienna adopted the Turkish emblem as the form in which to mold and bake their bread.

TUBERCULOSIS SUNDAY.

With the co-operation of the clergy of all denominations and endorsed by the Department of Education, Sunday, the 23rd and Monday, the 24th inst., will be observed as Tuberculosis Sunday and Tuberculosis Day in the Schools.

Literature has been prepared by the National Sanitarium Association, setting forth the nature, giving valuable facts regarding the nature and treatment of consumption. Only through a widespread understanding on the part of the public of how this disease may be avoided, how it may be cured, will this great plague be overcome.

Drastic measures were taken last fall in the "Flu" epidemic, this fall we have an outbreak of smallpox, which is receiving the anxious and careful consideration of our medical officers of health. Consumption is a more dangerous disease than any. More deaths occur from this cause than from all other contagious diseases combined. Every one is urged to acquaint themselves regarding tuberculosis.

Ministers and teachers have a special opportunity to instruct those under their care.

WHY CHIROPRACTIC IS DIFFERENT

The Chiropractor does not treat, heal or cure; uses no drugs, surgery, ostopathy or other forms of practice. He calls into play only the art of his science, to adjust the cause of dis-ease and let Nature cure. His work is shown in the good the profession is doing for suffering humanity after all e powerless to work good health results.

He deals with conditions not theories that is why he corrects causes with adjustments instead of experimenting with effecs in the use of remedies. This fact of itself tends to show the worthiness of Chiropractic and press its claims for favor on the afflicted, and then it is recalled that the extent of Chiropractic practice is so far-reaching as to daily adjust thousands of both acute and chronic cases, it becomes strikingly evident that the good being accomplished by Chiropractors amounts in the aggregate to an achievement that should commend the science to the favor of the public.

"Experience" Is A Wonderful Play

Excellent Company and Wealth of Appropriate Scenery Provide Pleasing Presentation of Noted Morality Play.

That Belleville is what is known as "a good show town" has been proved over and over again by the patronage accorded theatrical attractions of the one-night stand variety and of varying degrees of merit, but this was never better demonstrated than yesterday when "Experience", the much-heralded morality play, companion or successor to "Everywoman," was given its first local presentation. Two performances were given at Griffin's Theatre—matinee and night—a large audience being present in the afternoon and a larger one in the evening, when there was a rush line reaching from the theatre to the post office before seven o'clock and every reserved seat from pit to dome sold out days ago. Many who wished to attend were unable to get seats and phone orders from Trenton and other places had to be refused.

Aside from the usual discomforts attendant upon the affliction of thoughtless people who always make a grand stand ire-raising stampede to seats after the curtain goes up, and the busy chatterers who whisper to companions all through any entertainment, the evening was one of rare enjoyment and the splendid acting and rare scenic effects were appreciated to the full.

"Experience" follows the thought which inspired "Everywoman," but in this case it is a young man "Youth" starting out in life seeking fame and fortune. Diverted by Pleasure, Youth leaves Ambition and scorns Opportunity to tread the Primrose Path which eventually lands him in the depths where Poverty, Crime and other loose characters are his companions and he takes the cocaine route to temporary forgetfulness but horrid awakening. Finally the Miracle of a Mother's Love carried to him in a message from the church in the notes of that grand old hymn, "Lead, Kindly Light," rescues him from Degradation, and, bruised and broken, he returns to his cottage home among the flowers and fragrance of innocent rural life and is welcomed by his sister, Hope, and his sweetheart, Love, and finds that Ambition has only been sleeping and is ready to lead him anew upon a journey to the heights, this time with Love as his constant companion.

Donald Scanlon, who plays Youth, is a young actor of much promise. In the opening scenes he was shy and unsophisticated—as he should be—but under the influence of Experience developed most satisfactorily. The other male roles were minor in comparison, but excellent work was done by Fraser Coulter as Wealth, Harry Lane as Poverty and William Betts as Grouch.

Albert Andrus, as "Experience," gives a fine and finished presentation of this part, which is very exacting.

Of the ladies, Miss Francis Richards as Pleasure was as attractive as that goddess is supposed to be. Miss Maude Gage Files, as Intoxication, and later as Frailty, was so good in both roles that it was difficult to indicate in which she excelled.

A large company of ladies and gentlemen gave satisfactory support in other parts.

"The production is well staged and costumed, the scene in the Primrose Path, and up-to-date cabaret being especially good, a startling contrast being afforded in another scene by the "House of Last Resort," where the down-and-outers and cheap crooks aped in some small degree the cabaret pleasures of the rich. Here the slumming party flaunted their fine robes against a sorry background of pine boards and sawdust and the fine feathers of Fifth Avenue brushed against the bedraggled plumes and broken pinions of the Bowery.

"Experience" is a story of life as it may be experienced by any young man who sets out to conquer the world and is told in a series of remarkable and truthful human pictures, and emphasized by startling contrasts, the whole being interpreted by talented actors and actresses who seemed to live their parts and never overplayed them.

Washing Won't Rid Head Of Dandruff

The only sure way to get rid of dandruff is to dissolve it, then you destroy it entirely. To do this, get about four ounces of ordinary liquid arvon; apply it at night when retiring; use enough to moisten the scalp and rub it in gently with the finger tips.

Do this tonight and by morning most if not all, of your dandruff will be gone and three or four more applications will completely dissolve and entirely destroy every single sign and trace of it no matter how much dandruff you may have.

You will find, too, that all itching and digging of the scalp will stop at once and your hair will be fluffy, lustrous, glossy, silkly and soft, and look and feel a hundred times better.

You can get liquid arvon at any drug store. It is inexpensive and never fails to do the work.

His First Visit.

Mr. Lloyd George would seem, says Liverpool Post, to have had a premonition of his future eminence when he paid a first visit to London as a lad of nineteen. "Went to the house of commons," he wrote home to his uncle. "Very disappointed. I will not say but that I eyed the assembly in a spirit similar to that in which William the Conqueror eyed England on his visit to Edward the Confessor as the region of his future domain. Oh, vanity!"

Injections of Cane Sugar.

Doctor Rosenthal reports to the Presse Medicale (Paris) that he has administered intravenous injections of a strong solution of saccharose in numerous cases of tuberculosis. The procedure exerts a manifest tonic action. It raises the blood pressure, augments the body weight, and indirectly produces a favorable effect on the tuberculous lesions. These results are ascribed by the author to an enhancement of the functions of the liver

It Worked.

McMackerel was defending a man in a murder case, according to an exchange. The case looked hopeless; the prosecution was soon done. Then McMackerel rose. In a quiet conversational tone McMackerel began to talk to the jury. He just described in vivid colors a pretty country cottage hung with honeysuckle, a young wife preparing supper, and the rosy youngsters waiting at the gate to greet their father on his return home for the evening meal. Suddenly McMackerel stopped. He drew himself up to his full height. Then striking the table with his fist, he cried, in a voice that thrilled every bosom. "Gentlemen, you must send him back home to them!" A red-faced juror choked and blurted out: "By George, sir, we'll do it!" McMackerel without another word, sat down, and ten minutes later the jury brought in a verdict of acquittal. The prisoner wept as he shook his counsel's hand. "No other man on earth could have saved me as you have done, Mr. McMackerel," he sobbed. "I ain't got no wife or family, sir."

The Powder He Wanted.

Sir Arthur Currie is fond of telling the following story:

In the early days of the war, says Sir Arthur, an old farmer, living way back on the far Western prairies, was feeling rather out of sorts, and sent his eighteen-year-old son, George, to the nearest settlement, ten miles distant, for a seidlitz powder.

Arrived there, George promptly enlisted. He fought right through the war, was twice wounded, rose to commissioned rank, and returned recently to the farm, his breast covered with medals and decorations, including the V.C. and the French Croix de Guerre.

"Well, dad?" concluded the returned hero, after briefly and modestly recounting his exploits.

Then the old man replied:—

"George," he said, "wot have ye done with my seidlitz powder?"

What About It?

While polling one of the Toronto wards during the recent election campaign a canvasser, after enquiring for the man of the house and learning that he was not at home, asked the following question of the woman who had answered his knock: "What party does your husband belong to?" This was the reply: "I'm the party my husband belongs to. What about it?"

WOULD REMAIN 'UNDER COVER'

Sergeant Had His Reasons for Not Making at That Time a "Full an' Free Confession."

An American colonel in France was having difficulty with his safe. It was the headquarters safe. Its lock had jammed, and none of his staff could open it. While they were struggling with it a negro sergeant came up to them apologetically.

"Cul'n'l," he said, "if I ain't intrudin' into dis heah difficulty, I believes, sah, dat I might he'p yah."

"Yes?" said the colonel. "What do you suggest?"

"Cul'n'l," said the sergeant, "I suggests Co'p'l Hall."

"Corporal Hall? Why Corporal Hall?"

"Co'p'l Hall," the sergeant explained, under his voice, "was fo' foah years a bugglah."

They sent for Corporal Hall and Corporal Hall opened the safe.

"Well, sergeant," the colonel said, "I'm glad to know about Corporal Hall. I wish I'd known it sooner. It would have saved us a lot of time with that safe. And tell me, sergeant!—in case we may need to call on you some day—in what direction do your particular talents lie?"

"Cul'n'l," the sergeant answered, "Ah doan' want to tell no lies. Standin' as Ah does daily in de presence of mah Makeh, mos' doubtless Ah doan' want to tell no lies. But if de time comes when Ah kin he'p yah, sah, Ah'll make a full an' free confession, a full an' free confession, sah."—Ben B. Lindsey in the Cosmopolitan Magazine.

Predictions Near Fulfillment.

Napoleon prophesied at St. Helena that there would be no kings in Germany a century after his death. Ten years before the Huns broke loose, Lord Roberts predicted that if a great European war came in our days, Ferdinand Foch, who was then an unknown officer, would be one of the most famous actors in it.

A rather neat prediction was made as far back as 1896 by the redoubtable Frenchman, Henri Rochfort, marquess and anarchist.

"We cannot get Alsace-Lorraine back by ourselves," he told an interviewer. "But one day the German eagle will get drunk with pride and will annoy the British bulldog. Then the bulldog will form an alliance with us to kill the eagle, and we shall recover the lost provinces."—London Answers.

"Autumn" or "Fall."

Both are correct, "autumn" being rather more classic and generally used in England, while "fall" is now distinctly American and more expressive in its reference to the time of falling leaves. In England, the autumn is still sometimes called "the fall of the leaf." An English writer says: "Fall is better on the merits than autumn, in every way; it is short, Saxon, picturesque; it reveals its derivation to everyone who uses it, not to the scholar only, like autumn; and we once had as good a right to it as the Americans, but we have chosen to let the right lapse and to use the word now is no better than larceny." But if "fall" is more expensive, "autumn" has sanction of long usage and classical approval. The poets all give it the preference. Different ones speak of "congenial autumn," and "yellow autumn, weather with nodding corn."

THAT NIGHT COUGH

Could anything be more trying or more exhausting? Peps will end it! The Pine vapor breathed down the air passages when a Peps is dissolved in the mouth relieves the irritation, soothes the inflamed place and stops the cough.

Mr. John Doussept of Little Current, Ont., says: "I was troubled with an irritating cough that kept me awake at nights. Nothing I took gave me relief until I used Peps. This wonderful breathe-able remedy, however, has entirely rid me of the cough."

For asthma, bronchitis, laryngitis, sore throat and colds use Peps. All dealers. 50c. box.

PEPS

"Passing" for Insurance.

A Philadelphia physician, Doctor Gaillard, who has examined great numbers of men for life insurance companies, informs me that "the popular styles in physique have changed," Girard writes in the Philadelphia Press.

When I asked him to elucidate, he replied:

"Not so long ago life insurance companies made a great ado and scanned with care all applicants who were underweight. Now underweight is passed over as of little consequence, while overweight is reckoned as the stumbling block."

In other words, the thin man was once regarded as a poor risk, whereas now he is preferred to the stout man.

When I asked the doctor to tell me the reason for this switch around in the popularity of the two types of the male form divine, he said tuberculosis, once the dread of the thin man, has been far outclassed in fatality by other organic diseases, especially of the heart, which are apt to affect the more rotund.

Truly, every dog has his day.

What Did He Mean?

The minister had eaten a very good dinner and was getting ready to leave for a long time. He happened to glance at the eighteen-year-old daughter.

"Well, well," he laughed. "I suppose that pretty soon I'll be coming back to marry this young woman to one of the interesting young men of the congregation."

The irrepressible eight-year-old son spoke up:

"Oh, no, you won't," he offered. "Mary is going to be an old bachelor."

The family's laugh told him that he had used the wrong word. So straightway he started to make it right.

"I mean an old witch," he asserted more positively than before.

"Conscription has, maybe, saved the country," growled the Tommie, "but what I object to is the company it drives a man into. I'm a plumber by trade and an honest workman, yet I'm compelled to suffer the society of such professionals as a lawyer, a minister and an auctioneer." "Not a bad selection at that, Bill," remarked his friends. "Oh, maybe, not in a way; but when the minister and the lawyer start an argument on Egyptian law in the middle of the night across half a dozen beds, what chance has even a plumber of stopping the gas leak?"

Called By Death

CHARLES A. MERRIAM

Charles A. Merriam died in Toronto on Wednesday morning where he had been living for some time. He was born in Belleville eighty years ago and lived here the most of his life. He was an engineer by trade and had been on the ferry boat crossing the bay, also in the Eagle Mill at Rossmore. He was the first engineer at the Belleville Pump House, when the works system was first installed here. He leaves four daughters and one sister, Mrs. B. R. Quincey, Murney St. Mrs. Quincey is now the last of the original Merriam family.

Knitted Gaiters.

Knitted gaiters made their appearance in Paris this past spring. White wool, snugly knitted, answers the purpose of a spat on a low shoe, and appears to good advantage. Mayhap this is a style that will find favor here as the weeks pass. We are told that shoes are going to be higher in price next autumn and leather so scarce that we may find it best to wear low shoes and gaiters. In that case these well-knitted gaiters might be a really useful fad.

BIRD APARTMENTS RENT FREE

Orchardists Seek to Encourage the Woodpecker to Settle in Their Midst, as It Were.

It may sound like a joke to speak of the manufacture of woodpecker nests, but there is actually a factory in Maine that takes many orders for such nests.

The birdhouses are constructed of pine blocks 15 inches long and from five to six inches in diameter. The back of the block is squared to permit of the patent adjustment being properly attached to the tree or placed where the house is to be located, a canopy or top piece to keep out the weather being made like a roof. A perfect nest is drilled by a reamer. Within three inches of the bottom a corkscrew indentation is made to the bird entrance, as the toes of the woodpecker are in pairs, two before and two behind, with sharp, strong claws, the whole structure of the foot making it adaptable for climbing.

The houses are sold to orchard owners, as the claim is made by the ornithologists that the woodpecker's feed consists chiefly of insects and their larvae, which the birds get by digging into the bark and wood of trees. The woodpecker's tongue is an important instrument in obtaining its feed, as it can be extended far beyond the bill, its tip being horny and furnished with a barbed filament.

A Popular Novelist.

From our smallest province, Prince Edward Island, Canada's "million acre farm," comes one of our best known authors, L. M. Montgomery, who in 1911 became Mrs. (Rev.) Ewan Macdonald of Leaskdale, Ont. Lucy Maud Montgomery was born at Clifton, P.E.I., where her father, Hugh J. Montgomery, was a merchant. Owing to the death of her mother when was was only a few months old she was brought up by her grandparents at Cavendish, P.E.I. Her education was completed at the Prince of Wales' College, Charlottetown, and Dalhousie College, Halifax. She taught school for a few years. It was while she was at the Prince of Wales' College that her first work was published, a poem, in an American magazine, although she says, "As far back as my memory runs I was writing stories and verse for my own amusement." Her first "Anne" book grew out of a request for a serial for a Sunday school weekly. It was based on an entry in an old notebook: "Elderly couple apply to orphan asylum for a boy; a girl is sent to them." The proposed serial grew to a book and from that arose a whole series of the "Anne" books.

Two Explorers.

Martin Killin and Adelbert Gumaer, the last two member of Vilhjalmur Stefansson's Canadian Arctic Expedition to leave the Arctic, are reported aboard the trading schooner Anna Alga, which is working its way toward Nome.

Killin and Gumaer were not members of Stefansson's original party. They were members of a party Storker Storkerson, Stefansson's lieutenant, led on to an icefloe last year in the hope that the Arctic drifts would carry the floe westward to Siberia. After spending eight months on the ice the men found themselves about fifty miles from their starting point. They all came ashore and Storkerson and one other member headed overland for the outside world. Killin and Gumaer boarded the Olga and started for Nome.

Storkerson's trip outside was his first in eleven years. He has been an explorer, trader and trapper along the northern rim of the continent ever since 1908. He expects to associate himself with Stefansson in handling the Canadian Government's proposal to stock the northern tundra plains with reindeer.

Dogs Eat Esquimo Church.

In the Hudson Bay country, where the dogs are half wolves, a band of these famished animals actually ate up a church. The Esquimo Christians had built a tiny chapel to hold twenty people. But the poor converts did not long enjoy the little church, of which they were so pathetically proud. The building was of whalebone, an edible substance, and one Sunday the pagan dogs ate every morsel of the sacred edifice.

Scriptural Names.

Practically all the inhabitants of Little Tancock island, Lunenburg county, Nova Scotia, are named Levy. In the majority of cases the given or Christian name is taken from the Old Testament. The Levys claim to be direct descendants of the men who followed the fisherman's calling on the shores of Galilee in the time of Christ.

Whale With Hind Legs.

A female hump-back whale, having two hind legs, fifty inches in length, has been caught at the Kyukot Whaling Station in British Columbia. Manager Ruck, of the Consolidated Whaling Company, says that in his twenty years of whaling experience he has never heard of whales having legs on the exterior.

The Agile Rhinoceros.

The rhinoceros, notwithstanding its unwieldly shape and short legs, is one of the most agile of beasts. A horseman can scarcely manage to overtake it, and in strength it is perhaps unsurpassed by any animal in the forest. In a single combat no animal but the elephant can stand up against it. To kill a rhinoceros a rifle ball must strike it just behind the shoulder.

Gave Life to Save Others

For most conspicuous bravery and self-sacrifice on the 11th October, 1918, northeast of Cambrai, when with attacking troops which came under heavy enfilade machine-gun fire from a neighboring village.

Rushing forward with nine volunteers he shot the crew of an enemy machine gun and turning it on the enemy, enabled his party to reach the village. He then rushed another machine gun, killed the crew, captured an officer and ten of the enemy and thereby cleared the end of the village.

Lieut. Algie, having established his party, went back for reinforcements, but was killed when leading them forward. His valor and personal initiative in the face of intense fire saved many lives and enabled the position to be held.—Official Record.

Cambrai was occupied by the Canadians October 9, 1918. The German army fell back along the Escaut Canal towards Valenciennes, pursued by the British forces. The banks of the canal were heavily wooded and the advance of the Canadians along the eastern shore was stiffly contested.

The second division Canadians passed on the left of Naves during October 10. About three miles northeast of this village an old sugar refinery, strongly garrisoned, took heavy toll of the passing troops. The Canadians reached a point several miles further on, but at midnight, having been relieved on the right by Imperial troops, they returned to the position near the sugar refinery.

Early on the morning of the 11th orders came through that the 20th Battalion was to attack Iwuy at nine o'clock. While the Canadians were waiting the hour of attack the Germans poured a heavy enfilade fire on the lines, and many men were killed before leaving the trenches.

The enemy had seized all positions of advantage around Iwuy. The embankment of a railway running into the town was garrisoned by machine gunners. On the outskirts of the village a group of houses near the railway provided additional cover for the gunners, and another group of houses on the right were garrisoned strongly. Heavy enfilade fire was being directed on the advancing companies of the 20th.

Lieut. Algie was in command of "B" company. At the east end of the village he saw the enemy bringing up more guns to completely enfilade the Canadian position. He collected nine volunteers and charged the gun posts, shot the crew of one enemy machine gun with his revolver and turned the gun around on the enemy. This action permitted his men to cross the railway embankment into the eastern part of the town. Lieut. Algie then rushed another machine gun, killed the crew and cut off an officer and ten men, who surrendered to the Canadian. He then turned the guns on the enemy and cleared that part of the village.

Having established his men in the village and shown them how to use the enemy machine guns, Lieut. Algie went back to the battalion for reinforcements, returning to the attack in a short time. Running ahead of his men, he advanced towards another group of houses on the right of the position already taken. The German gunners in one of the houses watched the Canadian officer coming and waited until he was quite near, then turned the whole force of the gun on him, pouring the shot directly across his chest and heart. He fell, killed instantly.

The Canadian leader gone, the Boche counter-attacked. Four enemy tanks bore down on the remnant of the 20th, which fought heroically and were able to hold the posts already established, until the 27th Battalion, advancing on the left, occupied the village and relieved the situation. About three o'clock in the afternoon the body of Lieut. Algie was found, lying across the village street in front of the house from which the enemy had directed the fire upon him. The Victoria Cross was awarded posthumously for his heroism in face of intense fire and for his gallantry in protecting the lives of the men serving with him.

Wallace Lloyd Algie, only son of James Algie, M.D., Toronto, was born at Alton, Ont., in 1891. His father is of Canadian Scottish descent; his mother was a native of Devonshire, England. Before enlistment Mr. Algie was in the service of the Bank of Toronto in Vancouver and later in Toronto. When he was able to do so he played in the 48th Highlanders band. Early in the war he took an officer's course and graduated as lieutenant, but on seeing that his services were not required in that capacity at the time, he enlisted as a private in April, 1916. He was granted his commission overseas in the 20th Battalion.

As a boy, tales of heroism and military exploits, especially stories of Claverhouse and British heroes of the Indian Mutiny and Crimean war, held great interest for Wallace Lloyd Algie, and on one of his leaves while overseas he visited the ancestral home of the Algies in Scotland and viewed the monument at the Cross of Paisley raised to the memory of James Algie and Thomas Park, of Covenanter fame and dating back to Bothwell Brig.—Carolyn Cornell in Toronto Star Weekly.

An Aero Station.

BULBS FOR BRIGHTENING

Outdoor Culture of Hardy Spring Flowering Bulbs.

An Open Situation Desirable and Reasonable Care In Planting With Protection During the First Winter—Fall Pasture for Stock.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

There is probably no class of plants that gives more satisfaction and are more thoroughly appreciated by the flower lover than a collection of spring flowering blubs, flowering as they do from quite early in spring, even before the winter covering of snow has entirely left us, until well on into the early months of summer before but very few of the other border plants are in flower. Their bright flowers are doubly acceptable on this account.

Location.—Bulbs are best planted where there is good drainage and where no surface water lies in winter or early spring. When planted in masses or beds, it is best to have the soil in the centre of the bed a few inches higher than the margin, so as to pitch the water off readily. Bulbs succeed best planted in an open situation and not too close under buildings or under the dense shade of trees. For the later flowering kinds of bulbs, however, that flower about the end of May, such as the Darwin type of tulip, a little shade prolongs the length of the blooming season considerably.

Soil.—The best kind of soil for bulbs in a moderately, rich, light, loamy soil. They will succeed fairly well in a sandy soil, but do not give as fine blooms as in soil of a loamy nature. If the soil is of a clayey nature, dig in some sand or black soil from the bush, or both, to lighten it. Fresh strawy manure should never be dug into the soil when planting. If manure is applied at planting time, it should be well decayed, barnyard manure, almost the nature of the soil itself, even then it should be dug in an inch or two underneath the bulbs so as not to touch them.

When to Plant Bulbs.—The best time for planting outdoor bulbs is about the second or third week in October, although bulbs may be planted until the ground is frozen over for the winter, even as late as the end of November or early in December. Later planted bulbs do not, as a rule, however, give as good results. The soil should be thoroughly dug and raked fine before planting.

Depth to Plant.—All of these smaller growing bulbs should be planted from two to three inches under the soil and quite thickly together, an inch and a half or two inches apart, to give a good effect. The Tulips, Dutch Hyacinths and Narcissi grow about twelve to eighteen inches in height and can be dotted in masses or blocks in flower beds, or in groups more towards the back of a perennial border. They are also very effective planted in groups among or around shrubs. Tulips and Narcissi should be planted about four inches under the surface of the soil and about six inches apart. A group of these of a circular or oval shape, fifteen to twenty inches in diameter, especially Narcissi, has a very pleasing and bright effect in early spring, dotted here and there over the perennial or mixed border.

Protecting Bulbs in Winter.—All bulbs, especially late planted ones, are best protected during the first winter, as it prevents the bulbs from heaving and lifting. Bulbs that have become well established in the border require very little if any protection in winter. Long, strawy manure, straw or coarse grass about three or four inches in depth, make a good winter covering. Green pine boughs laid over the manure prevent unsightliness. Pine boughs alone make a good winter protection. Dutch Hyacinths especially need some protection in winter, as they are not as hardy as Tulips and Narcissi. The covering should be taken off about the end of March or early in April, when the weather has become settled. Remove the covering part at a time, taking away the wet underneath part first and replacing an inch or so of the lighter part for a week or so until the top growth of bulbs becomes hardened to the weather. Hot sun is often as injurious to bulb growth as late spring frosts.

Hardy Kinds to Plant.—Tall growing, 1 to 2 feet:

Narcissus—Emperor, Empress, Bicolor Victoria, Golden Spur, Poeticus, Poeticus ornatus, Barri sonspicua, Mrs. Langtry, Stella, Poeticus Elvira.

Tulips—Darwin, Cottage Garden and Early Flowering in variety.

Dwarf-growing kinds, 6 inches to 1 foot high—Crocus in variety, Scilla, Chionodoxa (Glory of the Snow), Leucojum (Snowflake). The Paper White Narcissus, Chinese Sacred Lily, and the Roman Hyacinths are not hardy enough for planting out of doors. They are only useful for growing indoors.—W. H. Hunt, Ontario Agricultural College, Guelph.

Pasture Necessary for Stock In Fall.

One of the essential factors in keeping live stock in good condition through the fall and early winter, which is highly important, is good fall pasture, says Andrew Boss, vice-director of the Minnesota Experiment Station. Nothing excells the grasses for pasture, though mixtures of the grasses and clover are better than either grasses or clover alone and furnish the best kind of feed for all kinds of stock. Where an abundance of cultivated grasses can be obtained for pasture no further attention need be given the subject. Meadow aftermath containing clover, or timothy and clover, makes good fall feed. Clover growing in the stubble field is also an excellent fall pasture.

COMMUNITY HALLS NEEDED.

Athletic Fields Part of Plan for Rural District Development.

It is well recognized that social as well as economic conditions have much to do with community development and well being. While in many rural sections a very desirable condition socially exists, there has been noted for some time the need of proper meeting places or of desirable centres for community gatherings and for organizing community effort.

Having these facts in mind the Legislature of Ontario at its last session passed an "Act respecting the establishment of community halls and athletic fields in rural districts." This act was introduced by the Provincial Minister of Agriculture and provides for giving financial assistance to rural communities for the purpose of erecting community halls, or for providing such accommodation in consolidated schools.

In order to safeguard against the possibility of these halls being unsuitable for the purposes intended, the act provides regulations, one of which specifies that the hall shall include an auditorium or assembly room with moveable seats, stage and other equipment; reading room, including library and kitchenette. The auditorium must have a level floor and be suitable for recitals, dramatic entertainments and the discussion of public questions, it being intended that such a building should be available for all meetings and gatherings of a community nature in the broadest sense of the meaning of these terms, and consistent with the regulations made under the act.

It is also provided that each community hall shall have in connection with it at least three acres of land—adjoining the building or in close proximity to it—this land to be used for sports, picnics and outdoor gatherings. The Ontario Department of Agriculture undertakes to offer assistance in the erection of these halls by offering prepared plans of buildings, and will make a grant to the municipality desiring to erect a community hall up to 25 per cent. of the cost of the building, the grant not to exceed the sum of $2,000. The cost of the building shall be exclusive of the cost of the land for the hall and adjoining grounds. These halls are to be erected and supervised by a board of management in each township or municipality.

The plans when not supplied by the department must be approved by it before building commences. Authority is given under the act for municipalities throughout Ontario to raise the necessary money for building these halls by the issue of debentures as provided by the Ontario municipal act. The provincial regulations state that every hall erected under the act shall be available for any public gathering of an educational, fraternal, religious or social nature, or for the discussion of any public question, and no organization shall be denied use of the building for religious, fraternal or political reasons. Subject to the regulations of the board as to hours and discipline, the reading room and library are to be open to all.

This act is designed as a measure for making rural life more attractive than it has been hitherto, and to fill what has been a long felt want among the residents of rural municipalities throughout Ontario.

A Good Investment.

Speculation is one thing. Investment is another. The majority of citizens want an investment, not a speculation. And they want a safe investment. Victory Bonds fill that requirement as does no other investment. Because behind every bond there is the national wealth of Canada— a wealth so great that it staggers the imagination.

Today We Go Even Further

Sir Joseph Lister

Fifty years ago—before Sir Joseph Lister founded antiseptic surgery—surgical operations often were followed by gangrene and blood poisoning.

Today such consequences are rare exceptions, and medical science has so extended the idea of sickness prevention that the great plagues of the past no longer ravage the world. Serums, vaccines, anti-toxins, sanitation—all stand guard before the citadel of health.

Now science has developed an effective agent against that general condition that underlies 90% of all human disease—constipation.

That effective agent is Nujol.

Leading medical authorities agree that pills, salts, castor oil, etc., simply force and weaken the system. Nujol softens the food waste and encourages the intestinal muscles to act naturally, thus removing the cause of constipation and self-poisoning.

Nujol helps Nature establish easy, thorough bowel evacuation at regular intervals—the healthiest habit in the world. Get a bottle from your druggist today.

SAVE WINTER FODDERS

By Putting the Grain-Grinder and Cutting-Box in Shape.

It Pays in Time and Money to Overhaul Farm Machinery—Hints on Knife Adjustment—How to Estimate the Speed of Pulleys.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

TIME in farm work will be saved by systematically overhauling the implements and machinery. This should be done after the season's work is over. Use tends to disorganize machinery: the fixed parts become loose through vibration, wear, stress, and strain; bearings, gears, joints, all bright and moving parts are attacked by rust, particularly if left out in the weather; oil holes and grease cups become clogged with gummed oil, dust and trash. All this accumulated matter should be scraped off and the parts wiped down with a rag saturated with kerozene; afterward covered with a coating of grease or oil as a protective measure against the devasting action of rust. To render efficient service and to prevent possible accidents these machines should be kept clean, properly adjusted, and run at correct speed.

The grain grinder shaft and bearings should not be allowed to become gummed up with oil and dust; the burrs or plates should be renewed when worn. In replacing them see that they are attached so that they do not wobble, and that the sieves are free from rust, chaff, sand and gritty matter. All running parts should be kept well oiled.

Every working mechanism of the cutting box should be carefully examined and all trash and gummed oil removed from flywheel shaft, feed rolls, bearings and gears; guards and shields placed in position and securely fixed; the feed rolls should move freely up and down and the safety devices in working order. Attend to the cutter knives, have them properly ground and correctly adjusted to the flywheel in relation to the cutter bar; if too far the fodder will not be properly cut; if too close to the cutter bar the draft of the machine is increased, the knives acting as a brake on the flywheel, dulling both knives and cutter bar. Used with a blower it is important that the proper speed be developed as the fan can only create sufficient blast by running fast enough to force air through the pipe at a rate of 9 to 10 thousand feet per minute. Speed is an important factor in operating these machines for efficient service, not only as to the amount done, but also as to the quality, or the amount of work accomplished, but most manufacturers state in their catalogues the speed at which the machine should travel. The operator should figure out the size of the pulley to attain the speed required.

The rule for speeds of pulleys is the diameter of the "driving" pulley multiplied by its speed is equal to the diameter of the "driven" multiplied by its speed: or $D \times R = d \times r$ in which "D" is the diameter of the driving pulley multiplied by "R" its speed, and "d" the diameter of the driven pulley multiplied by "r" its speed. If we know three of these items we can easily figure out the fourth.

The driving pulley is the one that causes the belt to move.

The driven pulley is the one that is moved by the belt.

Possibly a farmer may have on hand an engine rated 2 h.p., speed 400 revolutions per minute with an 8-inch pulley. He buys a grinder without considering what relation its speed bears to that of his engine. When the grinder is hitched up to the engine it does not deliver the capacity expected of it. This promiscuous buying and want of forethough in purchasing machinery is responsible for a great deal of trouble and dissatisfaction. More attention should be given in this regard when buying additional machinery for the farm. We'll suppose that the grinder bought is rated 2,000 to 2,500 R.P.M., 4 inch or 5 inch pulley; capacity per hour 3 to 10 bushels depending on the condition of the grain.

Relating this grinder to the engine, we find, taking the above formula that

$$8 \times R\ 400 — d4 \times r — \frac{8 \times 400}{4} — 800$$

R.P.M., but the manufacturer's rating calls for 2,000 to 2,500 R.P.M. Hence the grinder is delivering only two-fifths of its rated capacity or something like 1 1-5th bushels per hour. To get the required speed the driving pulley on the engine should be 20 inches in diameter, worked out as follows:

$$DxR\ 400 — d4 \times r2000 — \frac{4 \times 5}{400} — 20\text{" pulley.}$$ or the speed of the engine with an 8-inch pulley should be 1,000 R.P.M. worked out thus

$$D8xR — d4 \times r2000 — \frac{4 \times 1000}{8/2} — 1000\ \text{R.P.M.}$$

This method applies also to finding the speed and size of pulleys of the cutting box.—Prof. Jno. Evans, O. A. College, Guelph

Something About Egg Circles.

There are about fifty Egg Circles in the province, ranging in membership all the way from four to 400. The story of all these egg circles and others which have failed would give an almost complete picture of how co-operation should, or should not, be carried on. In reading over the names where the circles are established, we find many of them whose previous market was the small-town local dealer, with his uneconomic method of marketing eggs. Such circles are now receiving, in spite of their distance from the central market, wholesale prices while unorganized points nearer often receive lower prices.

BUILDING AN ICEHOUSE

Good Type for Use on the Average Farm.

Every Milk Producer Should Have One—The Work and Cost of Erection Light Compared With the Benefits.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

EVERY Ontario farmer who produces Milk,—and most of the farmers do,—should store a quantity of ice each winter in order to make it easier for him to cool the milk down after the evening milking, and to keep it sweet for such short periods,—week-ends for example,—as he may be required to keep it before delivering it at the cheese factory or other point of disposal. In order to preserve the ice satisfactorily some form of ice-house or shelter is necessary. The purpose of this article is to describe in a few words a type of ice-house which will give good satisfaction.

The ice-house does not necessarily have to be expensive, but certain conditions in regard to it must obtain if the ice is to keep well. These I shall emphasie first and they are,—protection of ice from sun's rays, this is the wall, good drainage from the bottom of the house, either natural or artificial, free circulation of air through the top, air-tight foundation, plenty of good quality of dry sawdust on all sides of the mass of ice, and close packing of the ice. If these conditions can be secured in a rough bin built under a shed, or a lean-to on the shady side of a building, all well and good unless one has other good reasons for building a more expensive structure elsewhere. The matter of convenience is often a deciding factor in this case, and the type of ice-house I am about to describe is a good illustration of this fact. Only once have I seen it in use, but there is no reason why it could not be used quite generally.

This particular type consists of a lean-to structure of wood at one end of the barn which has the stable underneath. The size would vary with the amount of ice required, but probably a building 15 feet square and 12 feet high would be large enough for most farmers' needs. In this structure and at the side adjacent to the barn, or rather the basement wall, is built a concrete enclosure about 6 feet square and 6 or 6½ feet high. A door in the basement wall admits one to it. In the side opposite to the doorway there is a row of 3 or 4-inch tile near the bottom for letting in the cold air from the ice which is packed closely to the concrete storage on all three sides and over the top as well. Between the top of the storage and the barn there is a narrow passage-way or flue for allowing the foul or used air to get out, hence good circulation in the storage is provided for. In this particular case the farmer has his milk-room containing cream separator, etc., adjoining this storage and whenever he wishes to cool milk or cream or store it he puts it in this storage. Other articles, such as butter and meat, are also stored at times but of course only for a few days at a time. Hence much handling of ice is saved as well as considerable time. The building is made of wood, the studding being boarded on both sides. It would be advisable to fill the space between the two boardings with planer shavings or good quality sawdust. The roof is covered with shingles. The gables are left somewhat open for ventilation. Plenty of sawdust is used around the ice next to the walls, and also a good depth over the top, none however is used between the cakes of ice. If a few cakes of ice are required for household use they may be easily taken out of the sawdust in the top of ice-house or at one side if more convenient.

It will be seen, therefore, that this type of ice-house does double duty in a degree, namely, providing a small ice-cold storage room, cooled by the ice mass directly, in addition to housing ice for various incidental uses in the summer-time. In a case of this kind there would not be much need for taking out ice except for supplying the household refrigerator as the storage-room would take care of the ordinary cooling and preserving of products.

Believing this arrangement to be valuable, and in many cases practicable on Ontario farms, I have much pleasure in recommending it to farmers in general.—R. R. Graham, O. A. College, Guelph.

Still a Place for the Good Horse.

Horses have not been meeting a keen demand in Canada since the war broke out and have increased about 650,000 since 1914. However, a real good heavy draft horse is hard to find, and if Old Country markets are any criterion of the trend of affairs an awakening in the Canadian Draft Horse market should soon follow. Draft geldings are selling in England for from $300 to $500 and even up to $1,000 each. A returned officer told me recently of seeing a number of Canadian geldings (artillery and transport horses) sold in Old London for £100 ($500) each. About one-fifth of Great Britain's ordinary supply of work horses went to the war and a number of useful brood mares were also taken. France, Belgium, Russia and Germany, four of the great horse-producing countries, have lost a heavy percentage of their horse stock during the war. Already a shipment of Percherons has gone from Western Canada to France, and it would seem that during the period of reconstruction our horse market will be East and not West. If it will pay to breed any horse on the Canadian farm the heavy draft of good quality should turn in most money to his owner.

Canada and World Affairs

CANADA is a signatory to a world-wide Peace Treaty. It is a member of a League of Nations to help maintain peace and regain prosperity. This new order has given all Canadians a world-wide interest in affairs, and to Canada an international responsibility.

It has carried the interest of Canadians beyond the happenings of their own town, county or province.

What is happening in Europe, Asia, South America, at all ends of the earth is of vital interest to you on your farm, in your office, in your home, or in your factory. It affects you more to-day than it did yesterday. It will affect you more to-morrow.

Therefore you MUST keep informed.

The manufacturer should keep in touch with the trend of events in Russia, in Central and Western Europe, and across the Pacific, because such events have a bearing on the supply of raw materials and markets for finished products.

Business and professional men can no longer afford to live in "splendid isolation" so far as happenings outside Canada are concerned. The form and extent of political development in Great Britain and even in Continental Europe, affects conditions in Canada.

Manufacturers, business and professional men should read The Globe.

The field of organized Canadian Labor has always been largely international in scope; to-day it is almost world-wide. Labor conditions in remote corners of the earth have an influence on labor conditions in Canada. Advancement and reform that takes place in Europe, the United States, Australia, New Zealand, South Africa, and elsewhere, are the precedents on which legislation may be formed in Canada.

Therefore Organized and Unorganized Labor should read The Globe.

Women's vision, too, has gone over the Canadian horizon. They now are interested in world affairs in every phase of human effort. They have taken their place as electors of public representatives to Canada.

The women should read The Globe.

The Globe's unequalled news-gathering and news-editing organizations give it a peculiar status in the Canadian and International newspaper world. Its great variety of features and departments make it worthy of a place in every Canadian home.

"Reds" Like Canada.

All that remains of the Finnish Foreign Legion, which, under British leadership, fought the Germans on the Russian frontier, but would not fight the Bolsheviki because they were revolutionaries themselves want to come to Canada. Away up in the Baltic are these would-be Canadian citizens, who helped the allies against the Teutons, but have been a problem ever since. These are strange allies since the legion was recruited from none other than former members of the Finnish Red Guard who were expelled from their country after the last change of Government there. Men without a country, they were formed into a foreign legion, 14,000 strong, and under British and Canadian officers did good work against the Germans, who tried to cross the Russian frontier to reach Murmansk. After the armistice, however, they refused to fight the Bolsheviki. They were all but Bolshevists themselves. Through the efforts of Britain most of the legion was finally repatriated, but there was a certain element too steeped in revolutionary ideas for the Finnish Government to allow re-entry. They were blacklisted men. They were formed into details and placed under Lieut. T. S. Wetton, of Winnipeg, a Canadian who went out with the Siberian force as an officer in the Devonshires. Wetton protests they are not Bolshevists, although a little radical in tendency. He says they are anxious to come to Canada, and he has made representations to the Dominion immigration authorities in that respect. However, it is scarcely likely that Canada will see the matter in the same light. Wetton's following are the very cream of Finnish revolutionism, Oskari Tokoi, former Red Prime Minister for Finland, being an N.C.O. and a number of other prominent wavers of the red flag ranking as mere privates.

It All Depends.

The teacher was teaching his class in a mental arithmetic lesson. After "tables" had been repeated he commenced giving a series of mental sums, and presently asked an intelligent little Scot:

"How many marbles would you get if I gave 20 to be divided between you and Johnny McGregor?"

"After a moment's hesitation the youngster answered:

"I canna tell, sir."

"How's that?" queried the teacher.

"Weel, sir," said he, "ye see, it's a' accordin'. If ye gie 'em when we're both here we'd hae ten each; but if ye gie 'em tae Johnny when I wasna present, I'd only get about five; while if ye gie 'em tae me tae share when Johnny wasna here, I dinna ken whether he'd hae ony at a'!"—Columbus (S. Women in British Industries.

The vast extent to which British women replaced men in industry and commerce during the war is disclosed in a white paper just issued. It is estimated that the net increase in female workers employed outside their own homes was 1,200,000.

The number of females employed in industrial concerns and government establishments in April, 1918, were: Munitions, 701,000; other government work in industry, 774,000. The number of females employed as permanent work people in agriculture in July, 1914, was 80,000; in 1918 the number was 113,000.

Make your blood rich---strengthen your nerves, increase your vitality and build up your system generally by using

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food

You may be skeptical of what any medicine will do for you. But you are human---your vitality depends on an abundance of rich, red blood. Dr. Chase's Nerve Food supplies the ingredients from which new blood is created, and is bound to help you in the same way that it helped many thousands of others.

HERE IS THE PROOF

Woodstock

Mrs. T. Allenby, 369 Main St., Woodstock, Ont., writes:—

"For several years I have made use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food as a tonic and blood-builder. Whenever my system gets run down or I do not feel quite up to the mark, I resort to this medicine, and they never fail to build me up and strengthen me. Different members of our household have also made use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with splendid results."

Guelph

Mrs. Emma Loach, 95 York Road, Guelph, Ont., writes:—

"Last year my system became rundown, and I was troubled with nervousness. I had frequent headaches, and found it difficult to get a good night's sleep. I sometimes had a creepy sensation or hot flashes over my body. I secured some of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food in January, and after using them for a time I noticed an improvement. I therefore continued the treatment until the headaches and that creepy feeling disappeared. I got better control of my nerves, and now can go to bed, and get a real good night's rest. We think a great deal of Dr. Chase's medicines, and I can certainly recommend the Nerve Food."

London

Mrs. S. Meathrel, 23 Hyla Street, London, Ont., writes:—

"About a year ago I had a complete collapse from my nerves. I was taken to the hospital for a treatment, but it did not give me much relief. When I was brought home again, I went to the country for a change of air. I seemed to be a little better while there, but after my return home I did not feel much better. I used to have nervous spells, when my limbs would begin to shake, then grow cold, and I would be completely exhausted. I was also troubled with an accumulation of gas on my stomach, which caused palpitation of the heart. At last I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and after I had used them for a while, I could see that they were helping me, so I continued using them until I became quite well again. I became real strong and healthy, could sleep well at night, and was able to do my own housework. As I got stronger the nervous spells disappeared, and I have not had one since. I also used an occasional Kidney-Liver Pill in connection with the Nerve Food, which I think cured the gas on my stomach. I have received such benefit from these medicines that I wish to recommend them to others."

Brockville

Mr. M. B. McCarten, 88 Church St., Brockville, Ont., writes:—

"About five years ago I was troubled with nervousness and sleeplessness. Owing to my business (a baker) I had long hours and only broken rest, and became so rundown that when I could get the time to sleep, sleep would not come. Through reading some of the advertisements, and also looking over a family receipt book, I decided to try Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. I purchased a box, tried it, and continued the treatment until I found myself much improved, and could get a good night's rest. Since then, when I feel the need of them, I resort to Dr. Chase's Nerve Food again, with the same good results. I gladly recommend the use of this treatment to anyone suffering from nervousness or sleeplessness.

Peterboro

Mrs. James Bogue, 228 Dublin St., Peterboro, Ont., writes:—

"Three years ago I noticed that our children seemed to be suffering from bad nerves and poor appetites, and were inclined to anaemia. Knowing the good of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, I started to give them a treatment of this medicine. I found it built them right up, made them bright and cheery and restored their usual good health.

"I have also used the Nerve Food myself and found it very beneficial for nerves and heart. In fact I have found Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to be such a valuable medicine for general family use that I have recommended it to many of our friends and acquaintances."

Hamilton

Mrs. S. Staunton, 136 McNab St. N., Hamilton, Ont., writes:—

"I have used Dr. Chase's Nerve Food a run-down system, and found it splendid for strengthening and building up the body. I can recommend it to any person requiring a good tonic."

Picton

Mrs. Arthur Hicks, Picton, Ont., writes:—

"About a year ago I was on the verge of nervous prostration. I became very irritable and could scarcely stand the noise of the children. As for sleep, it was impossible. Then I had an attack of neuritis in my right arm and little finger. I spent a great deal of money on different medicines, and doctored with different doctors, trying to get relief, but without success. Finally I triad Dr. Chase's Nerve Food and they have given me great benefit. My husband could see a great improvement in my looks in a short time. I feel so much better that I cannot speak too highly of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and would recommend them to anyone suffering from nervous troubles."

Collingwood

Mr. Harry Edward Trotman, First St., Collingwood, Ont., writes:

"It is with great pleasure I write to tell you the splendid results I have secured through the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. Before I commenced this treatment, I suffered from nervousness — was restless, easily worried; had frequent headaches and neuralgic pains through my body, especially in the back. I could neither sleep nor eat well, my circulation was poor and the heart action seemed weak. I also had attacks of indigestion. I tried several different remedies, but could not gain permanent relief. At last I started taking Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, and this treatment, together with an occasional Kidney-Liver Pill, worked wonders in my case. Five boxes of Nerve Food cured me. My wife has also derived great benefit from the same treatment, and we shall never be without these medicines in the house as long as we can get them."

At this season almost everybody is in need of restorative treatment to keep up energy and vigor and to maintain health, strength and vitality. Everywhere people are talking about Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, because it seems to be exactly what is required in the great majority of cases to restore the run-down human system. 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.75, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Ltd., Toronto. The portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., are on every box.

THE PRINCE WITH THE NORTH WEST MOUNTED POLICE.

There was a riot of color, sensational riding and fun at the R. N. W. M. P. barracks at Regina following the inspection of the famous force by His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. Drawn up on the square were the depot division, the physical training class and a squadron of mounted men for inspection. The Prince passed slowly through the lines, stopping here and there to speak with men with overseas service and displaying a decided interest in the winter dress and different types of uniforms on parade.

Addressing the officers, N. C. O.'s and men, following the inspection, His Royal Highness complimented them on their smart appearance. In the course of his remarks he showed himself to be familiar with the history of the force, which, he declared, was as famous as the Dominion itself. He referred to the work of the R. N. W. M. P. in the Klondike in the first days of the gold rush, and the respect the uniform had gained in the West. The record of the force, he said, was known in England, and the name was famous in all parts of the world.

Immediately after the inspection a bunch of untrained horses were brought in, and for a time there was real excitement.

It was evident that the Prince wanted to get into the crowd and get a better view of what was going on but each time he managed to get in the danger zone some official led him gently to one side.

The mounted squad put their mounts through stunts. The horses lay down, played dead, and did all sorts of things. The action was fast; rider after rider would break loose and dash up across the square would lean far from the saddle and pick up some object from the ground.

THE WEATHER
Fresh southwest winds mostly cloudy and mild today and on Saturday, few local snow flurries.

Get Together Spirit At Community Conference

INTERESTING ADDRESS BY MR. CROSBY UPON A HELPFUL SPIRIT OF COMMUNITY CO-OPERATION — WILL BELLEVILLE GO AHEAD OR STAND STILL?—PUSHERS WANTED.

A Community Conference meeting was held in the City Hall last evening which was fairly well attended, a few ladies being among those present. This conference was in connection with the campaign in progress here under the auspices of the Canadian City Bureau for a reorganization of the Board of Trade or the establishment of a Chamber of Commerce.

Ald. Bone was chairman and in referring to the campaign said it was a project for the reorganization of the Board of Trade which he considered was necessary. The Canadian City Bureau were assisting and reports from other cities where such a campaign has been inaugurated were very encouraging. We have a city that is beautifully situated and it has many advantages which other cities have not. In the past some factories have died out in this city, but we are now going to try and build up the city industrially and otherwise. The city is surrounded by a fine agricultural country and this is a great advantage. He would urge all citizens to assist in this movement to promote the city's interest.

Letters of regret were read from Col. Marsh, Ald. Riggs Col. Ponton and Mr. J. Elliott of their inability to be present owing to attending the annual meeting of the Associated Board of Trade at Toronto.

R. A. CROSBY

Mr. Crosby in his opening remarks said that there were two attitudes in which to approach a conference of this nature. The first is that we are citizens of no mean city and vice versa. What does the future hold out for the next five years as a citizen of the city. The past is behind us and the future is before us. The The next five years Belleville will be what the citizens make it. We must not only live up to the spirit of the law but the letter of it. The Canadian City Bureau endeavors and does invigorate the spirit of the community. The spirit of co-operation would be developed, a spirit of giving of our means to assist the city to develop it as it should develop—men are bigger in more ways than one if they give and give voluntarily. Cultivate the spirit of giving and service also the spirit of community action. Continuity of action was needed in a community and a spirit of community appreciation. Seize into your mind the spirit that is going to dominate the new organization of the city. It must be a democratic organization, an organization that is working for the advantage of the city in every respect.

In this new organization a Board of nine directors will be selected by two ballots. A programme of work will be placed on a ballot and questions will be asked and these will be considered. These questions will be varied in their character embracing industries, school buildings, recreation grounds and other matters appertaining to the city's development. This program of work will be considered by the Board of Trade of Chamber of Commerce will carry out. A program of work must be outlined looking to a Belleville you desire in 1925. Every man will be called upon to do his part in assisting in the new organization, and business men and citizens generally will give their time and talents to carry out plans that may be formulated for the benefit of the city. The spirit of action must be prominent.

A working membership is what is desired in this organization. Beginning with the week of December 1, will be inaugurated an extensive drive for membership. There are 1500 to 1800 people in Belleville who should become members of the new organizations. Teams will be selected to canvas the city to procure members. This will demonstrate the value of team work also co-operation work.

Ald. Bone—We are going to have a good live Board of Trade and have a paid secretary. The city has moved ahead of late and new industries are coming in. Every citizen should try and do something to help the city along.

H. F. KETCHESON

Mr. H. F. Ketcheson being called upon said there was no doubt we had one of the best cities in Canada, but there had not been a co-operative spirit among our citizens. We have water communication also railway facilities and he believed we were on the eve of greater things for Belleville. We should support this organization and assist in promoting the city's welfare. Let us get together, and link up together as one, not sit back and say let the other fellow do it. Do not criticize, but link up and make Belleville a progressive city.

W. W. ELLIOTT

Mr. W. W. Elliott stated that he was a new resident of the city and he was much impressed with the city and its surroundings.

COL. E. D. O'FLYNN

Col. O'Flynn said he believed in organization and if we worked together we would go over the top in this new organization as we did in the Victory Loan.

Mr. W. R. McCreary, as a business man, said that Belleville was a fine city and it could be made and no doubt be made a great, progressive city. He was in hearty accord with the new organization.

W. B. DEACON

Mr. W. B. Deacon was pleased that the City Bureau had been brought to this city. A number of cities of late had gone forward and Belleville will do so if we unite. In the matter of Victory Bonds over one million dollars had been subscribed for in this city, when it was stated that we could not do this. We have opportunities at our door to make this a great city and keep our boys and girls at home. Some of the largest institutions in this country are being managed by Belleville boys. The City Bureau men have come here to give us the benefit of their experience. We want co-operation in this matter. If we get together we will make this a bigger and better Belleville.

LIBERTY LEAGUE PRESIDENT ARRESTED

Peterborough, Nov. 21.—Yesterday afternoon J. Guise Bagley, a local lawyer, was arrested by the police on a charge of manufacturing liquor and having a still in his possession. The still and a number of barrels were removed to the police station.

Mr. Bagley will appear in the Police Court in the morning and unless he receives bail this evening will remain in custody over night.

The accused was President of the local branch of the Citizens' Liberty League, and until a few weeks before the election was Assistant Secretary of the West Peterborough Conservative Association.

LOUISVILLE REFUSES TO HEAR F. KREISLER

Louisville, Ky., Nov. 21—At the suggestion of Mayor Smith, Fritz Kreisler, Austrian violinist, cancelled his contract for an appearance at one of the leading opera houses here last night. Mayor Smith took cognizance of the action of the Louisville Post, American Legion and eight civic and social clubs, which within the last few days have addressed him, protesting against Kreisler's appearance on the ground that it offered opportunity for sympathy propaganda for enemy aliens.

Prince Of Wales Farewell At Halifax

HALIFAX, Nov. 21—An official announcement of the program of His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales during his two days' stay here has not been made, pending the arrival of Sir Joseph Pope, Secretary of State, who was expected to arrive from Ottawa last night, but did not. It is practically certain that H.M.S. Renown, with the Prince on board, will arrive in the harbor from New York on Sunday at sunset. The Dominion Government will entertain His Royal Highness at a dinner at the Halifax Club on Monday evening and from the club the Prince will go to the Government House, and be the guest at a dance there. On Tuesday H. R. H. will give a luncheon on the Renown and the ship will sail that evening for England.

Daylight Saving Is Carried After A Tie

Chairman's Vote Swings Ontario Boards of Trade in Favor.

TORONTO, Nov. 21—Representatives and delegates from the Board of Trade of practically every city and most of the towns of Ontario gathered in the Council Chamber, City Hall yesterday morning for the sixth annual meeting of the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce. On behalf of the city, Mayor Church extended a welcome to the delgates. Mr. K. J. Dunstan, President of the Toronto Board of Trade in a brief address welcomed them on behalf of the local board, expressing his pleasure at the large attendance. Mr. Wm. Taylor, Owen Sound, president of the association in his address referred to the work of the various boards during the past year and touched on the work to be accomplished in the coming year.

FAVOR GOVT. ASSISTANCE

Mr. Dunstan expressed the opinion that the Federal Government should give to all British subjects desiring it sufficient assistance to start them in a fair way in farming. "Double the production of the farms and reduce the cost of foodstuffs to all" he said. He hoped the U.F.O. would be successful in their undertakings.

SECRETARY'S REPORT

F. G. Morley, secretary, presented the report of the Executive Committee. The present membership is 53 Boards of Trade and balance on hand $488.58.

An amendment to the constitution to increase the number on the executive from 12 to 15 members, in addition to the officers was adopted.

WOULD SAVE DAYLIGHT

Following the addresses the boards got down to business dealing with some of the 24 resolutions on the agenda. Resolution No. 24, the last on the list, was the second dealt with. It was one passed by the Toronto Board of Trade in connection with day light saving. It read as follows: 'Wheras the saving of daylight has resulted beneficially throughout the Dominion; and wheras the populous centres of Canada adopted the measure almost unanimously this year; be it therefore resolved that this Board of Trade desires to again place itself on record as favoring daylight savings as a Dominion-wide measure; and be it further resolved that a copy of this resolution be forwarded to the leading Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce of Canada.

A tie vote was recorded and the chairman waved his personal views in voting for the resolution. "I am voting for what I think is the best for the country at large," he explained.

NO CLOCK TINKERING

"Let us go to work an hour earlier, but let the clocks remain as they are" advised Delegate Elliott of Belleville.

The following resolution by the Belleville Board of Trade was also taken up—resolved that the Provincial and Dominion Governments be memorialized and urged to prepare and publish immediately a reliable and up-to-date general report upon the minerals and metals of Ontario, their distribution, quantity and quality and especially with regard to iron, the foundation of one of Canada's basic industries.

STANDARDIZE INVOICES

A motion by Guelph asking for a universal or standard form of working throughout the British Dominions for all invoices requiring a Customs declaration was also dealt with. Some members pointed out that at present shippers of goods from Canada to Australia, India, New Zealand, South Africa, and other British colonies are required for Customs purposes to place an invoice an entirely different form of wording, and while it does not differ much in substance, it does differ considerably in form.

The executive of the associated boards is composed of: hon. presidents Dr. H. T. Reason, London; Lt.-Col. W. N. Ponton, Belleville; A. J. Young North Bay; R. Home Smith, Toronto; President Wm. Taylor, Owen Sound; 1st vice-president Arthur Hewitt, Toronto; 2nd vice-president, John Elliott Belleville; 3rd vice-president Wm. Anderson, Chatham; secretary-treasurer, F. G. Morley, Toronto; executive; Lt. Col. H. Brock, Toronto; M. P. Byrnes Collingwood; A. B. Carscallen, Wallaceburg; W. F. Cockshutt, M.P., Brantford; K. J. Duston Toronto; John Goodwin, Welland; T. J. Hannigan, Guelph; John G. Henry, Sudbury; Capt. H. E. Knobel, Port Arthur; G. C. Martin, Hamilton; G. F. McKimm, Smith's Falls; A. T. H. Taylor, Cochrane.

$50,000 Worth Of Drugs Seized

Large Consignment Believed to Have Been Sent by Montreal Chinaman.

DETROIT, Mich., Nov. 21.—Morphine, cocaine and other habit forming drugs to a toal value of more than fifty thousand dollars were seized in Detroit when internal revenue officers acting with local authorities arrested Frank I. Stich, alias Thomas Webber in his room at the Tuller Hotel. A few hours later Harry Jason, with a woman he claims to be his wife, were arrested at the Morgan House, Bagley and Cass avenues. In their rooms were found a quantity of drugs.

Authorities believe that Jason was acting as a "runner" for Stich. Frank Wilkinson, inspector of detectives, identified Stich as a widely known pickpocket, who has been arrested in nearly every large American city. Stitch was first brought to attention by federal officers last October, when he dispatched a telegram in code to a Chinese named Wang Hung, in Montreal. Hung, according to federal officers, is known as the "million dollar doper."

For some time federal authorities have been aware that large shipments of drugs have been coming to Detroit from Eastern Canada. Convinced that Stitch was a member of the drug ring, federal agents have followed him constantly up to the time of his arrest here yesterday.

Violation of the Harrison Narcotic law and of federal opium law is charged against Stitch, while Jason is charged with violating the former law. His wife is held as a witness and may later be charged with violation of one or more federal narcotic laws.

The dope seized at the Tuller Hotel is thought to have been sent to Stitch by Wang Hung from Montreal. Included wih cocaine, morphine, heroin and opium were 'dope' scales, pipes 'dope' furnaces and a 'doper's' spoon The pipes are of rich design.

Cocaine found in Jason's room in Morgan House is estimated as worth $200. It was found done up in small packages supposedly for the trade.

Formal Peace May Come Sooner

OTTAWA, Nov. 21.—That the action of the United States Senate in declining to ratify the Peace Treaty is not likely to delay the formal proclamation of peace, is the opinion held in Government circles at the capital. While definite advices are lacking as to the exact position of all matters relating to the formal proclamation of peace at Paris, it is thought that the final step would not have been taken so long as there was a possibility of ratification by the United States Senate. Definite action by the Senate may, therefore, bring the final termination of the war perceptibly nearer instead of postponing the event.

It is not known here whether or not the ratification papers of Great Britain France and Italy have all been deposited at Paris, the doubt being in regard to Italy, but once they are, peace can be formally proclaimed, the peace treaty having been ratified by three of the great allied powers which participated in the war.

Canada's formal proclamation of peace it is expected, will follow close upon the heels of that of Great Britain. As soon as the proclamation appears in the Canada Gazette, which should be only a matter of a few hours after word is received, war-time orders-in-Council issued under the authority of the War Measures Act, including the prohibition regulations, will cease to be operative, excepting such as are continued in force by virtue of legislation passed at the recent session of Parliament.

Big Seizure Of Liquor In St. John

Wm. Webber's Residence Raided by Inspectors—Got 2,000 Quarts. Station.

ST. JOHN, N. B., November 21—More than 2,000 quarts of assorted liquors and plant supposed to have been used for manufacture of liquor were seized when liquor inspectors raided the residence of Wm. Webber in an exclusively residential district. This is said to be the largest single seizure of liquor in the province since the prohibition act came into effect and the discovery of the manufacturing plant lends additional interest.

Webber was placed under arrest on Monday evening as he was leaving the city on the Halifax train, as the result of the discovery of five-gallon tins containing liquor in a stateroom which had been engaged by him. He was released early in the morning, when he made a deposit of $200 for his appearance, but he didn't turn up when his case was called later in the day. It is reported that he has left the city. They found in his cellar hundreds of bottles of liquor of many varieties and brands, neatly arranged in wooden racks, and a cask of liqour set up and tapped ready for action.

In addition to the manufacturing paraphernalia, there were 683 bottles of liquor, a cask of alcohol, ten cans of alcohol, two casks of rum, 2 casks of Scotch whiskey, several large demijohns, seven jugs and other packages. Devices for bottling, corking and labelling, materials for use for these purposes and a quantity of burnt sugar, suupposedly for use as coloring matter, were included in the seizure. The goods were taken to the government offices where they were stored. Webber is head of a large overalls manufacturing company which does business here.

Lost And Found Her Gold Tooth

KINGSTON, Nov. 21.—That truth is stranger than fiction is borne out by the story told of a Kingston young lady just recently returned from a visit to a neighboring city. While in that city she was driving home in an automobile from a dance, when, leaning over the side of the auto, the one false tooth she has (one heavily filled with gold) fell out and disappeared on the street The auto was stopped as soon as possible but the night being dark, the search was in vain.

However, bright and early the next morning, before the street sweeper got busy, the fair Kingston lady and the young lady with whom she was visiting repaired to the scene of the catastrophe and would you believe it, actually found the missing tooth a short distance from where they expected to find it.

Needless to say the owner was a happy young lady and now—the lost tooth having been thoroughly cleaned, fumigated, etc., and so forth—is again in its proper place and doing the full work which nature [illegible] it to do.

When one considers how small a tooth is and how large a thing a city street is—especially with an all-night heavy traffic—the finding of the tooth is really remarkable. Dame Fortune does indeed smile upon some of her fair ones!

PAPER BUYS FISH TO FIGHT PRICES

St. Thomas, Nov. 21.—Some twenty odd express cars of fish bearing huge signs, "This car contains 40,000 pounds of fresh fish for The Detroit News, to be sold at ten cents a pound, to reduce the H. C. of L.," passed through this city over the M.C.R., en route from Boston, Mass., to the border American city. It is reported that the newspaper has contracted for one million pounds of fish as the first of a series of drives against high prices.

Ratification Of Peace Treaty Fixed For Dec. 1

SUPREME COUNCIL DEFINITELY DECIDES ON DATE OF FORMAL RATIFICATION OF TREATY — ARRANGING PROTOCOL FOR GERMANY TO SIGN GUARANTEEING FULFILMENT OF ARMISTICE CONDITIONS.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

PARIS, Nov. 21.—The Supreme Council today definitely agreed upon December 1 as the date when the German peace treaty will be formally ratified.

Further important discussions have been held with German representatives now here in connection with the notification by the Allies that the protocol must be signed by Germany guaranteeing fulfilment of the armistice conditions. These discussions have been confined chiefly to the have not stated whether they will sign the protocol. As yet the Germans have not stated whether they will singa the document. The American delegation is still without instructions as to its participation in the peace conference following the failure of the Senate to ratify the treaty, but they attended the meeting of the Supreme Council today. It is quite expected here that a compromise ratification resolution will eventually be passed in the United States.

Stock Market Stronger.

New York, Nov. 24.—Another rally in foreign exchange and indications that the money stringency has been overcome, facilitated further advances of prices during the morning on the Stock Exchange. Easier money conditions were confirmed by operating a rate of eight per cent. for call loans. Crucible Steel, General Motors and High Grade Oils gained to thirteen points in the first hour. Tobaccos kept pace with stronger food, leather and shipping issues, but rails were relatively dull and irregular. Steel equipments and motors shared more actively in the broader buying at noon.

Profits Fixed On Ready-Mades

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

TORONTO, Nov. 21.—The Board of Commerce today issued an order prohibiting a gross profit of more than thirty-three and one-third per cent. on sales of ready-to-wear and partly ready-to-wear clothing. On less expensive suits costing the retailer under twenty-five dollars, the Board allows only twenty-six per cent. profit. Out of this gross profit the retailer must pay rent, taxes, salaries and provide for depreciation. The order goes into effect in Toronto Dec. 15, and the Board says: "If before Jan. 20 no good reasons are shown why it should not come into effect throughout the Dominion it will no doubt be made Dominion-wide. The order was signed by Judge Robson, chairman, and Commissioners Murdock and O'Connor.

Last Day In United States For The Prince Of Wales

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

NEW YORK, Nov. 21.—Edward Albert, Prince of Wales, began the last full day of his visit to New York today with a trip to the grave of Theodore Roosevelt at Oyster Bay. The Prince carried a wreath to place on the late ex-President's grave. The day's programme called for his presence at a noon luncheon at Piping Rock Club, and in the afternoon he planned to play host to one hundred school children aboard the British battle cruiser Renown. This evening he will be the guest at dinner of the Pilgrims, at which Chauncey M. Depew will preside. A brief visit to the Hippodrome and a reception at the Seventh Regiment armory arranged by Mr. and Mrs. Rodman Wannamaker, will complete the day's events. Tomorrow the Prince will end his visit to the United States, sailing on the Renown for Halifax.

Passed Bad Check On Picton Bank

Mr. John D. Hoskin, a young man whose home is at Cressy, North Marysburg Township, was arrested on Friday night last in Picton by Chief Biddle, charged with obtaining money under false pretences from the Standard Bank, Picton. He elected to be tried before Magistrate Williams on Wednesday, and pleaded guilty, and getting a sentence of two years in the Reformatory at Toronto.

The offence was committed on Wednesday, November 12th, when Hoskin presented a cheque for $420 at the Standard Bank, Picton, drawn in favor of James Cole and signed J. L. Shannon. The cheque was paid by the teller, but the genuineness of the signature was questioned by another of the bank employees, and on enquiry, it was found that the cheque had not been issued by Shannon. Investigations were at once begun, ending in the arrest of Hoskin. Suspicion was directed to him owing to the fact that he had made payment of some accounts that were overdue.

The sum of $60 in bills was recovered and arrangements were made for restitution of the balance.

Obsequies

MRS. HENRIETTA FENN

Yesterday afternoon, a number of relatives and friends were in attendance at the obsequies of the late Mrs. Henrietta Fenn. At the residence of her son-in-law, Mr. R. Empson, Thurlow, a service was held, conducted by Rev. Mr. Wallace and assisted by Rev. Mr. McMullen. Interment took place at the 4th Concession Burying Ground in Sidney. A number of beautiful floral tributes were placed upon the casket. The bearers were Messrs. J. W. Gay; R. Campbell; J. Bush; H. Fenn; T. H. and J. Waldron.

Pastor Stricken With Smallpox

LINDSAY, Nov. 21—After administering the sacrament at the morning service in Cambridge street Church on Sunday, the pastor, Rev. Mr. Tilton, was found to be suffering from small pox. Since Sunday three cases have developed among the members of the congregation, in spite of the vaccination of every one who attended the sacramental service.

Two weeks ago Mr. Tilton was taken ill, and the doctors pronounced it as being ptomaine poisoning. He continued to look after his pastoral duties, but on Sunday he broke out with sores, and after the service it was discovered to be smallpox.

Services in the church will likely be suspended for some time.

WOMAN BEAT MAN THEN HAD HIM ARRESTED

ST. THOMAS, Nov. 21—When Mrs. Hattie Longe of Port Stanley had a fisherman named Chas. Belmore in the Police Court for assault it was the man who showed all the marks of combat. Mrs. Longe looked very fresh, and suffered no wounds.

The evidence soon showed Magistrate Hunt that the woman had not only started the fight, but had carried on a very one-sided battle.

"She said she had no notion to slap me, and I invited her to do so, and she did. The second time she stuck her finger in my eye," said the fisherman.

The Squire looked them both over and gave judgment ruling that the complainant should pay costs. "I find that the complainant scored the most points in the fight, and therefore she shouldn't squeal."

PORT HOPE ATHLETES PREPARE FOR THE WINTER

PORT HOPE, Nov. 21.—The boys of this town between the ages of 11 and 16 years are forming an athletic club, having in view both indoor and outdoor sports. About 40 boys attended the initial meeting for organization, which of itself is an evidence of their keen interest. The clergymen of the town were elected honorary presidents and Mr. H. L. Slyvester, physical director, was elected to president. The boys decided to divide themselves into two groups, the one including boys from 11 to 15 years of age, and the other from 15 upwards. For the present gymnasium work and basketball wil be undertaken, and later in the season, hockey.

CARIBOU AND REINDEER CONCESSION IS GRANTED

THE PAS, Man., Nov. 21—The North American Reindeer Company, capitalized at $750,000 has been granted a concession of 73,750 square miles of land north of the Churchill River to graze caribou and reindeer upon. This amounts to 48,000,000 acres for which the Government charges one-fourth of a cent an acre per annum, according to the statement of officials of the company, which works out at $192,000 a year for the total. It is stated that the company will proceed with its project in the spring, and the first move will be to gather the caribou herds. The Pass will be the headquarters of the enterprise.

HENRY FORD PLANS INDUSTRY IN CORK

DETROIT, Nov. 21—Henry Ford's plans for establishment of a giant industry in Cork, Ireland, are progressing.

F. L. Klingensmith, Vice-President, and A. L. Soreson, Superintendent at the tractor plant in Dearborn, have started for Ireland to superintend the erection of the plant. They will also supervise the establishment of a huge water-driven electric plant to neighboring cities near Cork.

A despatch from Cork says that one of the Detroit officials of Ford has leased a home in Cork for a year and will give his personal attention to work already started.

$90,000 Raised For Orange Orphanage

TORONTO, Nov. 21—In the neighborhood of $90,000 has been collected for the Loyal True Blue and Orange Home to be built on Yonge street, just outside of Richmond Hill. The True Blues have purchased there a site for the building of 35 acres at a cost of $15,0000. Among the large subscriptions received by the grand treasurer, W. M. Fitzgerald are $20,000 from W. H Baufield and $5,000 from Sir Edward Kemp.

While the home is to be erected by the order, its doors will be open to orphans who are not children of the members. The cost of the home is estimated at $200,000.

KINGSTON MILITIA PLAN CARNIVAL OF SPORTS

KINGSTON, Nov. 21—It is the intention of Major-General Williams, G.O.C., M. D. 3 to promote during the winter an immense carnival of sports and indoor gymkhana when all the athletic and sporting elements of the district will be brought together in a series of contests.

During the training of the 21st Battalion and the 146th in the city, carnivals lasting a week were promoted and they proved to be of great interest to all. They were well patronized and proved to be a paying undertaking.

SIGNALLING TRAINING

For a number of years Kingston had a most efficient branch of the signalling corps which was broken into by the war. During the four years of the war a school of signalling was maintained there and hundreds of men made proficient in visual signalling, Morse and Semaphore as well as wireless. Many are interested in a revival of signalling work and are expressing the hope that headquarters will again take up this useful and necessary feature of military work. The latest suggestion is that semaphore be taught in the local schools as the only equipment necessary is a pair of arms. It would be a useful thing to children in civil life and would have an element of entertainment which could not fail to secure the enthusiastic attention of the children.

RURAL REGIMENTS

So far nothing has been done towards reorganising rural regiments like the 47th and 4 Hussars, and it will probably be some time before any action is taken in this direction. Both the 47th and the 4th Hussars made large contributions to the C.E.F., and many of the men who attended the annual training of these regiments on Barriefield heights in years gone by are sleeping in grave on the western front. Lt.-Col. Vanluven commands the 4th Hussars and Lt.-Col. Knight commands the 47th regiment.

WATCH YOUR STEP, BROTHER !

A Gananoque clergyman has resigned from the church to edit a newspaper because "he needs a rest." He sure picks out a nice sweet peaceful place to rest in. He will only have his business on his mind twenty hours out of twenty-four and have to keep smiling at the unnumbered hosts of people who know how to run a newspaper better than any trained newspaper man ever hoped to and are not hiding their light under a bushel, or a peck—then he will have the pleasure of writing real thoughts one way and having the printer put them another way, besides the thousand and one other little enjoyments peculiar to newspaper life. A rest? Certainly! The reformed Sky Pilot will get both change and rest—mighty little change and a great big ever-unsatisfied appetite for a rest which will hardly be reached this side of the Heaven reserved for newspaper men where moving pictures are shown hourly of the Devil among the Typographical Errors, surrounded by the public men who were so often "misreported," also the undiscourageable poetry writers and the people who send in copy for the paper which it takes hours to decipher, with the addition of those individuals who call up the editor on the telephone to say mean things without revealing their identity, and many other pleasures of the daily grind. Welcome, Brother, to the Grind, but in stepping from the pulpit to the press, old Top, be sure to watch your step!

BUSINESS PRINCIPLES APPLIED TO MUNICIPALITIES.

Civic legislators and ratepayers generally have long realized that the system of civic government as it obtains in most municipalities is inefficient and cumbersome The Kingston Whik has been giving the question considerable study and favors the city business manager idea. In support of this the Whig says:

> The articles published from time to time by the Whig, dealing with the government of a city by the manager plan, have aroused considerable interest. A number of business men and others concerned with civic matters have expressed their belief that some such scheme must be adopted here if Kingston is ever to go ahead. This is especially true in these days when we are not even holding the industries we have, let alone acquiring new ones. There exists a lamentable lack of public spirit, of civic progressiveness and of that co-operation which alone can accomplish results. Radical changes in the system at present obtaining are now being demanded by certain bodies of the electorate. Just what these changes will be is a matter of much concern to those who have the good of the city at heart.
> It may be argued that the city manager plan is an American idea, and that while it might be successful there it would not work out as well in Canada. We should welcome new and progressive ideas no matter where they originate, and apply them to our own use and profit. Besides, the plan has already been adopted in certain Canadian towns with splendid results. Kamloops, B.C., is a case in point. J. J. Garment, the city manager there, in an address before the Union of British Columbia Municipalities, gave some very valuable information touching the working of the plan there, as well as proofs of its advantage over the present obsolete system. To meet the diversified demands upon the time and intelligence of the council, demands which, added to the purely executive and legislative functions hitherto constituting the chief municipal activities, made some change absolutely necessary, the committee system was adopted. The burden of management was divided, Mr. Carment points out, and one group of aldermen took charge of one branch of the civic service, another looked after a second part of the municipal work, and every item of business was brought before the council board, where it gave rise to more or less discussion between the councillors, and caused more or less controversy between men who, after all, were more or less strangers to the particular line of business under discussion.
> The weakness of this system becomes more apparent as the municipal activities become more diversified, and the advisability of municipal affairs in general is now generally admitted by all who have given the subject any study. The present system of handling the business of the community through departments controlled by a committee of aldermen has been generally recognized as making for inefficiency, waste and inadequate service. Some way by which the method of successful private corporations may be adopted and applied to the working of the municipal corporation has been sought, but as yet the result of the search is indeterminate. At present, in the opinion of Mr. Carment, we cannot do better than adopt the methods of the best business concerns of today and be ready to improve on them as experience suggests. "As the shareholders of our joint stock companies appoint directors and these in turn engage managers who select their staffs with the object of the most efficient service," concludes this manager, "so in civic affairs the citizens as shareholders cannot do better than follow their lead." The immediate advantages to be gained by adopting such a system are obvious:
> (a) The aldermen are freed from the consideration of petty details, and are thus enabled to give a much greater portion of their time to the larger affairs of civic administration, which more properly belongs to them as legislators.
> (b) The holding of one man responsible for the administration of the various departments tends to a thoroughness which cannot be expected from committees of aldermen, who are changing their personnel from year to year.
> (c) Lack of continuity of policy, owing to the changing personnel of these committees, is thus obviated.
> (d) The control of municipal employees is much more satisfactory under the managerial system when the right man is secured.
> (e) The placing of all departments under a permanent official assures efficiency and economy which cannot be obtained under the system of committees.
> In other words, the managerial system retains the best features of the aldermanic system of civic government and eliminates its weak points by adopting the methods of the most successful public utility undertakings. The subject will be further dealt with in subsequent articles, as the Whig is convinced that the public are not satisfied with existing conditions in this city.

Rev. John Davidson, of Thurso, Que., writes:—"I have had considerable trouble with my throat, caused by public speaking in heated buildings and exposure to damp and chilly atmosphere. I find PEPs very effective in soothing the throat."

Rev. Edward G. Heaven, Marksville, Ont., writes:—"I have used PEPs and find they give considerable relief to the throat. I have also found them very beneficial for colds."

PEPs is the direct treatment for Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hoarseness, Larnygitis, and other ailments of the throat, chest, and lungs. As PEPs dissolve on the tongue, healing vapors are liberated which are breathed down direct to the sore places. Liquid cough mixtures, etc., cannot be inhaled, they go to the stomach not the lungs. Winnipeg Free Press.

Senator Philander C. Knox, who has been in his time Secretary of State for the United States, recently moved a reservation to the Peace Treaty, the effect of which, had it not been defeated, would have been to take the United States out of the League of Nations except when some question arose upon which it desired intervention. The United States should be free to come into the League when it wanted to and stay out when it chose. The United States was to be, in his terms, "a consulting member of the League."

In support of this remarkable proposition Senator Knox said:

> "By becoming a consulting member of the League I wish to see America do a great part in service to the world. By becoming more, America would stultify herself for the service of right in the world and would at the same time put in jeopardy her own precious heritage. Not under any circumstances would I sacrifice the spirit, the character, the nationalism of America, of the Constitution and the institutions which have bred America's manhood and womanhood. If we plunge America into this welter of internationalism we shall destroy America and, in the name of good to the world, we shall make our country incapable of good either to the world or to ourselves."

As rhetoric this sounds fine; but it is nothing more or less than an appeal to Uncle Sam to let the other nations do the world's work, reserving for himself the right to the limelight and the centre of the stage whenever he condescends to make an appearance.

Gas In The Stomach Is Dangerous

Recommends Daily Use of Magnesia To Overcome Trouble. Caused By Fermenting Food and Acid Indigestion

Gas and wind in the stomach accompanied by that full, bloated feeling after eating are almost certain evidence of the presence of excessive hydrochloric acid in the stomach, creating so-called "acid indigestion."

Acid stomachs are dangerous because too much acid irritates the delicate lining of the stomach, often leading to gastritis accompanied by serious stomach ulcers. Food ferments and sours, creating the distressing gas which distends the stomach and hampers the normal functions of the vital internal organs, often affecting the heart.

It is the worst of folly to neglect such a serious condition or to treat with ordinary digestive aids which have no neutralizing effect on the stomach acids. Instead get from any druggist a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia and take a teaspoonful in a quarter glass of water right after eating. This will drive the gas, wind and bloat right out of the body, sweeten the stomach, neutralize the excess acid and prevent its formation and there is no sourness or pain. Bisurated Magnesia (in powder or tablet form—never liquid or milk) is harmless to the stomach, inexpensive to take and the best form of magnesia for stomach purposes. It is used by thousands of people who enjoy their meals with no more fear of indigestion.

TORONTO MAN BLESSES THE DAY HE TRIED T. R. C.'s.

The following testimonial is vouched for by a Justice of the Peace for the Province of Ontario: "14 Temple Ave., Toronto, 13/3/19. Dear Mr. Templeton: My husband's experience was a trying one, but he blesses the day he first tried T.R.C.'s. Mr. Kiser was greatly troubled with Sciatica and suffered such awful pain that in the end, to obtain relief, he had a very severe operation to have the Sciatic Nerve stretched. This gave him relief, but was, of course, very expensive. Two years later his old trouble returned and grew steadily worse. Finally he took to his bed utterly helpless and a doctor was called in. While still an invalid a friend told us of your Capsules. We gave up the doctor and tried them. Before the second box was half through he was better, and has not been troubled since. We can't say too much or do enough to help spread the news of your wonderful medicine."

When The Day Is Over

When the household cares and the worries of everyday life have dragged you down, made you unhappy, and there is nothing in life but headache, backache and worry, turn to the right prescription, one gotten up by Dr. Pierce fifty years ago.

Everything growing out of the ground seems intended for some use in establishing natural conditions. Dr. Pierce, of Buffalo, N. Y., long since found out what is naturally best for women's diseases. He learned it all through treating thousands of cases. The result of his studies was a medicine called Doctor Pierce's Favorite Prescription. This medicine is made of vegetable growths that nature surely intended for backache, headache, weakening pains, irregularities, inflammations, and for the many disorders common to women in all ages of life. Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription is made of lady's slipper root, black cohosh root, unicorn root, blue cohosh root and Oregon grape root. Dr. Pierce knew, when he first made this standard medicine, that whiskey and morphine are injurious, and so he has always kept them out of his remedies. Women who take this standard remedy know that in Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription they are getting a safe woman's tonic so good that druggists everywhere sell it, in liquid or tablet form.

A Weak Argument.

Mr. Taber was telling his daughter the reasons why she should not marry young Carpenter.

"Why, hang it all, Sue," said the father, "that fellow earns only eighteen dollars a week."

"I know, father," said Sue, pleadingly, "but a week passes so quickly when you're fond of each other!"

Tobacco Habit Dangerous

says Doctor Conner, formerly of Johns Hopkins Hospital. Thousands of men suffering from fatal diseases would be in perfect health to-day were it not for the deadly drug, Nicotine. Stop the habit now before it's too late. It's a simple process to rid yourself of the tobacco habit in any form. Just go to any up-to-date drug store and get some Nicotol tablets; take them as directed, and lo! the pernicious habit quickly vanishes. Druggists refund the money if they fail. Be sure to read large and interesting announcement by Doctor Conner soon to appear in this paper. It tells of the danger of nicotine poisoning, and how to avoid it. In the meantime try Nicotol tablets; you will be surprised at the result. (6)

NICKLE FOR MAYOR

Ex-Alderman H. C. Nickle, a brother of W. F. Nickle, ex-M.P, will be a candidate for Mayor for Kingston for the year 1921. He has been unanimously endorsed by the Veterans' Municipality Committee.

PARCELS PUT IN WRONG CAR.

It was reported to the police yesterday afternoon that some parcels had been taken out of a car, which was in a yard on Front street. Upon investigation it was ascertained that the parcels had been placed in another car by mistake.

STOLEN SUGAR RECOVERED.

Eight 100-pound sacks of sugar were discovered on Wednesday by Mr. Wm. Boundy, Cobourg Road, secreted on his farm. He at once reported the matter to the police and Constables Colwill and Harvey remained on the watch all night for the theives to come along for their booty. Evidently the burglars were tipped off, as neither of the constables had a single visitor. The sugar has been returned to the owners so the thieves in this instance had all their work for nothing.

SERIOUSLY INJURED.

Mr. K. Y. Switzer, of Picton, connected with the Great Lakes Oil Co., was the victim of a bad auto accident on Saturday morning, when coming from his residence at Hubb's Creek, the accident occurring at a point about midway between Lake Shore road and Hubb's Creek. The car he was driving suddenly left the road, turning turtle and pinning Mr. Switzer under the car, breaking his arm in two places, dislocating the shoulder, cutting his face badly and, the most serious of all, puncturing his chest. He laid in this position for upward of an hour, when he was found by Mr. Wilmot Davis, who was drawing milk. His condition at present is critical. The car was practically a total wreck.

PLEADED GUILTY

Before His Honor Judge Deroche, this morning, Cecil Tanner, a Toronto youth was arraigned on two serious charges, namely that he did, in the city of Belleville, on the morning of November 5th, 1919, ulawfully commit highway robbery upon Tom Deap, also that on November 1st at Campbellford he did unlawfully commit highway robbery upon Charlie Mack. To the charges the accused pleaded guilty. Tanner, in company with one C. R. Brown who is under arrest here was accused with holding up Chinamen in this city and at Campbellford. In both cases money was secured from the celestials. Mr. Carnew represented the Crown and Mr. E. J. Butler was present in the interest of Tanner. Mr. Butler read testimonials from persons in Toronto which gave Tanner an excellent reputation. The mother of the accused was present in court and keenly felt the position she occupied. At the request of Council, she was placed in the witness box and testified that her son was born in Nova Scotia on the 13th of November, 1903. She had twice been married, her first husband Mr. Tanner, having been drowned at sea and her second husband, Mr. Simpson was killed in the Halifax explosion The accused, her son, was also injured about the head at the time of the explosion. In her evidence, Mrs. Simpson stated that her son had been working for the Christie Brown Company at Toronto and until about 6 weeks ago never went out in the evenings except with members of the family. He became acquainted with Brown and his demeanor at home was changed. The mother contended that her son was under Brown's influence. She remonstrated with her son in reference to keeping company with Brown and threatened to tell the police of Toronto. Cecil said to her, "Do not do that mother, or Brown will shoot you." She did not know her son and Brown left Toronto together until after the arrest Judge Deroche reserved sentence until December 5th and in the meantime, Brown will be tried on similar charges.

CATARRHAL DEAFNESS MAY BE OVERCOME

If you have Catarrahal Deafness or are even just a little hard of hearing or have head noises go to your druggist and get 1 ounce of Parmint (double strength), and add to it ¼ pint of hot water, and a little granulated sugar. Take 1 tablespoonful four times a day.

This will often bring quick relief from the distressing head noises. Clogged nostrils should open, breathing become easy, and the mucus stop dropping into the throat. It is easy to prepare, costs little, and is pleasant to take. Anyone losing hearing or who has Catarrhal Deafness or head noises should give this prescription a trial.

ECLIPSE OF THE SUN.

There will be a partial eclipse of the sun tomorrow morning beginning at 7.45 and finishing at 10.15. The maximum obscuration will be at 9 a.m., when 47 per cent. of the sun's diameter will be covered. At 10.15 the moon will leave the sun at a point 22 degrees to the left of the sun's lowest point.

DIED IN WINNIPEG

Word was received here to-day announcing the death in Winnipeg of Mrs. John E. Thompson of that city. Mrs. Thompson was formerly Miss May Price, daughter of Mr. David Price, city-treasurer. Only this morning Mr. Price received a letter stating that his daughter was ill with pneumonia and the message was later received announcing the sad news of her death after a short illness.

15TH ARGYLE LIGHT INFANTRY

Major-General V. A. S. Williams, General Officer commanding No. 3 Military District, will be in the city on Saturday, Nov. 22nd, arriving about 3 p.m., and will stay at the Quinte Hotel over night. The General will meet all the officers, past and present, of the 15th Argyle Light Infantry, and also all officers with overseas service. All citizens who have the interests of the city battalion at heart are cordially invited to attend. The meeting will take place at 8 p.m. in the officers' quarters at the armouries and the subject will be "The Reorganization of the City Regiment," with a view to placing it on a firmer military basis.

UP IN THE AIR

Capt. Janney, late of the Royal Air Force, who has been making his headquarters in Trenton lately and making commercial lights dropping advertising literature, flew over Belleville at noon today and landed in the field on Col. Ponton's property. Capt. Janney was accompanied by Mr. H. F. Whittier and this morning they flew over Picton and other communities in Prince Edward County and dropped advertising literature for a Trenton firm. This afternoon they will fly north but will return in time to attend the Victory Loan dinner this evening at the Quinte Capt. Janney says that flying conditions today are quite strenuous. This morning the plane for a time flew at the rate of one hundred and fifty miles an hour going with the strong wind blowing. The going was quite bumpy also in spots. Next week Capt. Janney purposes to spend in Belleville as many well-known citizens have expressed a desire "to go up in the air."

BELLEVILLE RESOLUTIONS CARRIED

Five of the six resolutions prepared by Mr. John Elliott, treasurer, and Colonel Ponton, secretary, and presented to the Ontario Board by members of the Belleville Board of Trade, were carried unanimously in that body in Toronto yesterday and with other resolutions will be forwarded to the respective Governments who are interested in thus realizing the pulse of public opinion on subjects of provincial and national interest. Six representatives of the Belleville Board of Trade attended the meeting. Colonel Ponton spoke at the banquet last night tendered to the delegates, at which Hon. Mr. Drury, the new Prime Minister, and Mr. D. B. Hanna, president of the National Railways made notable addresses. Nearly all the Boards of Trade of the Province had experienced representatives present who took an active part in this very live and stable organization of men who are in a sense trustees for the progress and prosperity of their respective communities as well as of the provinces of which they form a part. Colonel Marsh, who moved the first resolution, N. D. MacFadyen and W. C. Springer who also represented the Board, will return today.

Railroad Man Gains 23 Pounds

Before Tanlac Built Him Up Was So Run Down He Lost Lots of Time From Work.

"No sir, I wasn't much surprised," said August P. Newman of 804 Greenfield Ave., Milwaukee, Wis., in an interview recently, "when I got on the scales the other night and found that I had gained twenty-three pounds, for I have been eating like a wolf and picking up ever since I finished my first bottle of Tanlac, a little more than two months ago."

Mr. Newman has lived in Milwaukee for nearly forty-five years and is employed as switchman for the Chicago, Milwaukee & St. Paul railroad in the Union Depot yards. He has been in the service of this company for the past fifteen years and is well known especially, among railroad people.

"Tanlac is certainly the finest medicine going, for a person in the shape I was," he continued. "My stomach had been in a mighty bad fix for twelve years, or more, and I was also having trouble with my back and just seemed to be gradually playing out. After a meal—and I always had to be very careful what I ate—I would bloat up with gas as tight as a drum, and I couldn't bear my belt around me. There were many things I could not eat without just suffering agony afterwards. I also had severe pains in my hips and back and would get so dizzy sometimes while bending over to turn a switch that I would nearly fall over. My back was also very weak and hurt me so it was all I could do to bend over and throw a switch. Many a time I was in so much misery I could not stay on the job, and I lost lots of time on account of my condition. It would take nearly all my wind going up and down the box cars and if I had to run a short distance I was all out of breath I was always so fagged out after a night's work that I would just have to drag myself home.

"But things are altogether different with me now, for I am just like a new man and never miss a night's run. I can now sit down and eat just anything—even pickle and pastries, things I wouldn't dare touch before—without the least trouble afterwards. I used to be so nervous the least thing would upset me and I couldn't rest well, but now I can sleep like a log even while the piano is being played in the next room to me. My back used to ache so bad that I would brace it with pillows while sitting down, but now it's the rarest thing that I ever feel even the slightest pain, and I never have a dizzy spell. Tanlac has put me in first class shape and if anyone doubts this statement just send them to me at the depot during the night or at my home during the day."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto, by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell, and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely.

Adjourn Enquiry Into Standard Reliance

Toronto, Nov. 21.—Because of Mr. W. S. Dinnick's inability to give definite information concerning certain of the Huron & Bruce transactions of 1904, Referee J. A. C. Cameron decided yesterday noon to halt the probe into the defunct Standard Reliance affairs to permit Mr. Dinnick to refresh his memory by perusal of the written records. Adjournment was made until December 2.

The break in the proceedings came when it was apparent that without time in which to refresh his memory on the details of the taking voer of the Huron & Bruce Mr. Dinnick would be unable to account for the disposition of an item of $134,000. A block of $130,000 of H. & B. stock was held in trust for a syndicate by Mr. M. J. Kent of the London Loan & Savings. Money for its purchase had been advanced by the London Loan. But apparently a debt of the H. & B. to the London Loan of $134,000 was paid out of Standard assets.

[illegible] Bolshevists Are Growing Powerful.

The paper strength of the Red army of Soviet Russia has reached the figure of 4,000,000. However, its actual strength was about 3,000,000, although it was constantly on the increase. The difference of 1,000,000 represented approximately the number of draft evaders and deserters at large.

In spite of this apparently imposing number of slackers, the Red army is not to be under-estimated. It is not a haphazard collection of Red Guards bands. It is not a mob of youngsters. The Red army is well organized, well disciplined, well equipped and well officered. The soldiers who demoralized the front in 1917 by fraternization are not drafted into the Red army. Generally speaking those who participated in the war against Germany are not welcomed into the ranks.

When you ask a Bolshevik in Russia to point out the creative and not destructive accomplishments of the Soviet Government, you are apt to get such an answer as: "We have created the Red army which absorbs most of our energy. Give us peace and we will show you how we can build." It must be admitted that to keep an army of 3,000,000 supplied with abundant food, for that is what the Red army gets, and to maintain a system of transport reaching a front extending over enormous distances such as lie between the Archangel and Denikine or between the Ukrainian and Kolchak fronts, is a task which would tax even the resources of a tried old Government.

The soldiers of the Red army surprises one by their satisfied appearance. Of course, in order to keep the Red army satisfied the country is deprived of many necessities and is not wholly satisfied. The requisitions in the villages for the army are certainly not popular. Half of Soviet Russia's transportation system is devoted to the needs of the Red army.

A central commission to combat desertion has been formed in Moscow. In May, it organized a series of roundups of deserters throughout the country. At railway stations, on the streets of the cities and villages, dragnets were spread for Red army slackers. Military schools for officers have been established in Moscow and other places. The command of the Red army has almost passed from the hands of the old officers, although the latter are very much in demand as instructors and advisers. Thus, toward the end of May, a number of officers were graduated from the academy of the general staff of the Red army. The courses for infantry officers maintained by the Moscow Soviet are open only to members of the communist party or to Soviet supporters, who can produce recommendations from such members.

A tribute to the Red army has been paid by one of Kolchak's leading generals in a secret order issued by the commander of the Siberian western army, Lieut.-Gen. Khanzhin, under number 0826. A copy of it fell into the hands of the Soviet troops when they captured a part of the 21st Tchelabinsk regiment with its staff. It reads, in part:

"Through all the actions of our enemies there runs the red thread of attack at whatever cost and in whatever circumstances, often reaching a degree of audacity. Similar daring should be our answer at every opportunity. Every blow should be answered by a blow. If strategically the Reds have no rear, which increases their bravado, actually they are very sensitive to surprise attacks and encirclements.

"But remembering the ability of the Reds to recuperate quickly after unsuccessful conflicts, I most insistently recommend sure, determined, even bold tactics aiming to smash the enemy and not to win territory, to place him in a position of death or surrender and not make him evacuate a sector.

"There is plenty of territory in the rear of the enemy, and his human reserves are great. We must strive to break up his military organization, to convince his soldiers that skill and not quantity is on our side.

"We witness a civil war in which, willingly or unwillingly, especially on the side of the Reds, the population of the war zone is taking a most active part. Hence the advantage of having the people's sympathy on our side is obvious."

Valuable Pearls Starving.

It is sad to think that at the present time, when pearls are so rapidly increasing in value, there are some perishing in the Louvre, says Tit-Bits.

Mme. Thiers bequeathed to that institution a marvellous pearl necklace, which within a few years fell a victim to the mysterious disease defined by experts as a form of starvation.

Pearls live by contact with humanity, and for this reason jewelers maintain that they should be worn on the bare skin. If the Louvre necklace could be worn for a time the pearls would recover their lustre. But, according to the will of Mme. Thiers, it must not be removed from its case, so the pearls are gradually becoming more unsightly and shrivelled.

Premiums for Marriage.

In one chemical factory in Switzerland, which is representative of other chemical and dye concerns, married men receive 10 per cent. more a week than single men engaged in the same occupation, and still above this married men receive fifty-four cents a week extra for each child under fifteen years of age.

Modern Printing.

A new form letter printing machine cuts paper fed from rolls into the proper sizes, uses three colors of ink when desired and automatically changes the names and addresses for each letter produced.

SACRED ARABIAN BOOK

GERMANS MUST RETURN THE OTHMAN KORAN.

Teutons Carried Off the Roll of Parchment Which Meant So Much to People Who Believed In the Prophet of Islam, But the Allies Now Give It Back to the Original Owners.

A LARGE roll of parchment yellowed by thirteen centuries and covered with ancient Arabic script, played an important part in the construction of another and formidable historical document, the Peace Treaty. Germany is required by this treaty to disgorge, along with provinces, billions in cash and various art treasures, among them the Koran of Othman. Just what importance attaches to this particular copy of the Koran is a question that smites the public mind as allied to secret diplomacy.

A World Magazine interviewer carried this query to Leon Camen, Orientalist, hailing from the universities of Petrograd and Oxford — a familiar of the East, well versed in the depths and shoals of Mahometanism.

The Prophet of Islam left nothing written, for the sufficient reason that he could neither read nor write. The numerous suras, or chapters, of the Koran stand for so many sermons, so many prophetical outbursts, which, attended by flaming disciples, were fixed in the tenacious memories characteristic of the East. Only sporadically was a passage jotted down by a rare one possessed of the gift of letters.

These considerations gave extraordinary importance to a canonized compilation, made at Abu Bekh's command, of the revelation of Mahomet. A commission prepared the work, headed by Zaid Ibn Tabit, a young man who had been secretary to the Prophet.

This first Koran, derived of scant writings, but chiefly "from the breasts of men," was inscribed on palm leaves, from which it came to be known as the "Book of Leaves." It was a very important Koran, but it was not the one mentioned in the Peace Treaty.

A generation later Calif Othman had another Koran problem pulling at his Islamatic beard. A number of compilations from divers unofficial sources were in circulation. All were more or less incorrect, and much spiritual and political disturbance resulted therefrom.

Again a commission was formed, headed by the same Zaid Ibn Tabit, now an old man, who had figured in the earlier compilation episode. Based on the venerable "Book of Leaves," which had been deposited in Medina, Mahomet's birthplace, a new and authoritative Koran was drawn up. Three copies of this original were made, and all other copies of the Koran were ordered done away with. Even the sacred "Book of Leaves" was destroyed a little later. The possession of an incorrect version was pronounced heresy, an easy passport to subterrestrial parts.

The three copies were given to as many Moslem centres and subsequently lost. The original, known as the Othman Koran, was deposited at Mecca, where it remained through the centuries until the late war.

All this, however, is but a prefatory chapter in explaining the mysterious veneration which led the Turks, when the Arab insurrection and the menace of the British Sues forces made Medina unsafe, to transfer the Othman Koran to Constantinople, for later removal to Berlin, when the allied fleet was promising to run the Dardanelles.

This Berlin transfer was a dreadful piece of sacrilege. The Othman Koran, one of the holiest things of Islam, had reposed for centuries in its little casket at the Mosque of Medina. No infidel had ever gained sight of it. Only Sir Richard Burton, the great Orientalist, contrived to enter the holy place—by disguising himself faultlessly as an Arab. And now this sacredest of Korans was taken to Berlin.

In the month of Ramadan the pilgrims go to Mecca. From all parts of the world they take their arduous way to pray at the holy places, and thus gain for themselves the title of Hajji and the privilege of wearing the green turban.

Thus it has obtained for a thousand years, with a good proportion of the pilgrims further betaking themselves to Medina to pay devotion to the Othman Koran.

Now, these pilgrims have ever been a source of large revenue. They pay admission to the holy places, and the Arabian high cost of living does astonishing tricks for their exploitation. The district of the holy shrine would be sorely grieved if permanently deprived of any considerable portion of the pilgrim patronage.

This is precisely the misfortune that the Turk threatened to visit upon the insurgent Arabs.

The Othman Koran is essential to the economic development of the recently formed Arabian kingdom.

Suppose the Germans in a raid had carried off the English royal crown. The King would still be King, but the mislaying of his diadem would be an embarrassing circumstance. A king of the Hejaz, such as has been made recently, if he were without the Othman Koran would have more pointed questions to answer than any one but a Moslem can know.

And the home coming of this Koran will strengthen the King of the Hejaz.

"Do you think the Germans intended to keep the Othman Koran?" I asked the Orientalist.

"I don't," he replied. "It would take a strong imagination to picture the pilgrims, in the month of Ramadan, dragging their pious Moslem feet to Berlin."

HOW ESKIMOS LIVE.

Material Used for Houses Costs Nothing.

It takes only about six hours to build a first-class winter residence in Eskimo Land. The material, which is snow, costs nothing.

But the snow must be carefully selected. The bank that serves as a quarry must have been formed by a single storm, to be sufficiently solid and homogeneous. It must yield blocks of fine grain, yet soft enough to be easily cut with saw or snow knife.

Two men do the work, one cutting while the other builds. It is best, if practicable, to attack the side of a steep drift, making parallel cuts and lifting out the blocks as fast as detached. The blocks are three or four feet long, two feet high and six to eight inches thick.

Instead of laying them in parallel course like bricks, the blocks are so placed as to form a spiral, inclined inward to form a dome-shaped structure, with the culmination of the spiral in the middle of the top, where two or three triangular pieces are put in to close the hole. This is a highly ingenious method of building a dome without the aid of a scaffold.

In order to reach high enough, the builder makes a snow bench inside, on which he steps while finishing the upper part of the structure. Finally the joints are made tight by pressing snow-mortar into them, the idea being to prevent warm air inside the house from escaping.

When finished the house is ten or twelve feet high and twelve to fifteen feet in diameter, and has the appearance of a hemisphere of snow set on its flat side. A sort of entrance hall is added outside, with a passage big enough to crawl through, and on either side of it cubbyholes for the storage of harness, spare food, etc.

A window is cut in the wall of the building and covered with seals' intestines sewed together. Being translucent, they admit daylight or, as an alternative, a slab of clear, fresh-water ice may be set in the wall. This affords an excellent substitute for glass, and can be counted on not to melt in that frigid latitude.

The house is lined with the skins which form the covering of the summer Eskimo dwelling, the object of this arrangement being to prevent the warm air inside from melting the snow roof; for between the skins and the wall there is always a layer of cold air. At the top, for ventilation and to provide a draft for the family lamp, a small hole is cut.

On the side of the house opposite the entrance (within) a broad snow bench is built, with a long pole for an edge. This is the family bed. For a mattress a thick layer of shrubs is spread upon it and over these many deerskins. Clothes, when taken off, are rolled up and put under the skins for pillows. One blanket of skins serves to cover the whole family.

It is very warm inside, for, in effect, the snowhouse is an inhabited oven. A shallow semicircular dish of soapstone, with a wick of fat-saturated moss, serves as a lamp, deriving its oil from the drips of a piece of seal blubber suspended near the flame. Above the lamp is hung a pot for cooking, and aloft, over the pot, is a network of thongs containing articles of clothing, put there to dry in the ascending warm air.

The lamp gives a "brilliant" and beautiful light; it cooks the food, it dries the clothes, it heats the house and, not least important, it melts the snow for drinking water. Water, and lots of it (for drinking, not for bathing) is to the Eskimo the greatest of luxuries, for he lives in a country where, through most of the year, the normal condition of H_2O is that of a rock.

All the life of the Eskimos may be said to revolve about the family lamp, which makes it possible for them to dwell in an otherwise uninhabitable region. They depend for their very existence upon this household utensil. The lamp is the recognized property of the woman head of the family, and when she dies it is buried with her.

A Whale Worth $15,000.

A full-grown bowhead whale is today worth $15,000 merely for the whalebone it carries in its mouth.

This is the species that furnishes the bulk of the commercial supply of whalebone, which is now worth $7.50 a pound. It is a denizen of Arctic seas.

The bowhead, like other whalebone whales, has no teeth. Instead its jaws are furnished with a series of long, tapering slabs of a horny substance fringed with hair. Of these slabs, which are the whalebone of commerce, there may be as many as 600. The biggest of them are ten or twelve feet long and they are inserted in the gum of the upper jaw, from which they hang. They serve as a sieve to strain out the whale's food. Swimming along, it takes huge mouthfuls of squids and other pelagic small fry. Then the huge trap is closed and, the slabs entering and fitting into grooves in the lower jaw, the water is expelled.

A Tout.

A benevolent old lady in one of the streets which still retain the red-brick houses of old-time Toronto looked out of her parlor window the other day and saw a man walking along the sidewalk, apparently in great dejection. There was something so pathetic and appealing in his manner that she took a dollar bill, put it in an envelope, and wrote on the envelope, "Never Say Die!" She slipped out of the house in the most casual manner and handed the envelope to the man as they passed. Next day the melancholy man called at her house and presented her with $10. "It's funny," he said; "you're the only one that backed that horse called Never Say Die."

Willing to Oblige.

Magistrate (to talkative prisoner)—Now, what have you got to say?

Prisoner—I've got a good deal to say, guv'nor, if you'll only give me time to say it.

Magistrate—Certainly, six months.

Grip, Influenza

Hamlin's Wizard Oil a Reliable, Antiseptic Preventive

During influenza epidemics spray the nose and throat several times a day with one part Wizard Oil and two parts water, using an atomizer. If you haven't an atomizer, gargle the throat and snuff the mixture up the nose. This treatment sets up an antiseptic wall of defense against "Flu" germs.

Chest colds and sore throat lead to grip. Stop them at once with Wizard Oil before they can develop into dangerous influenza.

Get it from druggists for 30c. If not satisfied, return the bottle and get your money back.

Ever constipated or have sick headache? Just try Wizard Liver Whips, pleasant little pink pills, 30c at druggists. Guaranteed.

RICH COSTUMES RULE IN PARIS

Elaborate Materials and Original Designs Mark Reaction From War's Tension.

CAPES IN HEIGHT OF FAVOR

No Doubt That Picturesque Wraps Will Be a Feature of Autumn Styles—Day and Evening Gowns Much Alike.

The Redfern model I have sketched this week is very novel and original in design and yet is comparatively simple, writes Idalia de Villiers, Paris correspondent of the Boston Globe. This robe, intended for afternoon wear, is typical of present-day styles. It possesses all the elements that go to make up a successful toilette of this wonderful year.

In the first place the general outline of the little gown rather suggests an evening costume. The neck is cut round, in generous fashion, and the sleeves are very short and transparent, yet this is the kind of dress that is worn at the big race meetings and at all outdoor festivities, accompanied by a big picture hat and—more probably than not—by short gauntlet gloves. It is, in fact, a genuine 1919 model.

The material of this costume is black and white foulard—large white spots on a black ground. There is a suggestion of pannier draperies at the sides, and at the hem the supple material is so cleverely arranged that it gives something of the Turkish trouser effect. Then the waistline is long, and what the French call "vague," that is to say, it is loose and ultranatural.

I recently saw a very similar dress worn at an Auteuil race meeting, but the material was midnight blue charmeuse, with a dainty chemisette of flesh-pink orgadie muslin and a thick blue fringe on the draped tunic.

Strikingly Original Costume.

The neck was cut round, almost like the Redfern model, but the sleeves were even shorter. Very long pale gray suede gloves were worn and an immense pale gray felt hat, lined with black chip and trimmed with a cluster of black satin water lilies. It was an amazingly original costume, taking it altogether.

Nearly all the best race gowns of this season have closely resembled evening dresses, that is to say, they have had decollete necks, short sleeves and filmy draperies. It is not at all easy to distinguish between day and evening gowns just now unless one makes a careful study of materials. It is not considered correct to wear metallic brocades in the daytime nor paillettes unless the latter be skillfully intermingled with fine silk embroidery, but very many of the best and most expensive race dresses are richly trimmed with jet and steel fringes and with embroideries worked in jet steel and moonlight beads.

It is, as I have said a wonderful year, and it must be admitted an extravagant one. Never have I known money spent so freely as at the present moment, and by the most unexpected people. As to the prices of the Paris restaurants—especially those situated in the Bois de Boulogne—it is enough to make one gasp with horror; one has indeed to think, not twice, but many times, before inviting a few friends to afternoon tea at an outdoor restaurant.

Paris Profiteers Busy.

Of course, it is true that prices are high everywhere, and for everything, but that does not account for the utterly outrageous prices that are now being asked in Paris for simple articles of food and of dress. People insist that the mischief has been done by rich young soldiers back from the front, who have not hesitated to make "a big splash."

There may be some truth in this, but it is not all the truth; some people are making huge profits over the necessities of the hour, and a day of reckoning will surely come.

At the big race meetings we have seen a great many picturesque wraps, which suggest delightful things for the autumn. The quaint Manon cape, full and voluminous, is still a strong favorite. It is made of satin or peau de soie and lined throughout with the softest duvetyn, in some pale neutral tint, or a vivid color, such as rose Dubarry or leaf green.

A black Manon cape, lined with pale beige duvetyn, is a precious possession. It is warm, picturesque in outline, becoming and cozy. The Parisiennes, especially our smart young actresses, wear these loose cloaks with immense grace and charm. They have a clever way of drawing them in at the hem to give the trouser effect shown in the Redfern sketch.

Gorgeous Evening Wraps.

For Biarritz and Deauville, for chilly evenings, similar wraps are lined with bright rose or green velours de laine, and a special feature is made of the big Manon hood. These cloaks will be worn in the daytime, too, over lace and linen dresses, the loose fronts thrown back and the cape hood falling off the shoulders.

I am sending you a sketch of the latest rue de la Paix millinery, models specially designed for the first race meeting at Deauville. It shows a really exquisite hat created by Talbot. The shape was directoire and the hat was made of black lacquered straw, with deep rose Stantung to line the brim. The trimming was cunningly arranged. A long, wide, black satin ribbon had wreath of exquisite pink water lilies attached to it in front. This ribbon was passed around the high crown of the hat, tied loosely at the back and then allowed to fall in long, loose ends over the shoulders.

Popular Style of Trimming.

This style of trimming is a Talbot specialty. I have seen it repeated with various flowers, and with flowers and fruits mixed. The directoire shapes are more fashionable than ever; they have been found almost universally becoming and they supply a picturesque headdress which is exactly suitable for wearing with the present-day dresses of rather fussy outline.

Many of the newest hats show long floating ribbons, in velvet or satin, and it may be said that the floating veil is more in favor than ever, especially for seaside and country wear; we do not see it very often in town.

White chip hats covered with Shantung or tussor are going to be the craze of the season. For morning wear, to accompany simple tussor tailored suits, I have seen white chip sailor shapes covered on the outer side with tussor and trimmed with two large white wings.

BE PRETTY IN YOUR KITCHEN

This morning dress of blue chambray piped in white linen is simply made and very inexpensive. But, isn't it a big improvement over the old gingham apron?

THE MANY SHADES OF BROWN

Color Is a Prime Favorite In Paris—Stencil Embroidery Touched Up With Floss Silks.

In Paris le dernier cri is brown in all shades—red brown, nut brown, pale golden brown, that is a strong light seems almost yellow. A very uncommon dress, the creation of a famous Paris "Maison," was made of mouse brown crepon, with a plaited skirt and a long straight tunic which was cut up at the sides and which showed on the hem a most effective stencil design done in black and invisible blue paint. There was a narrow ribbon ceinture in invisible blue and thin blue silk tassels finished off the under seams of the short sleeves. This dress could easily be achieved in cotton crepon, for instance, for a comparatively small sum of money. Stencil embroidery—for the stamped designs are nearly always touched up here and there with floss silks—is easily done and it is immensely attractive; any color may be stamped on, and, of course, any silks and even tiny beads may be introduced.

Fadeless Kitchen Gowns.

Kitchen dresses of light weight unbleached cotton were adopted by a dainty young housewife who found that her colored wash dresses faded quickly, "and," she says, "I never looked so well in the kitchen before." All are made by some simple pattern and have a touch of colored embroidery or crochet on the neck, belt, sleeves, and pockets. These dresses can be washed and boiled and need no starch, and they look new until they are worn out, and will outwear gingham or percale. The material should be shrunk before cutting.

Heavy Sweaters of Silk.

Shops are showing heavy silk sweaters for winter wear. They are especially desirable for indoor wear when the low supply of coal makes it impossible to keep up the normal degree of heat. These new sweaters have many odd bits of finishing, such as vests, deep collars, fringed edges and unusual cuffs—anything for the sake of novelty.

Tailored Blouses of Silk.

The strictly man-tailored shirt-blouse cut on the lines of men's shirts with straight shirt sleeves with mannish cuffs and adjustable high or low collars is in great demand for sport wear. These are in plain wash silk and satin and in fancy colorfully striped wash silk.

Timetable effective June 4th, 1919.

Two-in-One Tells time in the dark, $3.75

Give an Ingersoll

THERE'S no gift like a watch—nothing used so much, consulted so often, carried so long. The Ingersoll you give now will be ticking Christmas greetings next July—next September—and so on through the years to come.

There are fifteen different Ingersolls from which to choose, including jeweled watches and the famous Radiolites that tell time in the dark. They range in price from $2.75 to $13.50.

Gift Suggestions

For the COLLEGE GIRL
Stores located near the famous girls' colleges do a rushing business on Ingersolls. Why not give an Ingersoll? The dealer will show you several models; Wrist watch, "Two-In-One," the watch in the ivory-like case illustrated above, Midget.

For the DOCTOR
A doctor needs "spare" watches—on his desk—or his wrist. Give him a "Two-In-One," $3.75 or a Wrist watch, $6.00. Or one of the jeweled watches illustrated below.

For the NURSE
A Wrist watch that tells time in the dark—the Ingersoll Midget Wrist Radiolite—a useful gift $6.00.

For the MOTORIST
Give a Wrist watch, $6.00, or anyone of the Radiolite models. The Waterbury Radiolite is a jeweled Radiolite.

For the HOUSEKEEPER
The Radiolite "Two-In-One" for desk, dressing table, on the piano or in the kitchen. Price $3.75. Ingersolls are watches for the home.

For the MAN WHO DOES HEAVY WORK
Ingersolls are sturdy but they keep accurate time. The famous Maple Leaf at $2.75, or the Eclipse at $4.00 or a Radiolite. For "dress-up" a jeweled Ingersoll.

For the BOY
Nothing would please a boy as much as a Radiolite at $3.50, or the Eclipse Radiolite at $4.75. For older boys, too, a Waterbury Radiolite, as illustrated.

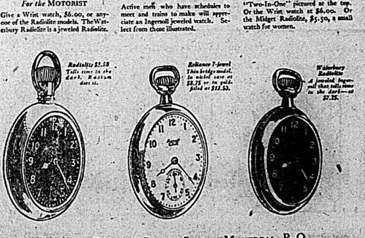
For the SALESMAN
Active men who have schedules to meet and trains to make will appreciate an Ingersoll jeweled watch. Select from those illustrated.

For the SPORTSMAN
A Radiolite Wrist watch, of course. The time's always in sight at a glance. Besides, it tells the time in the dark. Price $6.00

For the FARMER
A farmer needs two watches—a watch for "work" and one for "dress-up". In other words, one of the low-priced Ingersolls and a jeweled Ingersoll. He'd prefer a Radiolite.

For the BUSINESS MAN
The "Two-In-One" as a desk watch at $3.75. And if he hasn't a good pocket watch, one of the jeweled models illustrated below.

For the TEACHER
"Two-In-One" pictured at the top. Or the Wrist watch at $6.00. Or the Midget Radiolite, $5.50, a small watch for women.



Radiolite $3.50 Tells time in the dark. Radium does it.
Reliance 7-jewel Thin bridge model. In nickel case at $8.75 or in gold-filled at $13.53.
Waterbury Radiolite A jeweled Ingersoll that tells time in the dark—at $7.25.

SUNLIGHT IN THE NIGHT HOURS

EFFICIENT factory lighting is of greater importance now than ever before.

The high price of material and the pay of factory workers are such that spoilage and wasted effort must be reduced to a minimum.

Every factory manager knows that daylight is the best light to work by. But there are working hours in the day when artificial light is necessary, even in the most modern plant. An artificial light approximating daylight simplifies the problem of maintaining a high standard of production.

HYDRO Gas Filled Lamps flood your factory with an easy-to-work-by light. Furthermore, they are economical. HYDRO Gas Filled Lamps have greater brilliancy and long life. The Hydro-Electric Power Commission of Ontario recommends HYDRO Gas Filled Lamps for factory lighting.

We will gladly demonstrate their great brilliancy and low current consumption at the Hydro Shop. Call at your convenience.

OLD LONDON BELL FOUNDRIES

Relics of Many of Them Are Still to Be Found Scattered Through the British Capital.

In the days before clocks, to say nothing of watches, were common the bells of London occupied a much more important position than they do today. 'Prentices depended on this bell and that to call them very unwillingly to work of a morning and release them very willingly from work of an evening, whilst bells were requisitioned for all manner of special purposes. And so there were many bell foundries in the city. Relics of them are found in many places, even if it is only a street name, such as Billiter street, which, as Mr. Laudfear Lucas points out, was undoubtedly Bell-sitzers or Founders' lane. Then Belsize probably owes its name, he declares, to a bell foundry on the lower part of Hampstead hill. Something of this sort is all that remains of many of them, but others, like the Whitechapel Bell foundry, which has been charged with retuning and rehanging the bells of Westminster abbey for the peace rejoicings, have continued to do business through the centuries. The foundry commenced business in 1570.

Timely Suggestion.

A Brooklyn lady who bought some get-rich-while-you-sleep oil and mining stock recently, is now just too provoked for anything because she didn't examine the shares more closely. Some of them are red, some yellow and some green. She tried to paper her kitchen walls with them after the president of the company disappeared, but the artistic effect was not satisfactory.

In doing your spring shopping for worthless securities, insist on getting stock certificates that harmonize in color. Then you can use them for decorative purposes after the company goes to the wall.

An old piano box covered with the shares of deceased corporations makes a pretty good clothes press, provided the stock matches nicely in shade and texture. Persons who are color blind should be extremely cautious with their wild-cat investments these days.

A Gigantic Flagstaff.

The new Victory flagstaff, which was taken to England from British Columbia lately, is the second highest in the world. It was erected on the summit of "Victory Mound" in Kew Gardens, London. It is 215 feet high, and it is 72 feet higher than the Nelson Monument in Trafalgar Square, London. It is the gift of the British Columbia Government to the Home Government, and it replaces the old flagstaff received from the British Columbia Government in 1861, which till recently occupied the same site, but had to be removed owing to its having fallen into decay.

Where Huns Were Inferior.

There is a noteworthy example of the preservation of valuable military secrets in the interesting article written by the secretary of the British Geographic society entitled "German War Maps and Surveys." British methods of survey and mapmaking were far superior to the enemy's, and one conspicuous success was scored in the scientific development of sound ranging for artillery. They used a self-recording apparatus, an ingenious and delicate piece of mechanism, which was used during the battle of Arras in April, 1917. The idea upon which it was based must have been known to a great many persons, both soldiers and civilians, but it never reached the enemy, though how much he desired to obtain it was revealed by Ludendorf's issue of an order in which he insisted upon the importance of capturing a set of these instruments. Until practically the end of the war German sound ranging was done with stop watches, a hopelessly crude and inaccurate arrangement in comparison with the scientific British system.—Indianapolis Star.

Had Some Merit.

A well-known clergyman in Liverpool used to tell a story of a fishing experience he had in Shetland. He was out fishing for sea trout, accompanied by a local youth, when his foot slipped on a stone and he overbalanced. As he was encumbered with heavy waders, which quickly filled with water, he was in considerable danger of drowning, but after a good deal of struggling he managed at last to reach safety, though in a very exhausted condition. When he managed to recover his breath, he said very reproachfully to the youth, who had stood stolidly all the time watching him, "I noticed you never tried to help me." "Na," came the reply, "but it wasna because I wasna thinkin' o't."

BUILDING AN ICEHOUSE

Good Type for Use on the Average Farm.

Every Milk Producer Should Have One—The Work and Cost of Erection Light Compared With the Benefits.

(Contributed by Ontario Department of Agriculture, Toronto.)

EVERY Ontario farmer who produces Milk,—and most of the farmers do,—should store a quantity of ice each winter in order to make it easier for him to cool the milk down after the evening milking, and to keep it sweet for such short periods,—week-ends for example,—as he may be required to keep it before delivering it at the cheese factory or other point of disposal. In order to preserve the ice satisfactorily some form of ice-house or shelter is necessary. The purpose of this article is to describe in a few words a type of ice-house which will give good satisfaction.

The ice-house does not necessarily have to be expensive, but certain conditions in regard to it must obtain if the ice is to keep well. These I shall emphasie first and they are,—protection of ice from sun's rays, this is the wall, good drainage from the bottom of the house, either natural or artificial, free circulation of air through the top, air-tight foundation, plenty of good quality of dry sawdust on all sides of the mass of ice, and close packing of the ice. If these conditions can be secured in a rough bin built under a shed, or a lean-to on the shady side of a building, all well and good unless one has other good reasons for building a more expensive structure elsewhere. The matter of convenience is often a deciding factor in this case, and the type of ice-house I am about to describe is a good illustration of this fact. Only once have I seen it in use, but there is no reason why it could not be used quite generally.

This particular type consists of a lean-to structure of wood at one end of the barn which has the stable underneath. The size would vary with the amount of ice required, but probably a building 15 feet square and 12 feet high would be large enough for most farmers' needs. In this structure and at the side adjacent to the barn, or rather the basement wall, is built a concrete enclosure about 6 feet square and 6 or 6½ feet high. A door in the basement wall admits one to it. In the side opposite to the doorway there is a row of 3 or 4-inch tile near the bottom for letting in the cold air from the ice which is packed closely to the concrete storage on all three sides and over the top as well. Between the top of the storage and the barn there is a narrow passage-way or flue for allowing the foul or used air to get out, hence good circulation in the storage is provided for. In this particular case the farmer has his milk-room containing cream separator, etc., adjoining this storage and whenever he wishes to cool milk or cream or store it he puts it in this storage. Other articles, such as butter and meat, are also stored at times but of course only for a few days at a time. Hence much handling of ice is saved as well as considerable time. The building is made of wood, the studding being boarded on both sides. It would be advisable to fill the space between the two boardings with planer shavings or good quality sawdust. The roof is covered with shingles. The gables are left somewhat open for ventilation. Plenty of sawdust is used around the ice next to the walls, and also a good depth over the top, none however is used between the cakes of ice. If a few cakes of ice are required for household use they may be easily taken out of the sawdust in the top of ice-house or at one side if more convenient.

It will be seen, therefore, that this type of ice-house does double duty in a degree, namely, providing a small ice-cold storage room, cooled by the ice mass directly, in addition to housing ice for various incidental uses in the summer-time. In a case of this kind there would not be much need for taking out ice except for supplying the household refrigerator as the storage-room would take care of the ordinary cooling and preserving of products.

Believing this arrangement to be valuable, and in many cases practicable on Ontario farms, I have much pleasure in recommending it to farmers in general.—R. R. Graham, O. A. College, Guelph.

Still a Place for the Good Horse.

Horses have not been meeting a keen demand in Canada since the war broke out and have increased about 650,000 since 1914. However, a real good heavy draft horse is hard to find, and if Old Country markets are any criterion of the trend of affairs an awakening in the Canadian Draft Horse market should soon follow. Draft geldings are selling in England for from $300 to $500 and even up to $1,000 each. A returned officer told me recently of seeing a number of Canadian geldings (artillery and transport horses) sold in Old London for £100 ($500) each. About one-fifth of Great Britain's ordinary supply of work horses went to the war and a number of useful brood mares were also taken. France, Belgium, Russia and Germany, four of the great horse-producing countries, have lost a heavy percentage of their horse stock during the war. Already a shipment of Percherons has gone from Western Canada to France, and it would seem that during the period of reconstruction our horse market will be East and not West. If it will pay to breed any horse on the Canadian farm the heavy draft of good quality should turn in most money to his owner.

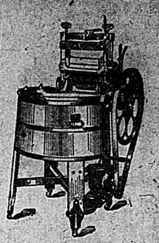
Now You Can Have an Electric Washer

Many a time as you buckled over the wash board, rubbing the life out of the clothes and the joy out of a day, you had thought how nice it would be to have an electric washer. Of course, you knew you couldn't afford one—they cost so much. But now the "can't afford it" excuse is out of date. Now you can have an electric washer and all its advantages, for the price of a Kribs Electric Washer is within the means of every housewife.

$80 Kribs Electric Washer $80



While most electric washing machines cost between $125.00 and $200.00 the Kribs Electric Washer is sold for $80.00. And we guarantee every machine to wash clothes perfectly. The Kribs Electric Washer is supplied with cut gears which makes it practically noiseless when compared with other washers whose cast gears grind and growl throughout the washing. The Kribs Electric Washer is also equipped with a safety release wringer which instantly releases both ends of the wringer in emergencies—this is the most effective type of safety wringer made. The power is supplied by the famous Robbins & Myers electric motors, used on the most expensive machines.

14 DAYS' FREE TRIAL

Until November 30th only, we are making a special 14 days' free trial offer. Every housewife should take advantage of the offer and learn how the Kribs Electric Washer banishes wash-day drudgery. Give the machine a thorough trial—remember you are under no obligation to buy—you can make no mistake by experimenting.

Easy Terms Arranged

If at the end of two weeks you are completely satisfied with the way it washes blankets, tablecloths, curtains, everything down to the flimsiest lace—if you are convinced that it saves many times its cost in time and labor, you can pay for it out of your actual savings. Easy monthly payments to suit every purchaser can be arranged.

Offer Good Until November Thirtieth Only

We have but a limited number of machines on hand, so we have made this offer good only up to the thirtieth of November. We advise you to come and select your machine at once. We will gladly demonstrate the washer at any time.

THE PRINCE WITH THE NORTH WEST MOUNTED POLICE.

There was a riot of color, sensational riding and fun at the R. N. W. M. P. barracks at Regina following the inspection of the famous force by His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales. Drawn up on the square were the depot division, the physical training class and a squadron of mounted men for inspection. The Prince passed slowly through the lines, stopping here and there to speak with men with overseas service and displaying a decided interest in the winter dress and different types of uniforms on parade.

Addressing the officers, N. C. O.'s and men, following the inspection, His Royal Highness complimented them on their smart appearance. In the course of his remarks he showed himself to be familiar with the history of the force, which, he declared, was as famous as the Dominion itself. He referred to the work of the R. N. W. M. P. in the Klondike in the first days of the gold rush, and the respect the uniform had gained in the West. The record of the force, he said, was known in England, and the name was famous in all parts of the world.

Immediately after the inspection a bunch of untrained horses were brought in, and for a time there was real excitement.

It was evident that the Prince wanted to get into the crowd and get a better view of what was going on, but each time he managed to get in the danger zone some official led him gently to one side.

The mounted squad put their mounts through stunts. The horses lay down, played dead, and did all sorts of things. The action was fast; rider after rider would break loose and dashing across the square would lean far from the saddle and pick up some object from the ground.

Victory Loan Victors Enjoy A Social Evening

CAMPAIGN WARRIORS GATHER AROUND THE CAMP FIRE AT HOTEL QUINTE TO SWAP YARNS OF THE GREAT FIGHT FOR FINANCES TO CARRY CANADA ALONG DURING RECONSTRUCTION DAYS—WORKERS PRESENT FROM ALL PARTS OF THE COUNTY—CAPT. JANNEY TELLS HOW IT LOOKS FROM THE AIR.

The victors of the Victory Loan met last evening in the dining room of the Hotel Quinte and after enjoying the tasty menu provided a delightful hour or two were spent, exchanging reminiscences of the campaign grave and gay. The night was also filled with music and the cares which infest the day were wise enough to fold their gloomy tents and like the sad faced Arab, as silently fade away. There was a large attendance of Victory Loan workers from every part of the County of Hastings and the key note was enthusiasm, joy for achievement and a merry, friendly get-together spirit.

Mr. W. B. Deacon, Chairman of the Victory Loan organization for Hastings County in the various campaigns was chairman of the gathering last night and his geniality and wit added much pep and pleasure to the occasion. "Billy's" smile has become so proverbial that it has been said that some of the local doctors whenever they have a patient with a bad case of the blues they send him around to "Billy" Deacon to get thawed out in his genial atmosphere and heart-warming smile.

Associated with Chairman Deacon was W. H. Matthews of Trenton, Vice-Chairman of the County organization, who acted as vice-chairman of the banquet and in his dry and droll way, gave some inside information upon the campaign in his end of the county with amusing sidelights.

Messrs. W. B. Evans, County Organizer; H. W. Ackerman, Secretary; Capt. A. C. H. Andrews, Publicity Organizer and Mr. E. B. Thompson, of Toronto; Divisional Organizer, were present and added their quota to the grist of campaign tales told over the coffee and smokes.

SONGS AND RECITATIONS

Rousing choruses, patriotic and otherwise were sung yith a vim, led by that prince of entertainers, "Billy" otherwise W. L. Doyle, who also favored the gathering with a musical recitation assisted at the piano by Mr. Sam Anglin; also introducing his celebrated imitation of 'Mo 'Am, Maw." Then Prof. Staples, of Albert College delighted the gathering with some of his splendid songs, and there was no lack of entertainment at any stage of the proceedigs, an added feature being the recital of James Whitcomb, Riley's poetic picture of country life in the fall of the year, "When the Frost is on the Punkin," by Mr. J. O. Herity Eloquent and inspiring addresses were made by Col. W. N. Ponton, Honorary County Chairman; Dr. Bissonette, Messrs. E. B. Thompson, W. B. Evans, H. W. Ackerman, Capt. Andrews, R. Tannahill, F. W. Frost, H. F. Whittier, G. N. Spafford, S. J. Fisher, R. W. McCreary, W. A. Woodley, Lieut. W. H. Finkle, H. C. Clarke B.A. Capt. E. L. Janney, J. A. Higgs and Morley Duff.

A MESSAGE FROM THE AIR

The feature of the evening was the stirring address of Capt. E. L. Janney who briefly sketched the future of the aeroplane as he saw it and the great possibilites for exploration and colonization of Canada's great and rich northern country at present inhabited only by the roving Indian and Eskimo. The Captain is at the head of a company which purposes to explore that great lone land of Canada, Ungava with its gigantic waterpowers, rivalling Niagara, its minerals, forest and agricultural wealth. The preliminary development will be made by aircraft to carry in supplies and convey explorers and prospectors to every part of the vast region which now takes four months to penetrate by bush trail and waterways but can be reached in a few hours by aeroplane. Capt. Janney gave a brief summary of his earlier war experiences when, as a trained aviator he offered his services in August 1914, to Sir Sam Hughes at Ottawa Sir Sam was not at all sure then as to the value of aeroplanes in the war but he was willing to try anything at least once and gave Capt. Janney a free hand and eleven thousand dollars to make a start on the air offensive. With the eleven thousand dollars concealed on his person and armed with an automatic Capt. Janney proceeded to Boston where he bought a seaplane of a type now happily absolete, a nerve-wracker and back breaker. He hopped off at Marblehead, Massachusetts managed to cross over the White Mountains without dislocating any of their alabaster peaks, was blown over Lake Champlain in a greater hurry than he cared for on account of a fierce gale raging, and was forced to land at Sorel, Quebec, for gasoline. Having no credentials for various reasons, chief among which was the embargo, placed by William J. Bryan, Secretary of State, against flying machines being taken into Canada after the outbreak of war, Capt. Janney could not convine the good people of Sorel that he was anything less than a dangerous character and he was accordingly locked up in the calaboose until word came from Sir Sam Hughes to cut him loose. Capt. Janney gave some very interesting details of the growth of the aeroplane service since the war began and the great possibilites ahead of this branch of transportation. He intends to spend several days in Belleville next week and will try and demonstrate to leading citizens just how safe and pleasant aerial travel is, and how much better Belleville looks from the air downward than from the ground upward.

Capt. Janney's address was listened to with deep appreciation and was heartily applauded. At its conclusion Col. Ponton, drew attention to the fact that at Toronto this week, at the annual meeting of the Associated Boards of Trade of Ontario a resolution submitted by the Belleville Board of Trade strongly urging that every possible governmental encouragement to the development of aerial transportation, freight, passenger, express and mail service be given, was carried unanimously amid hearty cheers, being the only resolution at the convention to be so honored.

Stock Market Grows Stronger

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

NEW YORK, Nov. 22—Stocks were irregular within extremely narrow limits at a dull opening of to-day's session. The only issues to show more than fractional changes were General Motors which rose three points and Retail Stores which declined one point.

Stocks which were dull and uncertain at the beginning of to-day's session soon developed moderate activity declines of fractions to one point in Steel, Motors Tobaccos and Rails were balanced by gains of 1 to 3 points in such recent favorites as General Motors, Mexico Petroleum, Pierce Arrow, Columbia Gas and Automobile. The specialties list as a whole became stronger within the first hal fhour, food and utility shares participating in the advance.

Relations Strained With Mexico

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22—Mexico continued to-day to be the object of sharp vigilance at the State Department pending an answer from the Mexican government to the note warning that further molestation of Wm. O. Jenkins, American consular agent at Puebla, who was twice arrested in connection with his abduction of bandits would seriously affect the relations between the United States and Mexico. No reports regarding Jenkins had reached the State Department early this morning.

WINNIPEG HAS SEVENTEEN SLEEPING SICKNESS CASES

WINNIPEG, Man., Nov. 22—Two more cases of sleeping sickness were reported to City Hall authorities on Thursday, bringing the total number since the disease appeared to seventeen. The death list still remains at five.

Two Canadians Taken On Similar Charges

One Alleged to Have Married Young Girl Bigamously at Brockville.

BROCKVILLE, Nov. 21—Robert Kane, aged twenty-three, who, it is alleged brought a girl named Ella Schwartzfigger, aged nineteen from Watertown, N.Y., and married her here, is being held by Watertown police, and will, it is said, be deported shortly to this country.

The Watertown police say that he lived only a short time with the girl, and then made his way back to the United States, ultimately turning up again in Watertown. He was arrested by Detective Captin A. S. Wood, Watertown, and is being held in Jefferson County Jail there, pending deportation at the instance of Immigration Inspector Don. McIntosh, Ogdensburg. Kane's first wife, it is alleged, is now living in Watertown.

Kane is one of two former Canadians to be taken into custody at Watertown on similar charges. The other is Oliver Scales, aged twenty-one, who is charged with having taken Ellen Rose, aged fifteen, to Watertown from this country for immoral purposes. Scales, it is claimed, went to Watertown from Canada about a month ago in company with the Rose girl.

No Class Legislation Says Premier Drury

Premier Drury of Ontario and Mr. D. B. Hanna, President of fthe Canadian National Railways, delivered notable speeches at a memorable meeting of the Associated Boards of Trade of Ontario in the Royal Bank Building at Toronto on Thursday evening.

Mr. Drury made his first public utterance since assuming the responsibilities of Prime Minister. He was given a remarkable ovation, and representative business men from all parts of the Province enthusiastically assured him that they are determined to give his Government more than a fair chance to make good. His remarks made a profound impression. Incidentally, he referred to his party as the "People's Party."

"You need fear no class legislation," he declared, amid an outburst of applause. "The Government of this province has been taken over in a spirit of public service. The old party system had outlived its usefulness. The new People's party will go forward with a sincere desire to serve, unhampered by the barnacles, the parasites and the hangers-on of the old parties. Thre will be no thought of class legislation."

Mr. Hanna, who also had a magnificent reception, spoke optimistically of the future of the Canadian National Railways, declaring that he had every confidence in the ability of the largest publicly-owned railway system in the world to pay if the people of Canada would see to it that politicians and Governments were made to keep their hands off the management.

Won't Dare Regulate Any Feminine Styles

WINDSOR, Nov. 22—That the high cost of living in Windsor and other border municipalities is materially affected by the desire of border women to "put on style" by wearing expensive dress and shoes, according to the fashion in Detroit, was testified by Windsor business men before James Murdock, Commissioner appointed to investigate the cost of living problem in the Dominion.

"Windsor women must have Detroit style," said Alexander B. Peddie, a local dry goods merchant, "although just as serviceable clothes, with an equal appearance to goods sold in Detroit as the latest creations can be purchased in Windsor." This opinion was backed up by F. M. Sclanders, the local Industrial Commissioner.

The Canadian Cost of Living Commission, Commissioner Murdoch said, had been advised to standardize women's clothing and shoes. This, however, he believed was not possible, because women would not stand for manninsh interference in their fashions.

"We might attempt it with men's styles and get away with our lives," the Commissioner said, "but we couldn't think of daring to regulate styles of women's clothing."

Disabled Bandit Given Jail Term

Blinded and Paralyzed His Days on Earth Seem Numbered

TORONTO, Nov. 22—Frank John Putwain, who attempted to "hold up" the Agincourt branch of the Bank of Nova Scotia and was shot by R. T. Laing, the bank manager, was sentenced by Chief Justice Sir William Mullock in the Assize Court yesterday to two years less one week at the Jail Farm. Virtually this means a life sentence, as according to the opinions of several doctors, Putwain has but two more years to live. He is not only blind but partially paralyzed. As he was guided into court the prisoner, whose head was heavily bandaged, was an object of general pity. At the conclusion of what was a trying ordeal for everyone concerned, the Chief Justice said he had gone into the reasons for imposing an appropriate sentence, and it was right that the public should know that although in this case a serious sentence was not imposed that the departure from the practice arose from the condition of the prisoner, not that the law regarded the offence as a light one, and its gravity must not be measured by the sentence imposed.

While technically the sentence commits Putwain to the Jail Farm, it also permits the Salvation Army to take him under their care, and this will be done. In court yesterday were Brigadier Fraser, assistant secretary and Col. Chandler, secretary of the Salvation Army's organization which looks after prison work. In his Lordship's disposition of the case, officials of the Crown concurred.

It was in May of this year that Putwain, with a companion named Boyes, entered the bank. The bank manager was shot in the abdomen in his defence of the bank's property, but severely wounded though he was, he killed Boyes and sent four bullets into the body of Putwain, whose life was despaired of for many weeks. Mr. Laing, the bank manger, was also in a precarious condition for several days.

Last Minute Telegraph Briefs

LONDON, Nov. 22—Lettish forces yesterday captured Mitau, capital of Courland, according to Lettish legation here. The Letts continued there victorious advance.

Deadlock With Miners

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22—A deadlock between the bituminous coal operators and miners in the central com petitive field was forecasted today by Thomas F. Brewster, chairman of the operators, when the joint scale committees met to discuss the increased wage proposals made yesterday by Secretary of Labor Wilson.

New Features In Peterboro Sensation

PETERBORO, Nov. 21.—Jas. Guise Bagley, arrested on a charge of operating a still and subsequently released on bail was re-arrested yesterday after noon on what the police claim is a much graver charge. While the exact nature of this charge is not revealed it is understood it may turn the investigation in an unexpected direction and may provide another twist to the case. Mr. Bagley appeared in the Police Court this morning charged with having in his possession a still and other apparatus for making liquor and also for keeping liquor for sale. The accused, who is a lawyer, asked for a remand until to-morrow morning and his request was granted.

Two other men implicated are Ernest Middleton of the Peterboro Candy Co. and William Faiers. The arrest of Mr. Bagley was a dramatic ending to the most sensational seizure, at his home, of wine, liquor and stilling gappartus that has ever occurred in Peterboro. Two truck loads of liquor and paraphernalia for manufacturing it was removed to the police station. The still was taken charge of by Mr. Wm. Baller, local Inspector of Inland Revenue, who, during the past three days has seized four illicit stills, fined two of the owners and fixed the trial of a third man for a later date, and altogether visited eight places under suspicion.

Dinnick Questioned On Reliance Deal

Defunct Company Lost $100,000 Trying to Start a New Company.

TORONTO, Nov. 21—In the Standard Reliance probe G. H. Kilmer, K. C., questioned Lieut.-Col. W. S. Dinnick with regard to the sale of properties to a cousin of Mr. Dinnick's—C. S. Rote,—at sums aggregating $63,272.37. There were various trans actions regarding them and finally a resultant deficit to the Standard Reliance.

Mr. Kilmer endeavored to secure from the witness an admission that the deficit had gone to swell a blanket mortgage given to the Standard by the Dovercourt Loan and that these sums were still owing with interest, but Col. Dinnick declared that the deficits had been wiped off by profits on the sale of other properties, such as the Mairn Estate which had been taken over for $23,000 and had sold for $100,000. He insisted that the sales of Pote were absolutely clear, bona fide sales.

The probe into the operations of the defunct Standard Loan Company was resumed at Osgoode Hall before Master in Chambers C. A. C. Cameron, with Col. W. S. Dinnick again the chief witness. Outstanding features of the evidence was that the Standard Loan had lost over $100,000 in trying to establish the Canadian Casualty Company which had been organized in 1902 by G. T. C. Dinnick and other directors of the Standard Loan. The Standard Loan first bought stock of the Casualty Company, making payments to the extent of $43,000 and then sold this stock of its subaidiary, the Dovercourt Land Company, who paid for it with a cheque drawn on the Standard Loan and whic hsum remained as an over draft.

Mysterious Fires In Big U.S. Prisons

Water Main Cut at Sing Sing—Inadequate Supply at Leavenworth.

OSSINING, N.Y., Nov. 22—Three buildings in the Sing Sing prison yard were destroyed yesterday by a fire believed to be of incendiary origin. The loss is estimated at more than $200,000.

Belief that the fire may have been of incendiary origin is strengthened by the fact that an eight-inch water main supplying the prison was cut yesterday, making the water supply furnished the prison entirely inadequate.

Fire Also in Leavenworth

Leavenworth, Kan., Nov. 22—Fire of unknown origin broke out in the exchange building at the disciplinary barracks at Fort Leavenworth and destroyed it within half an hour.

Bold Bandit Toys With U.S. Posse

CHEYENNE, Wyo, Nov. 22—Bill Carlisle, bandit extraordinary, was still playing a grimly humorous game of life and death with sheriff's posses railway detectives and United States regulars again.

The famous hold-up man, who has roobed a passenger train and a posses' train since his escape Saturday night from prison, where he was serving a life sentence for three train robberies in 1916 continued to "kid" his pursuers by daring exploits.

Carlisle's latest "joke" was to pay a formal visit on Emmit Stapleton, editor of the Caspar, Wyoming, Press. He invaded the editor's sanctum, chatted amicably with Stapleton, inquired about the progress of the pursuit of "Carlisle," and offered to lay a small wager "Bill" would escape. Stapleton recognized Carlisle but remembered his business was writing, not fighting.

While in Caspar, Carlisle walked into the Western Union office and sent the following message to the Union Pacific offices:

"Thanks for haul on your limited. Some detective force."

After leaving a half-dollar in payment, Carlisle coolly walked out while the amazed employees stared, and left town in an automobile.

Joseph Fortin, of Quebec, a trapper, is believed to have lost his life in the woods near Lake Frontiere, Bellechasse county.

Associated Boards Of Trade To Meet At Belleville

Belleville will have the distinction and advantage of entertaining the Associated Boards of Trade of Ontario in November next year as the result of the efforts of the delegates from the Belleville Board of Trade who attended the annual meeting of the Associated Boards at Toronto this week. Generally the annual meeting of the Associated Boards of Trade of Ontario is held in Toronto, and it is a great honor for Belleville to be selected as the place for the next annual meeting. Toronto delegates fought hard against losing the gathering, appreciating its value in bringing to the city such a large number of the most representative business men from all parts of the Province, from Windsor to Ottawa, and from New Ontario. However, Belleville delegates laid their plans well and were kindly assisted by the Kingston delegates, with the result that the prize was landed.

Delegates from the Belleville Board of Trade present at the annual session this week in Toronto were Col. L. W. Marsh, Col. W. N. Ponton, Messrs. John Elliott, W. C. Springer, and N. D. MacFadyen.

Travellers Must Be Vaccinated

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

OTTAWA, Nov. 22—The Dominion Department of Health has been advised that the United States government has imposed vaccination conditions on all travellers from Toronto and vicinity entering at Unitel States ports of entry. This is due to the prevalence of small pox in these districts.

Trenton Expects Another Industry

(From our own Correspondent)

TRENTON, Nov. 21—The Mayor has called a special meeting in the town hall this evening of all citizens for the purpose of discussing the advent of a large, new industry, which contemplates coming to town in the near future.

The new skating rink is nearly completed and it is expected that Evangelistic services will be held in it on Sunday next.

The C. U. R. went well over the top of their objective—$5,000,000—in the Victory Loan, getting nearly $6,000,000.

By-Election Dates Now Announced

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

TORONTO, Nov. 22.—Nominations for the Ontario Provincial by-elections made necessary by the law for members of the Drury Cabinet will be held on December 16 and elections one week later on December 22nd. This was officially announced at the Legislative buildings this morning.

S.O.S. Calls From German Barque

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

HALIFAX, N. S., Nov. 22—The German four-masted barque Paul is in distress 350 miles southeast of Halifax and is asking for a tow from Halifav, but this it was understood this morning could not be supplied and a wireless message telling of her condition has been sent broadcast in the hope that some steamer will be able to come to her assistance.

OPIUM BRICK SWINDLE WORKED ON CHINAMAN

MONTREAL, Nov. 22—The "opium" brick swindle is the latest scheme, and the first time it was tried here led to action in the Criminal Courts. Wong Tong, living at 104 Lagauchetiere street, was the victim, and he told his story to Judge Cusson, in the Arraignment Court, as a sequel to whwich P ter Lay, known as Pete the Barber, and S. Schnolikoff, known as the "Doctor," were committed for trial, on a charge of swindling.

Wong Tong told the court that he had been asked to call on the "Doctor," who with "Pete the Barber," had taken him to the "Doctor's," where, after he had paid $500, a parcel of 45 packages was given him. These, when he opened them, were found to be blocks of wood the size of an ordinary package of opium, wrapped up in Chinese red paper and tied with a red string, the same as opium. On asking Schnolikoff and Pete to refund the money, they had expressed regret and told him they did not have his money.

$1,000,000 WORTH OF LUMBER LOST I NQUEBEC FIRE

QUEBEC, Nov. 22—The smaller of the two mills of the Brown corporation, of Berlin, N.H., at Trois Pistoles, Que., was destroped by fire with millions of feet of lumber and about 100,000 cords of pulpwood. The loss is estimated at $1,000,000.

Russian Reds Lose 5,000 When Denikine Strikes

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

STOCKHOLM, Nov. 22.—General Denekine, commander of the anti-Bolshevik troops on the southern Russian front, claims to have broken through the Red line between Oral and Tambov, southeast of Moscow, and to have annihilated 5,000 Bolshevik troops, according a Helsingfors despatch.

Reports recently received from the southern Russian front have appeared to indicate that Gen. Denekime was being driven southwest by the Bolshevik. General Denekine reached Oral about a month ago, but there encountered such strong resistance that he was forced to assume the defensive. A Bolshevik official statement received later told of a break in Denekine's line to the southwest of Oral. Tambov is about four hundred miles south of Moscow.

Dannunzio Advance sAgainst Dalmatia And Montenegro

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited,

LONDON, Nov. 22.—The situation on the Adriatic as the result of Gabriel D'Annunzio's campaign, has reached a grave crisis and private advices leave no doubt that he is determined to annex Dalmatia and attack Montenegro. The Jugo-Slavs are stated to have concentrated troops and to be prepared to resist aggression. A still more alarming report says that a republican undercurrent directed against the Italian monarchy exists among D'Annunzio's forces. It is not known, however, whether the insurgent poet leader shares the reported ambition of this military element to attack the government.

Music and Drama

"I feel great, I have just had a good cry," a woman says that, and this woman's psychology is correct. She does not analyze herself perhaps as a man might, but nevertheless she has solved a scientific truth. That is why songs, poems verses, stories that have lived longest in the world have been those of sweet tears, from "Swanee River," "Annie Laurie" and "Old Kentucky Home" down to "A Long, Long Trail" The nervousness, the unrest, the dry, jerky uneasiness of our mental and physical machinery is washed away and our souls left fresh and clean by tears. That is why the greatest, as well as the most popular plays from 'Hamlet' to 'Camille' or 'Uncle Tom's Cabin' have been tales of sorrow. They give all of us the opportunity to cry away our own little trials and troubles in viewing the imaginary troubles of others. Recall the happiest moment of your life—your first love kiss, your first baby to your breast, your heart's greatest moment—if you smiled, it was through your tears. That is why all Belleville will renew its youth and get new vision with a great, broad, sweet pity for all mankind and womankind by seeing D. W. Griffith's "Broken Blossoms" when it comes to Griffin's Monday, Tuesday and Wednesday, December 1st, 2nd and 3rd. This new Art sensation which closes a phenominal 2 weeks engagement at the Regent Theatre, Toronto, to-night is to be presented each afternoon at 2.30 and each evening at 8.15 p.m.

LOUISE GLUM IN "SAMARA"

A powerful, imaginative new producer of motion pictures has sprung in to the front rank to challege world recognition in J. Parker Read, Jr., whose first emotional drama "Sahara" starving beautiful Louise Glaum in a story by C. Gardiner Sullivan, is to be the attraction at Griffin's next Thursday to Saturday, with a matinee Saturday. "Sahara" is hailed everywhere as being one of the really big productions of the year in motion pictures; a rich, luxurious emotional drama of Paris, Cairo and the Egyptian desert, from which it derives its colorful name The photoplay is notable for the many stunning gowns revealed during its exhibtion. A selected program of comedy and topicals are,also being exhibited on the same program.

WILLIAM FARNUM'S FINEST

William Farnum appeared at Griffin's agian last night before a large audience in the first of the new William Fox million dollar series of productions "Wolves of the Night" and was acclaimed one of the finest pictures seen here in a long time. No more breathless and exciting moments have been experienced in motion picture plays than the imprisonment of the hero in a mine by explosion, his subsequent escape and his fight with three conspirators who have wrested his fortune from him during his absence in a foreign country. Just after his marriage he leaves for Chile to investigate some,coper mines. An attempt on his life is made and his wife is told he is dead. He returns home several years later to find his wife married to the man responsible for his mishap. "Wolves of the Night" is a real Farnum picture, which means a picture rich in romance and stirring action. The scenic effects are very striking and the photoplay beautiful. The program is augumented by some good comedy and topicals.

CODE OF THE YUKON

Mtichell Lewis and Vivian Martin are appearing at the Palace to-night in an absorbing 6-part Select picture of the far north, "The Code of the Yukon." A funny 2-act Iko comedy, "Gimbells and Boneheads" and a thrilling chapter o fthe great "stunt" serial "The Great Gamble" featuring Anne Luther and Charles Hutchison are also being shown on the same program.

TOM-BOY COMEDY "MICKEY"

"Mickey," probably the most popular picture play of the season, which ran for sixteen weeks to capacity business at the Grand Opera House, Toronto, is returning to Griffin's this Monday to Wednesday, matinee daily owing to the many requests received by the management that it be brought back. There is something about, this production that places it in a class by itself. It is a narrative cleyerly constructed with a combination of characters that are to be found in every day life interpreted by an excellent cast headed by the talented little screen star, Mabel Normand. The story leads up to a series of adventures that are exciting and thrilling. The episode of the horse race showing the track, the crowds, the horses, the stables, the jockey's quarters and the race itself are especially effective and stirs the enthusiasm of the spectators. This scene in itself would make the ordinary picture a feature production. But it is only one of the number of big scenes in "Mickey." Besides "Mickey," a funny two-reel Sunshine comedy, Gaumont World-wide News and a thrilling 101 Ranch Western comedy will be shown.

"FORTUNE AT STAKE"

The first of a series of all-British films to be screened in Belleville this winter is being offered at the Palace this Monday to Wednesday, matinee daily, when the big English racing film "Fortune at Stake" with an all British cast will be the feature offering. A new Luke comedy, British Canadian News and the latest chapter of the thrill-packed serial "Perils of Thunder Mountain" are also announced for exhibition.

HONDURAN CITY OF MYSTERY

No Scholar Has Been Able to Decipher the Picture-Writings Left in Copan.

Copan is a city of mystery. The people who once thronged its streets and bowled at its altars are long since gone, leaving no record of their existence save the hoary stones of their city. These stones, built into pyramids, walls and monuments, bear their story carved in the Maya characters. But no descendants have survived to interpret the stories, and no scholar has arisen wise enough to read the picture-writings of Copan.

Ruins of this oldest city of the Maya Indians may still be seen by those sufficiently persistent and enthusiastic to seek them out. A little Indian village in western Honduras, and the river on which it lies keep the name of Copan alive today. To visit the ruins of the great Copan you must seek out this village by train and then go a long journey on horseback. Just beyond the village lies the old Maya metropolis.

The only inhabitants of Copan today are queer figures of the Maya gods, that peer out of unexpected hiding places like the creatures of a bad dream. Wonderfully carved many of them are, grotesque in attitude and expression, according to the artists' conception of the beings of the other world.

When Copan flourished, how it fell, and what became of its last people, no one knows. The city is as desolate as only a deserted city can be, oppressive and sad even in the bright sunlight of a tropical midday.—"Niksah" in Indianapolis Star.

JAPS HONOR BRITISH SAILOR

Still Revere Memory of William Adams, Who Led Expedition to Their Country in 1600.

Two memorial stone lanterns near the Japanese port of Yokosuka are the people's tribute to the memory of William Adams, an English sailor who was the first of his countrymen to settle in Japan, and who is credited with opening the way for commerce between Britain and Japan. In 1600 Adams led a trading expedition bound for the West Indies. His fleet consisted of five, vessels symbolically named Faith, Hope, Charity, Fidelity and Good News. The expedition met with many misfortunes of weather and sickness. Their adventures included the loss of eight men who were eaten by cannibals on one of the Pacific Islands.

The ship carrying Adams finally reached the coast of Bungo, in the eastern part of Kyushu, Japan. The Englishmen made friends with the natives until the arrival of some Portuguese Jesuits who told the Japanese leaders the strangers were pirates and had them imprisoned. The emperor heard of their plight, and had them brought to his palace at Osaka. The ruler finally decided that the men were harmless and released them, retaining Adams at court to teach shipbuilding and other arts to the natives. In 1613 another English sea captain arrived in Japan with letters from the king of England to the emperor of Japan. Through Adams' influence the Englishmen and the oriental ruler signed a treaty giving Britain the perpetual right to enter any ports of the empire and trade freely throughout the country.

The Webs of Spiders.

"As fine as a spider's web" is rather a misleading comparison, as all spiders' webs are not alike; nor are all the threads of which they are made. These may be dry or sticky, fine and regular, or coarse and rough, according to the will of the spider, and the use he wishes to make of it.

One kind of web is that seen on the grass on dewy mornings. This is merely a level floor on which the spider runs and catches his prey. The thread is not sticky, and the web may last, if undisturbed, a whole season. Attached to it is a tube of web, in which the spider hides.

Another web is in large meshes, sort of indefinite shape. Insects get entangled in the mesh, but are not held by any glutinous nature in the thread.

Then there are some webs, in which the spider runs about to catch the insects which get entangled. In addition, there is the familiar geometrical pattern. In making these the insect first places the radiating lines in position. On these are woven the circles of sticky thread, which, however, never reach right to the centre. These are the webs which catch insects by their stickiness.

There are, in addition, many varieties of spiders which build no web at all, but catch their prey by running after it.—Tit-Bits.

Universities in Russia

Destroyed by Bolshevism

Education Is Paralyzed

THE name of Prof. P. N. Milyukoff, the eminent Russian historian, was familiar before the war to all the world of scholarship as that of one of the most distinguished teachers in the University of Moscow. Though the troubled events of the last four years have made us more familiar with his work as a member of the Duma, a powerful minister of the Russian republic, and a leader in the fight again Bolshevism, he has not forgotten the sphere of learning, and when approached by an academic correspondent in London he readily consented to speak of the effects of the revolution upon the Russian universities.

Like all the seats of learning in the belligerent countries, the universities of Russia threw themselves whole-heartedly into the conflict against the Prussian enemy and applied the technical skill of their professors and students without stint to the service of the armies. The numbers of Russians engaged in their universities and professional schools in quieter times were always very large and many more were desirous of availing themselves of the resources of the institutions that carried on the teaching work of the universities than it was possible for them to accommodate.

PROF. P. N. MILYUKOFF.

One of the earliest measures of the progressive regime that followed upon the downfall of the Tzardom was, therefore, the establishment of provincial universities in many of the great centres of population in order to relieve the pressure upon the great universities of Moscow and Petrograd, but even this and the drain of students away to the armies left the halls of the universities crammed with pupils anxious to get learning, though all had to be capable of fulfilling the requirements in the way of high school certificates that were necessary to secure admission to an academic course, and these in Russia have been very exacting.

The old autocratic government did its best to secure a rigid uniformity in the teaching and examination of university students, but there was no supreme authority in each university such as exists in England and America. Every one of the schools, observed the professor, that went to make up the university had its own governing body, and it was thus possible to secure a considerable diversity of methods and of outlook and some measure of liberty. With the overthrow of autocracy and the advent to power of liberal reformers a large diversity of educational experiment was encouraged, many hampering restrictions were removed and endeavors were made to bring university education within the reach of all who were capable of profiting by it. Prof. Milyukoff feels that these enlightened measures were meeting a real demand on the part of the best elements in Russia, and that the desire for real progress was being directed into the right channels when the universities, like all the other constructive agencies in Russia, were overwhelmed by the hideous tide of anarchy and Bolshevist tyranny which is more autocratic and terrorist in its methods than the worst government of all the discredited tzars.

The whole organization of the universities was brought down in ruin and their doors were thrown open to all, regardless of attainments or capacity for serious effort.

Society fell apart into fragments, the purchasing power of money was destroyed, the price of commodities soared to judicrous heights, and it became the sole preoccupation of every one but the direct agents of the Bolshevist tyrants to secure food for himself and his dependents until it was possible to escape from the wreck. One by one some of the men of international reputation in the world of learning who were the pride of the Russian universities, have succeeded in finding their way across the Finnish frontier or in fleeing to the protection of one of the anti-Bolshevist armies.

Prof. Milyukoff himself, after struggling against the tyranny at Kiev and elsewhere, journeyed south to Constantinople and thence through Italy to England, there to continue the constructive work of organization on which the life of a new Russia must be built.

New Home Building For Aged Persons

Report of the Home Board of Management.

The Home for the Friendless maintained in Belleville is well looked after by the Women's Christian Association. In the annual report of the Home Board of Management it is pointed out that a larger and more suitable home building is urgently necessary. The Board also recommends that a comfortable home be provided for persons who are able to pay for their own maintenance, but have no relatives to care for them. The report is as follows:

At the end of last year there were ten persons in residence at the Home, of whom one, Mrs. Dafoe, has since died. During the year two men and two women were admitted. Of these two have been discharged and two died, Mrs. Sweetman and Mr. Ryan. At present there are three men and six women in residence. The aggregate number of days' stay has been 3,907 an increase of 506 days over last year. except in connection with the deaths above noted, the health of the inmates has been ecellent, not one of the present number having needed the services of a physician during the twelve months.

Religious services have been held every Sunday throughout the year by a number of devoted workers, to all of whom we are very grateful. We regret very much that Mrs. Bishop, who for many years has so willingly and efficiently presided at the organ, has resigned and we desire to express our deep gratitude to her for her long and faithful services.

Our garden party was financially the most successful we have ever held, netting us $92.52. We are grateful to the I.O.O.F. band for so kindly and gratuitously providing music for the occasion, also to all who assisted in any way, whether by work or contributions. We desire also to gratefully acknowledge the many generous donations of money, clothing, provisions, etc., for the pleasure and comfort of the inmates. These aggregated $188.55 during the year.

Your committee is strongly impressed with the urgent necessity of a larger and more suitable Home building, and think the time has come when definite action should be taken towards initiating a movement in this direction. The present building is in nearly every respect inadequate to our needs, and is decidedly not up to modern requirements, and it is at present impossible to give the inmates all the accomodation and comfort that it is desirable they should have This inadequacy was painfully manifest this year during the illness and death of two of the inmates. There was no room in which these sick and dying persons could be isolated, and it was necessary for the inmates to sleep and live in the same dormitory, in one instance under conditions that were exceedingly disagreeable. Such conditions, it seems to us, should no longer beallowed to exist.

In addition to a place for the indigent, our city should have a comfortable Home for persons, not a few, who are able to pay for their own maintenance, but who are friendless and have no one to care for them, but must live all alone under conditions that are sometimes pitiful, and who might, in some cases do, die when alone in a house, unable to summon help, and with no ministering hand in their last hours. The duty of providing a Home for such as these is one that is incumbent upon us as a Christian community, and in the new building which we hope will soon be erected, there should be accommodation for all such.

We therefore suggest that a special committee be appointed to carefully consider this whole question; to ascertain whether the present grounds, with possible additions, would suffice, or a more suitable site could be secured; and to suggest ways and means for raising the necessary funds for the erection and equipment of a building suitable to our needs.

In conclusion we desire to pay sincere tribute to the efficiency and devotion of our Matron who is indefatigable in her care of those committed to her charge.

SON DIES SUDDENLY AS DID HIS FATHER

Cobourg, Nov. 22.—Mr. Wellington Robert Macklin, who resided on a farm about four miles east of here, passed away almost immediately upon arising in the early morning to go to work, as usual. He was unmarried. He called to a boy who was in the house with him, but by the time the lad reached him he was dead. He was a son of the late Charles Robert Macklin of Haldimand township, who died without warning on an afternoon in June, 1918, while sitting in his home chatting with a friend. He had, however been previously suffering from valvular heart trouble. The son also was in very poor health a few years ago, but of late seemed well, and was engaged in plowing the day before his death. He is survived by his mother, one brother and a sister. He was thirty years of age.

Pupils Presented With Diplomas

The Assembly Hall in connection with the Belleville High School, was last evening filled to overflowing with the pupils and friends of the school. The occasion was the commencement exercises with the presentment of diplomas and prizes won during the year.

In the absence of any member of the Board of Education, owing to counter attractions, Principal McLaurin of the school presided over the exercises in a most capable manner. In making a few remarks at the opening of the programme, he expressed the hope that it would not be long before a Collegiate Institute would be erected in the city with an assembly hall in connection therewith, which would accomodate some hundreds of people.

DIPLOMAS PRESENTED

The presenting of diplomas was then proceeded with and the following received them: Mary Thompson, Douglas Elliott, Florence Thompson, Wylda Palmer, Wanda Reid, Rita Collip, Abe Dies, Helen Clarke, MacArthur Hill, Harry Hurley, Edna Wedden, Gladys Chambers, Hazel McMullen, Lorne Deeton, Anna Lafferty, Jean M. Evans Gordon Chute, Neva Deeton, Violet McPherson, Annie Brownson, Ross Farrell, Audrey McLeod, Mary Yeomans, Margaret Mulvilhill, Eva Rose, Esther Wagner, Mary McLellen and Marguerite Coulter.

Diplomas were on hand to present to the following pupils who had won them in former years: Ruth Howard, Jean Nicholson, Marjorie Huycke, Earl McCoy, Edna Vanderwater Florence Cook, Evelyn Cooley, Byron McCrodan Frank Cushing, Erastus Grant Myrtle M. Murray, Adele M. Roberts and Fen[illegible] G. Curry.

MEDALS PRESENTED

The following medals won on Field Day, 1919 were presented to the following successful competitors: Senior Champion, Vernon Weir, Intermediate Champion, Albert Armstrong, and the Junior Champion, Harry Woodley.

Col. O'Flynn's and Mr. Arthur Johnson's medal to winners of 100 and 400 yard dash were presented to Charles Tyers and Grant Maidens.

Percy Hart received the Strathcona Trust gold medal for shooting and he also received a silver medal from the Dominion Marksman.

Dominion Marksman medals were also presented to Max Matthews, Bert Wills, Stewart Moore and Lindsay Thomas.

SCHOLARSHIP

Mrs. R. J. Graham's scholarship cheque was presented to Miss Mabel Robson.

A silver cup was presented to the pupils of form four, they having secured the greatest number of points in events on Field Day. This was given in charge of Vernon Weir.

At the conclusion of the presenting of prizes, a programme was presented which was thoroughly enjoyed.

A dance entitled 'Reaping the Flax' was well excuted by 10 young ladies of the school, namely: Marjorie Dean, Irene Kelly, F. Skelcher, Gladys Collins, Marguerite Stevens, Marjory Hartley, Lillia Eves, Mildred Post and Mildred Kerr. Miss May Kerr, during the dance rendered a solo in a becoming manner.

A wand drill by ten girl pupils was well put on and merited the applause they received.

A dance by eight young lady pupils was one of the features of the programme.

Miss Jean Evans rendered a piano solo in a manner that demonstrated she was a clever musician.

THE NEW SYSTEM

The concluding feature of the programme was a three act play entitled "The New System" in which it was demonstrated that the women were to take the place of men in the avocations of life and the men were to remain home attending to household duties. All participating did well. The cast was as follows:

'Aristidia Demosthemese Moffat, Chief Justice of the Supreme Court—Miss Audrey McLeod.

Napoleonetle Hannibal Washington Hightower. Capt. in command of the First Battery, Canadian Artillery, stationed at R.M.C., Kingston—Miss Anna Lafferty.

Nelsonia Perry Chester. Captain in command of His Majesty's battleship the Susan B. Anthony—Miss Agusta Hill.

Tulamia Pasteur Darwin Mortimer, Kroff of Bugology of the Amazon University—Miss Ealeen Rose.

Mr. Thomas Darlington, better known as "darling", Justice Moffat's cook—Mr. George Clarke.

Mr. Richard Petridge, alias "pet" laundress to Chief Justice Moffat—Mr. Grant Maidens.

Dearborn Bosworth, "dearie" housemaid of the Judges—Mr. Cecil McMulle.

Mr. James Johnson Moffat—well, he's Mrs. Moffat's husband—Mr. John McGie.

The physical culture exercises were under the supervision of Miss Haycock and the play of 'The New System' was manged by Miss Young.

"UNWRTTEN LAW" IN WEST

Saskatoon, Nov. 22.—John Bronch, charged with the murder of Arnold Gart, a returned soldier at Radison, Sask., in October was acquitted by a jury at Battleford. The unwritten law played an important part in the defence. Bronch, it was charged, killed Gart with a knife in broad daylight following an argument.

FREE TRADE AND DIRECT TAXATION

Brandon, Man., Nov. 22.—Advocacy of direct taxation to make up any losses in revenue occasioned by removing the customs tariff from the necessities of life and increase of the income tax and Federal adoption of inheritance tax were advocated by Hon. T. A. Crerar at a meeting called by the Grain Growers for the purpose of educating Brandon people to the political platform of the Canadian Council of Agriculture.

SELLS HIS ENTIRE HERD

Brockville, Nov. 22.—One of the largest transactions in connection with Canadian Holstein Friesians is the recent sale of the entire herd of W. C. Stevens, Phillipsville, to J. C. Regan of Tully, N.Y. The Stevens herd is one of the finest in the province, comprising 88 animals. One of the best animals in the lot was a choicely bred herd bull, Sir Riverdale May Echo Lyons, a half-brother to the great May Echo Slyvia, the champion cow, owned by A. C. Hardy, Brockville.

MOST ENEMY ALIENS HAVE LEFT CANADA

Ottawa Nov. 22—The deportation of enemy aliens held prisoners of war in Canadian camps is almost complete. Over 2,000 Germans and Austrians have already been sent home via Holland and other neutral countries. A small batch of about 250 still remain to be sent to their fatherlands. These for the most part are a Kapuskasing.

Most of them take away a comfortable pittance since they were entitled to 25 cents a day while employed in the camps. They will leave behind several well-cleared and highly cultivated areas of land in New Ontario and elsewhere which will be used for experimental farm purposes and as a nucleus for further settlement in these regions.

DRUGGIST CHARGED WITH PROFITEERING

Toronto, Nov. 22.—A Toronto retail druggist was accused of profiteering because he charged a woman $3 for fifty tablets that cost him $2.80 for one hundred tablets. The case was before the Board of Commerce yesterday. The woman got the prescription filled later at a departmental store for 80 cents. Hence her charge of profiteering. It turned out, however, that the tablets she got from the departmental store were not of the same strength as the ones she got on Roncesvalles avenue. The prescription specified tablets manufactured by Parke, Davis & Co. which cost $2.80 per hundred wholesale The tablets she got down town were the product of Burroughs, Wellcome & Co., and were only one-sixth as potent as the others. The cost of the Burroughs-Welcome tablets to the store was 55 cents for 50 and the retail price was 80 cents.

ST. JOHN SOLDIER THRICE MARRIED

ST. JOHN, N.B. Nov. 22—A soldier, who was married here this week and who has left for the West with his bride, it is said, added the third to his list of wives by the recent ceremony. When the marriage was announced, inquisitive friends commenced to make inquiries regarding the truth of the statements the soldier previously had made to the effect that he had been married several years ago and that he had a wife and several children. The result of these investigations showed that he had been married previously but not merely once, but twice, the first time in 1907 Both wives are said to be living. One in St. John and the other in the State of Maine.

The fact that he had a wife in St. John seemed to be established this week when a woman, claiming him as her husband, called by long distance, phone, the military office with which he had been connected, to ask about his assigned pay. It is understood that the matter had been referred to the police.

VETERANS UP IN ARMS

OTTAWA, Nov. 22—The Great War Veterans Association intends to request investigation into the charges made in the House of Commons that food alleged to be unfit for human consumption was canned and shipped to the soldiers in France. The charges were made by D. D. Mackenzie, leader of the Opposition, who asked for an investigation but the government took no action.

The Dominion Command of the G. W. V. A. now intends to press the charges and ask for an investigation. The Dominion Command has in its possession some documents bearing on the case, and in the current issue of "The Veteran" prints the charges under the heading, "Was Gravel and Corruption Canned for Soldiers." It characterizes the story, if the charges are true, as being "the most diabolical and cold-blooded dividend-raising plot ever hatched by soulless profiteers."

OFFER OF MINERS ON WAGES DISPUTE

WASHINGTON, Nov. 22—Bituminous coal miners yesterday abandoned their demands for a thirty hour week and sixty per cent increase in wages. In a counter proposal to the operators in conference here, they said they would accept a forty per cent increase and a seven hour day.

The proposal evoked a spirited debate in the wage scale committees and it was said a decision probably would not be made until today. The operators have not indicated any willingness to amend their offer of 15 cents a ton and 20 per cent. increase for day labor wage, with the working hours as at present.

BANK CLERKS, WAITERS, NOT UNION MEMBERS

TORONTO, Nov. 22—Are bank clerks and bank messengers in Toronto working as waiters at banquets and other functions to augment their slender stipends? It was declared at a meeting of the executive committee of the Cooks' and Waiters' Union here that this was the case, and it was decided to boycott the banks which paid such poor salaries that their employes had to cut in on the business of the waiters in order to eke out an existence. The boycott suggested was the withdrawal of the waiters' savings from offending banks.

EX-SOLDIER GETS REPRIEVE OF DEATH SENTENCE

LONDON, Nov 22—Joseph Roy Hutty, an American serving with the Canadian forces, who was recently sentenced to death for the murder of Nurse Jones on the hospital steps at Liverpool, has been reprieved. The prisoner is suffering from shell shock and 34,000 people signed a petition for a reprieve, in cluding the Lord Mayor of Liverpool were received.

THE MERCHANTS BANK OF CANADA

WOMEN CURED AT HOME

ORANGE LILY
TRADE MARK

Women's disorders always yield from the very beginning of the treatment to the mild but effective action of Orange Lily. Within two or three days after commencing its use the improvement becomes noticeable, and this improvement continues until the patient is completely cured. Orange Lily is an applied or local treatment, and acts directly on the womanly organs, removing the congestion, toning and strengthening the nerves, and restoring perfect circulation in the diseased parts. In order to convince all suffering women of the value of this remedy, I will send a 40 cent box, enough for 10 days treatment, absolutely free to each lady who will send me her address. Enclose 3 stamps and address Mrs. Lydia W. Ladd, Windsor, Ont.

BUSINESS METHODS IN CIVIC ADMINISTRATION.

Toronto's Board of Education has engaged a business manager who will have charge of all business matters and expenditures of the various schools of the city. This appointment of a business manager followed an investigation in which it was shown that many thousands of dollars were squandered annually through lack of business system. Large public utilities employ business managers as the foundation stone of economy, so also do all large business enterprises, public and private, except municipalities. However, the city business manager idea is being tried out, and thus far the results have been very satisfactory.

THE "CASEYS" IN WAR WORK.

"Creature comforts" are two words which will never be forgotten by the soldiers who took part in the great war. Never before in any war was there organized effort to provide comfort for the soldier on anything like the scale carried out so successfully in the late gigantic armed clash of nations. Of the various organizations catering to the comfort of the soldiers in training and on the battlefields, none was more efficient than that of the Knights of Columbus, with perhaps the least publicity. Reports of the K. of C. war work show a surprising magnitude of effort and expenditure. On free "creature comforts" alone, the Knights of Columbus expended during the war seven million dollars.

Among the articles distributed free to soldiers by the K. of C. were included the following:

Beef cubes, 9,000,000.
Smoking tobacco, 500,000 pounds.
Cigarettes, 618,000,000.
Pipes, 3,750,000.
Candy, 3,000,000 pounds.

In addition there were free distributions of soap, shaving materials, stationery and reading matter.

Religious ministrations were gladly tendered although never forced on any one.

Entertainments and recreation were provided.

The K. of C. is also actively engaged in after-war work, including the providing of free college courses for returned soldiers without regard to creed, one-half in technical schools and one-half in Catholic institutions.

One distinguishing feature of K. of C. war work centred in the huts where soldiers were cared for as to food and lodging and given club privileges. The huts were maintained both at home and abroad and a number of them are still in operation, including the K. of C. hut in Toronto where the Arlington Hotel building was taken over. Thousands of returned soldiers were well cared for in this institution.

The cost of administration of K. of C. war work was approximately only one per cent. of the turnover, and the entire record reveals an inspiring story of unselfish devotion coupled with efficiency.

A SATURDAY SERMON FOR SUNDAY READING.

> That the righteousness of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the spirit.—Romans viii 4.

The human body has outgrown the human soul, and the spirit has become sunk and smothered in the flesh. From one point of view this is what is the matter with the world today.

All our wonderful modern science and invention and magic machines have had the effect of enormously magnifying the human body. Our big guns and high explosives have extended the reach of our arms to fifty miles and multiplied the punch of our fists a million times. Our poisonous gases have enabled us to emit a deadly breath over wide areas and blast everything in it. Our railways and steamships enable us to stride across the continent and step over the seas in a few hours; our airships have given us wings that can outfly the eagle and our submarines enable us to prowl around, like terrible sharks, under the surface and in the depths of the ocean. Telegraph and telephone and wireless waves enable us to transmit our thoughts and the very tones of our voice as by a flash of lightning over the continents and under the seas. Steam and electricity, oil and gas, physics and chemistry are now our nimble servants and have made us masters of the earth and sea and air.

Huge Human Tank.

But all this has simply enormously magnified and extended and refined the physical powers of man. The human body has now become a huge steel armored tank that goes lumbering along spitting fire and a leaden hail of death and irresistibly trampling everything under its juggernaut wheels, while a little human soul is rattling around in it. It is a monstrous Frankenstein which we have created and which is now getting beyond our control and is crushing us in its steel arms.

This overdeveloped human body also has an enormous appetite for wealth and pleasure and power. It is insatiable in its greed and is consuming everything in its way. It is whipping up our life into a hot pursuit of wealth, sowing our industrial order with competition and injustice and strife, corrupting our politics, turning our social life into a mad whirl of pleasure and undermining our morals. It has just devastated the world like a fearful monster breathing out fire and slaughter in a great war. It still threatens to upset the world and wreck our very civilization as it strides over ancient landmarks of law and order, right and duty, and tramples all things under its iron hoofs.

For Good or Evil.

This development of the human body was inevitable and has in it as great power for good as for evil, but the development of the soul has not kept pace with it and has fallen under its power. Our character and conscience are not now equal to the control of our iron muscles and steel nerves throbbing with electricity. The material is mastering and smothering the spiritual, and we must now reverse this relation and put spirit on top, conscience in control. All these material forces and magic machines are splendid agencies of good when they are subordinated to the spirit.

Education and religion are the two chief means for developing the soul. Education can help, but will not necessarily do much, for it is simply a cunning tool which a bad man can use as powerfully as a good man. It is education that has produced all these engines of destruction.

Religion is the supreme means of lifting the spirit out of the flesh and enthroning it over the flesh, for it appeals to the spiritual in man and allies him with the Infinite and Eternal. It affirms and proves that man cannot live by bread alone, but must have every word that proceeds from God. And every one must heed this appeal for himself and should strive to walk not after the flesh but after the spirit.—James H. Snowden, Professor of Systematic Theology in the Presbyterian Western Theological Seminary, Pittsburg, Pa.

Thirty case-hardened theatrical men in London have handed the palm to a Miss Leyton as the ugliest woman in England, bar none. She was selected for a part in a theatrical production in which the manager whiches a contrast to the girl in the piece, who he claims is the fairest of all the fair in the world. There were eight candidates for the job, chosen from a host o fapplicants on the strength of their photographs. When the first candidate passed in review the jury, the thirty, received such a shock that they wanted oo award her the palm on the spot, which caused her to smile. As her face crinkled up Arnold de Bierre, the American magician, exclaimed in agony: "Don't, I've got a weak heart." However, when Miss Leyton came before them the first candidate was a striking beauty in comparison. "You win," said de Bierre, with emotion, "you get the job and the title."

An Encouraging Sign.

Buffalo Courier.

In his address to the grange convention at Grand Rapids, Oliver Wilson, of Illinois, master of the National Grange of the United States, asserted that there is today too much tendency among our people toward class endeavor, class thinking, class legislation and that "the interests of the nation worthy ideas, whether they are foisted by a labor union or by a group of farmers."

Recently in accepting the leadership of the Farmers' party of Ontario Farmer Prime Minister Drury said to his farmer followers: "We must stand for no class legislation. Our legislative programme must be framed for the benefit of every just and honest and legitimate interest in the province."

If the farmers on both sides of the border should act in accordance with the declarations above cited, they could do much to check an unwholesome tendency that has been growing stronger and more assertive in recent years.

A GOOD MOTTO.

Is life a fret and tangle,
  And everything gone wrong,
Are friends a bit disloyal
  And enemies too strong?
Is there no bright side showing,
  Then—as a sage has said—
"Polish up the dark side,
  And look at that instead."

The darkest plank of oak will show
  Sometimes the finest grain;
The roughest rock will sometimes yield
  A gleaming golden vein,
Don't rail at fate, declaring
  That no brightness shows ahead,
But "Polish up the dark side,
  And look at that instead."

THE MOUNTAINS

The little brooks go singing along their smiling way;
The rivers speak in deeper tones;
    like beat of muffled drum;
The ocean surges thunder and tosses
    mighty spray,
But the mountains stand immovable and dumb!

The trees have whispered secrets for those, who listening, pass;
There's language of the flowers for all who patient seek;
Myriads of tiny voices sound in the waving grass,
But the mountains stand in silence—
    they may not, cannot speak.

All Nature seeks expression in tones that rise and swell,
So sings the joyous human, so growls
    the angry brute,
The wedding chimes at noontide, the evening passing bell,
But the mountains stand and listen—
    their peaks and valleys mute.

Only to those who love them, the mountains message send—
Those who have left their shelter, over the world to roam;
To them, like a strain of music, or urge of a waiting friend,
The still small voice of the mountains whispers: "Come, come home!"

—Helen Combes.

DAUGHTER OF THE PHILISTINES

By

LEONARD MERRICK

"There's nothing for it," he said; "I must go and ask the Garins. I'd post it without one if we were in England, but here———"

He went down, and left her walking about the room in excitement; but the bureau was shut and he learnt that the ladies were out.

"Do you think nurse has got one herself?" he suggested, coming back, "or—or twenty-five centimes?"

"She is out too. She took baby ten minutes ago......Humphrey!"

"Another inspiration?"

"The bottles!" she cried triumphantly, pointing to the wardrobe; "there are three."

On an empty bottle of the wine which they sometimes boiled in the evening two sous were refunded if a customer chose to give himself the trouble to take it back. They had occasion to acquire the knowledge. Kent pulled the bottles out, and, after an aborive effort to make a parcel of them, caught up his letter and ran to the shop. He obtained thirty centimes, bolted to the post office and saved the mail. Nothing could be done now but pray that Turcquand might be in a position to oblige him.

In the meantime the young woman, all unconscious of the jeopardy in which it had been, packed her box calmly in the room behind their door and the composure of one whose ticket and wages were as good as in her purse. By Friday evening the box was corded and labelled and when Kent and Cynthia entered and beheld it so suspense tightened its grip about their hearts.

The mail would not be delivered until about nine o'clock and they sat with tense nerves straining to hear Etienne's heavy footsteps on the landing when they judged the hour was near. They had not made arrangements yet where they would remove to on the morrow and they spoke disjointedly of the necessity. Kent said it would be desirable to have two rooms in the new place also, for then they would be able to talk when the baby was asleep; in one room it would be awful. This assumption that the nurse would not be with them was followed by intensified misgivngs and in imagination both saw her sitting on her box, with her bonnet on, they faltered to her that, after all she could not go.

[illegible]

"If it comes in the morning, you know," he said at the end of a long silence, "it will be in time. Her train doesn't start till ten."

"Y-e-s," said Cynthia; "she expects it to-night......Is that someone coming upstairs"

"Nobody," answered Kent, listening intently......"No; her train doesn't start till ten.. I don't think, in point of fact, that we can look for it to-night. You see———"

"We needn't give up if it hasn't come when we go to bed."

"No; that's what I mean. One must allow for—hark!......no; it's nothing—one must allow for him having to ———"

Cynthia uttered a cry.

"It is! Come in—entrez—yes!"

Etienne appeared,

"A letter for monsieur!"

Kent snatched it from his hand; it was from Turquand. He tore it open. Postal orders for six pounds—brilliant and blue, the color of hope—dazzled their eyes. In pencil was scribbled:

"Here you are, sonny!—Yours ever, Turk."

Cynthia gave a hysterical laugh. They were saved.

Ten minutes later, after she had blessed Turquand and her eyes were dried she opened the door of the adjoining room with great dignity and said:

"By the way, nurse, I had better give you your money now. You can change enough postal orders for your ticket, you know, opposite the station."

Then she came back radiant, and Kent said salvation must be celebrated and, as their cab next day wouldn't cost ten shillings, they would go out on the Boulevards and drink Turquand's health and he could buy some tobacco on the way.

They were, compared with what their state of mind had been, supremely contented now that the danger of their servant witnessing their disgrace was over; and in the morning, when they had bidden her good-bye and watched her drive away, and their misfortunes were nobody's business but their own, they drew such a breath of thanksgiving that they might just have inherited a fortune.

Cynthia's trunks and Humphrey's and his hat-box and the dressing-case which somebody had given to the girl as a wedding present were drawn together in a corner of the room to be left behind; and, with intermittent attentions to the baby, they stored their toilet articles and all the linen it would hold, in the hand-bag which was to be taken with them. The bassinet was already shut up, and sewn in its canvas wrapper; and the blankets and such of the child's clothing as would not go in its box, had been packed downstairs in the perambulator. There was nothing further to do but to put the oatmeal and the saucepan and a few other infantile necessities, in a basket before they went; and, leaving Cynthia to collect these, Kent hastened out to obain accomodation at a hotel. He went first to the one where they had stayed on their arrival, which was close at hand; but all the communicating rooms were occupied, and he was forced to try somewhere else. Jordon, who had done 'Turf Topics' for 'The World and his Wife,' had once mentioned a place to him in the Rue de Constantinople as being cheap and comfortable and he bent his steps there impatiently regretting that they had not made their arrangements earlier. The mother had intended to see to the matter, so as to make sure that everything was healthy and that there was not a draught from the window and the rest of it, but, being so worried, she had put it off

When he reached the address in the Rue de Constantinople, he was not favorably impressed. The terms were low, but the proprietress seemed so, too; and, though her manner was jovial enough, and the place looked clean he hesitated to settle with her. After he had essayed an hotel in the Rue des Soeurs Filandieres at which he was obliged to own the rate was higher than he was prepared to pay, he decided that he had been hypercritical and went back; but, as ill-luck would have it, the woman had let the apartments she had shown him five minutes after he had gone away. It was Mi-Careme and the streets were beginning to be blocked by sightseers. He remembered that Cynthia would be sitting anxiously in the chaotic bedroom, wondering why he was gone so long; and, hurrying through the crowd, he returned to the Rue des Soeurs Flandierses and said he had changed his mind.

He was glad when he had done so. It was only for a week, perhaps for less; and there was a chambermaid who declared she would be willing to assist madame with the little one when she could, since madame found herself temporarily without a bonne. She had a cock eye, but seemed to have a good heart, and Kent assured her that any extra services she might render should not go unrewarded.

He regained the pension as quickly as possible and instructed the waiter to send at once for a cab constructed to carry luggage on the roof. Cynthia was in a chair, with the baby on her lap, and looked up eagerly. On the table was a tray with luncheon, for which she would have been unable to go down, even if she had had the audacity; and she explained that Madame Garin, finding that she did not appear had sent it up to her unasked. Cynthia had not been hungry, but that was very nice of her. They were not entitled to the dejeunor today.

The little basket was now ready and Kent cast a gloomy glance at the impedimena to be detained, questioning if he could manage to disburse more than three francs among the servants Almost at the same moment there was a knock, and Etienne entered.

"I have called a cab," he announced surlily. "The mistress says there is no need for a voiture-engalerie, because monsieur cannot take his trunks."

The color fell from their faces and for a second they remained mute and stock-still.

"Oh yes," stammered Kent at last, "we are leaving our heaviest trunks; we are going to send for them. But it is necessary, all the same. I will speak to Madame Garin."

He found her erect in the hall in her favorite position, her arms folded across her flat breast. Her face was as pale as his own and her eyes were angry. He looked at her amazed.

An Ideal Tonic For Weak People

Dr. Williams' Pink Pills Act Direct on the Blood and Nerves

Food is as important to the sick person as medicine, more so in most cases. A badly chosen diet may retard recovery. In health the natural appetite is the best guide to follow; in sickness the appetite is often fickle and depraved.

Proper food and a good tonic will keep most people in good health. Dr. Williams Pink Pills are the most popular tonic medicine in the world, harmless and certain in their action, which is to build up the blood and restore the vitality to the run-down system. For growing girls who become thin and pale, for pale, tired women, and for old people who fall in strength Dr. Williams Pink Pills are an ideal tonic. Thousands of people have testified to the health-giving qualities of Dr. Williams Pink Pills, and in many homes they are the only medicine used. Among the homes in which the benefit of this medicine has been proved is that of Mr. E. A. Underwood, Kingston, Ont., who says: —I have used Dr. Williams Pink Pills with the most beneficial results. As the result of hard work I was very much run down, and my appetite was very poor. I got a supply of the pills which I used regularly for some weeks with the result that they restored me to my old time strength. They also proved a blessing to my daughter, who was in a very anaemic condition, and who seemed not to get more than temporary relief from any medicine until she took Dr. Williams Pink Pills. She took the pills for about three months, and is now enjoying the best of health. For these reasons I can strongly recommend Dr. Williams Pink Pills."

At the first sign that the blood is out of order take Dr. Williams Pink Pills, and note the speedy improvement they make in the appetite, health and spirits. You can get these pills through any dealer in medicine or by mail at 50 cents a box or six boxes for $2.50 from The Dr. Williams Medicine Co., Brockville, Ont.

FORMER TORONTO NEWSBOY IS NOW BIG PRODUCER

TORONTO, Nov. 21—George White a former newsboy of Toronto, and son of one of the best peanut-sellers at Hanlan's Point during the summer months, is coming back to his home town as the proprietor and principal performer of the "Scandals of 1919," one of the biggest theatrical hits of the current season, which is the attraction at the Princess next week.

After a varied career, including that of a stableboy at the Windsor and other Canadian race tracks, and of a messenger boy in New York telegraph offices, White succeeded in securing an engagement in that city at a concert hall in the Bowery as a dancer. He soon became an expert and engagements followed in the vaudeville houses, and he blossomed forth as a headliner on the Keith circuit. Then he got a chance to appear with "The Follies" dancing with that institution for two seasons. Now he is a producer on his own account, "George White's Scandals of 1919" having run in New York all last summer, achieving a remarkable success there, and also in Boston, from which city it comes to Toronto.

REAL HELP FOR TIRED FEET

A busy day and on your feet most of the time—a long tiresome trip or a hike in the country—new shoes to break in—all these mean tired feet. Soothe and rest them by applying a few drops of Absorbine, Jr. Or, if you are very tired and your feet burn, ache or swell, soak them in a solution of Absorbine, Jr., and water. Relief will be prompt and lasting.

You will like the "feel" of this clean fragrant and antiseptic liniment. It penetrates quickly, leaves no greasy residue, and is intensely refreshing. Only a few drops needed to do the work, as Absorbine, Jr., is highly concentrated.

You will find dozens of uses for Absorbine, Jr., as a depenable first-aid remedy and regular toilet adjunct; to reduce inflammatory conditions—sprains, wrenches, painful, swollen veins. To allay pain anywhere. To spray the throat if sore or infected. To heal cuts, bruises, lacerations and sores.

Absorbine, Jr., $1.25 a bottle at druggists or postpaid. Liberal trial bottle mailed for 10c in stamps. W. F. Young, Inc., 457 Lymans Bldg., Montreal, Can.

"I Am Climbing Mountains" A Harmonious Tenor Duet

This sentimental song of childhood's and manhood's dreams and ambitions is a beautiful bit of harmony. Both this song and the coupling "Golden Gate" are worthy successors to "I'm Forever Blowing Bubbles" by the same authors. Charles Harrison and Lewis James—a new combination,—sing them wonderfully.

Miners At Minto N.B. Start Strike To-day

They Will Be Transported to Alberta Monday If Settlement Fails.

SYDNEY, N.S., Nov. 21— The strike of miners at Minto, N. B., is on. United Mine Workers headquarters at Glace Bay announced that the strike order went into effect at midnight, and that it will not be recaled unless the company make satisfactory settlement.

The trouble is a result of the demand of the men for a ten per cent. wage increase, and the award of the board of conciliation granting less than one per cent.

Unless the company makes substantial concessions before Monday, the U.M.W. will then commence to transport the miners and their families to Alberta. The union has secured for employment for all in the western mines and has no intention of wasting money on a prolonged period of idleness at Minto.

Serious Riots Last All One Day In Cairo

Ten Persons Killed—Three Police Stations Set on Fire.

CAIRO, Nov. 21—Ten persons were killed and 120 injured, ninety of whom suffered gunshot wounds, in a riotous demonstration which continued here all day. The disorder was the most serious since the disturbances last March and April.

Three police stations were set on fire by mobs, which liberated prisoners and paraded the streets carrying wounded rioters. British troops finally succeeded in restoring order.

NEW TREATMENT THAT KNOCKS RHEUMATISM

75c BOX FREE TO ANY SUFFERER

Up in Syracuse, N.Y., a treatment for rheumatism has been found that hundreds of users say is a wonder, reporting cases that seem little short of miraculous. Just a few treatments even in the very worst cases seem to accomplish wonders even after other remedies have failed entirely. It sems to neutralize the uric acid and lime salt deposits in the blood driving all the poisonous clogging waste from the system. Soreness, pain, stiffness, swelling just seem to melt away and vanish.

The treatment first introduced by Mr. Delano is so good that its owner wants everybody that suffers from rheumatism or who has a friend so afflicted, to get a free 75c package from him to prove just what it will do in every case before a penny is spent. Mr. Delano says: "To prove that the Delano treatment will positively overcome rheumatism, no matter how severe, stubborn or long standing the case, and even after all other treatments have failed, I will if you have never previously used the treatmnt, send you a full size 75c package free if you will just cut out this notice and send it with your name and address with 10c to help pay postage and distribution expense to me personally."

F. H. Delano, 1629 Griffin Square Bldg., Syracuse, N. Y. I can send only one Free Package to an address.

NERVE PRESSURE CAUSES DISEASE

CHIROPRACTIC VERTBRAL ADJUSTMENTS release impinged nerves opening the awy for Nature to dispatch energy over the nerve circuit to keep the body well. Nearly all bodily affliction is due to nerve compression at the spinal column, as such pressure disturbs normal nerve functioning, giving rise to inflamation in and unnatural actions of parts the nerves supply. Pain and distress are two manifestations of such abnormal conditions Ill health will continue in varying degrees until the nerve pressure is adjusted away. Chiropractic adjustments correct abnormalities without the use of drugs or instruments. Nature follows such adjustments with a cure. Drugs only check disease. Consultation and Spinal Analysis Free. INDIAN SOLDIER DIES FAR FROM NORTHERN HOME

GUELPH, Nov. 22.—One of the Indians of the Hudson Bay Country, who left his native life in the north to fight for his white British brothers, died in Speedwell Hospital here. He was a full-blooded Cree Indian, but had taken the name of Thomas Sutherland from a Scottish family at a Hudson Bay post at Moose Factory, where he was born in 1882. In the winter of 1916 with other Cree Indians, he tramped on snowshoes to Cochrane to enlist in an Indian platoon in a new Ontario battalion.

He served with the First Pioneer Battalion in France, and was so badly gassed that he was returned to Canada. He was first taken to Gravenhurst and later transferred to Guelph.

WHITBY ENDORSES HYDRO-RADIAL

By a vote of 647 to 43, or eight to one, Whitby decided in favor of Sir Adam Beck's Hydro-Radial line through the lake shore towns from Toronto to Bowmanville.

The by-law to authorize the expenditure of $60,000 on a new public shool and on rebuilding one of those now in use also harried by a majority of 50, the vote being 201 to 151.

A third by-law which made concessions to a proposed new industry the Sunny Dress Co., was defeated by a vote of 119 to 233.

Whitby citizens are jubilant over this decided step in advance which has been taken by the endorsation of the Hydro scheme and the school improvement proposals. West Whitby township carried the Hydro by-law by 158 to 22.

TELLS HOW TO REGAIN PERFECT HEALTH AND KEEP IT BY BATHING INTERNALLY.

Are you aware that nearly one million bright, intelligent people throughout Canada and the United States alone bathe internally instead of load ing their sytems with drugs? Why? Because it keeps them in better health in every way.

Internal bathing is the only sure means of keeping the intestines clean and free from accumulated waste matter, which is sure to slowly poison the system and become food for the millions of bacteria which infest the system, thereby causing rheumatism, impure blood, indigestion, headaches, and a hundred other ailments which are directly the result of constipation.

If you want to be healthy all the time we would strongly advise you to get a J. B. L. Cascade, which is the only perfected appliance ever devised for efficiently cleansing the colon and lower intestines. It is the invention of Dr. Chas. A. Tyrell of New York, who is a specialist on Internal Bathing. The J. B. L. Cascade is shown and explained at J. S. McKeown's Drug Store, where you can receive an interesting book called "Why Man of Today is Only 50% Efficient." It will tell you facts about yourself that you probably never realized before, or write Tyrrell's Hygienic Institute, 163 College Street, Toronto.

GIN
KIDNEYS

Go Down the Hill of Life in Comfort.

Physicians are full of warning to men and women who are just turning forty. At forty, they say, many ailments which have lain dormant, become active. Kidney and Bladder troubles show themselves, and much care is advised.

The best care that can be given is in providing oneself with Gin Pills and taking them at the first sign of pain in the back or across the groins, or when dizziness, constant headaches, swollen joints, rheumatism, sciatica or gravel bring suffering or discomfort.

Gin Pills FOR THE KIDNEYS

taken in time, will prevent serious complications. They strengthen weakened kidneys, relieve congestion, soothe inflammation, and help the vital organs to purify the blood so that the poisons, uric acid and waste are duly eliminated.

Gin Pills contain no alcohol and no ingredient that could harm the health in the slightest way. Their great principle is derived from the Juniper Berry, which made Gin an old-time remedy for kidney trouble. Seven other highly effective diuretics and antiseptics are combined, and the result is a Pill that is, we believe, the best ever prepared for allaying the pain caused by deranged kidneys, and restoring the organs to proper activity. They are particularly useful in the treatment of stone or gravel in the bladder so that they may be passed, thus avoiding painful operations.

Thousands of voluntary testimonials from all parts of Canada are continually pouring into our office, showing in a most practical way the proved excellence of these wonderful Pills.

Get Gin Pills from your druggist or dealer, who sells them at 50c. a box, under money-back guarantee. Send for free samples, addressing:—

BELLEVILLE OFFICERS

Col. W. N. Ponton, K.C., was elected an Honorary President of the Ontario Associated Boards of Trade and Chambers of Commerce, and Mr. John Elliott, Second Vice-President at the annual meeting in Toronto this week.

DIED OF DIPHTHERIA

Wm. Jackson, aged 14 years, son of Mr. Wm. J Jackson, residing at 47 Geddes street, city, died last night from diphtheria. The lad was born in England. This morning the funeral took place, Rev. Mr. Elliott, Pastor of the Tabernacle church officiating. Interment took place at Belleville cemetery.

FIRE AT HARROWSMITH

A serious fire occurred at Harrowsmith Thursday when the pool room, barber shop and dwelling owned by Mr. A. W. Cowdy, situated about a block from the C. P. R station, was completely destroyed. The building was a two-storey frame, lighted with Delco light and the poolroom was equipped with three tables. The loss will be around $2,000. There was $1,000 insurance.

DEPRIVED OF EYESIGHT

Mr. Michael McFarlane, of Marmora village, who went overseas early in the war and lost his eyesight as a result of a bullet wound, returned home last Thursday and is visiting his mother, Mrs. M. McFarlane, and family. The people of Marmora are glad to welcome him back and many have expressed their admiration at his cheerfulness and the courage with which he faces the future in spite of his handicap.

CLOTHING WANTED

Outer or under clothing wanted, especially boots for two families in dire need. The children range in age as follows: One girl, fourteen, one twelve two girls of ten, a girl and boy of seven and two girls of three. Will some one kindly send the required clothing as soon as possible to Mrs. R. J. Bell, 257 Albert St., or telephone 1044 and she will send for same? Signed Mary Yeomans, Chairman City Indigent Committee.

A SAD FATALITY

This week Mr. Harry Campion, of Marmora village, received a message stating that his brother, George Campion, who resides at Calgary, was dangerously ill. Apparently a quantity of natural gas was escaping through the ground on the latter's property unknown to him and as a result of lighting a match it took fire, igniting Mrs. Campion's clothing. Before the fire could be extinguished she was so badly burned that she died shortly after being taken to the hospital, and Mr. Campion is seriously ill from the shock.

EGGS COME HIGH

As was anticipated by many, eggs reached a record price on the market here to-day, namely 90 cents a dozen. In a few cases basket lots were procured at a slightly lower figure. Fresh dairy butter was quite plentiful retailing at from 60 to 63c per pound. A few lots were sold at a less price. Dressed poultry was offered for sale in abundance, especially chickens. They sold at from $1.50 to $2 per pair according to size and quality. Ducks brought from $1.25 to $1.60 each. Garden produce was quite plentiful and was readily disposed of. The market was well attended by both sellers and buyers

THREE YEARS SENTENCE

Frank Kyle, aged 19 years, attired in a military uniform was this morning up before Magistrate Masson on a charge preferred against him of stealing $50 in money, a gold watch and chain and other jewellery, the property of Mrs. L. Walker of this city. Kyle, it will be remembered, was arrested in Montreal and brought here for trial. He admitted he received the articles, knowing them to have been stolen but alleged that another soldier stole them and took them to Montreal. It was shown that Kyle has a record which is by no means creditable. In Montreal he stole a cap and other articles belonging to His Royal Highness, the Prince of Wales. A sentence of three years in the penitentiary was imposed, and the prisoner seemed to feel keenly the sentence.

GUILTY OF HIGHWAY ROBBERY

Joseph Thomas, alias C. R. Brown, a Toronto youth, was this morning, before Judge Deroche, charged with highway robbery from the person of Tom Deep, a Chinaman employed at the Royal Cafe in this city. The accused pleaded not guilty but the evidence was such that he was found guilty and sentence was deferred until December 5th. Thomas will be remembered as the companion of Tanner who held up four Chinamen here at the Royal Cafe at an early hour on the morning of the 5th inst. Mr. Carnew represented the Crown and the accused was undefended.

Wedding Bells

DOMENICO—BONACCORSO

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at St. Mary's Church, Simcoe, Ontario, at nine o'clock on the morning of November 12th. The nuptial mass was celebrated by Rev. Father Nagel, uniting in marriage Miss Josephine Bonaccorso, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Phillip Bonaccorso, of Simcoe, to Mr. Frank Domenico, youngest son of Mr. and Mrs. S. Domenico, of Belleville.

The bride entered the church on the arm of her father and looked very charming attired in a gown of georgette and gold lace with Juliet veil and orange blossoms, carrying a beautiful shower boquet of roses chrysanthenums and sweet peas and was attended by the Misses Angela Bonaccorso, sister of the bride and Marie Cancilla of Port Hope, as bridesmaids, wearing pink silk gowns and carrying bouquets of roses. Mrs. Samuel Fardella, of Tillsonburg, was matron of honor in a pretty dress of pink satin and carrying a spray of roses and sweet peas. Miss Angela Fardella, niece of the groom, was a dainty flower girl, while the groom was ably assisted by Mr. Samuel Fardella, as groomsman.

During the service Mrs. W. E. Kelly presided at the organ and sang 'Ave Maria' to which Mr. Samuel Battaglia of Niagara Falls, N.Y., played a violin obligato.

After the service the bridal party bride, where a sumptuous repast was bride, wher a sumptuous repast was served.

The young couple left for a honeymoon trip to Eastern points midst a shower of confetti. The bride travelled in a navy blue serge suit and dainty taupe hat and mink furs, the latter being a present of her father-in-law. The bride was the recipient of many beautiful and useful gifts. The groom's gift to the bride was a gold necklace with pearl pendants, to the matron of honor, a locket and chain, with gold rosary beads, and to the groomsman gold cuff links.

THE REDNERSVILLE WOMEN'S INSTITUTE

The October meeting of our institute was held at the home of Mrs. Cole Rose, Rednersville, with a good attendance. The President, Mrs. Alex Anderson presided and several business items were discussed.

It was decided to send a delegate to the Toronto Convention and Mrs. W. C. Dempsey was appointed. Some of the collections for the Picton Hospital were handed in and the balance of Red Cross money on hand was voted over to these funds.

A paper "The Advantages and Possibilities of Rural Life" was red by Mrs. W. M. Weese followed by an excellent paper "Living a Life is More Than Making a Living" was given by Mrs. W. C. Dempsey and Mrs. Burton Redner read a paper, "The Time We Waste in Hurrying."

The interesting papers were followed by a short discussion on "Inexpensive Christmas Gifts" and a few suggestions on "The Use of Eggs."

Our visitors were Mrs. Woodrow, who came with Mrs. W. C. Dempsey and Miss Grey of Ottawa, who for two years was a nursing sister overseas, and who was the guest of Mrs. Geo. Grey.

At the close of the meeting Mrs. Rose treated the company with fresh cider and cake.

Our next meeting will be at the home of Mrs. Stanton Fox on Nov. 27th, when we hope to have with us our District President, Mrs. W. Brown, and District Secretary, Mrs. W. R. Munro if the weather and the roads are favorable.

LED TO RESCUE BY DREAM

Tug Captain's Confidence in Vision He Had Proved Fortunate for Two Fishermen.

Guided by a dream, Capt. Adam Paczocha of a Lake Michigan tug found two men who had been drifting about helpless in a broken motor launch for four days. The rescue was just in time to save the men's lives, for the feet of one were frozen and the other's hands were frostbitten and they were exhausted from cold and hunger.

Captain Paczocha had his dream while taking a nap at his home in Milwaukee one afternoon. When he awoke he described to his family how he had seen a launch drifting about helpless in the storm-swept lake and how he had swung his boat alongside and saved two men.

"I'm going to find them," said the captain, after telling of the dream vision.

He set out the next morning and by midafternoon he had located the launch. The two men in the launch were George Costigan and Joseph Budsiecz, Jones Island fishermen who had met with misfortune while out hauling in their nets. Driven about by a sudden storm that arose on the lake they sought to make shore until the gasoline engine in the launch gave out. Then they drifted about helpless.

The rescued men's first request was for cigarettes. They had been unable to smoke for four days because their matches had become wet

WEAR is unavoidable even in the best car, but certain parts wear out more quickly than others. There is no need of scrapping your car because the piston rings have seen their day, because the platinum points of the vibrators are worn out. Probably the rest of the car is as good as new.

Medical men agree that the human body is renewed, cell by cell, every seven years. You can do the same with your Ford Car and prolong its life at minimum cost by replacing worn parts from time to time.

Ford service has been the means of doubling the lives of hundreds of Ford Cars, and cutting down the cost of motoring. The fact that a Ford Touring Car, which costs $690, f. o. b. Ford, Ont., can be purchased part by part separately for $917 is ample proof of the economy of driving a Ford Car.

It will pay you to have your car overhauled during the winter months. 700 Canadian Dealers and over 2,000 Service Garages supply genuine Ford parts and prompt repair service.

DEATH NOTICE.

DENYES—In Sidney, on Saturday, November 22nd, 1919, Mrs. Philip Denyes. The funeral will take place from the family residence, Front of Sidney, on Monday, 24th inst., at 2.30 p.m. Services at the house at 2 o'clock. Interment Belleville Cemetery.

Called By Death

MRS. PHILIP DENYES

A few days ago, Mrs. Philip Denyes an aged and most repected citizen of the Front of Sidney, was the victim of a paraletic stroke which proved fatal. She passed away shortly after noon to-day. Deceased whose maiden name was Miss O. Jones was born in Sidney Township where she had resided all her life. Mrs. Denyes had been for many years a member of the Methodist Church. She was a lady highly esteemed by all who knew her and her demise will be regretted by many. In addition to the husband, one son and two daughters survive. The son, Frederick, resides on the Front of Sidney, and the daughters are Mrs. Joseph D. Thrasher of Sidney and Mrs. John Boyd of Thurlow. Deceased was a sister-in-law of Mrs. Jluia A. Stock of this city. To those called upon to mourn the loss of a faithful wife and loving mother will be extended the heartfelt sympathy of many.

He Ditched the Tripod.

Passchendaele is generally admitted to have been about the hottest and toughest place the Canadian Corps was ever in. Its combination of intense and sustained shell-fire with the rain and cold and mud in which he had to live for twenty-four hours a day will never be forgotten by the soldiers.

It was during the Third Division's second trip into Passchendaele that this incident happened. Bill had just incident happened. Bill had just come out to the company as a reinforcement to replace the casualties we had suffered the first trip on this front, and I suppose it was on account of the large number of casualties that Bill, although a new man, was detailed to carry a Vickers' machine gun tripod into the line. Just imagine it. To have made the first trip in the line in a place like Passchendaele was bad enough, but in addition to that to have to carry in the heavy tripod, along those miles and miles of duckboards, with mud-holes alongside them deep enough in many instances to sink a horse or a mule, was not by any means a joke.

Poor Bill, who had been told all the usual yarns in Blighty about how the fellows in France used to throw away anything they didn't want at the time as they could easily find more later on when they did want it, just stuck things for about a mile and a half of the duckwalk, and then, so fed up and disgusted was he, that without saying a word to anyone he calmly pitched the tripod off his shoulders and dumped it in a shell-hole.

The N.C.O. in charge of the crew didn't notice this and the crew went steadily on their way to the gun position, which was about four miles further. When they got there and started to set up the gun, there was no tripod to mount it on, and old Bill's surprise and disgust when he was told to go back and bring up the tripod he had ditched was great.

Bill enjoys the joke now just as much as his comrades did then, but the shock he received when he realised that he had to walk those four miles back, and then up to the position again with the tripod, must have made him feel like murdering someone.

Find a Moth Exterminator.

Experiments of the bureau of entomology, United States department of agriculture, have demonstrated that naphthalene is uniformly effective in protecting woolens from clothes moth infection and in killing all stages of the insect, says the Des Moines Register. A red cedar chest readily killed all adult moths and showed considerable killing effect upon young larvae. It did not prevent the hatching of eggs, but killed all of the resulting larvae almost immediately. Red cedar chips and shavings, while not entirely effective in keeping the adult moths from laying eggs on the flannel treated, appeared to protect it from appreciable damage when used liberally.

Thrift.

Genoa longshoremen recently converted themselves in twenty-four hours from striking workmen to employers of labor. They obtained through the strike a day wage rate of $6.50 and the following day hired other men for their jobs at $2 a day, thereafter living easy lives on the remaining $4.50 for eight hours' management of the $2 a day underling.

SACRED ARABIAN BOOK

GERMANS MUST RETURN THE OTHMAN KORAN.

Teutons Carried Off the Roll of Parchment Which Meant So Much to People Who Believed In the Prophet of Islam, But the Allies Now Give It Back to the Original Owners.

A LARGE roll of parchment yellowed by thirteen centuries and covered with ancient Arabic script, played an important part in the construction of another and formidable historical document, the Peace Treaty. Germany is required by this treaty to disgorge, along with provinces, billions in cash and various art treasures, among them the Koran of Othman. Just what importance attaches to this particular copy of the Koran is a question that smites the public mind as allied to secret diplomacy.

A World Magazine interviewer carried this query to Leon Camen, Orientalist, hailing from the universities of Petrograd and Oxford — a familiar of the East, well versed in the depths and shoals of Mahometanism.

The Prophet of Islam left nothing written, for the sufficient reason that he could neither read nor write. The numerous suras, or chapters, of the Koran stand for so many sermons, so many prophetical outbursts, which, attended by flaming disciples, were fixed in the tenacious memories characteristic of the East. Only sporadically was a passage jotted down by a rare one possessed of the gift of letters.

These considerations gave extraordinary importance to a canonized compilation, made at Abu Bekh's command, of the revelation of Mahomet. A commission prepared the work, headed by Zaid Ibn Tabit, a young man who had been secretary to the Prophet.

This first Koran, derived of scant writings, but chiefly "from the breasts of men," was inscribed on palm leaves, from which it came to be known as the "Book of Leaves." It was a very important Koran, but it was not the one mentioned in the Peace Treaty.

A generation later Calif Othman had another Koran problem pulling at his Islamatic beard. A number of compilations from divers unofficial sources were in circulation. All were more or less incorrect, and much spiritual and political disturbance resulted therefrom.

Again a commission was formed, headed by the same Zaid Ibn Tabit, now an old man, who had figured in the earlier compilation episode. Based on the venerable "Book of Leaves," which had been deposited in Medina, Mahomet's birthplace, a new and authoritative Koran was drawn up. Three copies of this original were made, and all other copies of the Koran were ordered done away with. Even the sacred "Book of Leaves" was destroyed a little later. The possession of an incorrect version was pronounced heresy, an easy passport to subterrestrial parts.

The three copies were given to as many Moslem centres and subsequently lost. The original, known as the Othman Koran, was deposited at Mecca, where it remained through the centuries until the late war.

All this, however, is but a prefatory chapter in explaining the mysterious veneration which led the Turks, when the Arab insurrection and the menace of the British Suez forces made Medina unsafe, to transfer the Othman Koran to Constantinople, for later removal to Berlin, when the allied fleet was promising to run the Dardanelles.

This Berlin transfer was a dreadful piece of sacrilege. The Othman Koran, one of the holiest things of Islam, had reposed for centuries in its little casket at the Mosque of Medina. No infidel had ever gained sight of it. Only Sir Richard Burton, the great Orientalist, contrived to enter the holy place—by disguising himself faultlessly as an Arab. And now this sacredest of Korans was taken to Berlin.

In the month of Ramadan the pilgrims go to Mecca. From all parts of the world they take their arduous way to pray at the holy places, and thus gain for themselves the title of Hajji and the privilege of wearing the green turban.

Thus it has obtained for a thousand years, with a good proportion of the pilgrims further betaking themselves to Medina to pay devotion to the Othman Koran.

Now, these pilgrims have ever been a source of large revenue. They pay admission to the holy places, and the Arabian high cost of living does astonishing tricks for their exploitation. The district of the holy shrine would be sorely grieved if permanently deprived of any considerable portion of the pilgrim patronage.

This is precisely the misfortune that the Turk threatened to visit upon the insurgent Arabs.

The Othman Koran is essential to the economic development of the recently formed Arabian kingdom.

Suppose the Germans in a raid had carried off the English royal crown. The King would still be King, but the mislaying of his diadem would be an embarrassing circumstance. A king of the Hejaz, such as has been made recently, if he were without the Othman Koran would have more pointed questions to answer than any one but a Moslem can know.

And the home coming of this Koran will strengthen the King of the Hejaz.

"Do you think the Germans intended to keep the Othman Koran?" I asked the Orientalist.

"I don't," he replied. "It would take a strong imagination to picture the pilgrims in the month of Ramadan, dragging their pious Moslem feet to Berlin."

ALWAYS HAS HOPE

Prospector for Gold One of Fortunate Men.

With Belief in One's Luck to Be "Just Ahead" the Buffets of Fate Are Things at Which to Laugh.

The typical prospector for gold, still met with in the far hills and deserts, may well be taken by all men as an example and an inspiration as far as the blessings of staying hopes are concerned, says the Los Angeles Times.

"Hope deferred maketh the heart sick," says the proverb. But it is not a good proverb. No matter how long deferred a hope may be it should never be abandoned. It should never be anything but an inspiration and an incitement.

Take this nomadic tribe of prospecters, for instance. The typical prospector is a man who has spent perhaps the most of his life pursuing a hope that has never been realized. Yet we never find them discouraged. We never know them to end their days in despair. No matter how many their years of failure may be they will tell you that just beyond the next chain of hills or in the heart of a still unexplored desert the treasures they seek are surely awaiting them.

A most sincere and persistent man is the prospector. He believes in his quest and respects it. The little or the much that he wins by spasmodic toil he invests in his dreams. He braves the solitudes and the lonely wastes of the world to reach the goal for which he strives. Hunger, thirst and other hardships and sufferings he endures with a willing heart.

And he never despairs. That's the glory of the prospector—he never despairs.

The average man, hedged in by the traditions of towns and cities or settled in the humdrum of the country, looks upon the prospector as a queer and somewhat demented individual. We laugh at this strange fellow who is pictured to us as plodding along in the wildernesses and the sandy desolations with his pack and his burro, following the will-o'-the-wisps of fortune.

But the prospector is only doing in his way what we are doing in ours. We are following each our own dream as the prospector is following his.

The only difference is that we proceed in safety and without adventure. Otherwise we are the same as the wanderer of the desert and the hills. And also we are soon discouraged and we are easy prey to defeat, while it is death alone that can defeat the prospector.

It seems to us that of all the misfortunes there are in life—and heaven knows there are many—the misfortune of hopelessness is the worst. "Only for hope the heart would die," said a poet. It was a true thing to say.

And about this wonderful thing of hope there is another way to look at it and that is that we should always have at least one hope ahead. That is to say, we should always have something that we look forward to. Then, if what we have in hand fails us, the other thing that we look forward to will stay us.

Hope is something to be busy with. It is something of which we should accumulate a store. Always have plenty of hopes and have them so that they will reach out and last away into the years of the future.

There is really something mysterious about a hope. If you will cherish it faithfully and keep it warm in your heart you will be almost sure to sometime realise it. It is said that we are what we believe ourselves to be. But perhaps we might better say that we are what our hopes are.

Since then a long-cherished hope is most likely to be realized, surely it were foolish of us to harbor hopes that will not bring us comfort and joy. Hope for the best there is—not great riches, not any material possession, but peace for the heart and a serene path for the white years of old age.

Cotton Growing in China.

Now that China has decided what kind of cotton seed does best in that country, and is distributing it by the ton to farmers, cotton growing starts on a new geographical development. The time may yet come when the Chinese laundryman, far from home, will croon over his collars that he is "still longing for the old plantation." Work done during several years in four experiment stations indicates that out of forty varieties of seed the kind known as "Trice" is best suited for Chinese cultivation. It appears that "Trice" yields 141 catties to the moe, which is the Chinese way of saying something more than 141 pounds per one-sixth of an acre, for the catty weighs about one-third more than the English pound. The Chinese pound, for that matter is called "kin," but for some reason foreigners prefer to call it a "catty."

67,948 Animals Sent Overseas.

In a statement made by the war department it appears that since the United States entered the war and to January 11, 1919, this government shipped overseas from this country 67,948 animals, which included 5,489 cavalry horses, 33,396 draft horses, 28,088 draft mules, and 975 pack mules. The total number of animals lost en route overseas so far reported is 600 horses and mules, or less than 1 per

Gave Life to Save Others

FOR most conspicuous bravery and self-sacrifice on the 11th October, 1918, northeast of Cambrai, when with attacking troops which came under heavy enfilade machine-gun fire from a neighboring village.

Rushing forward with nine volunteers he shot the crew of an enemy machine gun and turning it on the enemy, enabled his party to reach the village. He then rushed another machine gun, killed the crew, captured an officer and ten of the enemy and thereby cleared the end of the village.

Lieut. Algie, having established his party, went back for reinforcements, but was killed when leading them forward. His valor and personal initiative in the face of intense fire saved many lives and enabled the position to be held.—Official Record.

Cambrai was occupied by the Canadians October 9, 1918. The German army fell back along the Escaut Canal towards Valenciennes, pursued by the British forces. The banks of the canal were heavily wooded and the advance of the Canadians along the eastern shore was stiffly contested.

The second division Canadians passed on the left of Naves during October 10. About three miles northeast of this village an old sugar refinery, strongly garrisoned, took heavy toll of the passing troops. The Canadians reached a point several miles further on, but at midnight, having been relieved on the right by Imperial troops, they returned to the position near the sugar refinery.

Early on the morning of the 11th orders came through that the 20th Battalion was to attack Iwuy at nine o'clock. While the Canadians were waiting the hour of attack the Germans poured a heavy enfilade fire on the lines, and many men were killed before leaving the trenches.

The enemy had seized all positions of advantage around Iwuy. The embankment of a railway running into the town was garrisoned by machine gunners. On the outskirts of the village a group of houses near the railway provided additional cover for the gunners, and another group of houses on the right were garrisoned strongly. Heavy enfilade fire was being directed on the advancing companies of the 20th.

Lieut. Algie was in command of "B" company. At the east end of the village he saw the enemy bringing up more guns to completely enfilade the Canadian position. He collected nine volunteers and charged the gun posts, shot the crew of one enemy machine gun with his revolver and turned the gun around on the enemy. This action permitted his men to cross the railway embankment into the eastern part of the town. Lieut. Algie then rushed another machine gun, killed the crew and cut off an officer and ten men, who surrendered to the Canadian. He then turned the guns on the enemy and cleared that part of the village.

Having established his men in the village and shown them how to use the enemy machine guns, Lieut. Algie went back to the battalion for reinforcements, returning to the attack in a short time. Running ahead of his men, he advanced towards another group of houses on the right of the position already taken. The German gunners in one of the houses watched the Canadian officer coming and waited until he was quite near, then turned the whole force of the gun on him, pouring the shot directly across his chest and heart. He fell, killed instantly.

The Canadian leader gone, the Boche counter-attacked. Four enemy tanks bore down on the remnant of the 20th, which fought heroically and were able to hold the posts already established, until the 27th Battalion, advancing on the left, occupied the village and relieved the situation. About three o'clock in the afternoon the body of Lieut. Algie was found, lying across the village street in front of the house from which the enemy had directed the fire upon him. The Victoria Cross was awarded posthumously for his heroism in face of intense fire and for his gallantry in protecting the lives of the men serving with him.

Wallace Lloyd Algie, only son of James Algie, M.D., Toronto, was born at Alton, Ont., in 1891. His father is of Canadian Scottish descent; his mother was a native of Devonshire, England. Before enlistment Mr. Algie was in the service of the Bank of Toronto in Vancouver and later in Toronto. When he was able to do so he played in the 48th Highlanders band. Early in the war he took an officer's course and graduated as lieutenant, but on seeing that his services were not required in that capacity at the time, he enlisted as a private in April, 1916. He was granted his commission overseas in the 20th Battalion.

As a boy, tales of heroism and military exploits, especially stories of Claverhouse and British heroes of the Indian Mutiny and Crimean war, held great interest for Wallace Lloyd Algie, and on one of his leaves while overseas he visited the ancestral home of the Algies in Scotland and viewed the monument at the Cross of Paisley raised to the memory of James Algie and Thomas Park, of Covenanter fame and dating back to Bothwell Brig.—Carolyn Cornell in Toronto Star Weekly.

An Aero Station.

Lieut.-Col. Barker, V.C., president of the Aero Club, in a letter to Mayor Mercer, of Galt, asked if the city is prepared to establish an aero station. Galt is on one of the proposed air routes through Canada. Airmen have been looking over sites in that city.

To Travelling Salesmen

WHEN showing goods, the traveller's cuffs as well as his goods are brought right before the prospective customer's eyes. A soiled cuff doesn't create a favorable impression. And it draws the attention away from the article to the soiled cuff.

The alert, particular traveller, therefore, has to take a big bunch of shirts on his trips and change often—unless he carries W. G. & R. Shirts with Double Wear Cuffs with him when he needs just half the usual quantity.

Everyone knows that the cuffs—the most exposed portion of a shirt—get soiled first. And it doesn't take long for a dirty train or dusty road to soil them.

But when one side of his Double Wear Cuffs gets soiled the traveller just turns the cuffs, which fold easily and lie perfectly flat either way they're turned. He thus wears his shirt twice as long.

If he is away for a period of two weeks to a month or longer every inch in his grip or personal trunk is valuable. W. G. & R. Shirts with Double Wear Cuffs save space for him, cut laundry bills for shirts in half, and wear longer.

What Will You Do About It?

Some time ago a Toronto man took out $10,000 Life Insurance. The other day he went to take out more and discovered to his consternation that he had become uninsurable. The medical examiner found that he had contracted an ailment which changed him from a good to an unacceptable risk. How thankful is he that he has at least $10,000 to leave to his family.

To-morrow You may be uninsurable.

You have read of and seen actual instances of the disastrous results of neglecting to take out Insurance. Do not depend on continued good health—it is an "uncertain quantity."

Tobacco Crop is the Largest In Many Years.

The Ontario tobacco crop has been harvested without damage by frosts. This is the largest and the best crop that has been grown in Ontario since the writer began the annual statistical crop report. In 1911 the production was larger, if tradition is correct, but we have no figures covering that year.

The Tobacco Division began the work of securing the exact acreage planted to tobacco each year in 1916, and issuing an annual report each fall since that time.

These reports are secured by having a grower in each school section in the tobacco districts of Ontario report the acreage devoted to tobacco in his school section, and also the yield per acre. Township reporters give the same information for the township in which they reside throughout the tobacco-producing area. All figures thus obtained are checked by the tobacco inspector, who, late in the summer and early fall visits every school section, and practically every farm in checking up all reports and estimates.

Despite the remarkable fall for harvesting and curing, too many growers made the mistake of leaving the harvested plants in small piles in the fields for several days, and in many cases rains came and sand and mud covered the leaves. This damaged the quality of the cured article very materially. This is a very poor method of handling, and such tobacco cannot be expected to command the price that the carefully handled article does. Tobacco should never be rained on after it has been cut and thoroughly wilted. Placing in small piles for two or three days starts the yellowing and curing process, but scaffolding on rough scaffolds in the field would be better and leave the plants free of dirt and mud in case rains came before the tobacco could possibly be housed.

The following figures give the acreage and estimated production of the tobacco crop for this year—1919:

Kind Tob.	Acres.	Pounds.
Essex, flue-cured .	1,450	1,300,500
Essex, Burley	3,010	3,612,200
Essex, Havana gold seal and dark types	800	942,000
Pelee Is., Burley.	700	895,400
Kent, Burley	2,700	3,210,500
Kent, Zimmer, Snuff, etc.	265	291,500
Welland, Burley..	8	9,000
Elgin, Burley ...	162	181,200
P. Edward, Burley	24	25,000
Lincoln, Connecticut Havana	35	36,300
Brant, Burley....	12	16,800
Norfolk, Burley ..	60	89,000
Total for all types of tobacco ...	9,226	10,709,400

It can be seen that the total acreage for all varieties in all of the tobacco-growing districts of Ontario amounts to 9,226 acres, which placing the estimate exactly where experience and the crop indicates, will yield 10,709,400 pounds. The flue-cured tobacco acreage shows only a slight increase over 1918, the same is true for the Snuff, Havana, Zimmer, Comstock and all types other than the White Burley. The White Burley shows between sixty and eighty per cent. increase over 1911.

The following tabes give the 1918 acreage and production for Ontario:

Kind Tob.	Ac'ge.	Produc.
Essex, Flue-cured.	1,266	1,020,000
Essex, Burley ...	2,176	2,811,900
Essex, Zimmer, Havana, etc. ...	688	731,400
Pelee Is., Burley.	550	695,000
Kent, Burley	1,377	1,860,000
Kent, Zimmer, Snuff, etc.	200	255,000
Welland, Burley..	11	12,000
Elgin, Burley	12	15,000
P. Edward, Burley	20	22,000
Lincoln, Connecticut Havana	35	28,000
Total	6,235	7,451,400

Market Outlook—The market outlook was never brighter. The fact that flue-cured tobacco is selling in the Southern States at higher figures than for this period last year, though the crop is considerably larger, indicated in a measure a shortage of tobacco stocks. This year's crop will be a few million pounds short of our home requirements, high prices prevailing in the Southern States and the adverse exchange on Canadian money in American markets, all go to increase the demand for our 1919 crop of tobacco.—H. Fraser, tobacco inspector.

Canadian Fair In London.

The organization of a Canadian Fair in London next year is the object of a visit to Canada by H. Greville Montgomery. The British Industries Fair is to be held at London in 1920, and the Canadians are invited to exhibit, but very few have responded. It is thought, however, that if Canada could compete at Lyons Fair the Dominion could have an exhibition of its own in the centre of the British Empire at a time when Canadian manufacturers are so keen to embark in the world export trade.

Mr. Montgomery is a well-known public man, former Liberal M.P. for Bridgewater, and an editor and newspaper proprietor. He revived the Building Trades Exhibition at the Royal Agricultural Hall in 1895, said to be the largest series of trade exhibitions in the world.

Not New to Her.

Beatrice was invited to a birthday party and, womanlike, she wanted a new frock. Her mother, finding the child's party dress in good condition, refused to buy another. Her father, trying to console his little daughter, said: "Let me see the dress, Beatrice."

She brought it and he said: "Why, Beatrice, it is very pretty! I've never seen it before."

"Well," responded the child, "I've seen it offin."

Stung.

"Fine day, isn't it?"

"Sir, you have the advantage of me! I don't know you."

"H-m! I fail to see the advantage."

Winter is Coming

Your Boy Needs Warm Stockings

You can get them at a reasonable price. Stockings closely knit for cold weather—Buster Brown Stockings.

When wool is so expensive Buster Brown Stockings are especially reasonable. They'll make a big saving—especially if your family is large. And they provide ample warmth for winter weather.

Buster Brown Stockings are time-savers as well, for they save lots of mending. They're knitted with three-ply heels and toes, and two-ply legs and feet. With elastic-ribbed legs and narrowed feet and ankles. Fast dyes keep them from fading.

Ask for Buster Brown durable hosiery—the lower-priced winter stockings.

BUSTER BROWN'S SISTER'S STOCKINGS are just the thing for the girls. Fine two-thread English mercerized lisle, in Black, Leather Shade Tan, Pink, Blue and White. Neat fitting, splendid wearing, and moderately priced.

REFUSE LIQUOR SHIPMENT

Toronto, Nov. 21.—The Citizens' Liberty League was willing to test the validity of the Ontario Temperance Act yesterday by importing a case of liquor which was to be addressed to the home of the secretary, but the arrangements fell through, as no express company would accept the responsibility for carrying the stuff from Montreal to Toronto.

The league officials secured the assurance from the Provincial License Commission that only their secretary would be prosecuted in order to make a test case, but this assurance was not considered sufficient by the express companies.

MRS. HAMILTON GAULT IS MARRIED IN PARIS

Montreal, Nov. 21.—The marriage is reported in Paris of Mrs. Hamilton Gault and Major Caviler Luigino Falchi, of the Italian Air Force.

Mrs. Hamilton Gault was the wife of Major Hamilton Gault, who helped to raise the Princess Patricia Regiment. He attempted to secure a divorce from his wife in Ottawa, but the appeal was thrown out. Later his wife obtained a divorce in the Paris courts.

Major Falchi is known in Canada and in the United States as he did war work for Italy here and in Washington. The major and his wife are to reside in Florence, Italy.

Protect Your Skin

Through the pores of your skin must come every day two pints of waste matter. If the pores are not kept clean this waste matter stays in the system to poison it.

And not only must the visible dirt be carried off, but the invisible though no less insidious disease germs and microbes must be destroyed to keep us free from infection.

LIFEBUOY HEALTH SOAP

does all these things well because it is more than soap (though it costs no more). Its copiously lathering, pure, vegetable oils are the best of all cleansers.

SHIPS WHICH DON'T COME IN.

Few People See "Chambers of Horrors" In London.

In the very heart of the city of London there is a "chamber of horrors" which none but the privileged may enter, and of which the world at large knows nothing, says Pearson's Weekly.

There is nothing at all gruesome in the aspect of this chamber, which is, in fact, a small, cheerful room leading out of the great hall of Lloyd's, and on the walls of which is an array of flimsies, yellow and brown.

It is in these innocent-looking pieces of paper that the latent tragedy lies, for they tell of ships missing and lost, and each telegram has quite a tragic importance to some of the 500 underwriters who haunt the room.

Whenever a ship leaves port she is insured by her owners at Lloyd's against loss or damage to herself or her cargo; and this risk is divided among a number of underwrwiters, who insure her for certain sums ranging from £100 to thousands of pounds, in return for a premium.

A slip is passed round from one underwriter to another, and on the information supplied as to the destination, cargo, and class of the ship, the names of her owners and captain, the insurance required and its rate, each underwriter puts down on the slip the sum for which he is prepared to make himself responsible in case of loss or damage.

The limit is entirely at the discretion of the underwriter, and there have been cases in which a man has ventured £50,000, and even £100,000, on the safe voyage of a vessel.

When a man thus risks hundreds or thousands on a stake so full of uncertainty as the safety of a ship, which naturally encounters so many dangers, her voyage is a matter of daily anxiety to him until she reaches her destination.

When she is overdue the anxiety of the underwriter increases, and each day that passes without the ship's arrival at her destination being reported adds to it. He begins to see the wisdom of reducing his risk by "hedging," and at this stage the "doctor," as he is called at Lloyd's, comes on the scene.

The "doctor" is a man who deals in overdue risks, and for an increased premium is willing to take the original underwriter's responsibility on his own shoulders.

When the original premium was, say, 25s. per cent., the "doctor" demands five guineas—or, as the risk increases through the continued non-arrival of the overdue ship, ten, twenty, fifty, or more guineas for each £100 insured.

In some cases an underwriter has paid as much as seventy and ninety guineas per cent. to reinsure an overdue vessel, which has turned up safely after all, to his chagrin and the "doctor's" great jubilation.

It is thus easy to see with what trepidation a man who has staked a large sum on an overdue vessel must enter the "chamber of horrors," dreading day by day to see the fatal announcement that must mean a heavy loss, and may mean absolute ruin to him.

Starting Something.

The household was comparatively quiet when the ten-year-old son looked up from the last page of a recent issue of the News and inquired of both parents sitting near: "What's funny about this here 'Abe Martin?' 'There's never anything t' eat in a home where th' wife is on an allowance.'" "The joke, my son," his father replied, "is that instead of spending the allowance for eats, the wife blows it in for clubs, clothes, candy and conventions." "No, son," said the mother, "the fact is that the allowance is not large enough to provide a hotel menu, though the men seem to think it is. And that is no joke, either."—Indianapolis News.

Bullet in Brain Twenty Years.

After living for 20 years with a bullet in his brain, Edgar Wilgus, an insurance broker of Trenton, N. J., was killed by a 5-foot fall on the granite steps of a New York hotel. The medical examiner, discovering the bullet in the man's brain, thought at first that he had been unaccountably shot, but learned by telephoning to his home how long he had carried the bullet in his head.

Settling on the Land In Palestine.

A glimpse of Palestine in progress from past to future is afforded by an account of the little colony of Yemenians, Jewish emigrants from southern Arabia, who began to assemble a few years ago to live by wood-cutting in the neighborhood of the forests of some 100,000 trees that had been planted in the district of Judea. The forests are part of a large plan for the reforesting of Palestine; and to house the woodcutters small cement cottages were built at a cost of about 1,000 francs each, each with its garden and its opportunity for the homekeeper to buy his home by installments. Dwellings now stand which house 130 or 140 families, and the colony of woodcutters is one of several similar groups in which families naturally strongly attached to the soil have been settled in Palestine, cultivating small farms, and progressing toward independent ownership. In some cases the colonies are co-operative; a single large farm is run by several families who share its profits, and at the same time pay wages to additional laborers. The experiments are still too young to be at all conclusive, but they are succeeding in their small way, and they are very likely the beginning of a wide and wholesome development.

Net, Wool and Beads.

A new kind of trimming is coarse net run with strands of white wool and with rows of beads sewed on as an edge. This fabric is sold at the trimming counters all ready to incorporate in a frock, but it is also possible to make it at home.

This trimming is used in banding outdoor clothes. Of course, when it is finished the net does not show, and therefore the bands are heavy enough to use on white serge, jersey and other summer sport fabrics. [illegible]

King George Was Trained Like Any Other Midshipman Who Enters British Navy

THE navy had advanced a good deal since King George began his nautical experiences, thirty years earlier. King Edward VII, then Prince of Wales, showed his practical appreciation of the value of a sea training when he decided to put both his sons into the navy. Possibly he was influenced in this decision by a recollection of what he himself had missed. It is true that among the most popular pictures of King Edward as a small boy were those showing him in a sailor dress, and even something approaching the dress of a midshipman, but as a matter of fact he never served in the navy or received any other nautical instruction than that he derived from the sailors when on board the royal yacht.

In 1878, when the time came for King Edward's sons, Prince Albert and Prince George, to join the navy, the training of cadets was entirely carried out on board the old hulk Britannia, moored off Dartmouth. After nearly two years there, the princes embarked in the Bacchante, Captain Lord Charles Scott, which made prolonged cruises for three years, including a voyage around the world. After their return Prince Albert, who was not intended to follow the naval career, left the service for Cambridge University, but his younger brother was appointed a midshipman of the Canada, corvette, in which he visited Canada in 1883. In the following year he became a sub-lieutenant and underwent courses of instruction at Greenwich and Portsmouth, and, having passed the usual examinations with credit, he obtained his lieutenant's commission on October 8, 1885. The greater part of the next two years was spent on the Mediterranean station, first on the Thunderer, a little later on the Dreadnought, and afterward on the Alexandra, which was then the flagship of the late Duke of Saxe-Coburg and Gotha, at that time better known as the Duke of Edinburgh. His next appointment was to the Northumberland, in the Channel, and then, in 1889, he received his first independent command, torpedo boat No. 79.

It was while in command of this boat that Prince George had an opportunity of displaying his professional knowledge and the enthusiasm for which he was noted. While with another torpedo boat reconnoitring off an Irish harbor, during manoeuvres, his consort broke down, and after a vain attempt to get her into harbor because of the tow rope breaking Prince George returned to his base and reported the facts. Other vessels were there and the prince had been up all night, but so keen was his desire to finish the job that he himself obtained a brand new hemp hawser and went back to rescue his friend, which he did, and towed him safely home. A flag officer present said it was a smart piece of seamanship, which would have done credit to an officer with a far wider experience of such work than the prince had then enjoyed.

A further exhibition of his close working knowledge of the navy was afforded when he received command of the gunboat Thrush at the age of twenty-five, and after nearly thirteen years' service. Many stories are told about the King at this period, all of which indicate his professional capacity and his energy and knowledge of handling men. It was after his return home from his cruise in this little gunboat that he was promoted to commander, on August 24, 1891. In the following year he commissioned the new cruiser Melampus, of 3,400 tons, for service in the naval manoeuvres. This command, however, lasted for only two months. The death of his elder brother, Prince Albert, Duke of Clarence, had brought him into the direct line of succession to the throne. After his marriage, in 1893, to his cousin, Princess Mary of Teck, he only served once afloat. This was in 1898, when as a captain he commanded the cruiser Crescent for a short period. He has, however, made frequent overseas voyages since that time, the chief of which were in the Ophir, to the British overseas dominions, in 1901; in the Indomitable, to Canada, in 1908, and in the Medina, for the Durbar in India, in 1911-12.

Both in regard to his training and in his promotions King George closely followed the routine of the navy. He was thirty-five years old before he became a rear-admiral, whereas Sir David Beatty, for instance, was thirty-eight. In the Britannia the King and his brother were treated like all other cadets, and later in the fleet he served in all the grades below flag rank and fulfilled every duty required of the naval officer of his time. It was owing to this judicious policy that the King became so keenly interested in his profession. His comrades were men of his own age and outlook, instead of being older and of another school as would have been the case had his advance been accelerated because of his royal birth. In a way, too, it was especially fortunate that at a time when a great war was being waged in which the struggle at sea was all-important, Britain's King should have been possessed of the ability and experience necessary to understand, from the point of view of a naval officer, the various changes in the situation afloat.

The Baobab Tree.

The gigantic baobab tree of Central Africa, the trunk of which sometimes attains a diameter of forty feet, often serves as a natural cistern, retaining rain water in large quantities in a cavity formed at the top of the broad trunk. Taking the hint thus afforded by nature, the Arabs artificially hollow out the huge baobabs and fill them with water during the prevalence of rains, as a provision against the dry season. These cisterns are in many cases twenty feet in height and eight or ten feet in diameter.

"What About This Nerve Food Doctor?"

"IT IS all right."
"Would it do for me to take it?"
"I cannot see any objection."

"Well, I know so many women who are using it to good advantage that I decided to give it a trial."

"Then why ask me about it?"

"Just because you know my condition, and I felt that I would like your opinion."

"Of course, you know that we doctors are supposed to be prejudiced against all package medicines. As a matter of fact, nearly all the best medicines on the market are the prescription of doctors and first made their merits known in some doctor's private practice.

"There is scarcely a day but I see Dr. Chase's Nerve Food in the homes I visit, and to be perfectly candid I know of many instances in which this treatment has brought about really remarkable cures."

"Then you thnk it suits my case?"

"Undoubtedly. Your blood is thin and watery. You are anaemic. The nerve cells are starved. Hence the neuralgic pains, the nervousness and irritability, the sleeplessness. The medicine I gave you does not seem to be exactly what you need. The Nerve Food may be just what is required to get your blood and nerves in good condition."

"One thing certain, doctor, it has been a wonderful benefit to several people I know."

"If the conditions are similar in your case there can be no better proof that it will benefit you. After all it is cure we are after, and while every doctor has his own favorite prescriptions, it is results that count."

"Thank you, doctor, I am glad to have your approval and I am going to start in with Dr. Chase's Nerve Food with the determination to give it a good honest trial."

"Good, that is what our medicines do not always get. I would suggest that you follow up this treatment for at least a month or two, and then you will be in a position to know just what benefit you are obtaining. For it takes a little time and patience to restore an exhausted, nervous system."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food, 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.75, all dealers, or Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. Every box of the genuine bears the portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author.

HOW C.P.R. ENGINEER WON VICTORIA CROSS

PTE PETER ROBERTSON WHO WON THE VICTORIA CROSS

It fell to the lot of a C.P.R. engineer Pte. John Peter Robertson to win the much coveted Victoria Cross at Passchendaele. Robertson enlisted at Lethbridge with the 175th and was an engineer on that division. He was better known as "Pete" to his Lethbridge friends. He was born in Pictou, Nova Scotia, but lived most of his life in Medicine Hat with his mother, Mrs. Alex. Robertson.

Robertson was aged thirty-four, won his distinction in connection with operations at Passchendaele, November 6, 1917. Details came through authoritative channels that during his battalion's attack Robertson's platoon was held up by uncut wire two hundred yards from the final objective. Our guns were still busy cutting a way through the wire when a German machine gun opened fire and inflicted very heavy losses on the Canadians. Robertson, without waiting for orders and entirely on his own initiative, rushed towards the German gun, defying the machine guns' withering fire. Moreover, our artillery barrage was so intense that death seemed almost certain. Working his way to the flank, he eventually found an opening in the wire, got through, and crawled until the end of the emplacement was reached. Rising suddenly to his feet he charged down on the astonished Germans, and killed four of the gun crew before they could recover from their surprise. The remainder fled in terror, but their flight was soon cut short when Robertson seized the abandoned gun, screwed it around and poured a hail of bullets upon the backs of the fast disappearing enemy. Several of them fell victims to their own weapon and others were caught by our shells. When the remainder of the platoon arrived Robertson was still firing the captured gun. It was entirely due to his heroic action that the whole line was enabled to advance and capture the final objective. Robertson went forward with the first wave, taking a gun with him. He used it very effectively to keep down the fire of German machine guns and snipers, while his platoon consolidated the new position. Later in the day when two or our snipers who ventured in front of our lines were wounded Robertson volunteered to bring them in. He went into the open, although exposed to a heavy enemy fire, lifted one man on his back and carried him safely to the trench, and immediately returned to the second man, staggering back with his unconscious burden while the bullets whistled around him. But as if cruel fate were awaiting until the last possible moment to overtake him, he was killed on the very parapet of the trench, his mission almost accomplished. His splendidly heroic end, like his dashing work done earlier in the day, had a most inspiring effect.

Catch The Vision of Belleville In 1925

LIVE WIRES WILL MEET AROUND BANQUET BOARD AND CULTIVATE GET-TOGETHER SPIRIT OF PROGRESS—ELOQUENT ROTARY SPIRIT WILL SPEAK ON COMMUNITY AWAKENING.

"Friday night, Nov. 28th, will be a big night in the history of Belleville," was the statement of H. F. Ketcheson, the Chairman of the dinner committee of the Expansion and Reorganization Campaign of the Belleville Board of Trade, when seen this morning.

This dinner will open the campaign to give Belleville an up-to-date civic-commercial organization, and gives promise of being the largest ever held here. Arrangements have been made with the Hotel Quinte to use not only the hotel dining room, but to have tables in the lobby, if necessary, to supply the demand of those who wish to be present.

The committee realizes that it is no small task to put on a dinner of this kind and everything is being done to make things go well. In order to give everyone an equal opportunity of being present, invitations are being sent to a list of over fourteen hundred people whose names have been carefully selected and indexed. As it will not be possible to take care of all who apply the rule has been made that those responding first will be given the preference, and admission will be in the order of receipt at the Campaign Headquarters 8 Campbell street.

The chief speaker of the evening will be Allen D. Albert, former president of the International Rotary Clubs, a student of the development of cities and of commercial organizations, and a speaker who has delighted audiences in many countries with his splendid conception of the obligations of citizenship. Several citizens of Belleville had the opportunity of hearing Mr. Albert a few years ago at Hamilton, and are enthusiastic over his coming here, and say that they would not miss his talk for a great deal.

There will be no solicitation of memberships at the dinner. The purpose of the function is to give the vision of Belleville in 1925 and show what may be accomplished through a united community spirit.

The committee in charge of the dinner arrangements is composed of the following:

H. F. Ketcheson, chairman; John Elliott, C. J. Symons, Harold Saunders, A. F. White, Leon Walmsley.

Montreal Boards Discuss Vaccine

Three Hundred and Fifty Smallpox Cases Reported in Province of Quebec.

MONTREAL, Nov. 24.—The vaccination of school children and the free distribution of vaccine to physicians were some of the matters discussed by the Board of Health. Dr. Boucher, medical officer of health, was instructed to send circular letters to the heads of educational institutions and to all physicians requiring them under penalty to report all cases of smallpox or chickenpox they may have knowledge of. The need of reporting both diseases is a precautionary measure, and in suspected cases the health department will send out a physician to diagnose the disease.

Information was laid before the board to the effect that some 350 cases of smallpox had been reported in this province. A few cases have been reported in Montreal.

Lighted Verandahs Will Hurt Spooning

Baldwin Council Will Illuminate All Porches Free.

BALDWIN, Kan., Nov. 24.—Porch spooning in this college town seems doomed. Baker University co-eds have nothing to say on the subject except to predict a new council will be seated at the next election.

The trouble started when city councilmen voted "aye" on a plan to furnish free electricity to residents for porch lights provided the property owners allowed the lights to burn all night and every night. The resident is to stand the expense of wiring.

The city fathers adopted the plan with the idea of making every Baldwin street a "white way." Indications today are that the residents have generally taken with favor the slogan "a light on every porch."

Nomination Day for Provincial by-elections in six ridings has been set for December 15.

Col. Roscoe Vandewater D.S.O. O.C. of 15th Argyll L.I.

OLD REGIMENT WILL BE REORGANIZED AND BROUGHT UP TO BATTALION STRENGTH—PERMANENT OFFICERS APPOINTED.

The 15th Argyll Light Infantry with its many interesting traditions will be continued in a new 15th now being organized which will eventually be brought up to battalion strength. Major General V. A. S. Williams, Officer Commanding Military District No, 3, accompanied by his A. D. C. Major W. J. McManus, arrived in Belleville Saturday and preliminary steps in the organization were taken. A meeting was held in the armories attended by most of the officers past and present of the 15th besides a number of civilians interested. Major-General Williams outlined the proposed scheme of organization which includes a permanent Adjutant posted from the permanent force, permanent Sergeant-Major and permanent Orderly Room Sergeant.

Major Roscoe Vanderwater, D.S.O., will be Officer Commanding the reorganized 15th Argyll Light Infantry, and Capt. D. T. McManus, Adjutant. The announcement of these appointments was received with great enthusiasm. Both of these officers rendered valuable service to the Empire overseas and gained much military experience of a nature which will be very useful to the 15th.

Addresses were made by Col. D. Barrager, Col. Lazier, Col. Ponton, Col. Ketcheson, and Mr. H. F. Ketcheson.

Major Vanderwater said that after listening to the addresses he had decided to accept the position of O. C. of the 15th Argyll Infantry as the speakers had guaranteed that whoever the Commanding Officer would be he would have the whole-hearted support of the citizens of Belleville.

It is hoped that every company commander will be an officer who has seen overseas service, and the same will apply to officers of lower rank, who will be overseas men wherever possible.

Lt-Col. D. Barrager, who had voluntarily resigned his command, addressed the gathering expressing his great regret that circumstances compelled him to relinquish the command. He was convinced that it was his duty to step aside in favor of an officer with overseas experience, in the best interests of the regiment so that the splendid traditions of the Regiment might be upheld and new ones created. He thanked all officers past and present for the loyal assistance always given him.

The new O. C. of the 15th, Col. Roscoe Vanderwater, D.S.O., is too well known locally to need introduction. He served with great dash and bravery overseas and won the Distinguished Service Order for exceptional service to the Empire.

Adjutant Capt. McManus, served as Adjutant of the 39th Battalion, going from Belleville overseas. He afterwards served as Adjutant of the 21st Battalion in France, and the 6th Reserve. For a time he was specially employed on Headquarters Staff at Canadian Headquarters in London and latterly superintended the entire demobilization of the Canadian Forestry Corps.

Premier Outlines Highway Policies

TORONTO, Nov. 24.—In outlining the policies and growing of the United Farmers' movement in Ontario before the Men's Club of the Eaton Memorial Church Friday evening, Premier Hon. E. C. Drury took occasion to dwell to some length on the good roads scheme and gave a forecast of what the province may expect along this line under the U.F.O.-Labor Administration. Hon. Mr. Drury wished to set at rest any fear that the roads of Ontario would not be improved under the new Government, but he pointed out at the same time that their development is apt to take a different line from that planned by the late Administration. There is no class of people more anxious for better roads than the farmer, he assured his hearers, but their ideals do not call for interprovincial highways nearly as much as they call for improved sideroads and concessions which run past the farms.

"The farmers want better roads," he continued, "but at the same time, they want roads which they themselves can use. With them, it is not so much a question of cement highways between Toronto and Hamilton as it is good, passable roads between their farms and the centres where they dispose of their produce. When farmers hear about a cement highway he remembers that at home he is confronted with five or so miles of rutty roads from his farm to the town, so do you wonder that he does not want all the money spent on trunk highways? The farmer knows, that you, in the city can do without highways, for you have the train services to take their place, but he knows that he cannot do without roads, for he has not the same convenience of the railways. What he asks is a fair distribution of the money derived from automobile licenses, and he does not want $30,000 spent on one mile of road quite as much as he wants 30 miles of good road at $1,000 a mile. He feels that the best way to spend the money is to see that the present roads are resurfaced.

"The cement roads are all right. We have nothing to say against them, provided there is enough money to go around, but we want the small roads first. And I believe that you in the cities do not want the expenditures limited to the trunk roads any more than does the farmer, for I feel you want to be able to get out into the country on good roads. That appears to be one respect in which other politicians failed to gauge public opinion. So it seems to me that the fairest and most economical policy with regard to highway improvement would be one of continuous repair based on an even distribution of the funds available."

Hunger Strikers Can Go Hungry

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

DUBLIN, Nov. 24—Official notice was given here today that no more prisoners will be liberated conditionally or unconditionally for hunger striking and that hunger strikers must, themselves, be responsible for the consequences of their acts. It was also announced that there would be no further amelioration of prison treatment given any prisoner convicted under the defence of the Real Act. This notice is regarded very seriously in Irish political circles.

No Decision Yet On Liquor War Measure

Justice Department Leaves the Government to Fix Date of Expiration.

OTTAWA, Nov. 24.—Whether or not the Government will continue in force orders and regulations passed by virtue of the War Measures Act, after the proclamation of peace between the allies and Germany and Austria, is apparently still to be decided. The fact that, strictly speaking, Canada is still at war with Turkey and Bulgaria would, in the opinion of the Justice Department, continue the War Measures Act and all orders passed under it, in force until such time as peace was concluded with these powers. It follows that the prohibition order-in-Council would remain operative until a proclamation of peace between Canada, Bulgaria and Turksy was made.

In the view of the Justice Department the matter is one to be decided by the Government, and its final decision may await the ratification of the German treaty. If the Government should think it advisable, any order passed under the War Measures Act may be repealed, even though the Act remains in force. It seems likely that the matter will await the return of Sir Robert Borden next Wednesday or Thursday, before being finally disposed of.

Y.M.C.A. Men From Far Off Lands

DETROIT, Nov. 24—Many picturesque and prominent figures from European and far-eastern countries represented among the foreign delegates to th fortieth International Convention of the Y.M.C.A. in Detroit. What Kind of a City Belleville Boys Want

HIGH SCHOOL BOYS PLACE ON RECORD THEIR IDEAS OF WHAT CAN BE DONE BY BOARD OF TRADE TO IMPROVE CITY AND MAKE IT POSSIBLE FOR BOYS TO REMAIN HERE AFTER LEAVING SCHOOL.

There will be a great shaking of the dry bones in Belleville before this Expansion Campaign of the Board of Trade comes to a close. Every indication points to a civic re-awakening here which will be fraught with great good to the city and district, a new birth of civic pride, ambition and achievements which will not rest content until the many resources and advantages of this city and district are fully developed. A peep into the program of the Expansion Campaign, confirms this. With a fine-toothed comb of persistent effort every department of business life in Belleville will be stirred up to work for the general good. Even the boys and girls have enlisted in the fight and Dr. Haskell, of Board of Trade Campaign Headquarters Staff addressed the students of the High School Friday upon citizenship and the true civic spirit. Principal MacLaurin also spoke along the same lines. Printed questionaires were distributed among the High School students to be filled in and returned to the Board of Trade. Answers are already coming in in large number and as soon as the questionaires can be listed and assorted a summary will be given the public. For pointedness, frankness and thinking in the interests of Belleville these answers will prove eye-openers. The questions are as follows:

1—What business, profession or trade do you hope to pursue as a life work?

2—Do you expect to remain in Belleville after leaving High School?..If not, why not?

3—What, in your opinion, is the thing of most importance that the Board of Trade should undertake FIRST to assist YOU in preparing for your life work?

4—What do you think the Board of Trade should undertake FIRST for the improvement of Belleville?

Prohibition Issue Still Doubtful

Official View That Treaty Ratification Ends State of War.

OTTAWA, Nov. 24.—One of the subjects which will demand consideration by the Government upon the return of Sir Robert Borden and some of his colleagues to the capital is the course to be taken with respect to war orders-in-Councils when treaties, soon to be formally ratified, become operative. It has been reported that the Supreme War Council has fixed December 1st as the date upon which the treaties with Germany and Austria shall be declared in force. It is also expected that by the end of the present month the exchange of ratifications of the treaty between the allied powers and Bulgaria will have been effected. Only the treaty dealing with Turkey will remain to be ratified.

In Canada the state of war is to be terminated and the War Measures Act is to become invalid upon the issue of a proclamation by the Governor-General-in-Council. Technically the state of war might be regarded as continuing until the treaty with Turkey was concluded.

There is a feeling in official circles however, that enactments under the War Measures Act predicted upon war conditions should not remain in force after the ratification of the peace treaties, and that Canada has no real reason for awaiting the ratification of the treaty with Turkey before returning entirely to a peace footing. The prohibition order-in-Council, according to its terms, continues operative for a year after the war. There is a legal doubt as to whether it could remain valid after the War Measures Act becomes invalid. That doubt could be removed either by a judicial decision or by the repeal of the order.

If the order were repealed next month upon the exchange of ratifications of the treaties with Germany Austria and Bulgaria there would undoubtedly be a period before action colud be taken by provincial Legislatures under the amendment to the Canada Temperance Act passed by Parliament at its last session. During that period there would be no legislation to prohibit importation of liquor into one province from another.

Interior Ontario to N.Y. State By Rail

BRIDGEBURG, Nov. 24.—According to information just received here, the Canadian Pacific Railway Company has practically completed the purchase of its route from Welland City to the Niagara frontier. This right-of-way has been acquired through option, etc., in a very quiet way, it not being generally known that the deal was on until it had been practically consummated all along the line.

If the new line to the proposed bridge over the Niagara follows the route that has been optioned, as it most likely will, it will reach the frontier at a point a mile and a half this side of Black Creek, or about six miles down the river from Bridgeburg.

The new bridge, which is to be constructed by the Canadian-Niagara Bridge Company, will be jointly controlled, when completed by the Toronto, Hamilton and Buffalo Railway, the Canadian Pacific and the New York Central.

The bridge will supply the long-desired outlet of the Canadian Pacific to the United States, meaning, as it will, practically a direct line from interior Ontario into New York state.

Socialist Success In Italy Starts Disturbing Rumors

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

ROME, Nov. 24.—Rumors of the wildest character regarding the possibilities of a very serious crisis involving not only the Cabinet, but also the reigning house of Italy, are in circulation as the opening of Parliament, set for Dec. 1, approaches. The Socialists, proud of their recent victory, are eager to continue what they call their march forward. The older and more authoritative members of the party, however, such as Deputy Turati, leader of the intransiegants; Deputy Trever and Signor Medigliana, are against any excesses. The new elements which have entered the Socialist Parliamentary group, are declared to be animated by revolutionary sentiment and to favor an extreme policy which in their opinion will lead to the advent of Bolshevism in Italy.

"Gee-Whiz! How it Hurts— —The Pain in My Foot!"

"Sometimes it is in my arm. Merciful Heaven, how my back hurts in the morning!" It's all due to an over-abundance of that poison called uric acid. The kidneys are not able to get rid of it. Such conditions you can readily overcome, and prolong life by taking the advice of Dr. Pierce, which is "keep the kidneys in good order." "Avoid too much meat, alcohol or tea. Drink plenty of pure water, preferably hot water, before meals, and drive the uric acid out of the system by taking Anuric." This can be obtained at almost any drug store.]

Send a bottle of water to the chemist at Dr. Pierce's Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y., and you will receive free medical advice as to whether the kidneys are affected. When your kidneys get sluggish and clog, you suffer from backache, sick-headache, dizzy spells, or twinges and pains of lumbago, rheumatism or gout; or sleep is disturbed two or three times a night, take heed, before too late. Get Anuric (anti-uric-acid), for it will put new life into your kidneys and your entire system. Ask your nearest druggist for it or send Dr. Pierce ten cents for trial package.

Music and Drama

"Mickey" is the title of the biggest sensation of the Seventh World. Wherever it has been presented it has created an interest unpredecented in the history of film productions. "Mickey," the little mountain girl, whose adventures, pictorially presented, make ap hotodrama that breathes the very sunshine of life. It is a remarkable production in many ways, and not the least of these is the rare dramatic ability displayed by Mabel Normand. She brings tears to the eyes one moment, and has her audiences roaring with laughter the next. In addition she performs stunts that would put in the background any of the stars who have won fame thru their ability to enject thrills into a film production. There is a racing scene that is said to have anything of a similar character beaten a furlong, while the fight between the hero and the villian is one of the most realistic battles ever screened. In the contest Mickey is seen hanging from the roof, while the combatants in the violent struggle wreck the building. It is a scene that never fails to arouse the enthusiasm of the spectators, and is one of the many adventures of this great picture that brings forth rounds of applause. "Mickey" is a picture you will want to see over and over again. You will want to tell your friends about it, but don't attempt to describe it to them, for it can't be done. Just advise them to see it and they will agree with you that it is the greatest photodrama that has been presented on the silver sheet in some time. Besides the above offering a funny two-reel Sunshine Comedy, the Gaumont World Wide News and a thrilling 101 two-reel Western drama are also announced for presentation. Come early.

"FORTUNE AT STAKE"

"Fortune at Stake," the greatest racing play since "The Whip" and the first of a series of all British photoplays and stage plays to be presented in Canada this season is announced for exhibition at the Palace tonight to Wednesday, matinee daily. "Fortune at Stake" which is in six-reels represents the true British instinct for sport and fair play and the racing scene between Vendetta and Rainstorm, two of the finest steeds in England is said to fairly bring the spectators to his feet with enthusiasm, featured in the cast are many English players of note. The photoplay comes to Belleville after enjoying successful engagements in many of the leading theatres of the Dominion.

A new Luke coedy, British Canadian News, and a new chapter of the high speed serial "Perils of Thunder Mountain' 'are also announced for exhibition.

LOUISE GLAUM IN "SAHARA"

The cast supporting Louise Glaum, the magnetic star of "Sahara," the gripping emotional drama by C. Gardiner Sullivan showing next Thursday to Saturday, with a matinee Saturday, is a large one in numbers, but larger in ability, popularity, reputation. Louise Glaum is a young actress who started her picture career as an ingenue, and was suddenly developed by Thomas H. Ince into a vivid Vampire portrayer. She was the actress with brains as well as personal charm and allure. In "Sahara" Miss Glaum is not the temptress, but that weakwilled, luxury loving, adulation seeking butterful type of woman, whose selfishness is an insidious as the devil himself. Foremost in support of Miss Glaum is Matt Moore, one of those good old of woman, whose selfishness is as inseen four—Matt, Tom, Owen and Joe. The public has accused Matt Moore of being the husband of Mary Pickford, Alice Joyce and Grace Cunard, but, as a matter of fact, Matt is the only bachelor in the family. He is Miss Glaum's screen husband in "Sahara." Edwin Stevens cares not whether he be hero, villian or director —he's been each of these. As the Foxy, Russian Baron, who plays upon the vanity of a weak woman, he is one of the most human villians the sceeen has seen, which means that he looks good on the outside but has the weaknesses human nature is heir to on the inside. Besides "Sahara" a new Christie comedy, Outing Chester colored Travelogue, Screen Magazine, Topics of The Day and the official British News are also being exhibited Regular prices will prevail during the exhibition of "Sahara."

WINTER IN ALGONQUIN PARK

As a winter panacea for coughs and colds Algonquin Park cannot be equalled. Two thousand feet above the sea it is always dry and cold. Days spent in snow-shoe tramps, tobogganing or ski-ing and in skating, together with evenings spent in social converse around the cosy warmth of an old fashioned log fire; these slip away unnoticed out those who have once experienced them return to their avocations with renewed energies. The "Highland Inn" owned and operated by the Grand Trunk Railway offers comfortable accommodation at reasonable rates. For all particulars apply to N. T. Clarke Manager, Algonquin Park

CALLED BY DEATH

JAMES LUCAS

Mr. James Lucas died in this city yesterday after some days' illness. Deceased was sixty-five years of age and was a resident of Sulphide. He was a bachelor. The body after being prepared for burial at Tickell & Sons' undertaking establishment was taken to Sulphide for interment.

PERCY M. MILLARD

Death came suddenly to Mr. Percy M. Millard, a well-known citizen, who resided at 50 Everitt street, city. On Saturday evening while preparing to go to his usual occupation he was stricken with a paraletic stroke and passed away on Sunday morning without having regained consciousness. Mr. Millard was seventy-one years of age and was born at Weymouth, England. When a lad he came out to this country, and for a number of years resided at Picton. For the past years Mr. Millard resided in Beleville. He was a member of Christ Church and a member of the I.O.F. Society. A widow and four daughter survive. The daughters are Mrs. J. D. Cockburn, of Sturgeon Falls, Mrs. S. D. Dorland of Calgary and Misses Ula and Irene at home. Mr. Millard's sudden demise was a great shock to the members of his family and the many friends in the city.

Belleville Nurse Given High Position

Miss Stella M. Jenkins, R.N., who was formerly a resident of Belleville, and has many friends here, has been appointed to an important position at Utica, N.Y., in charge of peace-time Red Cross activities. The Utica Globe refers to Nursing Sister Jenkins as follows:

The peace work of the Red Cross in Oneida county has been started, and the opening event was a luncheon given by Mrs. Beecher M. Crouse, at her home, 309 Genesee street, Thursday noon, at which Miss Stella M. Jenkins, R.N., was introduced to the heads of the various Red Cross branches of the county and other active Red Cross members, numbering sixty guests in all. Miss Jenkins is the executive secretary of the nursing activities of the Red Cross chapter.

Miss Jenkins graduated from St. Luke's Hospital and practiced her profession in this city. She left Utica, in January, 1916, to join the No. 7 Canadian General Hospital, Queen's, which mobilized at Kingston, sailing soon for England. There Miss Jenkins was for some time in Mrs. Astor's hospital on her estate at Cliveden.

She went to northern France with the same hospital unit and through three years of the war served in as dangerous and difficult places as any nurse has known. She knew what it was to evacuate a hospital as enemy forces advanced, to work while enemy airplanes dropped bombs from overhead. She did ward work and had charge of the diet kitchen at different periods of her service. For a time she was on the Swiss border with the Forester Hospital Corps, but at that time, the Swiss border was not a resting place, but one in constant danger.

Decorated by the King.

Miss Jenkins' service has not gone unrecognized. She was mentioned in Sir Douglas Haig's despatches in May, 1918. She is the possesor of the Royal Red Cross, First Class, decoration, which is equal to a D.S.C. She was decorated in Buckingham Palace by the King in June.

While she is adverse to talking of the things she experienced and asks for no praise for the work she has done, what little is known of her service tells those with any knowledge of the fighting front that her decoration was deserved. Since her return several months ago she has been nursing in a Canadian military hospital.

This is the opening gun of the Red Cross roll call through which everyone is to be asked to become a member or to renew his membership. Dr. T. Wood Clarke, who is chairman of the Nursing Activities Committee, outlined briefly, after the luncheon the work which this particular committee is to take up and which the membership money will support.

Work to be Done.

Unfinished war work among the men in service, work among the discharged soldiers who have not found their places since their return to civilian life, convalescent soldiers, emergency work as fire, flood or famine, traditional work of the Red Cross and home service work are all to be carried on besides these nursing activities which will include: The prevention of disease and improvement of public health; establishment of six months' nursing courses in high schools; health centres in every neighborhood where mothers may leave their babies while shopping, etc.

Tobacco Habit Dangerous

says Doctor Connor, formerly of Johns Hopkins Hospital. Thousands of men suffering from fatal diseases would be in perfect health to-day were it not for the deadly drug, Nicotine. Stop the habit now before it's too late. It's a simple process to rid yourself of the tobacco habit in any form. Just go to any up-to-date drug store and get some Nicotol tablets; take them as directed, and lo! the pernicious habit quickly vanishes. Druggists refund the money if they fail. Be sure to read large and interesting announcement by Doctor Connor soon to appear in this paper. It tells of the danger of nicotine poisoning, and how to avoid it. In the meantime try Nicotol tablets; you will be surprised at the result. (9)

RHEUMATIC FEVER

RHEUMATISM IN ITS MOST SEVERE FORM COMPLETELY OVERCOME

"From a water-mattress to a trip down town in two weeks is pretty good, don't you think!" said Mr. R. A. Watkins of 156 Ascot Ave., Toronto, the other day.

"Last April I contracted Rheumatic Fever. No medicine seemed to help me. From an invalid's chair to bed, from bed to a water-mattress in a few short weeks I went. I don't want to think how I suffered. My wife read your advt. in the paper one day, and we decided to try T.R.C.'s. Well, in two weeks I made that trip down town. It seems like a miracle. Now I'm back at my job again in the best of health, but we still use T.R.C.'s. Mrs. Watkins says for a headache there's nothing like them. Two T.R.C.'s seem to stop any headache that ever happens in our family."

T.R.C.'s are for Rheumatism. They are also for headaches. A headache is easy for T.R.C.'s. Try them. Ask your druggist. T.R.C.'s mailed anywhere for $1.04. (Templetons Ltd., 142 King W., Toronto). 45

"I don't understand your message, madame," he murmured. "I cannot have a voiture-en-galerie? But it is for the things you have allowed!"

"Not at all," she exclaimed. 'What the, do you suppose you will remove from my house, monsieur? You will take, 'what I have allowed?' But for that you need no voiture-en-galerie. My God!"

"Pray speak quietly," he implored; "See, there's the baby-carriage over there; and there's the box and bassinet Of course they must go on the roof; we can't put them inside."

"Never in life," she answered; "I have permitted you to take such things All is said; I will not talk with you, I will carefully watch what you take, be certain! Fetch you things down."

"Do you mean to say," muttered Ket with dry lips, "that you refuse at the last moment to let us take the child's bassinet?"

"I have never consented to it. You lie!"

"Good Lord!" he said. "Isn't Mademoiselle Garin at home? I want to see mademoiselle—where is she?"

"My daughter is out. No; you will not take the bassinet, and you will not take the perambulator. You will take what you can carry in the hand, and nothing else."

"The perambulator we must have," he insisted. "If you keep the bassinet you must let us have the perambulator The child's bedding and half its clothes are in it."

"Never!" she repeated and hugged herself determinedly.

"You have had my acknowledgment of the debt and then you repudiate the agreement," said Kent, trembling wtih passion. "It is very honest, such behavior!"

"Honest?" she echoed. "Ha! ha! ha! it was perhaps "honest" that you came here with your wife and your nurse to live in my house and eat at my table and do not pay me for it. You are a thief, monsieur—you are a rogue and a thief!"

His fingers twitched to smash some man in the face.

"And the box?" he gasped, fighting for the ground inch by inch. "Do you allow that "

"Never, never, never!" Unlike her daughter, she did not speak English, and her yellow teeth were clenched upon her furious 'nevers.' "Go and fetch your things, I say!'

He went up slowly with weak knees. Cynthia was standing in the middle of the room, pale and frightened. She had her hat on, and the baby, dressed for the street, was clasped in her arms.

"She won't let the luggage go," said Kent hoarsely. "God knows what's come to her—I don't! Perhaps she thinks we were trying to get more out than was arranged; but she swears now she promised nothing. Come on; it's no good waiting. There's a cab at the door; let's go. I'll bring the small things down."

"But—but what shall we do?" said the girl, with agitation. "Humphrey baby must have his things; it's impossible to do without them. Oh, this is awful!"

"Awful or not, we must put up with it. For Heaven's sake, let's get out of the damned place as quickly as we can! Where were the most important things put?"

"I don't know; they are everywhere" she declared tremulously. "I want the basket when we get in; but afterwards I want the box, and the bedding —I want everything of baby's. She must be a perfect wretch!"

He seized the basket and the handbag and they descended the stairs, the baby cryig loudly ad the tears dripping down the girl's cheeks as she strove ineffectually to hush it. Fortunately, the boarders had all gone to see the procession; but Madame Garin was still where Kent had left her, and Etienne, and the chambermaid, and the Italian waiter, suppressing a smile, stood watching about the hall. In an agony of shame that seemed as if it would suffocate her, Cynthia slunk past them to the cab, her head bent low over the child, and, the driver opening the door, fell rather than sank on to the seat. Kent made to follow her immediately, but this was not to be. Madame Garin, stopping him, demanded that he should display the contents of the bag; and then ensued a scene in which she was not a woman any longer, but a mouthing, shrieking harridan. Remonstrance was futile. Collars, stocking, handkerchiefs, slippers, were wrested from him piece by piece and flung upon the office floor, while she loaded him with invective,

Called By Death

MRS. WM. TEBWORTH

Death came suddenly this morning to Mrs. William Tebworth, a resident of New Toronto, and a former well known Belleville citizen. She is survived by her husband and one son and two daughters, all of whom reside in Toronto. Interment will take place in Toronto. Her many friends in Belleville will regret to learn of her sudden demise.

DEATH NOTICE

MILLARD—IN Belleville, Sunday, Nov. 23rd, 1919, Percy M. Millard, aged 71 years.

The funeral will take place from his late residence, 50 Everett street, on Tuesday, Nov. 25th at 2 o'clock. Services at Christ Church at 2.15. Interment Belleville cemetery.

INCREASE OF CRIME DUE TO DRUGS

HAMILTON, Nov. 24—Judge Emily Murphy gave a lecture in the First Methodist Church on "The Women's and Children's Court," telling of her work in that connection in Edmonton. She ascribed much of the crime to the drug habit, and said she hoped in the near future to start a crusade against drugs. She develped the apathy of the modern parent towards exisiting conditions which their children have to face, the deplorable housing conditions in slum and country districts, and the insidious campaign carried on by the white slave traffic

88th Anniversary Services At St. Andrews Presbyterian Church

INSPIRING DISCOURSES BY REV. HUGH T. KERR, D.D., OF PITTSBURG, PA.—LARGE CONGREGATIONS IN ATTENDANCE—SPECIAL MUSIC BY CHOIR.

The 88th Anniversary service of St. Andrews' Church in this city, was commemorated yesterday and large congregations were present especially in the evening. Rev. Hugh Kerr, D. D., Pastor of Shadyside Presbyterian Church of Pittsburg, Pennsylvania, and brother of Rev. A. S. Kerr, Pastor of St. Andrew's Church, was the preacher of the day and his discourses were of high order.

In the evening Dr. Kerr's text was from Acts 2nd chapter, 6th verse: "Now when this was noised abroad the multitude came together and were confounded because that every man heard them speak in his own tongue."

In his opening remarks the divine said he wondered if people had not missed the message in the story of the Penticost; rather that they were carried away with the spectacular aspect rather than the message it conveyed. It was a miracle and its message should not be missed. The apostle was impressed with the idea of all present hearing in their own tongue as he refers to it three times in the chapter. He (the speaker) was not so much interested in the miracle as in the message of Christ, which was emphatic.

The gospel of Jesus Christ was a thing to be understood and comprehended. Those present at penticost were interested in it, in its heavenborn reality.

A Wonderful Scene

It was a wonderful penticostal scene. They were there from various parts of the earth to hear the message. They were from the land of beauty and the land of theology. They were there from Egypt with the dead hand upon it. They were from all over and they understood. Men were there who were in the sway of imperialistic thought. The religion of the Lord Jesus Christ came to them intelligently. What a wonderful thing it was that at last religion was in touch with life in its reality. Saint Paul had to face great problems, but he was equal to the occasion. People would rather hear five words of intelligence than thousands of words which are not in touch of the reality. One of the charges against the pulpit might be that it is not in touch with the reality. It is out of touch with life. Religion has no relation with frozen formality. It is in touch with things that are a reality. Peter's message was on reality, it was in touch with life. He was explaining this wonderful happiness, the pouring out of the spirit of God on all flesh. He was explaining it in the modern light of the day.

God Over All

He explained that God was there. This that you see and hear is God; it is His hand; it is His heart. We know that God is moving behind all the overturning of national life. It is easy to see it in the past, but difficult to see it at the present time. It is difficult to see God behind some events. It was God that moved behind the allied armies and caused the German army to crumble. When we speak of God we are in touch with all nationalities. There is something sublime moving in the world at the present time. The time will come when all men will understand the message. How Peter tried to impress the message of God upon the minds of those he spoke to. When Peter touched the story of Christ's crucifixtion. He was dealing with a potent fact. Jesus Christ is the great historical fact, the great divine, the great fact of our life to-day is that Jesus Christ is alive. He is present at every organization no matter what its character is. He meets us at every turn in life and challenges us. To be in touch with Christ is to be in touch with reality. The soldier in France always understood His Name even when heaven and earth seemed to be bottled up. In Peter's sermon was the fact of humanity. When the human heart calls out in despair it is answered by the Lord Jesus Christ.

The Heart of Man

In Christ's life there were two or three things that stood out prominently and the greatest was the heart of man and the great reality. Peter proclaimed to the whole world the fact of Christ being able to satsify all He stands with the pierced hands at the door and knocks for admittance. If we open the door of our heart He will come in and sup with us. When we let Him in we have discovered life's reality.

During the service the choir rendered suitable selections and Miss Lobb sang a solo in a most acceptable manner.

Officers-Elect Of Provincial W.C.T.U.

GUELPH, Nov. 24.—The last item of business before the Ontario Women's Christian Temperance Union convention was the election of officers for the coming year.

The esteemed and energetic President of several years, Mrs. Hattie A. Stevens of Toronto, was re-elected for another term on the first ballot, and the election was immediately made unanimous amid applause. Mrs. Stevens is one of the stalwarts of the W.C.T.U. and one of the most active temperance workers in the Province, and her election as President for the seventh consecutive year is evidence of the appreciation felt for her efforts of the past. Mrs. S. G. E. McKee, North Bay, Honorary President and Mrs. May R. Thornley, London, Advisory President, were also re-elected. The other officers who were elected were as follows:

Vice-President, Mrs. W. Pugsley, Toronto; Corresponding Secretary, Mrs. W. T. G. Brown, Kingston; Recording Secretary, Miss Maude McKee, North Bay; Treasurer, Mrs. B. O. Britton, Gananoque; 'Y' Secretary Mrs. T. R. White, Chapleau; 'L.T.L.' Secretary, Mrs. A. R. Lancefield, Hamilton. Mrs. H. M. Detlor of North Bay, who has been Corresponding Secretary for eleven years, declined to accept office again.

MISS SPROULE'S SERVICE

One of the most interesting reports to be presented to the convention was submitted this morning by the veteran Superintendent of the missionary deparment, Miss Agnes Sproule of Fort William. For the last 25 years, Miss Sproule has done incalcuable service in the lumber camps and among the Indians in Northern Ontario where she has endured the greatest of hardships in her Christian work. During the last year, notwithstanding the fact that Miss Sproule was among the sufferers in the 'flu' epidemic for many weeks, she did more travelling and addressed more meetings than in any previous year of her service.

From November 1, 1918, to November 1, 1919, Miss Sproule visited 95 places and 132 schools, with a attendance of 8,260 in the northern part of the Province. She gave 287 addresses and in addition spoke to 52 Women's Institutes and 79 public services, making a total of 418 addresses. In doing this she travelled 4,471 miles by rail, waggon, sleigh and buggy, and walked 254 miles, in order to reach the outposts, making a total of 5,500 miles.

Sample box free if you mention this paper and enclose 2c. stamp to pay postage.

SALARY RAISED

As an appreciation of the great work being done by Miss Sproule, the convention unanimously decided to increase her salary $200 a year.

Reports were received from Mrs. Straith on the work that is being done among the colored people and Mrs. Gray and Mrs. Jones of Toronto in teaching temperance in the Sunday schools.

EXTENSION OF WORK

Mrs. Bigelow of Cornwall, one of the Field Organizers, gave an interesting account of her work during the year. She organized 17 new unions, added many new members and delivered 303 addresses.

The convention accepted an invitation from the Smith's Falls Union to hold the 1920 convention in that place.

It was decided unanimously to send the President, Mrs. E. A. Stevens to the World's W.C.T.U. convention at London, England, next April, at the expense of the Provincial Union.

A public meeting was held in the evening when Rev. C. T. Scott of Belleville was the principal speaker.

SUPPLY OF SOFT COAL FOR CANADA

NEW YORK, Nov. 24—The Central Fuel Committee of the United States contemplates issuing an order that two days' output of the non-union bituminous coal mines in this country, which are being operatated despite the strike, be released to Canada and the western States.

This it is believed, will temporarily ease the situation in the Dominion.

Mr. C. A. Magrath, Dominion Fuel Controller, has been active at Washington during the last week, and this reported concession is doubtless due to his efforts.

THE MEN BEHIND THE VICTORY LOAN GUN.

Canada's capacity for achievement is getting beyond the wonder stage. The world has been astonished into fervent admiration for Canada and Canadians as the result of the war efforts of this young nation in man-power, production and finance. The recent Victory Loan campaign has been another eye-opener for pessimists the world over who imagined that Canadians had nearly exhausted their financial resources in the heavy calls previously made as the result of the stupendous demands of the great war. The objective of three hundred million dollars set for Canada's last great Victory Loan has been more than doubled and the final figures will probably show a grand total of seven hundred millions which the people of Canada in supreme confidence, loyalty and pride of country have loaned to the Government to provide funds for Canada's great undertakings in reconstruction and development. The Province of Ontario has again demonstrated its proud position as the banner province of the Dominion by subscribing more than half of the magnificent total rolled up. Citizens of Belleville are especially proud of the local showing, more than one million dollars having been subscribed in this city alone, while Hastings County as a whole has surpassed all previous efforts.

The splendid showing of Belleville and Hastings County can only be ascribed to the prosperity, loyalty and confidence of the people, but the magnificent result would have been impossible without the organization charged with the task of directing the campaign. Every man on the staff was a picked man fully competent to make the best of his part of the general campaign and to this the success of the entire local campaign is due. Belleville citizens who took an active part in the campaign are too well known to need comment, but a word or two about the Toronto gentlemen at the head of the local organization will not be amiss.

Mr. E. B. Thompson, Divisional Organizer, is a live wire, with an ability to choose clever associates and map out the general campaign in an efficient manner.

Mr. W. B. Evans, District Organizer, has become so well known here that he could easily qualify as a permanent citizen, and he certainly would be a welcome and valuable acquisition to the business world of Belleville could he be induced to locate here permanently. Mr. Evans, sitting at the receipt of customs, as it were, had a difficult task in providing solutions for the many knotty problems of the campaign and keeping the machinery running smoothly. Friction speedily disappeared in his genial presence and his happy smile and speedy but fair decisions always speeded up fading enthusiasm. As the boys would say, W. B. Evans is "a regular fellow" and he has a host of friends in Belleville, and nary an enemy.

Capt. Andrews, director of publicity, is a newcomer in the local field, this being his first Victory Loan campaign, for the very good reason that in previous years he was serving King and Country overseas. Capt. Andrews is one o fthose quiet but efficient chaps with a huge fund of reserve energy carefully concealed behind his modest exterior ready for use when opportunity affords. Capt. Andrews is a newspaper man by inclination and a financial expert by adoption and in this campaign has very successfully combined his varied talents in an effort to prove that the pen is mightier than the sword, and he did his bit in the Victory Loan campaign just as enthusiastically as he did his bit overseas fighting the Hun to preserve Canada's prosperity, protect the Empire from disruption and save the world from the slavery of Hun Kultur. Capt. Andrew's has made many friends in Belleville and Hastings County and is a true type of the highest quality of young Canadian manhood. He may be sure of a warm welcome here any time.

Chairman Deacon, Vice-Chairman Matthews, Secretary Ackerman, and all down the line of team captains, canvassers, speakers and entertainers, the organization was complete and perfect and worthy of all possible praise.

RAILWAY OWNERSHIP.

Hon. T. A. Crerar at Moose Jaw said that Government ownership of railways would not be more costly than private ownership had been, adding that the Canadian Pacific Railway had received many millions as a gift. Under the conditions that prevailed when the C.P.R. was undertaken, the company which faced the undoubted risks deserved something, and public men, we think, should not be eternally "rubbing it in" that the first transcontinental is the creation of a charity bazaar. If this country helped the C. P. R. that great organization has given in return all that it could in loyalty and service. Its efficiency and business success has been Canada's greatest advertisement throughout the world.

It must not be forgotten, however, that Canadian Pacific revenues were contributed by the people in much the same way as they will be paid to the Canadian National Railway system in transportation charges. Whatever balance the books may show, value more or less sufficient has been given the people in service, and all is not loss, though one may depned upon it that operating deficiencies will be heralded abroad, vigorously, well and truly, as an object lesson to other nations should their tendencies incline toward public ownership.

However much we may have committed ourselves to our nationally-owned railway undertaking, surely we can refrain from knocking the Canadian Pacific Railway, the greatest success among the country's privately owned institutions.—Ottawa Journal.

OTHER VIEWS

The Gratuity Question.
Hamilton Herald

Hon. Mr. Fielding's paper, the Montreal Journal of Commerce, evidently does not approve of the attempt of the opposition at Ottawa to make political capital out of the soldiers' gratuity question. "There will," it says, "be little ground for objection to the substance of the conclusion reached by the committee and confirmed by the House of Commons. The reasons given against the granting of the cash gratuities are in the main good reasons, which will commend themselves to the public."

The True British Ring.
Edmonton Journal.

Lord Milner has been regarded as typifying the spirit of British imperialism more than any other man prominent in British public life. His protest against the "bombast of drum and trumpet imperialism" should have particular heed paid to it. There are some who have prejudiced the cause of Empire by adopting the methods in its behalf to which Lord Milner refers. They are friends of the kind from which we should pray to be delivered. But those who in a matter-of-fact way consider what the Empire stands for in promoting peace and justice should not allow themselves to be prejudiced by the cheap rhetoric to which, in some quarters, it gives rise.

Eastern Ontario Power.
Toronto Teelgram.

Eastern Ontario municipalities must temporarily accept $40 horsepower and $60 horsepower as the penalty of their misplaced faith in the private ownership principles of Sir Wilfrid Laurier and Hon. G. P. Graham. The Hydro municipalities buy $15, $20 and $30 per h.p. electricity as the reward of their well-placed faith in the public ownership policies of Sir James Whitney and Sir Adam Beck. Corporationist Liberals in Brockville, Belleville, and other eastern Ontario municipalities have only to keep their hands off Adam Beck's proposals all through eastern Ontario. Then Eastern Ontario will blossom as the rose with electricity as cheap or cheaper than the Niagara power supplied to the western Ontario municipalities. Eastern Ontario cut its own throat with knives sharpened for the slaughter of cheap electricity by the Seymour Power policies of Sir Wilfrid and Hon. G. P. Graham.

The Poet's Corner

THE VILLAGE WAR MEMORIAL

Beyond the sound of city's rush and roar,
A little hamlet led its peaceful life;
Its lusty manhood roamed its meadows o'er
In happy ignorance of the coming strife.

Where are they now, those hardy sons of toil,
Who left their homesteads for their country's sake
Sleeping awhile beneath a foreign soil,
Until the Great Reveille sounds 'Awake!'

No more shall they their fruitful acres plough,
Or tend the lush, green pastures o' the vale;
No more at eve frequent 'The Barley Mow'
For cheery gossip o'er a glass of ale.

Their teeming flocks they ne'er again will fold,
That grazed at will upon the breezy hills;
Or call the cattle from the trackless wold,
To stall them safe from winter's cruel chills.

Nothing seems changed. There stands the village green,
Whereon in boyhood they were wont to play;
The little church still nestles in the dene
Where in their tender years they learned to pray.

And yet, beside the parting of the ways,
A simple cross of stone now rears its head,
Crowned by the sculptor with immortal bays,
In honor of the noble spirits fled.

And oft, when day is fading into night,
The sorrowing peasants to the shrine repair,
And, resting in the gloaming's mellow light,
For those they've lost send up a

Wild of eye he burst into the barber shop.

"You remember selling me some patent hair restorer last week, you hoary-headed old swindler?" he roared angrily. "Swore it would restore my head to its original state, didn't you?"

"And didn't it?" asked the barber, as he calmly went on shaving another customer.

"Didn't it?" snorted the enraged man. "You obtained my money under false pretences. Why, it even removed the little hair I had left, and now I'm as bald as the pavement!"

"Then there's no false pretence about that," said the barber. "I said it would restore your head to its original state, and you know, sir, most of us are born bald!"

Engineer Gives Out The Facts

Thomas Jennings Makes An Actual Gain of Seventeen Pounds.

"The best proof I can give that Tanlac was the right thing for me is the way it has relieved my suffering and built me up," said Thomas Jennings, the well known transfer engineer, employed at the Rock Island railroad shops, living at 501 C Avenue, North, Cedar Rapids, Iowa, while discussing the medicine recently.

"At the time I began taking Tanlac," he continued, "I weighed only one hundred and twenty pounds, but I now balance the scales at one hundred and thirty-seven, making an actual gain of seventeen pounds, all from the use of five bottles of the medicine. I was suffering from a bad case of stomach trouble and general run down condition, and the results of a severe spell of typhoid fever last Fall. In fact, for about two years I had been suffering from gas on my stomach and pains all through my body. I could not eat without suffering from indigestion afterwards and I had lost weight until I was almost a living skeleton. I had gotten to the point where I could hardly keep going.

"Seeing Tanlac so highly endorsed I got a bottle and had not taken but a few doses until there was a decided change in my feelings. I have taken five bottles now and am simply feeling like a brand new man. My pains have all left me and I can eat just anything I want without the least trouble with my stomach, I am feeling just fine and no one could see the wonderful change Tanlac has made in me and doubt it being a great medicine. If I ever need medicine again I will certainly get Tanlac for I know now what it will do. I am telling all my friends about it and gladly recommend it to anyone who wants the best."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto, by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Madoc by J. Will Vizze, in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell, and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely.

BOYS STOLE PIGEONS

Friday was pigeon day at the police court in Peterboro. About sixty pigeons were reported missing and there are some twenty-four to be located yet. Three boys appeared before Magistrate Dumble charged with stealing fancy pigeons from a home on Edinburgh street. Two others were charged with receiving these, knowing them to have been stolen. All pleaded guilty and the case was dismissed on the parents of the boys making restitution for four birds that were dead and four more that were missing, and paying the costs of the court.

FINE CONSOLIDATED SCHOOL

The Department of Education has approved of plans for the erection of a consolidated school at Mallorytown the first in Eastern Ontario and one of the finest in the entire province to be built under the provisions of the Consolidated School Act. It will be equipped with modern appliances in every particular and will combine architectural beauty with a splendid situation and extreme practicability. Government assistance to the amount of $8,000 is expected and work will be started on the building early next spring. The opening of the school in the fall of 1920 will mean the elimination of three schools in the township of Yonge and one in the township of Escott. The site purchased comprises six acres and will be laid out in play grounds, garden plots, etc.

STOLE A WHEEL

A lad named Jack Kiser, on Saturday left his bicycle for a few minutes outside of a business place on Front street and when he came out it was gone. Subsequently the wheel was recovered having been taken by another boy who endeavored to dispose of it. The boy taking it has been summoned to appear in Children's Court on a charge of theft.

NEW A.D.D.S.

Captain D. D. Wilson, C.A.D.C., has been appointed to succeed Major C. F. Walt, as Assistant Director of Dental Services for this district and has taken up his duties at Kingston headquarters. Prior to his leaving, owing to ill-health, Major Walt, was waited upon by the officers of the staff and was presented with a handsome cabinet of silver, by Major Simpson, on behalf of the officers. Major Walt was completely taken by surprise, but in a few well-chosen words, replied to the addresses of presentation, thanking his donors for their kind remembrance and promising that he would carry away with him only happy recollections of his time spent as A.D.D.S. Capt. Wilson, the new A.D.D.S., is one of the most popular officers of the corps. He served overseas, and returned about a year ago, being attached to the Dental Corps at the Barriefield Hutments for a time. He is a brother of Lt.-Col. J. M. Wilson former A.D.D.S. at Kingston who left his post two years ago to go overseas and also to Lt.-Col. H. R. Wilson, former D.A.A. and Q.M.G. for this district. All three officers resided in Belleville.

Trenton Honors Soldier Heroes

On Saturday at Trenton the soldiers' memorial provided by the Daughters of the Empire, was unveiled with appropriate ceremony. The memorial consists of handsome granite pillars standing in the I.O.D.E. park. Mayor Ireland unveiled the memorial to Trenton's brave and honored dead. A letter from the Prince of Wales was read and addresses were given by Rev. Capt. Clarke, Rev. Major Frost, Lt.-Col. Dr. Kidd, Lt.-Col. Bywater, Rev. Canon F. W. Armstrong, Rev. R. A. Cranston, Mrs. G. A. White.

On Sunday a commemoration service was held in Wesley Methodist Church at which a memorial tablet was unveiled to the memory of the nineteen members of the church who laid down their lives for the Empire on the battlefields of Flanders. The tablet was unveiled by Major-General V. A. S. Williams, O.C. No. 3 District, who gave a very interesting address. This gallant officer went overseas at the beginning of hostilities and rendered very valuable services in England and France. An extensive mining operation of the Boche led to his capture when a considerable body of Canadians on the front line were cut off. General Williams and General Mercer were captured only after being desperately wounded in a gallant fight against heavy odds. General Mercer died, and General Williams, with a hole through his head recovered and is now in command of this military district, succeeding General Hemming.

Rev. Capt. Clarke, pastor of the church, served overseas.

HARVARD WON FROM YALE

Before a crowd of fifty thousand at Cambridge Harvard defeated Yale in their football classic by 10 to 3. Harvard won through her superiority in aerial attack, as represented in forward passes, one of which put her in position for a field goal by Ralph Horween, and another leading directly to a touchdown by Casey that gave wearers of the crimson a clean cut victory. Harvard scored all her points in the first half. In the fourth period Braden's field goal saved Yale from a shutout. Yale was prevented from scoring after a brilliant rush down the field by Harvard's powerful stand on the half-yard line.

Lawyer Guilty Of Breach Of O.T.A.

Peterborough Man Fined Five Hundred Dollars for Operating a Still.

PETERBOROUGH, Nov. 24.—In the police court on Saturday J. Guise Bagley, a local lawyer, was fined $500 on a charge of having liquor in his possession contrary to the inland revenue act. On two other charges, one of operating a still and the other of keeping liquor for sale, the accused was committed for trial. Mr. F. D. Kerr, conducted the defence and Crown Attorney Hatton represented the crown. Bagley pleaded guilty to the above charges. The prosecution sprung a surprise when it presented a new charge, accusing the prisoner of having performed a criminal operation on Mrs. Jennie Smith, McDonald. The prisoner did not plead and was remanded.

London Trainman Instantly Killed

Falls Between Cars of Eastbound Freight at Puslinch.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 23—James Carroll, of 709 Princess Avenue, London, fell between the cars of an eastbound C. P. R. freight train at Puslinch during the night and was instantly killed.

Carroll left London on his run last evening, and between 2 and 3 o'clock return from the front end of the train to the caboose to eat his breakfast. Having finished, he started out again over the tops of the cars for the front end. He was not missed by the other members of the crew until Guelph Junction was reached.

Officials at London were notified and gave instructions to have the locomotive cut off and sent back in search of Carroll. His body was found badly mangled on the tracks at Puslinch.

Carroll, who had been in the employ of the C P. R. for some years, is survived by his widow and two children.

Says 4,000 Cases Of Smallpox In Ontario

BUFFALO, Nov. 24.—A serious outbreak of smallpox prevails in Ontario, states Health Commissioner Fronczak, of this city, and state and local health authorities have asked the United States Surgeon-General to enforce stringent regulations at all ports of entry. A representative of the chief federal health officer has been sent to Toronto to investigate.

There are four thousand cases of the disease in Ontario and about 2,000 in Toronto alone, according to information received by Dr. Fronczak, who made the announcement in an address to the Chamber of Commerce, in which he appealed for co-operation to prevent a spread of the contagion.

Many New Cases in Toronto.

Toronto, Nov. 22.—According to the official reports of the Civic Department of Health, there are 539 cases of smallpox under treatment in Toronto today, including 31 new cases reported during the last 24 hours. There are 1,552 persons quarantined as the result of exposure to the disease. No deaths have been reported. There has been wholselae vaccination in schools and public buildings, and on Wednesday night a mass meeting was held in Massey Hall to protest against the order of the local medical officer of health for the vaccination of school children.

NON-JURY SITTINGS HIGH COURT OF JUSTICE

SEVERAL INTERESTING CASES COME BEFORE HON. CHIEF JUSTICE SIR GLENHOLME FALCONBRIDGE.

J. E. Walmsley Company vs. J. Ed. Shorey.

At the opening of the Non-Jury Assizes yesterday afternoon before The Honorable Chief Justice Sir Glenholme Falconbridge, Chief Justice of the King's Bench, this case was by consent referred to the Local Master, Col. S. S. Lazier for for adjudication and final judgment. The Plaintiff's claim the sum of $3669.00 and interest for goods sold to the Defendant and balance of a promissory note made by the Defendant. The Defendant states that while he may be indebted to the Plaintiffs the sum claimed by them is not the exact amount owing and also claims that included in the amount claimed by the Plaintiff is a liability of a third party. The Local Master will now take accounts and ascertain the amount owing to the Plaintiffs. W. N. Ponton for Plaintiffs; E. J. Butler for Defendant.

$65,000 SUIT

The case of the Ontario & Quebec Navigation Company against Chapman and nine other defendants for $65,000 was the first case on the non-jury list Monday before Chief Justice Sir Glenholme Falconbridge. It arose out of the amalgamation of the old Ontario & Quebec Navigation Co., and the Quinte Navigation Co. The plaintiff sued on an alleged agreement by which the individual shareholders of the Quinte Navigation Co. are claimed to be liable for $65,000. After the case was started W. C. Mikel, K.C., acting for the defendant, took objection that the agreement sued on was not properly proved and after hearing evidence for two hours the case was adjourned to Thursday morning to enable plaintiff to produce further evidence in support of the agreement. E. Guss Porter, K.C., and E. J. Butler for plaintiff; W. C. Mikel, K.C., and J. A. Jackson for defendants.

More Smallpox Cases Reported At Toronto

Increase Over Previous Days—1,663 Persons Under Quarantine.

TORONTO, Nov. 24—Forty-two cases smallpox were reported Saturday morning for the previous 24 hours, as compared with 31 Friday morning and 23 on Thursday.

The report issued Saturday morning is as follows:

Forty-two new cases of smallpox were reported in the past 24 hours, and 156 persons placed under quarantine.

New Cases

Cases reported in past 24 hours	42
Cases sent to hospital	2
New cases quarantined at home	40
Exposed persons quarantined	156
Patients discharged	18

Grand Totals

Total number of cases in hispital	28
Total number of cases in homes	491
Total number of cases reported in city	581
Total number of cases discharged	69
Total number of homes under quarantine	439
Total number of individuals under quarantine	1663

"The epidemic will gradually die out now," said Dr. Hastings, Medical Officer of Health. "I have no doubt that the worst is over. The number of cases from day to day now will vary and one cannot say how long it will be before they all disappear. As in all epidemics there will be a smouldering of smallpox for some little time among those who are not protected by vaccination, as they are in just as much danger now as they ever were."

Truth Stranger Than The Movies

Plot to Have Romeo Drink Juliet's Blood as Nuptial Bond.

SAULT STE MARIE, Ont., Nov. 25—One of the most sensational love stories that have ever came before the local authorities was that in which Felica Riga was the medium of the lovers, as explained before Judge Stone in the District Criminal Court. Riga was charged with house breaking on the night of November 11, when he is said to have entered the home of James Aiello, of James street, who is a married man and the father of a handsome daughter, with dark complexion and sparkling eyes. Mrs. Aiello, it transpired from evidence of accused, desired the marriage of her daughter, to one Fillipo Leido, jitney driver; but how to establish the bond of love between the two former citizens of Southern Italy seemed to be a problem. At last Riga was brought in as a happy medium, and it was arranged that the bond of love should be that the jitney-driver should drink some of the blood taken from the arm of the girl and they would be deemed man and wife. Eventually the blood was drawn from the girl's arm and placed in a glass tumbler, and this was to be placed in a drink, which was to be given the jitney-driver. Riga was informed as to where the glass could be found, and on the night of November 11, the anniversary of the Armistice Day, he proceeded with his escapade to assist the two lovers and entered an upstair room from the roof of an adjoining building, on the roof of which he left his boots so as not to make any noise. Unfortunately he awakened the girl's father, and the housebreaking charge resulted.

Mother and daughter denied his story in court, but an examination of the girl's arm showed a new scar, and the judge decided to free the accused.

BLOWING OIL BUBBLES IN DREAM CITY.

Two years ago, the little humdrum Texas town of Wichita Falls was drying up after years of drought. Today it is a dream city with water and oil, and money and plenty of big automobiles. Plain, quiet citizens—shop girls and farmers—barbers and porters—have found their income roaring up into thousands of dollars a day. But it is a town of violent contrasts, where hard luck rubs elbows with incredible prosperity. It's a boom town—the end of the rainbow—and thoroughly well oiled. Oil is the sole topic of conversation in Wichita Falls—and it is making a new crop of millionaires as well as keeping many folks busy throwing their dollars down dry wells.

For nearly a year Wichita Falls has been a point of convergence for all sorts of people from all sorts of places arriving by train or by automobiles or creaking into town in the old fashioned prairie schooner packed with bedding and babies, and with the inevitable mongrel dog doing rear-guard duty in the dust abaft the tail gate. A year ago it was a nice little town of 18,000 inhabitants—a year from now it will probably be a healthy young city of more than 50,000. Right now it is confused by the sudden intake of a meal of inhabitants that it has yet had no time to digest. The curbs are jammed with high-priced and high-class motor cars, with as many as seventy-two parked on an average block. Times Square, at Forty-Second street, after the theatres are out is no more crowded than are the down-town streets at all hours of the day.

Wichita Falls taxis have no taximeters, and no body cares. Money is the cheapest thing on earth out there—to those who have it—and fifteen minutes ago is ancient history. With an oil drill close to the sand that will mean a great gusher or a dry hole, nobody cares what it costs to get a repair part quick. Men cheerfully pay $250 for an automobile to get them from the oilfields to Wichita Falls to buy new drills or to bring men to make necessary repairs.

One garage has been operating a fleet of six Studebakers since early in the year, twenty-four hours a day.

Action Against G.T.R. For $52,000 Dismissed

Relatives of Dead Motorists Killed at Bowmanville Lose.

Relatives of the five dead motorists killed in a level crossing accident at Bowmanville on August 11, 117, who made claims aggregating $52,000 against the Grand Trunk Railway Co. had their action dismissed without costs by Mr. Justice Rose.

The auto in which the motorists met their death had been blocked by a freight train. After a few minutes waiting the trainmen split the freight train and as the auto proceeded through the gap it was struck by an express passenger train travelling on the far track. Five of the occupants of the car, William Johnston, J. J. Connolly, J. H. Fletcher, Mrs. Florence Walker and J. P. Normoyle, were killed, and their relatives entered claims for $10,000 each, alleging that the opening of the freight train had been an invitation for them to proceed.

Their counsel, Mr. J. R. Roaf, also sought to prove that on account of the number of accidents which had previously occurred there, the crossing was a dangerous one, but Mr. Justice Rose upheld the objection of Mr. I. F. Hellmuth, K.C., that such evidence was not relevant.

Liberty Meeting Angered Veterans

The Defence of Foreigners Caused an Outbreak Against Them.

TORONTO, Nov. 25.—Proof that there are still widely divergent views entertained in the city as to the foreign element was furnished at the 'Liberty' meeting at Massey Hall on Saturday when a large number of people gathered to protest against orders-in-Council the imprisonment of political offenders and the recent amendments to the Immigration Laws which make it possible for suspects other than Canadianized citizens to be deported upon short notice. It was during the discussion of the Immigration Laws that a number of speakers pictured certain imprisoned foreigners as being in the prosecuted class, and while they were being patted upon the back as innocent and 'ground down by tyranny' a returned soldier in the audience interrupted the speaker, who happened to be Mr. John W. Bruce and wanted to know whether or not Mr. Bruce was not in favor of deporting 'the foreigners who were largely responsible for the strike in Winnipeg and who had caused much trouble in the East." While Mr. Bruce seemed willing to answer the question, the audience gave him but little opportunity, as they tried to howl down the veteran. This immediately split the audience into two factions of which the veterans were one, and for some time the meeting was a noisy and threatening one. Persistent shouting from the audience for the veteran to sit down, followed by 'Throw him out,' and the reply that somebody 'wasn't man enough to' developed an unpleasant few minutes, which was only turned into a more peaceful tone when a man wearing a returned button and very evidently a foreigner, rushed to the platform and harangued the returned soldiers in the audience. He declared he was a true Toronto citizen, that he had served overseas, and he assured the meeting that 'nothing can be gained by mob-violence.' Many women in the audience developed nervousness and left hastily and when peace has been restored the meeting carried on for a quarter of an hour or so.

HELD DEMONSTRATION

Immediately the gathering left the Hall, a large number of men, the bulk of whom were wearing veteran buttons gathered outside on Shuter St. marched in a body to Yonge St., shouting 'Down with Bolshevism.' Great Great crowds of down town wanderers scenting possible trouble, gathered on the scene and within a half an hour Yonge Street was the centre of a gathering of many thousands. The paraders left the sidewalk, took the street pavement, but after a few minutes of marching up and down Yonge, a squad of police appeared on the scene and shortly afterwards the paraders dispersed and that was the end of it.

The meeting in Massey Hall, which was booked as an appeal to the 'Lovers of Liberty from all walks of life' to urge upon the Dominion Government 'the' necessity for returning to normal

Another Tragedy In Hamilton

HAMILTON, Nov. 25—Hariton Semonvitch, a foreign boarding-house boss, 187 Hess street north, was arrested at an early hour yesterday morning on a charge of murdering John Rapchinsk. Both are Russians. The accused notified the police of the crime at 11 o'clock Sunday night, when clad only in his underclothing, he rushed into the police station and reported that there was trouble in his house. When the police arrived they found Rapchinski lying in a pool of blood with his head split open. He was taken to the City Hospital, where he lived only a short time.

The prisoner's story is that one of his boarders came in the worse of liquor and refused to keep quiet. The prisoner slapped him in the face and the boarder went out and returned with some friends. The prisoner says he thought the boarder and his friends were going to attack him, so he went out, got and axe, and struck the boarder. The prisoner was remanded in the Police Court for a week. Coroner Rennie has ordered an inquest.

Rescued Captain Afloat 20 Hours

Steamer Franz Found Him on Top of Pilot House in Almost Uncnscious State.

PORT ARTHUR, Ont., Nov. 25—Captain Neal of the steamer Myron, which foundered off White Fish Pt., was picked up by the steamer W. C. Franz, Captain W. C. Jordan, which arrived here yesterday afternoon.

The rescue was made off Parisian Island, 20 miles from the scene of the disaster. The captain had been floating on top of the pilot house for 20 hours and was in a very exhausted condition. Captain Jordan saw the almost unconscious man move his hand. He sent out boats and took him aboard and he is now in bed receiving medical attention. He is not frost-bitten but is in a bad state. No other members of the shipwrecked crew were seen. Captain Neal reports that another boat passed close to him and that on asking for help, the reply was:

"I'll send you a tug."

Captain Neal names the steamer which passed him, refusing to answer his appeal for help before the Franz arrived. He says it could easily have picked him up.

May Have Saved Some of Wrecked Crew

Sault Ste Marie, Mich., Nov. 25—Search of the waters about the Parisian Islands was undertaken late yesterday by United States submarine chaser 438, and the tug Iowa, in the hope of locating survivors of the crew of the Myron, which foundered off White Fish Point in the northwest gale of Saturday and yesterday. No reports reached here of the finding of any bodies.

News from Fort William, Ont., by way of Duluth, that Capt. Walter R. Neal of the Myron had been picked up by the steamer Franz and taken to that port, aroused new hopes for the safety of the others of the crew of seventeen. Many ships were driven to shelter in White Fish Bay by the terrific storm, and marine men believe they have picked up survivors from small boats or rafts.

Coast guards patrolled both sides of the point today and found the shores strewn with the wreckage and lumber cargoes of the Myron and Miztec. Little hope is held out, however, that bodies would wash ashore unless lashed to wreckage, as the cold lake waters prevent forming of gases, and, it is claimed, bodies seldom rise to the surface. It is traditional that "Lake Superior seldom gives up its dead."

Three Are Killed, Another May Die

Awful Tragedy Near Regina; Man and Wife Shot by Friend of Family.

REGINA, Sask., Nov. 25—Mr. and Mrs. Fred Hanson were shot dead in their home between Lemberg and Abernethy, about 3.30 Sunday morning by J. R. Sullivan, a grain buyer of Lemberg, according to reports which have reached the Provincial Police. Their oldest boy lies between life and death with a bullet wound in his neck and Sullivan is dead by his own act.

Details of the crime are to the effect that the Hansons visited Lemberg Saturday evening and invited Sullivan, who was a friend of the family, to spend Sunday with them. Arriving at their home, Sullivan went to the barn to help his host with the chores and returned to the house, saying that Hanson had been killed by a horse. Mrs. Hanson went to the barn with her son, Alfred, eighteen years of age, and entering was at once shot dead by Sullivan. The boy took refuge in a manger, but was dragged out by Sullivan, who ordered him to get off the place. Neighbors later found Sullivan lying dead on the floor with a bullet in his temple.

Building Up Belleville By Progressive Methods

BOARD OF TRADE EXPANSION CAMPAIGN GOING WITH A SWING—STRONG CIVIC SPIRIT OF PROGRESS MANIFESTED—CITIZENS GETTING TOGETHER IN PROGRESSIVE POLICY OF DEVELOPMENT.

Mr. Hanley, secretary of the Retail Merchants Association, has invited the retail merchants of Belleville to a meeting in the City Hall at eight o'clock this evening to discuss the relationship of the retail merchants to the Reorganization and Expansion Campaign of the Board of Trade.

Mr. Crosby, of the Board of Trade Campaign Headquarters Staff, gave an interesting address before the Teachers Association yesterday afternoon at Queen Alexandra School upon the subject of progressive citizenship. The address was very much appreciated and resolutions of approval were passed.

Requests for reservations at the Civic Dinner to be held at the Hotel Quinte Friday evening are coming in very fast and as the accommodation is limited to two hundred the tickets will be soon taken up. The outstanding feature of the Civic Dinner will be the address of Mr. Allen D. Albert of Chicago, former President of the International Rotary. Mr. Albert is an eloquent and inspiring speaker with a great fund of experience of the successful development of cities along the most modern and progressive lines and his address will be an educational treat. Rotary Clubs, all over the continent, are noted for their progressive civic spirit and record of achievement and the visit of Mr. Albert to Belleville will be one of the red letter events of the Board of Trade Expansion Campaign.

Mr. D. R. Leavens, of Miami, Florida, a former well-known citizen of Belleville, who is in the city at present, is very much interested in the Board of Trade campaign, and from his experience with progressive communities of the United States says that the Belleville campaign is based upon the right lines and is sure to yield splendid results. Mr. and Mrs. Leavens have booked passage on a Ward Line steamer sailing from New York for their return to the South in the near future. Mr. Leavens retains extensive business interests in Belleville, and while in the city is doing all he can to assist the Expansion Campaign of the Board of Trade.

Find Body Of Child Missing Six Weeks

Police Now on Trail of Suspected Murderer of U. S. "Perfect Baby."

HAMMONTOWN, N.J., Nov. 25—The search for Billy Danzy, two and a half years old "perfect baby," who disappeared from his home here on October 8, was changed Saturday to a hunt for his slayer.

The boy's naked skeleton was found by a hunter, in a swamp three miles south of the home of his father, Hercules Danzey. His clothes were scattered about the vicinity.

It was obviously impossible for the boy to have wandered this far from his home alone, as the route he must have followed crossed several high fences.

DRASTIC REDUCTIONS IN PASSENGER SERVICE AUTHORIZED BY RAILWAY WAR BOARD ON ACCOUNT OF SOFT COAL SHORTAGE.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

MONTREAL, Nov. 25.—As anticipated, drastic reductions in passenger and possibly freight service on the Canadian railways on account of shortage of coal, were officially announced today as the result of meetings of railway officials to consider conditions following the coal strike in the United States. These reductions, so far as announced by the Canadian Railway War Board and Grand Trunk Railway, will chiefly affect the C. N. R. and Grand Trunk for the time being, with the possibility that other railways may later on be affected. The reductions will go into effect Saturday next.

"Mickey" Back Again Saucy As Ever

Merry Madcap Mickey Attracts Large Audience.

Mickey, pretty Mickey, with her hair of raven hue, entertained a large and well-pleased audience at Griffin's Theatre last evening following a matinee which was well attended. "Mickey" who has been romping on the screen for four solid months at the Grand Opera House, Toronto, since its last exhibition here, is truly a story of the wildwood, if a mining camp in the foot hills can be thus described. The little heroine is a wild rose of the great outdoors, her only bringing-up being by Minnie, the stolid old Indian squaw besides her foster father, Joe, the miner. Mickey, brought up in boy's clothes and few at that, is a wild hoyden with a heart of gold and her transplanting to the social whirl of the effete East is followed by startling results. Of thrills there are many in "Mickey," with a death-scraping race between an automobile and an express train, the auto twice crossing in front of the flying express with just margin enough to clear the crossing with the locomotive brushing the enamel of the back of the machine. Then there is the great horse race with "Mickey" as the jockey, which is very realistic and exciting, for Mickey wins the race and saves her lover from financial ruin Then, too, Mickey has startling adventures in tall trees, slides down a steep and high roof and is rescued only as she hangs suspended in the air with death or injury many feet below. The contrasts are startling from the rough mining camp with its sourdoughs, tenderfeet and squaw men, its gunmen shooting up the town for sport and society only a name, to the palaces of the rich in the East and the gorgeous dresses and courtly manners of the four hundred, which is a far cry but Mickey manages it in a way and her way is very funny. Joe and Minnie also come to the East and venture into society but fail to penetrate beyond the outer cordon where the password is wealth and the regalia is full-dress. Mickey is all to the good and is as clean and wholesome as the breath from a pine forest—it is a tonic for tired nerves and an inspiration for merriment for Mickey is funny at all times and her life is all sunshine with only an occasional shadow of very short duration, such as the possibility of a deserved whipping by Joe, her foster father or the bumps she receives in being thrown from the race horse after she had won the race. A funny 2-reel Sunshine comedy and a 2-reel Western story adds splendid variety to the bill The management sprang a pleasant surprise on their patrons by the introduction of two vocalists, Blair Evers who acceptably rendered two popular selections and Frank Smith, a member of the original 10[illegible] Battalion, who has seen long service in France, who sang 'Mickey' the number being accompanied by some beautiful colored views.

"FORTUNE AT STAKE"

"Fortune at Stake," a 6-act racing story by Nat Gould with an all British cast of players was presented at the Palace yesterday and proved of unusual interest. The thrilling race scene staged in England at Epsom between Vendetta and Rainstorm, two famous steed of the turf in England, proved most thrilling and realistic, the race scene being the best revealed on a local screen since "The Whip." A funny and original Luke comedy, British Canadian News with its gist of important happenings in the British Empire and an interesting chapter of Vitagraph's "Perils of Thunder Mountain" completes a splendid varied bill all of which will be repeated again tonight and Wednesday matinee and night.

CAIRO'S "STREET OF BEGGARS" VISUALIZED

In Cairo, in the magnificent Palace of the Dawn, lived Mignon, the butterfly creature who craved admiration. Every material want was hers, yet she was unhappy. Around the corner was the street of beggars where dwelt stark poverty, deadly disease and filth beyond description, and there, in that terrible hovel of sorrow, the woman who sought happiness in giving to the poor found it in a begging child and an old demented, hasheesh-drugged man whose one ieda was to find and kill the woman who deserted him. These miserable creatures are her husband and child. So beautiful are the lighting and tinting effects in 'Sahara' starring the magnetic Louise Glaum, that even the morbid scene described above is made an artistic picture that pleases the eye as much as the scenes of splendor in the Palace of the Dawn. J. Parker Read, Jr., presents Louise Glaum in 'Sahara' written by the noted writer of screen fiction C. Gardiner Sullivan. It is a magnificent picture and will be shown at Griffin's next Thursday to Saturday with a matinee Saturday along with five other comedies and selected topicals.

Splendid Service Of The Belleville General Hospital

The vast amount of useful work being accomplished by Belleville Hospital is shown by the following annual reports of the Lady Superintendent, Miss C. H. Greene:

Statistical Report for 1918-1919.

Number of patients admitted during the year, 525 male, 611 female.

Number of infants born, 51 male, 37 female.

Number of patients remaining in hospital Sept. 30, 1918, 19 male, 21 female.

Number of patients discharged, 524 male, 618 female.

Number of deaths, 49 male, 27 female.

Number of patients remaining in hospital Sept. 30, 1919, 22 male, 24 female.

Total number of resident patients treated, 1,264.

Collective days' stay of adult patients, 14,499.

Collective days' stay of children under twelve years, 1,702.

Collective days' stay of all patients, 16,230.

Average days' stay per patient, 12.81 days.

There were 595 male patients, 669 female patients.

From the city of Belleville we received 744.

From the county of Hastings 413.

From Prince Edward county, 73.

From other counties, 33.

Nationalities: There were 1,083 Canadians, 104 English, 8 Irish, 17 Scotch, 17 Americans, 34 foreigners.

Religion: Protestants of all denominations, 1,109; Roman Catholics, 155.

Number of non-resident patients treated, 500.

Operations performed, major and minor, 636.

We feel that we cannot leave the report this year without expressing our gratitude and appreciation to those friends of the hospital who so kindly came to our aid during the influenza period just one year ago now. To those who came into the hospital and helped us to do our actual work, to those friends who helped us by working at home making supplies and comforts for our sick people which on account of stress of work we were unable to do ourselves, as well as to those people who could only help us by their sympathy and cheery words, we are deeply grateful and feel that in our friends we are indeed blessed. Hospital reports for the year just passed, not only in Canada, but the world over, will not make good reading, and though ours in its class is no worse than any others, yet to us it seemed almost unbearable.

From the figures I have given you I am sure you will realize that your hospital has been a busy place, and that is what suits us all best. Yet in such a time as that of a year ago our hearts fail us and only by the faithfulness and sympathy of our friends are we able to carry on.

In this connection I would especially like to thank the ministers of every denomination, who were untiring in their efforts and ready to answer calls to help and comfort the sick ones.

C. H. GREENE,
Supt. Belleville General Hospital.

Report of Training School.

The staff of the school at present consists of: Superintendent, Assistant Superintendent, Graduate Nurse in charge of operating room, Night Superior, Pupil Nurses—four senior, eleven intermediates, eight probationers.

In the beginning of the year we had a full staff of pupil nurses, but owing to illness and depression following the siege of influenza several of these nurses had to leave the school.

Our course of lectures was much interfered with during the winter because both teachers and nurses seemed unable to get the time to attend to them properly; however, during the spring and summer months we have been able to make up and now have a class of eight nurses ready to graduate.

We have received and answered 70 letters from young ladies wishing to become nurses. Besides our regular work the nurses have been on special cases in the hospital and private houses for 140 days.

Miss Sabin, of Peterboro, in charge of the operating room, and Miss Russel, of Selby, as night supervisor, have been taken on our staff this year.

In submitting this report I am sorry to say that this has been a very checkered year for us. With a full staff and everything arranged apparently for a good and successful year, we started last October, but fate had other things in store for us, and besides several of our nurses having to leave through illness, it is our sad duty have to record four deaths as the toll that dread disease, influenza, took from our school. Of Miss Crosier, our night supervisor, we have only good to to record four deaths as the toll spared not herself in her anxiety to help others. To her school she was faithful, a pupil to be admired, to her family a prop and counsellor so much needed by an invalid mother. And yet we must and do know that our Heavenly Father makes no mistakes.

Of our two pupil nurses and Miss Lynn, a recent graduate of our school, we can say truthfully their memory will be long cherished in the hearts of their classmates and in their school. They were called to lay down their lives in the midst of their youth, when the joy of living was strong in them. They did not murmur, but were able to say with conviction, Thy will be done. Like soldiers giving up their lives so cheerfully for their country, these nurses gave up their lives for their work, and no death hath greater honor.

Just here we would pay our tribute to the memory of the late Drs. MacColl and Dolan, both men whom this Hospital and this Training School will miss more than we can tell you. They were more to us than Doctors of the Staff; they were friends and teachers for whom we had great respect and who were always ready to help wherever and wherever needed. We do indeed miss their cheerful faces and kindly ways.

This report has been a hard one to write, and I am sure, hard to listen to; but, as soldiers when they turn from the graves of their dead comrades, march away to strains of the most cheerful music, let us turn from our sadness and with cheerful faces and hearts take hold of our work with a greater determination to do it well.

C. H. GREENE,

YOUNG FARMER OF OXFORD KILLED BY GASOLINE ENGINE

WOODSTOCK, Nov. 25—David Shillington, a prominent and well-known young farmer, living east of Harley Village, is dead, following injuries received when he was drawn into the fly wheel of a gasoline engine. The unfortunate man had been chopping grain, and while going to shut off the engine he tripped and fell against the wheel. A projecting pin in the shaft of the wheel caught in his clothing, griping the man and throwing him around the wheel his head hitting the floor with such violence that his skull was fractured. Henry Shillington, father of the dead man, was away in Northern Ontario on a hunting trip when the accident occurred. The widow and three small children survive.

WINTER IN ALGONQUIN PARK.

As a winter panacea for coughs and colds Algonquin Park cannot be equalled. Two thousand feet above the sea it is always dry and cold. Days spent in snow-shoe tramps, tobogganing, or ski-ing and in skating, together with evenings spent in social converse around the cosy warmth of an old fashioned log fire; these slip away unnoticed but those who have once experienced them return to their avocations with renewed energies. The "Highland Inn" owned and operated by the Grand Trunk Railway offers comfortable accommodation at reasonable rates. For all particulars apply to N.

Dr. Chase's Ointment
Keeps Baby's Skin Soft and Smooth

Baby's skin troubles are generally caused by chafing and skin irritations resulting from friction of the clothing.

Baby's skin is tender, and if neglected these irritations of the skin develop into eczema. Everybody knows the suffering caused by eczema and the tendency of eczema to become chronic and spread over the body.

While Dr. Chase's Ointment cures eczema, it is always better to prevent such ailments, and this is why mothers use the ointment after baby's bath so as to prevent irritations and more serious skin troubles.

Powders clog the pores of the skin and are on that account a cause of skin irritation. Dr. Chase's Ointment, on the other hand, cleanses the pores and keeps the skin in healthful condition.

Abolish The Senate Says W.C.T.U.

GUELPH Nov. 24—At the final session of the Ontario W.C.T.U. convention plans were made for the Dominion referendum on the importation of liquor which they believed was coming next year. It was recommended there be a central women's organization as well as a men's organization, these two to co-operate in every possible way.

WOULD ABOLISH SENATE

Many resolutions were passed. Among them was one demanding the abolition of the Senate, and wished the U. F. O. Godspeed in their "laudable" enterprise to get rid of it. There was also a resolution asking the education authorities to place scientific temperance on the same basis as other subjects for the examination, one of appreciation to all the legislators who stood for temperance and helped to bring about the present prohibition in the Province, special mention being made of Sir William Hearst, Hon. N W. Rowell and Senator Wm. Proudfoot

A resolution respecting the use of narcotics was passed, it being resolved to redouble their efforts in the Anti-Narcotic Department through the Loyal Temperance Legions and young people's work.

The W.C.T. Unions were urged to cooperate with the Social Service Councils wherever work is being done among the foreigners.

TO PROTECT YOUNG BOYS

A recommendation was made that the W.C.T.U. urge the Provincial Government to make it impossible for boys to frequent places where 2½ per cent. beer is sold.

The convention decided to appoint a travelers' aid organization for the Province for six months or more if necessary.

A law enforcement campaign was recommended. The new Provincial Government will be petitioned to establish more consolidated schools in the rural districts.

It was decided to send a W.C.T.U. representative to all sessions of the Provincial and Dominion Governments.

CALLED BY DEATH

MRS. CHAS. DEAN

A very sudden death occurred at Napanee when Mrs. Charles Dean passed away, apparently without a moment's warning. Deceased went to her room about her usual hour for retiring and sat on the edge of the bed with a pencil and book in her hand, and must have been seized suddenly, as she just laid over and quietly passed away. She was preparing to go to Montreal to live with her son, Harry F. Dean, of the Dominion Bank. Deceased was about sixty years of age.

Obsequies

MRS. PHILIP DENYES

Yesterday afternoon relatives and friends in large numbers assembled at the residence of Mr. Philip Denyes, Avondale, Front of Sidney, to pay the last tribute of respect to the late Mrs. Denyes, a lady who in life was esteemed and in death revered. Deceased was a daughter of the late Mr. A. Jones of Sidney, and was the last surviving member of one of the pioneer families of the Township. The attendance at the obsequies was such that numbers were unable to gain admittance to the house, where an impressive service was held. Rev. H. H. Mutton, Pastor of Bayside circuit conducted the service which opened by the singing of a favorite hymn of the deceased. After an appropriate prayer Rev. Mr. Mutton gave an address on Motherhood, demonstrating the sacrifice, love and piety of mother. It was an address worthy of the occasion. At the conclusion of the service the body was conveyed to the Belleville cemetery, where the interment took place. Upon the casket were placed a number of floral tributes. The bearers were neighbors of the deceased, namely, Messrs C. A. Owens, Geo. Bates, Frank Graham, Sydney Davis, R. Vandervoort and N. Gilbert.

New Electric Car Self Recharging

Portable Charging Plant Carried Under the Bonnet.

An electric motor car that makes twenty-five miles an hour and even more; a car that can go anywhere, because it carries its own recharging plant; a car that generates current whenever it coasts down hill; a car that carries improved storage batteries, requiring the minimum of care; a car wherein the motor and transmission members, foring one unit, can be taken off in one block for inspection, repair of replacement. These features are all to be found in the latest electric car—one which seems likely to give the electric car a new deal in the motor car game.

Car in question has been developed over a period of many years by Harry E. Dey, of Jersey City, and has the hearty endorsement of Dr. Chas. P. Steinmetz, the widely known electrical engineer.

The most revolutionary feature of Mr. Dey's car is the motor, in which both armature and field magnet are rotable, one element being connected to one driving wheel by way of a pair of reduction gears, while the other element connects with the other wheel in similar manner. It is in this way that the designer dispenses with differential gears; the motor with its independent rotation of parts makes a perfect substitute.

In the latest design the operation of the control is similar to that met on a gas car. For speed variation a foot lever acts in the same way as a clutch, with the added feature that pressure beyond that to cut the current off impels the motor to act as a brake, while extreme use of the foot power applies the mechanical brake to the driving wheels. In addition there is an emergency brake. An accelerator pedal raises the speed to thirty miles by weakening the field. A third pedal gives forward, reverse and neutral. This is so interlocked with the speed pedal that it can be moved only when the stands in a high resistance or the off position.

The steering wheel is hinged to permit the tilting when entering the car. The post is inclined at an angle of 30 degrees from the horizontal, giving the car a racy appearance. All this is mentioned here to convey some impression of the lines of this care, differing so materially from the bulky effect of most electrics.

The battery is carried underneath the floor and attached to the truss rod posts. This leaves the body entirely free of encumberances and permits it to be utilized entirely for passengers and luggage. A radical departure has been made in the spring suspension, as air springs have been substituted for the electrical type.

Mr. Dey has largely increased the scope of his car by designing a portable charging plant, weighing approximately 100 pounds, to be carried under the bonnet of the car. It consists of a light three horsepower air-cooled gasoline engine, connected to a special dynamo. It will charge the battery at any time, whether the car be running or standing, at rate equal to the normal consumptiono of the driving motor, which experience has shown to be two horsepower. This plant causes a net saving in weight of the car of more than 100 pounds, due to the fact that one-half of the battery can be dispensed with, a fifty mile battery raidius then being sufficient.

If desired, the plant may be removed from the car, to be used as a stationary unit for recharging, as well as for charging, a separate battery for house lighting, etc. It is a simple matter to place the power plant in the car against a long trip. The smaller battery required will largely cancel the additional cost of the charging plant.—Scientific American.

Wait And See, "Says Soo Re New Province

SAULT STE MARIE, Nov. 25—"Wait and see," seems to be the attitude of Sault Ste Marie in regard to the proposal for a new Province in Northern Ontario. E. W. West, president of the Board of Trade, said the subject before expressing an opinion.

T. E. Simpson, M.P., thought secession would mean needless duplication of offices and an unwarranted expense at a time when the people of Canada should economize.

"The north has been pretty well treated in recent years," he said, "and I see no reason why as good treatment should not be expected from the new Government."

J. B. Cunningham, M.P.P.-elect, expressed himself as opposed to secession. He advocated regular conferences of delegates from various parts of the Province, which he thought might tend to remove grievances.

Automatic Stokers On G.T.R. Engines

The proposal to equip all the more powerful types of locomotives on the Montreal and Belleville divisions of the Grand Trunk Railway System with Dupler Locomotive Stokers, manufactured by the Locomotive Stokers Co., Pittsburg, Pa., and in Canada by the Canadian Westinghouse Co., will have the effect of revolutionizing the duties of locomotive firemen on that road and at the same time will enable the locomotives to attain greater hauling power.

For some days a Grand Trunk locomotive, No. 453, equipped with this automatic stoker and normally in service on the Island Pond-Portland, Me., division of the railroad has been on the Brockville-Montreal run for demonstration purposes hauling freight trains. Various firemen at this terminal have been under instruction in the mechanism of the device which on this locomotive has had the effect of enabling it to haul 250 tons more than do the Mikado engines of the 500 class, which are of the same type. The tests so far have been most satisfactory.

It is proposed to equip all the heavier types of passenger and freight locomotives on this division with the automatic stoker. "The fireman will really become," he said, "a mechanical engineer instead of a laborer when they are installed. Also the tonnage rating of the locomotive will be increased and there will be much saving for the railroad."

The automatic stoker is operated by steam from the locomotive Buried beneath the coal in the tender is a shovel sheet provided with an opening 18 inches wide, extending from the coal gates to the slope sheet of the tank. The opening is covered by slides, each measuring about 20 inches in length. After passing trrough this opening to a trough beneath, the coal is conveyed by a conveyer screw or worm through a crushing zone where it is forced against a crusher plate by the screw and is broken to a suitable size. From this position, the coal is sent to hoppers whence it is elevated by screws into tubes fitted with elbows, which tubes extend through holes in the back-head on each side of the fire-door. Constant steam jets in the elbows blow the coal through the tubes mentioned which are fitted with distributors located on the inside of the firebox. These distributors deflect and spread the coal over the entire surface of the fire. Guages show the steam pressure on the jets.

Installation of this device of the Grand Trunk locomotives will mean that all the arduous hand stoking will be obviated and that the fireman's duties wil simply be to regulate the work of the automatic stoker. The ordinary door of the firebox is retained in the event of the automatic stoker becoming out of order and hand stoking becoming necessary.

25 Die As Blaze Razes Dance Hall Filled With Girls

VILLE PLATTE, La., Nov. 25—Twenty-five persons, most of them women and girls, lost their lives here in a fire that quickly destroyed a frame building in which a crowd of two hundred were making merry at a dance. Fifteen others were seriously hurt and a search of the ruins is expected to add to the list of the dead.

Ten of the dancers were burned to death. Others were crushed in a wild stampede for the street down a narrow, frail stairway, while the flames were sweeping rapidly from the lower floor. More than a score of babies, tucked safely away in a nursery on the same floor with the dance hall were rescued by the mothers. Some of the youngsters were picked up and hurried bodily into the outstreched arms of people in the street below.

The fire started in a grocery store and a tongue of flame reached out and startled a crowd in a moving picture theatre in the same building with the grocery store and the dance hall. A man standing near the door shouted to the audience to move out quietly, and none was hurt.

The flames spread so rapidly that the whole floor was a roaring blaze before the dancers in the hall above were aware of their danger.

Instantly there was a panic, and the whole crowd, men women and children, made a mad rush for the single exit, the narrow stairway leading down the side of the burning building. This soon was choked and many of those who were trapped escaped through windows to the roof of an adjoining building. Many victims were burned beyond recognition and bits of jewelry were the only means of identification.

Make Sure Of League Before Reducing Navy

Jellicoe Says U. S. Action Has Disheartened Those Hoping for Results.

CALGARY, Nov. 24—A speech, which was a practical answer to the action of the United States Senate in rejecting the Peace Treaty, was made by Lord Jellicoe here at a civic dinner.

He said: "It is my mission in Canada to advise the Dominion Government, where my advice is sought and only where it is sought, in what manner, if they so desire it, they can cooperate in maintaining the sea power of the British Empire. There is a feeling abroad that the millenium is in sight, and that there will be no more wars. I sincerely hope that the League of Nations will meet with the best possible success, but events of the past few days have disheartened those who had faith in the immediate result of the formation of the League of Nations. These events need not make us pessimistic as to its future possibilities. But where the existence of an Empire is the consideration. I cannot help thinking that the people will want to be sure that the people will want to be sure that they will be absolutely secure under a League of Nations before they will consent to cutting down expenditure for naval defence."

LONDON'S NEXT CANADIAN COMMISSIONER.

One of Canada's leading citizens, Mr. J. W. McConnel, of the St. Lawrence Sugar Refineries, who is now in London, takes exception to the new Imperial preference, as being anything but beneficial to Canada. He claims that the preference has led to the buying up of the West Indian sugar crop by the British Importers, forcing Canada to rely upon Cuba and San Domingo for her supply. This is one of the reasons why Canada should insist upon a practical business man, in fact one who understands our manufacturing conditions, to fill the position of Trade Commissioner, in London. If it is necessary to have a social figure, to attend the many social functions, at which it might be necessary to represent Canada, let there be a second commissioner, but on no account let our trade suffer by attending five o'clock tea parties. There is too much solid work to be performed in the offices of the London Canadian Trade Commissioner, which is of vital importance to Canada's future commercial welfare, and it is suicidal judgment to send any other than a practical business man to England for the next five or ten years. We would also go further and say that the agent should be a young man, full of vigor and business ability, who will not only do Canada credit in the fulfilment of his duties but will be able to impress upon the Imperial administrators that Canada must have an equal show in obtaining her share of the world's commerce. We do not want a repetition of the Imperial shipping administration, which at the close of the war handicapped Canadian trade, repeated in our future commercial relationship between Great Britain and Canada.—Quebec Telegraph.

PREMIER'S HORIZON WILL EXPAND.

Ontario's new Premier, Hon. Mr. Drury, has been introducing himself to the people in a series of public appearances and has made a very favorable impression by his speeches which indicate intelligence of a high order, a rather broad outlook upon life, high ideals and a sane, progressive spirit. Thus far there has only been one jarring note in his public utterances, and that deals with one of the most important questions affecting the welfare of the whole province, the good roads program. Mr. Drury's references to a good roads policy indicate that he favors more attention to rural highways than to trunk roads. This seems strange to students of the good roads problem who have for many years given much thought and study to the question of the best system of highway transportation. The majority of these good roads pioneers are farmers and they realize the prime imprtance of trunk roads as valuable alike to the development of the agricultural interests as to those of the town and city. Railroad builders do not build branch lines before constructing trunk lines, the latter being the logical first consideration. First come the trunk lines, then the branch lines are provided as feeders and as necessary parts of the larger and more generally serviceable system. So it it with highway extension, the trunk roads will benefit the greater number and rural roads are connecting links in the greater system. Trunk roads will give the agricultural population access to the best markets and a choice of markets. The first necessity is a first class permanent highway spanning the province which will enable thousands of farmers with motor cars to visit any part of the province easily and quickly and will make transportation of farm produce, live stock, dairy products, etc., very much cheaper. Of course there will be a great deal of pleasure automobile riding over a provincial highway, but as each foreign tourist spends at least five dollars a day in Canada there will be a decided gain from that source, and anybody keeping tab on the automobiles using the best roads and apparently on pleasure bent, will find that the most of them belong to prosperous farmers from the back concessions who will be loudest in demanding trunk roads first and rural by-paths last.

It must be remembered, too, that the great bulk of rural as well as urban population lives within easy reach of the proposed trunk roads and are not hidden away on the far back concessions.

Premier Drury, as his ideas broaden in the larger field to which he has been called and in which he has the ability to be of great service to the Province will no doubt be big enough to permit his convictions to expand into the larger circle of the greatest good for the greatest number and the expansion of agriculture and industry upon the broadest lines of progress.

The campaign to prohibit the use of tobacco is preparing. Soon it will launched. Some esteemed contemporaries appear to think it is sure to fail. But why so? The Standard finds the following telegraphic despatch in The Toronto Mail and Empire: "Belleville—The Judge Jones Milling Company plant has been removed from Montreal to this city and the machinery of four plants has been installed in buildings here. In addition a large elevator is being constructed with a capacity of 45,000 bushels of grain. The firm manufacture corn meal, oatmeal, rolled oats and other cereals." From another source The Standard learns that the Jones Company is sparing nothing in the way of expense or machinery toward making its mill one of the largest and most complete milling plants in the country. Here, then, we have another illustration of what Belleville's Industrial Manager, in co-operation with some of Belleville's leading citizens is doing for that city, this being the third or fourth industry that has been secured for Belleville in the last few months, the while Kingston has been sleeping at the switch.—Kingston Standard.

A Valuable Institution.
Edmonton Journal.

From the biological sketches that are published of the members of the new Ontario Cabinet we learn that five out of the eight agricultural representatives are graduates of the agricultural college at Guelph. In the early days there was much scoffing at this institution by the majority of Ontario farmers, but this was a long time ago. It has for many years been a powerful factor in the rural life of the province.

Winnipeg Telegram.

Every great power among the Allies has ratified the peace treaty with the exception of the United States. Four out of five have signified their acceptance of the pact. The United States stands alone. According to the objectors in the U. S. Senate the four allies—Britain, France, Italy and Japan—have compromised their sovereignty, assumed outrageous burdens, entered upon a career of war and profligacy, and subjected their domestic affairs to intolerable alien intrusion.

All these nations, and all their statesmen, apparently, are blind. They do not see the ruin that awaits them. Out of all the world, only the group of recalcitrant senators in Washington is alive to the dangers that lurk in the pages of the peace treaty.

He's rich as rich can be,
We're awful common and that's why
He dassent play with me.
His father is a millionaire,
Pa drives for Mister Crouse,
They call their place a residence,
But ours is just a house.

He's got a game of indoor golf,
A printing press fer boys,
A steam engine, a phoneygraff—
I never seen such toys.
But he is tired of 'em all,
He'd ruther come an' play
"I spy" or swing on our back gate,
When his ma goes away.

He likes my hat, so when we play
I always trade with him;
Though his is new and mine is just
A crown and half a brim.
He says he doesn't like his name,
He wishes he had one
Like mine—that's Rags—and so I call
Him Peanuts just for fun.

He says that I'm the very best
Of all the friends he knows,
And that our house is lots more fun
Than anywhere he goes.
And when we play "Pretend" and each
Can choose what he will be,
I always play that I am him—
He always plays he's me.

Then when his nurse or mother calls,
He says to us, "Oh, dear!"
And always waits a little while,
An' pretends he doesn't hear,
An' then he puts his shoes back on,
To fix up like he was,
Because he dassent play with us—
He dassent—but he does.

—Marion Kent Hurd.

A Laugh Or Two

Spiteful.

"Young Jobbles has bought a rakish roadster. It's spite work, I fear."

"How so?"

"The money spent for that car was intended for a bungalow. Young Jobbles wants to show the girl in the case that he has no intention of proposing a second time."

By Way of Remembrance.

Grogan—Oi hate to mintion it, Mrs. Casey, but your husband owed me tin dollars whin he died.

The Widow—Indade! Shure it's nice for ye to have something to remimber him by.

It All Depended.

Prospective Tennant—"Is the place within walking distance of the railway station?"

"I dunno," answered the house agent cautiously. "How far can you walk?"

That Went Double.

His gay young wife showed him the pictured advertisement of a very short and very skimpy bathing suit "You might let me have the money, John," she said.

"I can't consistently, my dear," said he.

"Why not?"

"I'm a man of modest means."

Real Courage.

"I often think," said the modern girl, "that women are more courageous than men."

"I know they are," replied the male companion. "Where is the man who would have courage to pull out a mirror and do himself up in a crowded restaurant?"

Sorry, Nevertheless.

Edith (talking about a man she has jilted)—"And did he seem to be sorry when you said I was married?"

Ethel—"Yes, he said he was very sorry—although he didn't know the man personally."

Sure Enough.

"Do you think airships will ever come into common use?"

"Most assuredly. If Ford is going to flood the land with $250 automobiles a lot of us will have to take to the air."

WINTER VACATIONS

The Grand Trunk Railway has decided to give to those who love the great out-of-doors an opportunity to spend their winter vacations in Algonquin Park. The "Highland Inn" the largest of the Park hotels is to be kept open throughout the year and there will be found all the comforts associated with first class hotel service including warm, cheery, public and private rooms and excellent cuisine. Two thousand feet above the level of the sea Algonquin Park has ideal climatic conditions and is easily acessible, being about 200 miles north of Toronto; and 169 Miles west of Ottawa. Every facility has been provided for winter sports, including skating, tobogganing, ski-ing and snow-shoeing. Copy of new publication, "Enjoy Winter in Ontario Highlands" may be obtained on request from Grand Trunk agents or from C. E. Horning, D.P.A., Toronto, Ont.

RED ROSE TEA
RED ROSE TEA is good tea

THE British are noted as great tea drinkers and are naturally good judges of tea.

So when we learn that over 70% of the tea used in Great Britain is Indian tea we can be sure that Indian tea is of the very best quality.

In Canada the preference for Indian tea has become just as strong, as evidenced by the success of Red Rose Tea which consists chiefly of ASSAMS—the richest and strongest of Indian teas.

Red Rose is always sold in sealed packages.

DAUGHTER OF THE PHILISTINES

LEONARD MERRICK

and the servants nudged one another and grinned. Kent clung to the basket like grim death, but the hand-bag when she threw it back at his feet at length, had been emptied of so much that he dreaded to guess what was left in it. He picked it up without a word and, more dead than alive, strode through the hall, and leaped into the cab.

On reaching the hotel it was necessary to invent some story to account for the absence of luggage and Kent remarked as carelessly as he could mange that it would arrive on the morrow. He had ordered luncheon to be ready for them, not knowing that Cynthia would get any at the pension and in the room intended for her and the boy a fire had been lighted. She flew to the basket and boiled some oatmeal while Humphrey endeavored to soothe the mite, whose meal, the disturbance had delayed, and who cried as if he would never be pacified any more. When the food was cooked at last and something like order was restored, the lunch was allowed to be brought up, the filet overdone and the potato-chips hard and stiff. However, after what they had gone through it tasted to them delicious; and emboldened by the knowledge that there would be no bill to discharge for a week, Kent told the waiter to take away the claret which was included in the cost and to bring them a bottle of burgundy. The wine put heart into them both, and as their fatigue passed, they drew their chairs to one of the windows, the doors of which had been laid back and found courage to discuss the situation while they gazed upon the little ornamental garden at the corner of the street below.

The baby slept, tucked in the quilt of the high big bed, and Cynthia said that by-and-by he must be put inside for the night in the frock he wore. Every minute revealed some further defficiency. They opened the bag and they had neither brushes nor sponges but just a single comb. Yet she laughed again for instinctively she realized she was at the apex of her opportunity that in such a crisis a wife must be either a solace or an affliction and whatever happened to them during the rest of their lives, there would always be moments when he looked back at their experiences in Paris and remembered how she had behaved. As they sat there beside the open window, with the remainder of the bottle of burgundy between them, and a smile forced to her lips, the philistine might have been a Bohemian born and bred and, as he had done in the cab, Kent silently marveled at her pluck.

By the time the dinner was laid their nerves were almost as equable as their speech. But this renewed calmness received a sudden shock. It was the rule of the proprietress, they were told politely, to ask for a deposit from strangers, and she would be obliged if Monsieur Kent would let her have twenty or thirty francs, purely as a matter of form.

Cynthia started painfully, and Kent refastened the paper of his cigarette before he answered.

"Certainly," he said. "Is thirty francs enough? I've only a check in my pocket, but tell madame I'll give it to her to-night."

When the waiter had withdrawn he and Cynthia looked at each other aghast. Their breathing-space had been brief. They knew that their having no luggage made the woman suspicious of them, and that, unless they were to be turned out of here as well, almost before they were in, the thirty francs must be found for her. Dinner had to be eaten, lest they should appear discomfited by the message; but the coffee was no sooner swallowed than Kent prepared to go out. Swearing to the girl he would obtain two or three louis before they slept, and reminding her that if Beaufort's expectations had been fulfilled he would now be in a position to let them have much more, he left her, and went to search for 'Billy' among his various haunts. The streets were thronged and in his impatience the slowness of progression permitted by the mob infuriated him. All Paris seemed to have surged on to the Boulevards, filling the pavements and the road, and playing the fool. He pushed forward as best he could, and tried the Grand, in the faint hope either that the other might be dining there or that something could be learned of his movements, but he was able to ascertain nothing. After all, he thought, it would have been wiser to have inquired at the bar in the Rue Saint-Honore and he now retraced his steps pressing through the crowd in the direction of Madeleine, impeded and pelted with confetti at every yard. At the corner of the Rue Canmartin, a clown in scarlet satin thrust a pasteboard nose into his face. Kent cursed him and shoved him aside and the buffoon span into the arms of a couple of shop-girls who received him with shrill screams. The concourse appeared to grow noisier and more impenetrable each moment. It was the first Mi-Careme celebration the young man had witnessed and with fever in his veins and wretchedneses in every fibre of him this carnival confusion with its horseplay and hindrance was maddening. The gaslight sparkled with the rain of colored discs—they were pitched into his eyes and his ears as he struggled on—the asphalt was soft and heavy with them. When he reached the Madeleine things were better but at the buffet Beaufort had not been seen since five o'clock. Somebody there believed he had an appointment at nine at the Cafe de la Paix. Kent plunged into the throng again and fought his way steadily until the cafe was gained. The figure he sought was in none of the rooms.

LEFT WITH 900 MEN 42 GO BACK TO CHINA

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 24.—Company 14 of the Chinese Labor Corps, which passed through Victoria en route to Europe nine hundred strong, is back at this port awaiting transportation to China but now musters only forty-two men.

The story is that the company suffered severe casualties when it was seeking revenge for German aerial bombings.

It it stated the Chinese attacked a German prison camp with Mills bombs, which, in ignorance they threw without drawing the pins. The German prisoners picked up the unexploded bombs, drew the pins, and tossed them back among the Chinese where they exploded with great effect.

NEW NET TO SCOOP THE AUTO THIEVES

In order to help run down the automobile thief the Montreal Automobile Association has issued to its members a form on which is a series of questions which they are asked to fill out and return.

On this sheet is listed questions such as: Make of car, license number, manufacturer's number, private or any distinguishing mark, place where it was stolen, time, etc. All of these, when answered, serve as a means of identification, which is immediately handed to the police then placed in the hands of the Association's special representative.

Another means of providing information to its members is the issuance of a weekly post card, which was started during last summer. On it is briefly described the coming events, speed traps, repairs on roads around the vicinity, and any automobile races or similar events which are to take place This idea has met with great success among the members, as it placed before them such information as they could use to good advantage.

HOW C.P.R. ENGINEER WON VICTORIA CROSS

It fell to the lot of a C.P.R. engineer Pte. John Peter Robertson to win the much coveted Victoria Cross at Passchendaele. Robertson enlisted at Lethbridge with the 175th and was an engineer on that division. He was better known as "Pete" to his Leirbridge friends. He was born in Pictou, Nova Scotia, but lived most of his life in Medicine Hat with his mother, Mrs. Alex. Robertson.

Robertson was aged thirty-four, won his distinction in connection with operations at Passchendaele, November 6, 1917. Details came through authoritative channels that during his battalion's attack Robertson's platoon was held up by uncut wire two hundred yards from the final objective. Our guns were still busy cutting a way through the wire when a German machine gun opened fire and inflicted very heavy losses on the Canadians. Robertson, without waiting for orders and entirely on his own initiative, rushed towards the German gun, defying the machine guns' withering fire. Moreover, our artillery barrage was so intense that death seemed almost certain. Working his way to the flank, he eventually found an opening in the wire, got through, and crawled until the end of the emplacement was reached. Rising suddenly to his feet he charged down on the astonished Germans, and killed four of the gun crew before they could recover from their surprise. The remainder fled in terror, but their flight was soon cut short when Robertson seized the abandoned gun, screwed it around and poured a hail of bullets upon the backs of the fast disappearing enemy. Several of them fell victims to their own weapon and others were caught by our shells. When the remainder of the platoon arrived Robertson was still firing the captured gun. It was entirely due to his heroic action that the whole line was enabled to advance and capture the final objective. Robertson went forward with the first wave, taking a gun with him. He used it very effectively to keep down the fire of German machine guns and snipers, while his platoon consolidated the new position. Later in the day when two or our snipers who ventured in front of our lines were wounded Robertson volunteered to bring them in. He went into the open, although exposed to a heavy enemy fire, lifted one man on his back and carried him safely to the trench, and immediately returned to the second man, staggering back with his unconscious burden while the bullets whistled around him. But as if cruel fate were awaiting until the last possible moment to overtake him, he was killed on the very parapet of the trench, his mission almost accomplished. His splendidly heroic end, like his dashing work done earlier in the day had a most inspiring effect.

COAL CAR BUTTS INTO A BATH ROOM

BAY CITY, Mich., Nov. 25—Telford E. Hill, Manager of the Meuller Chicory Company's plant, was taking a bath in his home adjoining the plant when a freight car crashed through the house andagainst the wawll of the bathroom. The wall fell, and a coal car came to view.

There had been two cars standing on the short switch. When the train crew attempted to place more cars there they evidently forgot about them, and the cars were sent through the bumper right into Mr. Hill's bathroom.

A WILL CASE

Owens vs Owens—An action brought by the plaintiff to set aside a will of a brother, it being alleged that deceased was at the time of making the will incompetent in mind to do so. The parties reside at Campbellford. The case was commenced this morning at the Non-Jury sittings and was continued all day.

PEN POPULATION OVER 600

About a year and one-half ago the population of Portsmouth penitentiary was but 413 while yesterday it was 608 and inasmuch as several more prisoners were expected shortly the figure is now probably over 610. In view of the fact that quite a number of conscientious objectors have been released the continued growth in the population of the penitentiary is somewhat surprising and by no means re-assuring.

CUT DOWN TRAINS

All agents of the Grand Trunk Railway have been advised of the possible reduction in the passenger service to take effect on Sunday, November 30. G. T. Bell, passenger traffic manager of the Grand Trunk, who is at Ottawa at a conference of the railways in regard to the coal situation has sent the following telegram to all agents.

"Critical condition of the coal supply makes it probable that a material reduction in the passenger train service will be made effective on Sunday, November 30. The reduction will be unnecessary if there is an early improvement in the coal condition. Definite announcement will be made on Thursday next.

DISABLED EX-SERVICE MEN

As it is considered that most men desire re-training are already in touch with the Vocational Branch, Department of Soldiers' Civil Re-establishment, it has been decided to fix February 1st, 1920, as the last date for receiving application for vocational benefits. Men undergoing hospital treatment, except for a recurrence of a War disability, will be allowed three months after the date of their discharge, in which to make their application. All disabled men who are now considering this important question are earnestly recommended to obtain advice as soon as possible either by interview or letter to Local Representative of D.S.C.R. At present over 19,000 are under instruuction.

AN EVENING BLAZE

At a few minutes before six o'clock last evening a fire broke out in a double dwelling situated on Jones street, city, and considerable damage was done before the blaze was extinguished. The building was occupied by Messrs G. Wright and G. Barriage. The wife of the latter was preparing an evening meal and it is alleged was burning some wood in a stove which was impregnated with pitch and this caused the stovepipes to become overheated setting fire to the woodwork above. When discovered the fire had gained considerable headway. As quickly as possible the fire brigade was notified and responded with alacrity to the alarm and succeeded in saving the building from destruction. The gerater portion of the contents of the house were badly damaged. Those of Mr. Barriage being more seriously damaged. The latter had an insurance of $500 on contents. Mr. right had a small insurance. The building is the property of Mrs. Vanderwater of this city.

AN ADDRESS ON ROOSEVELT.

In connection with the anniversary services at St. Andrew's Church in this city, Rev. Hugh Kerr, D.D., of Pittsburg, last evening gave an address, the subject being "Theodore Roosevelt, America's Great Heart." There was a good attendance and the speaker gave an address relative to Roosevelt's life which was both interesting and elevating. Col. S. S. Lazier occupied the chair. Rev. Mr. Kerr gave a vivid picture of labor conditions in the United States and stated that the foundation of unrest and revolutionary tendencies centred with the foreign element. There was no danger to be feared from American workingmen, who had homes and a stake in the country but the migratory foreign element was a constant menace to the peace and prosperity of the nation.

FINE SHOWING

The highest per capita amount of Victory Loan applications obtained from any county in Eastern Ontario was obtained by Prince Edward county in the recent campaign. Mr. Robert Davison, Chairman of the county, announces that the total of subscriptions obtained in Prince Edward amounted to $110.91 per capita. Only two other units, namely, Oxford South and Peel both located in Western Ontario, were able to surpass this fine record, Prince Edward county had a fine organization set up to canvass the people of that county. The showing made by this county is particularly creditable because it is almost entirely a farming community.

Piano Agent Charged With Fraud

B. H. Clarke, of Belleville, Arrested in Montreal Charged With Check Fraud.

Before Magistrate Masson this morning B. H. Clarke, of this city was arraigned on a charge that he did during the month of November, 1919 unlawfully with intent to defraud obtain by false pretences about $1,900 from the Union Bank at Belleville. The accused was not represented by counsel and was not asked to plead. As the Crown was not ready to proceed, Mr. Carnew, County Attorney, asked for an enlargement of the case. Wednesday, of next week, December 3rd, was fixed as the date of trial. Bail was fixed at $5,000 in himself and two securities of $2,500 each. Clarke was the representative of Mason & Risch, Limited, piano manufacturers, in Belleville, and it is alleged, that he cashed cheques in Belleville drawn upon an Oshawa Bank where he claimed to have an account.

Clarke, comes originally from England, served through the war and was wounded and shell-shocked. He has only been in Belleville a short time coming here from Oshawa, where his wife continued to reside. He was arrested in Montreal upon information supplied by the Belleville police.

Prince Farewell At Halifax

HALIFAX, Nov. 25—Promising to return to Canada soon and to return often, His Royal Highness the Prince of Wales took official leave of the Dominion last night, in a speech which overflowed with the royal appreciation of all that had been done for him during his tour. The speech was delivered at a state dinner given last evening at the Halifax Club by the Federal Government, the penultimate function of His Royal Highness's last full day in Canada. Following the dinner the Prince danced to his heart's content at a ball given at Government House. At noon today the Prince laid the cornerstone of a development which will present as a landmark the ancient town clock erected by the Duke of Kent, upwards of 100 years ago and at sunset the Renown will sail for England. Golf and luncheon aboard the cruiser will occupy the remainder of the day.

Attends Danzant

The Renown arrived at Halifax shortly after eight yesterday morning. At 10.45 the Governor-General went aboard to pay his respects and His Excellency was followed an hour later by the Lieutenant-Governor of Nova Scotia. After lunching aboard His Royal Highness came ashore for a game of squash at Artillery Park and latter attended a danzant given by Mrs. Charles Archibald. From this function the Prince walked half a mile to the Government House, where he changed into ordinary evening dress. He arrived at the Halifax Club for the State dinner a few minutes after eight o'clock. A huge crowd had assembled in Hollis street and the car bearing the royal guest was the signal for a tremendous outburst of cheering, which continued until the Prince had entered the building. For a few seconds he stood at the top of the steps and waved his hat to the delighted throng, from whose throats arose the tumultuous greeting.

Brilliant State Dinner

The State Dinner was a brilliant affair. Gathered in the dining-room of the club was the elite of the Dominion, distinguished soldiers wearing the ensignia of many orders, states men who have guided the destinies of the country throughout the most trying years, public men, noted jurists and captains of industry.

The Prince was received in the lounge, and there the guests were presented.

Entering the dining-room His Royal Highness was greeted by the National Anthom, and took his seat on the right of the Duke of Devonshire.

The Governor-General proposed the toast to "The King," and was immediately followed by the Prince, who gave "The Governor-General."

Addressed by Premier

Only two speeches were made throughout the evening—that of Sir Robert Borden and a brief address by His Royal Highness.

Social And Personal

Mrs. R. Andrews, Hillside street, returned home last night after spending the past few months in Edmonton, Calgary and other western cities.

Mr. J. Don Cockburn, of Sturgeon Falls, Nipissing District, a prominent merchant and fur dealer of Northern Ontario, is in the city to-day attending the funeral of Mrs. Cockburn's father, Mr. P. M. Millard.

Many Beligan immigrants arrived on a C.P.R. steamer at Quebec.

Hon. Arthur Meighen will tour the West to tell of the work of the Union Government.

United National Campaign To Give Church New Life

MOVEMENT IS DESCRIBED AS HAVING NOTHING TO DO WITH CHURCH UNION, BUT TO CUT OUT NON-ESSENTIALS AND DEVOTE ALL EFFORTS TO THE ESSENTIALS.

TORONTO, Nov. 26.—With one united resolve to put the church on a war footing to meet the challenge of the new age in a new Inter-church Forward Movement, representatives of the five organized Protestant churches of Canada met in overflowing numbers in Massey Hall, when the Toronto Convention of the United National Campaign was opened. This was the first time in the history of Canada that Anglicans, Baptists, Congregationalists, Methodists and Presbyterians have come together officially to unite for a campaign which covers every phase of ecclesiastical activity in the Dominion and in the far lands beyond the seas.

Long before the opening of the meeting the hall was filled with a singing people; ministers and laymen from distant parts of the province joined heartily in the great inter-church hymn, "Onward, Christian Soldiers," with its peculiarly appropriate lines:

"We are not divided,
All one body we;
One in hope and doctrine,
One in charity."

This unity in diversity was strikingly symbolized when the leaders of the five churches filed on to the platform, led by Principal Gandier of Knox College, and Bishop Sweeney of Toronto, accompanied by the new Farmer Premier of Ontario, Hon. E. C. Drury. Rising en masse the great gathering sang "God Save the King," followed by the international anthem of the Kingdom of Christendom:

"All hail the power of Jesus' name;
Let angels prostrate fall;
Bring forth the royal diadem
And crown Him Lord of all!"

A NATIONAL MOVEMENT

The meeting was marked by an intense earnestness and expectancy; there was no appeal to sentiment nor any attempt to rouse enthusiasm by oratory. The speakers and the audience seemed to realize that they were at the beginning of which would be felt at the remotest reaches of the Dominion and in the mission stations in foreign countries.

At the outset Principal Gandier dissipated all idealistic dreams of organic union of the Churches. Each church was to retain its denominational identity and autonomy; but like the nations that allied themselves in a united campaign against Prussianism the Churches of Canada were allied in a united movement for the awakening of the moral and spiritual conscience of the Dominion with the Scriptural injunction, "Speak to the people that they go forward."

SINK NON-ESSENTIALS

Premier Drury struck the keynote of the movement when he said it was instituted to sink the non-essentials and to emphasize the one big thing for which all the churches stood.

Principal Bruce Taylor of Queen's University in his incisive manner, tempered by Scotish wit, stirred the assembly with a call to action. "If we can see the action—I'll risk the reaction," he said, in a ringing, clarion voice. He satirized "mountebank" preachers and called for less "whipped cream" and more stern, solid Bible teaching and greater emphasis on spiritual things.

Mr. G. Sherwood Eddy, the well-known leader in the international Y.M.C.A. movement, reviewed the great world opportunity for the movement.

SOME OF THE DELEGATES

Delegates arrived during the day from every district of central and Northern Ontario, and it is expected that the convention will be attended by more than one thousand representatives.

Drive 1,500 Reindeer Across North Land

New Company Will Bring Animals From Alaska to Near Hudson Bay.

OTTAWA, Ont., Nov. 24—The undertaking of the North American Reindeer Company, which, with a capital of $750,000, and a Canadian charter, has secured a permit to graze reindeer within an area of some 75,000 square miles of land north of the Churchhill River, is to say the least an ambitious one. The permit granted to the company by the Government recites that "whereas the development of reindeer herds in the northwest territories would prove of great benefit to the Dominion, however, the proposal of the company to drive a herd of reindeer overland through a difficult and unexplored country from Alaska to the vicinity of the west coast of Hudson's Bay to carry on reindeer breeding in the area herinafter described is an undertaking which, although the promoters of the company are confident will prove successful the Minister can only regard as experimental."

FAMILY FLEE AS FIRE DESTROYS THEIR HOME

KINGSTON, Nov. 26—In a disastrous fire that occurred at Sharpton on Saturday night the residence of George Bell was entirely destroyed by fire with all its contents, and the daughter of the house was nearly burned to death. Fortunately the mother, when aroused from sleep by the fire, had presence of mind to waken her daughter, before herself seeking safety and thus it was that the young lady was able to escape. Mrs. Bell was badly burned about the head. All the occupants of the house were in at the time the fire broke out and their escape is regarded as providential.

Masonry Is Doing A Grand Work

Deputy Grand Master at Toronto Speaks of Masonry and Masons.

Deputy Grand Master, Col. W. N. Ponton, was the principal speaker at the celebration of Past Masters and Canadian Night in John Ross Robertson Lodge, A.F. & A.M., Toronto. Grand Master F. W. Harcourt and other Grand Officers were present. The Toronto Telegram's account of the proceedings includes the following:

Masonic Benevolence

The toast of the evening was proposed by W. Bro. A. E. Stone, and responded to by R. Wor. Bro. Col. W. N. Ponton, of Belleville, Deputy Grand Master. The latter dilated on the character of the Masonic Order and its effect upon Canada as a nation in his own eloquent way, and gave some idea of the good the 70,000 Masons and 20,000 Royal Arch Masons would do in Canada. Only a few days ago 478 cheques had been signed through the sanction of the Grand Lodge that would distribute $48,000 among the deserving ones to make life a little easier. Grand Lodge has helped in the Victory Loan and subscribed $23,000 in bonds.

Tribute to Founder of Lodge

Speaking of the man whose memory every Canadian revered and as the founder of the lodge, the Deputy Grand Master said the spirit of the late John Ross Robertson was extant in Canada. "Masonry," he said, "is affected by the life and death of men of mark among its members, whose loss we deplore and whose memory we revere, for the Craft is a living organism." He read from the report of Grand Lodge the eulogy to the late Bro. Sir Mackenzie Bowell, K.C., M.G., who at the age of 94 years, and with 52 years of Masonic career, had, near, St. John's Night, passed away, and continued: "In June, just before St. John's Day, there passed away John Ross Robertson, P.G.M. and Historian of this Grand Lodge, also a journalist, a man of light and leading, a practical and discriminating philanthropist, a forceful yet loveable character, irresistible in enthusiasm and with a great big generous heart, which expressed itself in action in a passionate devotion to all that was true in Masonic manhood and to all was appealing in little children at the at the gateway of life.

His Real Monument

"Both had amassed considerable fortunes. Both of them illustrated how all British men bear transplanting to the soil of Canadian democracy, which means freedom, justice and equality of service, and opportunity to all. Masonically, the circle of the former Prime Minister was circumscribed about a more local but very faithful centre, but that of Bro John Ross Robertson was world wide, as a traveller and historian and a scholar of research. He quaffed the cup of memories; he gave to each point of vantage a local habitation and name; he vitalized and visualized the past; tradition was transplanted into biographical records; vague illusions become verified chronicles, art illustrative and commemorative perpetuated lives and places, in portraiture and picture, and all Canada, but Toronto, specially owes much to the zeal, creative and recreative, which rescued from oblivion precious archives and systematized and vivified the knowledge of a not inglorious past. But his real monument, more lasting than brass, will be the brave and tender memories associated with the endowment and loving care of the Hospital for Sick Children, who rise up and call him blessed; for of such is the Kingdom."

As Rt. W. Bro. Ponton referred to the fact that the evening was also the anniversary of the relief of Lucknow, and in this famous city Sir John Inglis, at one time a member of a Toronto chapter—St. Andrew's and St John's—had played an important part as a leader. As a Canadian he did not hesitate to express what he felt concerning John Ross Robertson Lodge, that it would be a power for good in the community, as its funder good in the community as its founder world and particularly Canada.

ROYAL BANK OPENS BRANCH IN ARGENTINA

The Royal Bank of Canada, which had already a wide connection in Central and South America, has opened a branch in Buenos Aires, Argentina. The mangement will be in the hands of Mr. T. F. Dever, late manager of the bank's branch in Barcelona, Spain, and formerly supervisor of Cuban branches.

HONOR TO WHOM HONOR IS DUE.

The heart of a profoundly appreciative Canadian people is to find expression in the distribution of memorial crosses to the mothers and the wives to whom Canada's honor roll means most—mothers who mourn for brave boys, wives who weep for heroic husbands. The nation's tribute to service and sacrifice goes to those whom the dead would have chosen.

The token is simple—a silver cross an inch and a quarter square, designed to include as its features the Crown and Royal Cipher, the Maple Leaf and the Laurel. On it will be engraved the name, number and rank of the soldier or sailor commemorated. Only a trinket, perhaps. But it is the Victoria Cross of Canadian womanhood.

And mothers and wives may wear it proudly. The part of women in war-winning was a noble and effective part. Those who were called upon to give in largest measure have won not alone the recognition of a grateful country, but the life-long fealty to worthy deeds which memory must inspire.—Toronto Globe.

Last Minute Telegraph Briefs

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26—Prospects for general resumption of coal mining in the United States to-day still swung round the expected action of the Federal government. Cabinet members who spent all of yesterday in session were to-day again trying to reach a decision.

LONDON, Nov. 26—John Lawson, Laborite, has been elected to the House of Commons in the by-election in Chester, Durham County. Mr. Lawson polled 17,848 votes as against 5,313 cast for his National Democratic opponent David Gilmour. The election was held November 13.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 26—That the national coal strike has reached a crisis is the view of officials here and drastic steps to curtail consumption are in contemplation. Among other steps an order prohibiting the manufacture of coke has been prepared.

Ship on Fire

HALIFAX, Nov. 26—The United States shipping steamer Auburn, bound from New York to Antwerp arrived here with a fire blazing in one of her holds. The ship has a cargo of grain and live cattle.

Duke's Special in Collision

MONTREAL, Nov. 26—The special train of the Duke of Devonshire, Governor-General of Canada, collided with a freight train at St. Cyril, sixty miles from Montreal on the Canadian National Railway this morning. The Duke and his suite were returning from Halifax where His Excellency took part in the farewell to the Prince of Wales. Nobody was injured. The engine of the Duke's train plunged through the caboose of the freight.

Suppress Sein Fein

DUBLIN, Nov. 26—Widespread suppression of Sinn Fein and other organizations in Ireland has been ordered by the government. The Official Gazette to-day publishes a proclamation prohibiting and suppressing Sinn Fein organizations, Sinn Fein Clubs, Irish Volunteers, Cummannamarana and Gealic League in all counties and boroughs of Ireland.

Premier Borden Returns

OTTAWA, Nov. 26—Premier Sir Robert Borden will be home from the south tonight and pressing and several more or less urgent problems are awaiting his attention. The policy regarding the handling of the forty millions voted by parliament for the soldiers aid must be decided, also action to be taken respecting wartime prohibition and decision to be made re enquiry into business and industrial conditions as preliminary to revision of tariff.

BUSINESS UP NORTH EXCEPTIONALLY GOOD

WINNIPEG, Nov. 26—Hon. Edward Brown, Provincial Treasurer, reports on his return from The Pas that business there has been exceptionally good during this season and a feeling of hopefulness and anticipation is awaiting the report of the engineers who have been inspecting the Flin Flon property. The Indians in this district have been paid more than $500,000 for ratskins, receiving $2 per skin this year.

To Tide Soldiers Over The Winter

Method of Spending Forty Millions to Be Announced Soon.

OTTAWA, Nov. 25—The Government will, it is expected, before the end of the present week, come to a definite decision as to the way in which the forty million dollars for soldiers' relief, voted at the recent session of Parliament, will be handled. With the approach of winter months the necessity for prompt action is fully realized nd an official announcement, it was stated authoritatively may shortly be expected.

The all-important point to be settled is as to the body which will deal with the handling of the fund voted by Parliament. The sub-committee of the Cabinet which will deal with the matter must decide whether a new organization will be created or the work delegated to existing organizations such as the Canadian Patriotic Fund or the various Soldiers' Aid Commissions.

The indications are that existing organizations will at least constitute the ground work for any plan which is evolved by the Cabinet sub-committee.

Hon. J. A. Calder, who was Chairman of the special committee of the Commons which inquired into soldiers' problems, has returned to the Capital after a brief visit to New York on Government business.

Chief Justice Guest Of Hastings Bar

The County of Hastings Law Association had the privilege of honouring Sir Glenholme Falconbridge, Chief Justice of the King's Bench of the Supreme Court of Ontario. It was one of the happiest evenings that the Bench and Bar have had for many years, and it was an occasion for the members of the legal profession in this city and county to pay tribute to the Chief Justice of the King's Bench who throughout his long service on the Bench (32 years) has upheld the traditions of His Majesty's Courts, and who is beloved by the members of the profession everywhere, not only in his judicial capacity but also as a public spirited citizen and for his acts of philanthrophy.

After an excellent dinner at the Quinte, the gathering went to the Belleville Club, and for three hours enjoyed stories and reminiscences in which all took part, and in which Sir Glenholme proved himself a raconteur par excellence and one of the boys. Colonel Ponton proposed the toast of His Lordship and expressed the feelings of the members of the Profession towards him in fitting terms. The Chief Justice in his reply referred to the happy associations he had always had with the Belleville Bar and recalled the names of those practising here when he was first called to the Bench; most of whom have passed away. He also gave good and inspiring advice to the junior members of the Bar in upholding the high traditions of the profession.

Among the visitors were W. S. Herrington, K.C., Napanee; R. J. McLaughlin, Toronto; G. A. Payne, Campbellford and E. Nield, Toronto.

Letters regretting their inability to attend were received from Judge Deroche, Col. S. S. Lazier, E. B. Fraleck and Herbert L. Smith. Four sons of older barristers were present, all of whom had been overseas, a unique feature.

Bacon And Ham Profits Fixed

OTTAWA, Nov. 26—Retailers of bacon and boned ham are limited to a margin or gross profit of 20 per cent, with an additional two cents per pounds for slicing, under an order issued by the Board of Commerce, bearing date of November 24, and signed by all three members of the Board.

The order contemplates its future application to retail sales of all kinds of pork and pork products, it is stated in the accompanying explanation and is the first order which has been applied to the retailers. They are given until December 24 to show why the order should not apply to all pork products, limiting the profit on other pork products to 25 per cent. after January 1st next.

New Home Rule Bill Making Good Progress

WILL BE INTRODUCED IN PARLIAMENT WITHIN NEXT TWO WEEKS — TWO PARLIAMENTS AND SENATE FOR IRELAND—WHAT SINN FEIN MAY ATTEMPT.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Nov. 26.—The new Home Rule Bill setting up two parliaments in Ireland with a Council or Senate of forty to be chosen by the two, will probably be introduced in parliament within the next two weeks. Daily sessions are being held by the cabinet committee in charge of the measure, the subject under discussion being finance, which is in charge of a sub-committee under the chairmanship of J. Austen Chamberlain, Chancellor of the Exchequer. Control of customs has always been a point of sharpest difference when other home rule schemes have been debated, and was one of the rocks upon which the Irish convention was shipwrecked. Control of police is another knotty point.

The most hopeful sign of an agreement is the silence which Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster leader, has preserved since the latest Irish kite was flown. Sir Edward has not issued any mandates to the Ulster volunteers to keep their powder dry, while the presence of two Unionist leaders, Walter Hume Long and Baron Birkenhead on the committee, shows that Ulster is tending towards conciliation. Another alternative remains that the Sinn Fein may capture the southern parliament and promptly declare Ireland an independent republic. It would be possible in such a case to carry on the work of Parliament without recognizing any imperial overlordship.

Two More Vessels Driven Ashore

Gale Continues on Lake Superior and Claims More Victims.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

SAULT STE MARIE, Mich, Nov 26—The storm that has swept Lake Superior since last Saturday showed no signs of abatement today, reports reaching here indicating that shipping generally was laying up in various harbors. A high northeast gale was lashing the east end of the lake and two more vessels unidentified in reports here have been driven ashore in a blinding snow storm.

Adriatic Situation Is Improving

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

LONDON, Nov. 26—Considerable improvement in the Adriatic situation is reported here as the result of a conversation in Paris between British, French, Italian and Jugo-Slav representatives. The latest indications are that there is a possibility of a compromise satisfactory to all parties including Captain Gabriele Dannunzio.

PROBE MYSTERIOUS DEATH OF SASKATCHEWAN WOMAN

Prince Albert, Nov. 25.—An inquiry concerning the death of Mrs. Marie Keen, aged 23, wife of A. J. Keen of Melfort, and daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Garston, who live about six miles from Weldon, was opened here by Provincial Magistrate MacEchen of Regina.

Mrs. Keen died at the Victoria Hospital in this city on October 29, and there have been various rumors to the effect that her death was due to unnatural causes. Eventually the Attorney-General's Department was applied to, and the latter ordered a complete inquiry.

Mrs. Keen had been living apart from her husband. It developed from the evidence of Chief of Police Denby that the woman had been interrogated by him at the Avenue Hotel on October 26 over the loss by a Mrs. Martin of Canwood of a purse containing $129. The woman had denied taking the purse, which was later found concealed in a davenport in the ladies' waiting room of the hotel. Later in the afternoon Mrs. Keen had come to the police station, and, in the presence of the Chief, had tried to drink iodine from a bottle, which the Chief of Police knocked from her lips before she had time to swallow any of the poison. Dr. McMillan was called, and the woman was later taken to the hospital, where she died three days afterwards.

Faces Five Charges Of Defalcation

PETERBORO, Nov. 26—James G. Bagley, the lawyer who faced charges in connection with the alleged operation of a still, was arraigned in Police Court on five charges of defalcation. These charges arise out of his law practise. Bagley now faces nine charges, three in connection with liquor, one that he performed a criminal operation and the five of defalcation. He was remanded until Thursday on the latter charges.

After spending the week-end in jail Bagley was allowed to go to his office, accompanied by a detective. Crowds of other lawyers and citizens were in the office demanding papers, titles and other legal documents that he held. He has forwarded to Toronto his resignation as a member of the Law Society of Upper Canada.

Denkine's Army Capture 10 Towns

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

LONDON, Nov. 26—General Denikine's army in Southern Russia is defeating the Bolsheviki having captured ten towns in three days and still advancing, according to a wireless from Moscow. Bolsheviki troops are entering Ukraine where they intend to stay, the despatch says.

Admiral Kolchak's forces in central Siberia are retiring rapidly, according to a despatch and the Reds have reached a point eighty-seven miles to the east of Omsk.

WAVE OF CRIME SWEEPS CHICAGO

Chicago, Nov. 26.—Among the approximately 150 persons taken into custody as a result of the crime wave that swept Chicago in the last three days, in which holdups, automobile thefts and safe blowing followed in rapid sequence, sixteen men and a woman today were in city jails charged with implication four murders, 100 saloon, pool room and street holdups and 150 house burglaries. Members of the band confessed to the more than 250 crimes, police asserted.

Reported robberies last night showed a falling off from the two previous nights. Street lights glowed despite the threatened coal shortage here after John J. Garrity, chief of police, said the orgy of crime Saturday and Sunday nights was due at least in part to street illumination in some sections being cut off as a coal conservation measure.

Defeat Of Hearst Government As Sir Sam Hughes Sees It

OPEN LETTER FROM FORMER MINISTER OF MILITIA GIVES FRANK EXPRESSIONS OF OPINION ON CONTROVERSIAL SUBJECTS—BLAMES "GERMAN GOLD" FOR MUCH TROUBLE.

The Lindsay Warder publishes the following open letter from Sir Sam Hughes:

To Dr. J. W. Wood, Lindsay, Ontario:
Dr. R. M. Mason, Fenelon Falls, Ont

Gentlemen:—Permit me to express my regret, in so far as you are both concerned at the result of the recent election. You have both gone down as the lads of the old "Victoria" went down in the Mediterranean, and as many thousands of the boys went down in the recent war—with your heads erect, facing the opponents of responsible government.

That the defeat is not due to yourselves, personally, but to the various causes abroad, is evidenced by the almost universal sweep in both city, town and country places in the Province.

But now is the time for sane and sensible people to pause and consider the situation.

GERMAN GOLD

There is now evidence that during the war, German gold inspired labor leaders in cities and towns throughout Canada as well as in the United States and the Empire at large, to strike and to hold up production of munitions.

That German gold also inspired the agitation to keep farmers' sons from going to the front because they were needed for production.

That German gold also inspired religious sects of various forms to preach "Peace at any Price" and "Conscious objection" and to refuse to fight for the defence of all that humanity holds dear, namely, liberty, home and loved ones.

That German gold has inspired and many believe is still inspiring, the movement to produce chaos throughout the Allied countries, especially in the United States, Canada, Great Britain and France. In case disunion and disruption should follow in these lands, the Treaty of Peace, recently signed, would soon become another "Scrap of Paper." One billion dollars of German gold spent successfully in this regard, might save her a taxation of many billions and impose it on her opponents. Therefore, it becomes the duty of every sane and sensible thinker to most seriously study the situation.

WHY THE DEFEAT

Why was the Hearst Government beaten? Not on its own immediate record, for no one specially found fault with it. It is true they were not regarded as an extraordinarily strong aggregation but they were accepted as faithful, honest and loyal.

In addition to the aim of the Kaiser to disintegrate the allied nations by the establishment of factions such as Labor Parties, etc., the beastly Bolshevist movement has also been active in inciting labor against capital; the farm laborer with nothing, against his employer; the townsman against the country-man; the country-man against the townsman; in short, general hell upon earth.

Unfortunately, in many of these fool agitations, a limited number of the clergy and other prominent citizens of the land have lent their support unintentionally it may be, to propagate these movements which are largely akin to Bolshevism. They certainly are not in accord with the principle of true Protestantism, or responsible government.

The Hearst Government is by no means free from blame. They certainly were wrong in resorting to the "Referendum" principle, which should find no place in a country under responsible government. It belongs to autocracies. The government should have proclaimed its policy, should have assumed responsibility for temperance, and have faced the issue like men.

Permit me to point out that I raised upwards of four hundred thousand men in the first three years of the war by voluntary enlistment, and there was no more drunkenness prorata among these gallant fellows than among any other class that I know of in Canada and yet the Hearst Government, yielding to fanatical cries, passed a crued harsh, drastic and repressive measure on prohibition which annoyed and angered hundreds of thousands of Ontario's best citizens—not of the drinking class, but of that great, big, broad self-controlled class that makes for the up-building of any land.

The principle of "Personal Liberty" which is the foundation rock of British liberty for nearly two thousand years, was cast aside and tyranny, repression, mistrust and humiliation took its place.

NO LIQUOR IN ARMY

But, you will reply "Did you not yourself, drive liquor out of your military camps?" Of course I did, and I would do it again. What place is there for liquor in a camp of young lads or what need? In doing so, I stood by the principle of "Personal Liberty." The condition was this. Thousands of gallant, clean young fellows wished to take part in the defense of the nation and to train themselves therefor. They would come to our ananual camps, which, unfortunately, in many instances were merely twelve-day debauches. The young lad, being under military discipline, was not a free agent as he would be at a public dinner, or in a public bar where he, being absolutely independent of all around him, could walk away or resent any aggression, as he might choose; but in military camps he felt himself under the control of his seniors. In far too many cases these senior were swash-bucking boozers, who, not content with taking a drink themselves would offensively insist on these young men drinking, and too often the boys, rather than fight or quarrel would yield.

My action therefore, was directed to maintaining the personal liberty of the boy from being offensively imposed by a boozing senior. In short, I protected the boy from having liquor forced down his throat on the one hand just as the sane, temperate, reputable, stalwart citezn, in his desire to quietly take a glass of liquor, might be protected from a ruthless and often irresonsible agitator who would knock down his arm and refuse to allow him his personal liberty.

This untimely and crude action of the Hearst Government gave a great impetus to the moonshiners, the bootlegger and the drug agent, and in a very few months assisted in developing an utter contempt for the observance of honest law and order. Indeed it ranks almost on a par in training people to break the law with the famous Miliatry Service Act and its kindred orders. The successful government of humanity lies in an open, manly observance of law and order, and in being careful not to encourage trickery, suspicion, hypocrisy and all debauching qualities that come with these.

MADE MANY ENEMIES

In this connection, the Hearst Government made hundreds of thousands of enemies. In one instance, not a thousand miles from Lindsay, I came across sixteen splendid citizens, not one of whom had ever been intoxicated in his lifetime, nearly every one of them was an Orangeman and all were Liberal-Conservatives; men whose families were a credit to the community, but who had been in the habit of keeping a little liquor in the house and using it when needed—who declared to me that some of them had paid two dollars to a doctor for a bogus certificate and four dollars and fifty cents for a bottle of poor whiskey, which, under ordinary conditions, should only have cost a small sum. They complained it was not the cost so much as the mistrust and humiliation imposed on them. Each and everyone of them, point-blank, refused to vote for the Hearst candidate. I merely mention this case to show that people like to have their independence recognized.

The Hearst Government was also sure of a strong opposition from the Knights of Columbus, the ultramontane wing of the Roman Catholic Church. But the peculiar feature of the case is that, owing to the action of the Hearst Government in assisting the Knights of Columbus' Hut Fund legislation, very many staunch Protestants not only voted, but worked hard against him and his candidates.

Very many were annoyed at the Hearst Government intruding itself in a Dominion matter and pledging support to the soldiers for a large gratuity. That this did not effect the soldiers' vote is evidenced by the fact that the great majority if that splendid body voted against the Hearst Government on account of the temperance issue.

WORKING AGAINST HEARST

Then the Referendum leaders were mostly working with the discordant elements against Hearst, so that the unfortunate man who gave the women the vote: who created the Farmers' Clubs; who passed the Referendum; who tried to please the soldiers and who pandered to the labor leaders "git it in the neck" from each and every one of them.

Moreover, the Hearst Government like the Union Government at Ottawa has not kept itself sufficiently in touch with the people or even with their supporters in the House. They were also carried away with the interested cry of "Uplift" by the Civil Service and others more prominent.

I am a fairly old hand in the business of studying humanity. I am a firm believer in standing by the principle of responsible government. I always oppesed a close corporation Civil Service. There is only one way to run a country. The people elect their members to Parliament on any platform that may present itself; from the dominant party among the members, the Prime Minister and Government are chosen and the members of Parliament supporting the Government, or the defeated Government candidates must assume the responsibility of making appointments. It has worked well in the Dominion of Canada and the system of mistrusting the people and isintegrating the Governments, both at Ottawa and Toronto must disappear. Members of Parliament must not be afraid to demand and assume responsibility.

"THE UPLIFTERS"

For a number of years, Canada in general and Ontario in particular have been burdened with a bunch of uplifter. Well-meaning men, maybe, with their sattelites, secured the ear of Sir Robert Borden and Sir William Hearst and these two governments. Union government at Ottawa, and Hearst government at Toronto have long been recognized by the large-sized halo surrounding each. To anyone who understands humanity, such was nauseating, and a child might discern that it would not last long. Unrest in the public mind found vent and the Hearst Government disappeared.

I do not like quoting Scripture in any public matter, but an old Scotch friend of mine came to my room the Defeat of Hearst Government as Sir Sam Hughes Sees It.

other night and opened up the Bible at Proverbs, chapter 31, verses 6 and 7, and read the words

"Give strong drink unto him that is ready to perish and wine unto those that be of heavy hearts;
"Let him drink and forget his poverty and remember his misery no more."

My Scotch friend then asked me if I had ever seen the paraphrase by Burns on these verses and he read me the following, which are very expressive but not quite so stately as the Biblical form:

"Give him strong drink until he wink,
That's sinking in despair;
And liquor guid to fire his bluid,
That's prest wi' grief an care;
There let him boose and deep carouse,
Wi' bumpers flowing o'er
Till he forgets his loves or debts
And minds his griefs no more."

Personally, I have been a strong advocate of temperance, but I am also a strong advocate of manly and womanly people—a people worthy of trust.

I need not assure you and the good people of Victoria and Haliburton Counties that I yield to no man of the uplift batch, or of any prohibition party in my desire, determination and action to have a temperate, law-biding, manly and womanly class. I yield to none in my practice of the virtues of temperance. I have always resented any man's attempt to induce me to drink. I have gone further and by education, suggestion, inspiring their manhood, rallying their latent principles of honor, teaching them that the Lord intended them to be something nobler than a drunkard. I have been instrumental in leading many men along right lines. Further, I have never seen manhood strengthened by repression. Compelling men to be sneakers and tricksters, encouraging almost forcing them to be hypocrites and non-observers of law and order has never yet made a great nation of a great people. These are my views. I would have people great and the only way to get them to be manly and womanly and leave them free. In another part of His teaching the mandate of the Almightly is "Let mankind be free."

UNREST WILL DISAPPEAR

In conclusion let me say, the spirit of unrest, the anarchy of Bolshevism of disruption and isunion, of selfish greed, of envy, will disappear in a year or so and dear old humanity will rally back to stable, honest, law-abiding policy. The cry against capital against the profiteer, against the man who has property will vanish. The envy of the labor man for the wealthy farmer will disappear. It will be recognized that to reach the top of the ladder, one must begin at the bottom and work his way squarely and honestly up. Farmers do not realize that they are charged with being the greatest profiteers in the land. The cry is frequently heard that it costs the farmer practically nothing to raise his crops. For example, one man said to me, "Farmer Blank had several hundred bushels of clover seed last year off a couple of small fields and he charged many dollars a bushel for that' And, he added, "That seed did not cost him five dollars a bushel and he should be compelled to disgorge." It was in vain that I pointed out that the question of supply and demand must rule with farmers as with others, and I further showed this gentleman that he, himself had not hesitated to make ten or fifteen dollars a day at munitions and similarly, if the farmer would have to disgorge several dollars a bushel on clover, would it not be fair to ask him to disgorge all but the dollar and ten cents a day on the pay he had received for making shells.

But all these things will settle themselves and when your next election comes on, let me hope that you will have more time to prepare, and that the people will have resumed their normal lines of thought on public matters.

Faithfully,
SAM HUGHES

Music and Drama

(What the Press Agents Say)

"SAHARA"

Louise Glaum, the screen's ablest portrayer of fascinating, admiration seeking, luxury loving woman, in "Sahara," a gripping emotional drama from the powerful pen of C. Gardiner Sullivan, enacted in the colorful settings of the Parisian cafes, the Egyptian desert and Cairo, comes to Griffin's for a thee days' engagement commencing tomorrow night. Mignon (Miss Glaum's role,) the spoiled darling of the Parisian stage who lives but for the admiration she finds in men's eyes, accompanies her husband, an American engineer to the Sahara desert only because he promises to later take her to Cairo. After six months of the deadly monotony of the desert when she saw no white person except her husband and child she becomes restless. Her shallow soul craved for flattery and attention. Then into the desert comes the sly fox who holds within her reach that which she craves. One night under the desert stars, she steals away from her husband and child with the Russian Baron who offers her all the gayety, the luxury and the adultation of Cairo for her friendship. Four years later, in the Palace of the Dawn, we find her possessed of every material want, but craving happiness. Mustapha, her Hindu servant and humble philosopher, attempts to guide her to happiness in the sacrificing of others, and leads her to the "Street of Beggars" where she gives alms to a child and a demented hasheesh-drugged beggar, and learns that they are her baby and husband. He is always seeking to kill the woman who wronged him. The great love for her husband that finally overwhelms and enobles the shallow woman and enables her to make the supreme sacrifice is a soul-stirring, heart-gripping emotion.

Five other selected comedies and Topicals are also being shown on the same program. Regular prices will prevail during the exhibition of "Sahara" in Belleville.

"MICKEY' FAREWELLS TONIGHT

"Mickey" is being shown at Griffin's tonight for the last time along with a funny two-reel Fox Sunshine comdey entitled "Dabbling in Society". and a thrilling western drama. The program is augumented by the appearance of Madge Evans, who renders ver yacceptably two popular selections and Frank Smith, late of the original 102nd Battalion, with a long service record in France, who sings "Mickey," the colored views of the song being very beautiful.

THRILLING RACING PLAY

"Fortune at Stake" a six-act all British film, is the feature offering at the Palace tonight. The racing scene of this offering is the most thrilling and realistic since "The Whip." "A Sammy in Siberia," a funny Luke comedy, British Canadian News and a splendid chapter of Vitagraph's thrill packed serial are also being offered on the same program.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG IN "THE ROAD THRU THE DARK"

"The Road Through the Dark," Clara Kimball Young's and Jack Holt's latest select picture will be seen here at the Palace tomorrow to Saturday, matinee daily. The story deals with Gabriel Jardee (Clara Kimball Young) the daughter of a very conservative Parisian family. She is in love with an American, John Morgan, who her parents disapprove of. She is sent away from Paris to a small village, where her aunt lives with her sister and brother. The war comes and the Germans enter the town. She becomes the mistress of a German Commandant. By means of a code which John understands she supplies the French Goverment with valuable information. In Berlin, she kills Karl and makes her escape to Paris, the events that follow will be found most unusual and interesting. A new comedy, British Canadian News, and the 4th chapter of the great "stunt" serial featuring Anne Luther and Charles Hutchinson are also being offered on the same program.

St. Thomas Ladies Hold Annual Bazaar

Fairyland of Beautiful Things at Parish Hall, Ornamental and Useful.

The Annual Bazaar of St. Thomas Church was opened yesterday afternoon at three o'clock under the auspices of the Women's Guild of the Church. The officers of the Guild are Mrs. J. A. McFee, President; Mrs. George N. Gorman, Secretary-Treasurer and Mrs. Milburn, Vice-President. The sale of work continued this afternoon, closing this evening with a social dance. The Bazaar is being held in the Parish Hall, which was beautifully decorated for the occasion.

The candy and pop corn booth is under the direction of the Girls' Guild and is beautifully decorated in yellow and white. The girls wear white gowns with quaint yellow aprons and Dutch caps. Miss Parker, president, and Miss Amy Wallbridge, convenor, are in charge with willing workers assisting them.

The booth where home-made cooking of all kinds including bread, cakes canned fruit and pickles is offered for sale, is under the supervision of Mrs. J. W. Evans and Miss Falkiner. The booth is beautifully decorated in Christmas colors, and various colored candles glowing from silver candle sticks.

The Red Book booth is presided over by Mrs. Charles Rogers, and is also beautifully decorated, being centred by a handsome wicker basket brought over from England on Sunday by Mr. and Mrs. Fred Wilson and was decorated by Mrs. Rogers. It is filled with cut flowers of every kind, and fern and ivy twined about the handle.

The novelty booth is conducted by the girls of the Church, all fancy articles being made by the girls. Here also is offered for sale a number of very beautiful handkerchiefs as the result of a handkerchief shower held about two weeks ago. The girls in charge are Misses K. Milburn and H. Ackerill.

The booth where cut flowers and potted plants are offered for sale is under the direction of Mrs. T. E. Ketcheson and Mrs. L. W. Marsh.

The table where fancy work of every, name, make and size, is displayed for sale is under the supervision of Mrs. Blackburn and Mrs. Lockwood.

The apron booth containing aprons of all kinds is under the direction of Mrs. Jos. Tickell, convenor.

The girls of St. Agnes School conduct a fancy work table of their own. All the articles being made and donated by the girls themselves.

Palmistry is conducted by Miss Ford and fortune telling by Miss Jardine and Mrs. Wheatley.

The tea room in the basement of the Church is beautifully decorated with yellow paper and yellow and mauve chrysanthemums. The hostesses being:—Mrs. Geo. Stuart, Mrs. Morrison, Mrs. Masson, Mrs. Andrews, Mrs. Corby, Mrs. Quick, Mrs. Burrows and Mrs. U. E. Thompson.

HUFFMAN—FORESTELL

A very pretty wedding was solemnized at the Church of Sacred Heart Marmora, on Monday morning, Nov. 24th at ten o'clock, when the Rev. Father Farrell united in marriage Miss Lilliam L. Forestell, daughter of Mrs. Catherine Forestell and Mr. Rockwell J. Huffman, of Belleville. the bride was very becomingly attired in a pretty suit of navy blue serge with hat to match and sable stole and muff, the gift of the groom.

The bride was attended by her cousin, Miss Loretta Forestell, of Madoc, who wore a handsome suit of brown broadcloth with sable furs and large black hat.

The groom was ably assisted by his brother, Mr. Vincent Huffman of Belleville.

After a dainty breakfast at the home of the bride's mother, the happy couple took the train for Belleville, where they were greeted with a shower of confetti and good wishes by their friends and the staff of the D. V. Sinclair Co. of which the groom is a valued member. After their honeymoon Mr. and Mrs. Huffman will reside in Belleville.

PULPIT OR PEW?

That the Church of today has not kept pace with changing conditions sufficiently to exert the beneficial influence it is capable of is a charge frequently voiced through the press by critics. The Kingston Why takes a different view of the question and asserts that the fault lies more with the pew than with the pulpit. The Whig says:

> Altogether too much criticism has been hurled at the Church. The critics overlook the fact that the Church visible does not consist of some sanctimonious group of narrow-minded ecclesiastics, but of all Christian people in the world. When, therefore, the Church is spoken of, let it be remembered that we are all part of it. The challenge to the Church to meet the demands of this age is a call to the individual citizen who answers to the name of Christian.
> It is doubtful if the Church in all its history has ever had such an influential body of laymen directing its missionary campaign work. Critics can talk as they like about the failure of the Church in this and in that, but the fact remains that the Church is the greatest influence for good in the world. Eliminate it and see what will happen. It created the ideal for which the Allies fought to a triumphant victory after four years of war. It has been called an inarticulate ideal, but whatever it was it was born in the minds of the defenders of liberty through the agency of the Christian Church. The Church may need a revival, but this can only be secured through a revival in the homes, in the family life. The new age is said to have presented a challenge to the Church to meet the new conditions, but the challenge is in reality to the individual membership of all sects. The greatest thing to be feared is for the religious condition of the new generation, for there has been a lamentable decline of religious teaching in the home during the past two decades. The children of no church body today know the Bible as they should know it. The past and the passing generations of deeply religious people received their Christian teaching in the home — not in the churches or the Sunday Schools. The present challenge to the Church can well be met, but what of the future? Nothing can take the place of the home for giving religious teaching. What will the present generation of youth contribute to the Church of the future?—

MR. CRERAR'S NOSTRUM.

Hon. T. A. Crerar, who left the Government because of disagreement with its tariff policy, now appears as the leader of the farmers' movement in the federal arena, a movement which, if the hopes of those participating in it are realized, will do for them in federal politics what the provincial movement has done for the farmers of Ontario. When Mr. Crerar declined the leadership of the Ontario farmers, which meant the refusal of the Ontario premiership, it was stated that he did so because of "other ambitions." He has now taken the field in Western Canada, upon the platform of the Canadian Council of Agriculture. Commending the platform to a farmers' meeting at Brandon, he declared that "The policy of protection is the greatest curse and drawback we could have in Canada; it has driven the people off the land into the cities." This is the issue upon which the next general election will have to be fought, at least in the western provinces, and it is worth while noting that the recent Liberal Convention, while taking a guarded position in regard to the tariff generally, did go on record as favorable to the removal of duties on wheat and wheat products, and other necessities, and of reductions upon other commodities.

The policy which Mr. Crerar now describes as a curse and a drawback is the policy for which the Canadian people declared by an overwhelming majority in 1878 and which has continued since that time as the solid foundation of Canadian growth and prosperity. It has made possible the establishment of great industries in Canada. It has brought great industries from the United States into Canada, and has created a home market which has been, and will continue to be, the best market for the products of agriculture. Without that market the rapid settlement of the Canadian West would not have been possible. Without those industries Canada would have had neither the population nor the wealth which made possible the splendid contribution in men, munitions and foodstuffs which stand to the credit of Canada as a war achievement.

Instead of this curse, Mr. Crerar proposes the adoption of other means for the raising of the revenue which is necessary to carry on the business of the country. These methods are set forth in the platform of the Canadian Council of Agriculture, and include direct taxation, income taxation, and an inheritance tax. The income tax we already have, and will necessarily have for a long time to come. It amounted in 1918-1919 to $9,349,719.80, as against a customs revenue of $147,169,187. Income taxation was resorted to first by the provinces, and was regarded for a time as a source of revenue which ought to be left to the provinces. The inheritance tax is in that position now. The Dominion cannot rely upon either of these sources except to a limited extent. If it leaves nothing for the provinces, then the latter must go to the Dominion for subsidy increases in order to make up the loss. If the income tax produces next year, as is hoped, from twenty to twenty-five millions on the basis of this year's assessment, the amount will equal only one-tenth of the ordinary expenditure.

Sir Thomas White has expressed the opinion that the income tax can never be the backbone of taxation in Canada, where the conditions are widely different from those in Great Britain. One of the difficulties in connection with the operation of this tax touches the farmer himself. To quote the former Finance Minister: "We have a very large proportion of our population engaged in agriculture, and I need not enlarge . . . . upon the extreme difficulty of determining, even with the best of good will on the part of the public engaged in agriculture, their income." That has been a practical difficulty, and one which Mr. Crerar, possibly, has not fully considered. Even if the farmers did pay income tax, the amount derivable from this source, for the reasons stated, would be inadequate as a substitute for the customs revenue.

By direct taxation, Mr. Crerar means, presumably, land taxation. He put that proposal before the House of Commons during the summer session, and the estimate of another western member was that a revenue of $75,000,000 from this source would mean an average tax of $320 to the Western farmer. The actual working out on this proposition would undoubtedly interest a western audience, were Mr. Crerar and his friends to undertake the necessary analysis. The curse of protection, be it remembered, "has driven people off the land into the cities," and Mr. Crerar proposes to attract people back to the land by the imposition of a burdensome land tax. It is a strange way of stimulating a back-to-the-land movement, and an equally strange way of attracting to Canada the stream of immigration which is necessary if the country is to go on growing and production to increase. The Crerar plan, if ever applied, would add to the financial burden of the farmer, while destroying the home market upon which he must depend for the sale of his products. It would exactly reverse the scheme upon which the country has progressed and the prosperity of the farmer has been made possible.—Montreal Gazette.

Hon. T. A. Crerar is reported as declaring to Western farmers that protection is a curse. Auto tragedies such as that at Buffalo are so common as to evoke only momentary comment. Annual records prove the world is paying a direful penalty for speed.

A Shillelagh at Work.
Toronto Telegram.

Let Hon. T. A. Crerar mention the rural districts of any settled country on earth that have failed to show almost the same percentage of decline of rural population that Ontario has shown in the last forty years. The Lauriers and the Siftons, whom Hon. T. A. Crerar followed for years, took more money out of the pockets of the western farmer with their freight tariffs than were ever taken out of the pockets of the western farmer with high customs tariffs. The section of western Canada that accepts Hon. T. A. Crerar as its spokesman seems to begrudge every dollar that is spent on the employment of labor in this province. Ontario is now afflicted with the Premiership of a two-by-four free trade bigot, and the ascendancy of a Cabinet of U.F.O.-Socialist free traders. The Ontario Premier and Cabinet agree with Hon. T. A. Crerar in his fool assumption that any policy which is obviously bad for INDUSTRIAL ONTARIO is necessarily good for AGRICULTURAL CANADA.

An Experiment in Boots.
Edmonton Journal.

A San Francisco boot merchant, Frank Werner, made an experiment with his advertising space recently. He wanted to find out if his male customers wished to buy $7.00 shoes or those which cost more. Accordingly he put on sale a considerable number of $7.00 shoes at $5.80, explaining that they were not the smartest novelty models, but were sensible and durable. He was willing to stand personally sponsor for each pair. At the same time he advertised shoes at $16. The first response to the advertisement came from a banker who bought the $5.80 shoes, and the second was from a stevedore, who entirely ignored the $5.80 pair and bought those at $16.00 Mr. Werner sold all of the low priced shoes, but continued to sell more expensive ones rapidly. On the whole, accordingly, he feels disposed to go in for the latter rather than the former. Can you blame him?

The Poet's Corner

A SONG OF DRYNESS.

"Clarion" in the Ottawa Journal contributes the following to the gaiety of the Ontario referendum campaign, and also announces that any who will are at liberty to sing the verses:

In good King George's glorious day
  When Canada, fair land, sir,
Was under prohibition's sway,
  Then everything was grand, sir;
For every man—both rich and poor—
  Was on the water wagon.
No booze could any one secure,
  In bottle, jar of flagon.

Chorus.
(First loudly, then softly).
For booze was banished from the land,
  That statement brooks no question.
(Though I still got my special brand
  To ease my indigestion).

Hotels were like Y. M. C. A.'s,
  The bars were quite deserted,
And soft drinks wandered down the ways
  Where whiskey once had flirted;
Then every man—both poor and rich—
  Would alcholic "sip" shun,
They never took a drink "as sich,"
  But just as a prescription.

Chorus.
(Very softly and with feeling)
For influenza swept the land,
  (You know that this is true, sir.)
And brandy was the only brand
  That really cured the "flu", sir.

And when the "flu" was overcome,
  We all had laryngitis,
The cure was old Jamaica rum,
  (It also cures the phthisis.)
While doctors said: "For housemaid's knee
  Old Scotch is the specific."
And all were lame as lame could be
  From East to the Pacific.

Chorus.
(Very loudly in a martial manner)
But still this fact I will maintain
  Until my dying day, sir,
No one could any booze obtain—
  Unless he knew the way, sir.

BEAUTY SECRETS!

Whereshe gets her good looks, her healthy skin, her pink cheeks, is known to every one, because it is apparent that it is not due to cosmetics, paint and powder. But the true womanly beauty comes from good health, and this good health is a woman's secret.

Health comes with good physical machinery and good spirits, an active digestion. A body free from pains and aches comes with a tonic known for over fifty years as the best "temperance" tonic and nervine for woman—namely, Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription. It can be obtained in any drug store in liquid or tablet form, or send 10c to Dr. Pierce Invalids' Hotel, Buffalo, N. Y.

Cleansing of the intestinal tract is important. Take castor oil or select a vegetable pill. Such a one is composed of May-apple, leaves of aloe, root of jalap, and made into tiny sugar-coated pellets, to be had at every drug store as Dr. Pierce's Pleasant Pellets.

It was midnight when Beaufort was encountered and he was partially drunk. Humphrey caught him by the arm and heard that his business had not been completed today, but was—once more—certain for 'next week.' Completed or not, however, Kent had to have money, and he made the circumstances of the case clear, a task which, in his companion's condition, was somewhat difficult. He said they were in new quarters, penniless and the woman demanded a deposit; their luggage was detained at the pension and could not be recovered unless he paid the Garins' bill, or, at all events, a substantial portion of it. In the meanwhile, they possessed literally nothing, and a good round sum on account of his claim was absolutely essential. 'Billy' was very grieved by the recital. He answered that he could lend him twenty francs and repeated with emotion that 'he never deserted a pal.' In the end Kent extracted fifty and secretly relieved even by this but dog-tired, dragged himself down the Rue Blanche toward the hotel.

Cynthia was waiting up for him and reading a sheet of an old newspaper, that had lined one of the drawers, to keep herself awake. She learnt the result of his expedition with gratitude. what she wanted and out of the remain what she wated and out of the remaining louis would be able to buy a hairbrush and one or two other immediate necessities in the morning. She kissed him, and retired to the next bedroom, where she prayed that the child would allow her a good night, and Kent, whose fatigue was so great that it was a labor to undress, bade her call him if there was any need for his assistance. It seemed but a few minutes afterwards when he was startled back to consciousnes by the baby's crying, and, listening in the darkness heard Cynthia moving about. Blundering to the door with half-opened eyes, he found her attempting to quiet the boy and to heat some food at the same time, and the weariness of her aspect made his heart bleed. The fire, which had been built up to last until the chambermaid's entrance had gone out and rocking the child on her lap with one hand, with the other the girl, seminude, held a saucepan over the flames of a candle. She rebuked him for coming up, for, 'poor fellow! he must be so tired.' He took the saucepan from her, and, fetching the candle from his own apartment, held the food to warm over the two, while maternity paced the floor. A clock in the distance told them the hour was three. At last a bubble rose upon the placid surface of the milk. The baby was fed and coaxed to repose again, and, oblivious now of everything but the desire to sleep, they dropped upon their beds and slept

CHAPTER XIX

"Good-morning, monsieur. Here is your chocolate."

"Ah, thank you! Put it down. And madame, has hers been taken in?"

"Oh, madame had hers three hours ago......Look, it is a beautiful day, monsieur!"

Then, when the waiter had let sunshine between the window-curtains and withdrawn, Kent would rise, and find Cynthia busy and hot, and either stirring more food over the fire or preparing the boy's bath. Afterwards she would carry him into the little enclosure opposite and what with her unfamiliarity with a nurse's duties and makeshifts she was put to, it often seemed to her that this was the only time that she was able to sit down until evening came.

Their meals, as on the day of the arrival, were all served in Kent's bedroom; but just as he was taking his seat at the luncheon-table, the baby, who was feverish and fretful would surely cry and she would be obliged to call out that Humphrey was not to wait for her. For dinner, she made desperate efforts. Before this the child was bathed once more and supposed to be already asleep and then further oatmeal had to be stirred and carefully watched for five and twenty minutes, an operation that entailed burning cheeks and occasionally despair, for the saucepan had a habit of boiling over without the slightest warning, and requiring to be filled and stirred for twenty-five minutes again. When the task was accomplished, there followed a hurried attempt to make herself look cool and nice before the soup appeared, for Kent was apt to be irritable if the baby did not wake at the very last moment and prevent her going in after all, the dinner-hour was very agreeable.

Thanks to the chambermaid, they had been able to dipsense with the tallow candles at sixpence each, and had obtained a lamp which was much more cheerful. The vin compris had turned out to be rather good, too, and after the appalling meals at the pension the cuisine struck them as quite first-rate. Not infrequently when the coffee was brought in, they sent down for liquors and their evenings, despite the worry and their evenings, despite the worry the money was coming from to pay the bill, were very jolly.

Stand Aghast At British Thirst

LONDON, Nov. 25.—The removal of all restrictions on the quantity of Scotch whiskey on the market led to an extraordinary demonstration of the hold that particular form of drink has on the British public. It has surprised the Government, overwhelmed the dealers, and thrown a chill of horror into the "Pussyfoots".

For three years the sales of Scotch whiskey have been strictly limited. To retailers was allowed only a moderate percentage of the number of bottles they had sold in the beginning of the war and the spirits were reduced in strength 30 per cent, and increased in price by 150 per cent.. For a large part of the population Scotch whiskey almost ceased to exist. Saloons usually, clubs not infrequently, ran dry of this whiskey. Merchants hated the sight of their friends in fear of the inevitable, "You might save me a bottle of Scotch, old man." Newspapers sent out reporters to write up the comparative aridity of different districts, and gone altogether was the pleasant invitation at a friend's house to take a drop of something before starting home. England, and even Scotland, bore it patiently, comparatively.

It was taken as a part of the war burden, one more sacrifice on the sacred cause of democracy. Nightly thousands of men discussed another reason to hate the Sun, but they dreamed of peace and a good time coming. Yet when the armistice was signed and still whiskey was short questions were asked in the House of Commons and the ministers gave evasive replies. Hundreds of thousands of soldiers were demobilized, each with a healthy thirst, and still the Government refused to put more Scotch on the market. There was plenty in stock. Reports from Scotland told of warehouses bursting with millions of gallons in casks and ships, it was declared, were coming from America with barrels of the Bourbon the United States had failed to drink before July 1.

Temperance influences, it was whispered, were at work in the Cabinet. Lloyd George, it was hinted, had a deep scheme to wean the people from strong drink. By mere disuse prohibition was to come by a sidewind. Still the British public stood it with a peculiar patience.

Then on Monday came the bombshell. A member, to please his constituents, asked a perfunctory question about relaxing restrictions. The most sanguine of the newspapers expected merely a slight increase in the supply, but the Food Controller arose and, with a pleasant allusion to Christmas, asserted the public might buy all the whiskey it pleased. The effect was instantaneous, and marvellous. Everyone rushed to the spirit dealers. Queues were formed before stores, automobiles and vans were kept driving up, mail orders were sent in by the score. Men who for months had not had a bottle in their homes demanded half a dozen at once, and club stewards hurried to fill up their diminishing stocks.

It has been a hard week for the dealers. There is plenty of Scotch in bond but very little for sale. It has to be blended, bottled and labelled and then committed to the tender mercies of the railroads. It is absolutely impossible to fill all the orders immediately and a shortage will continue for weeks, but the restrictions are off at last and the Food Controller will ledge that every war-worn Briton can have a happy Christmas in the knowhave his Scotch if he'll only pay 10 shillings and 6 pence a bottle for it.

AFTER A HARD DAY'S WORK

rub the tired muscles with a few drops of the soothing, refreshing, antiseptic liniment, Absorbine, Jr., You will find it pleasant and convenient to use and remarkably efficacious. This liniment invigorates jaded muscles, limbers the joints and prevents second day soreness and lameness after a strenuous, tiresome day of sport or work.

America's best athletes and trainers use Absorbine, Jr., to relieve strains and wrenches and also as a rubdown before vigorous exercise to prevent such conditions.

Absorbine, Jr., is concentrated and therefore economical—only a few drops are required at an application. One ounce Absorbine, Jr., to a quart of water or witch hazel makes an invigorating rub-down and general purpose liniment.

CATTLE MARKETS

UNION STOCK YARDS.

TORONTO, Nov. 25.—With nearly 9,000 cattle on sale at the Union Stock Yards yesterday, the bulk of the sales were made up of lightweight cattle, and the prices were generally 25c to 50c lower.

For all other grades the market was slow and prices lower. Canners, the bulk of them sold at 5c a lb., while last week they sold at $5.35. Medium cows were slow of sale at 50c off. Choice butcher cows sold at about steady prices.

With about 6,000 sheep and lambs on the market yesterday, the choice weight lambs sold for 14c to 14¼c. The market was steady to a little stronger than last week. There was a good demand for all choice sheep with all classes selling steady. The calf market held steady.

With quotations on yesterday's hogs based for the most part on last week's prices, the market held about steady, the packers making no bones about standing out for another drastic cut of $1 clean off the bat, making it 14½c to the farmer, 14¾c f.o.b., 15¾c fed, and 16c weighed off.

Drives Car Through Window.

LONDON, Ont., Nov. 25.—Serious injuries to his head and back were suffered Saturday by Arthur Garden, 453 St. James street, when he was struck by a motor car driven by Rev. T. D. McCullough, a retired minister. Mr. McCullough, in striving to save Garden, who was crossing Harvard street, turned his car through a plate glass window in the Ford motor plant, Garden was taken to St. Joseph's Hospital, and is reported to be resting easily.

HIGH FINANCE IN TIRE SALES

TORONTO, Nov. 25—Exponents of high finance were Frank and Albert Thomas, King street west; Michael and Samuel Gellar, Baldwin street; Jake Goldbar, Ross street, and Harry Schwawrtz, Queen street west, who were arrested over the week end by Detective-Sergeants Koster, Mitchell and Archibald on charges of receiving auto tires to the value of $1,200, alleged to have been stolen from Gorrie's Garage, Victoria street, during the past few weeks. It is alleged that for the tires—43 covers and 82 inner tubes—the alleged receivers paid only $187, or less than 20 per cent. of their actual retail value. Reginald Johnston, Gloster streets, is under arrest on a charge of stealing the tires from Gorrie's where he formerly worked. The Gellar brothers are out on $5,000 bail and the others on $2,000.

BODY OF WORKMAN FOUND ON TRACKS

TORONTO, Nov. 25—Leaving his room at 24 Coady avenue on Saturday night in fine spirits, Malcolm McKay, aged 45, was found dead on the south line of the C.P.R. tracks at Sherbourne and Princess streets early Sunday morning. Wounds on the body showed that the unfortunate man had been struck by a tarin. McKay, the police say, was found by H. Roberts, 22 Markham street, a city nightwatchman, as Roberts was making his rounds. Investigation by the police showed that deceased left his home at eight o'clock Saturday night to unload some cars for the C. P.R. by whom he was employed. He never arrived at his destination, however, and nothing was seen of him again until his body was found on the tracks.

INCREASE FOR EXPRESS MEN

MONTREAL, Nov. 25—A compromise offer has been made by the Canadian Express Company to its employees regarding their demand for a new schedule.

The offer includes an agreement as to the two weeks' vacation clause and provides for a general increase on wages whereby those receiving less than $100 a month would receive a 15 per cent increase; those getting from $100 to $110 a 12 per cent. increase; and all getting more than a $110 a month a 10 per cent increase. It is understood that the employees will accept the offer. Their schedule had asked a reduction of mileage basis to 5,000 miles per month, with one-quarter cent for extra mileage, and an increase of 25 per cent on the present wage scale.

TOBACCO USERS PAY

Ottawa, Nov. 25.—Inland revenue returns for October show an increase of slightly over half a million dollars as compared with October 1918. The excise tax on tobacco is now the largest source of revenue for this department the amount collected during October being $2,767,685 whereas the tax on spirituous liquor and malt brought in only slightly more than $800,000. War revenue stamps yielded $1,103,197 for the month.

How Much Tobacco Will My Heart Stand

A Question Vital to Every Man Who Smokes or Chews

IT MAY COST A PRECIOUS LIFE TO FIND OUT BY EXPERIMENT.

The heart of every user of tobacco bears a double burden. It does its allotted task and then fights nicotine for supremacy. As long as the heart wins he lives; when it loses he dies, but before the final victory of nicotine you pass through many stages of decline and decay and suffer many pangs. Hearts are like human beings some are stronger than others; therefore, some hearts will stand more tobacco than others, but there is a limit to what any heart can stand. The man who puts this additional strain on his heart a dozen times a day by smoking cigarettes, a pipe or cigars—or chewing tobacco—is taking a madman's chance with health and life to lose and nothing to win but the chance that he may not lose them. He is indulging in a costly habit at the expense of precious health. Ask any doctor anywhere, and he will tell you that using tobacco is injurious and that it is far better to quit the habit than to experiment to find how much tobacco your heart will stand without serious results.

But the thought of quitting is unpleasant to most men—even to those who know that tobacco injures them—and to really quit takes more will power than they have, and causes more suffering than they can voluntarily endure. To quit the habit make it easy for yourself by getting Nicotol tablets and taking them as directed. The habit really quits you, and its departure is a pleasure equal to its indulgence.

If you want to know how much easier it is to quit the habit with Nicotol than without it, go twenty-four hours without tobacco and note what an effort it costs you; then begin using it as usual and take Nicotol tablets. At the end of a week discontinue smoking or chewing for a day, and it is probable you will have no desire to resume. At least your desire will be greatly diminished, and another week or two should make it not only possible, but a pleasure, to quit.

Note.—Dr. Connor, formerly of Johns Hopkins Hospital, under whose advice Nicotol has often been used, said when this statement was shown to him: "I have known Nicotol to conquer the tobacco habit in less than ten days' time, and I can therefore recommend it highly." When the doctor's statement was shown to one of our leading druggists he said: "Nicotol is truly a wonderful remedy for the tobacco habit, way ahead of anything we have ever sold before. We are authorized by the manufacturers to refund the money to every dissatisfied customer, and we would not permit the use of our name unless the remedy possessed unusual merit." Nicotol is sold in this city under an iron-clad money-back guarantee by all up-to-date druggists. (5)

YOUNG BOY MUTILATES SEVERAL DUMB ANIMALS

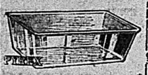
BARRIE, Nov. 24—Wilmer Lounds, a boy of fourteen, whose home is in Essa township, about seven miles northeast of Alliston, appeared before Judge Vance to answer a very unusual crime, that of mutilating dumb animals. He pleaded guilty and was sentenced to the Industrial School for an indefinite term.

The offences ere committed in the early fall and spread pretty well over the west side of Essa township.

A large number of calves and sheep had big gashes ripped in their sides, a two-year-old bull was so badly cut that it died, and one two-year-old heifer was tied up in a fence corner, her body gashed, and three inches cut from the end of her tongue.

When asked for an explanation of his conduct the boy said he did not think anything of the deeds when committed, but now realized that he deserved to be punished for it. The boy is entirely uneducated, having never attended school.

That a boy should be allowed to grow to fourteen years without any schooling was the subject of some sharp comment from the Judge.



PYREX

PYREX SAVES FOOD, FUEL AND LABOR.

PYREX saves about one-half the fuel usually required, because it absorbs nearly all the oven heat and bakes food quickly.

PYREX saves food in many ways. Meats, vegetables, etc., when cooked in PYREX, retain their natural color and flavor to such a degree that economy may be practiced in buying the less expensive kinds and yet have delicious food. Most foods usually cooked on top of the stove can be better prepared in the oven.

PYREX saves labor—it is always free from grease and odors, for nothing can penetrate the hard smooth surface. You can wash it as easily as your china and silver.

Every practical shape and size for baking is made in PYREX. It is ready for immediate use and never discolors, rusts, crazes, dents or chips.

Salute the Ham and—

Think of All the Misguided Dyspeptics Who Refuse the Good Things to Eat for Fear of Indigestion. No Trouble Like That if You Follow Meals With Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablets.

Lay a slice of broiled ham on a white plate with a couple of nicely fried eggs and there you have a picture. Salute the autocrat of the breakfast table.

But, you say, I can't eat ham and, —they don't agree. This is the sort of prejudice a host of people have against many of the most tempting dishes, people who have just as much trouble with a glass of milk or oatmeal as they do with fried onions. Try eating what you like and follow your meal with a Stuart's Dyspepsia Tablet to relieve possible gassiness, rumblings, drowsiness, sour risings, heartburn, water brash, and the "stuffy" feeling after eating. These Tablets contain harmless ingredients that act with an alkaline effect just as the stomach does when it is perfectly normal.

Many physicians prescribe them for indigestion, dyspepsia and other digestive disorders as they are sold in all drug stores everywhere in the United States and Canada. The druggist recommends them as among his steady staples for they really give relief and are highly appreciated.

'Tis true that clergymen seem to be among the poorest paid professional people, yet they invariably have

Tamworth Girl Writes From Japan

The following letter was received from Miss Luella Rorke, daughter of Rev. S. G. and Mrs. Rorke, Tamworth, on her arrival in Japan, for missionary work:—

Tokyo, Japan,
Sept. 15th, 1919

Dear Ones at Home,—This has been such a wonderful day that it seems like a dream. I shall try to tell about it, but mere words can't do it justice. Well it began with a typhoon last night (before leaving the steamer) which sent the waves to the upper deck. We were certainly rocked in the cradle of the deep. People who had boasted of not being sea-sick all the way out had to give in on the last night. I managed to come through with a perfectly well behaved stomach. I made record in our party of seven. The rest were all ill. Congratulate me. When I peeped from the port hole this morning, I was overcome by the sight of land and many boats. We were almost in Yokohama. I didn't lose much time in getting on deck. After breakfast we passed the quarantine inspectors. We just filed past the Japanese doctors in a row and they looked us over. Miss Jost tried to tell us that we all had to stick out our tongues at them, but we didn't do it. Then we had to have our passports examined. We stood in a jam for an hour or so. After this ceremony I took it upon myself to look after my baggage. I made connections with a Japanese boy who had come on. (We were in dock by this time.) He had my baggage well under way by the time my guardian, Mrs. Pensent, came to our room. We then got off and found two of the young ladies from Azabu to meet us. There followed a perfect nightmare of baggage location and inspection. I found my various trunks, bags, etc., at three different parts of the dock. When I had everything examined but my big box, it seemed impossible to get any one to go away over to where it was. The "Seniors" seemed to be jabbering "Japanese" in a perfectly amazing manner, but no one seemed to get around to my box. It was nailed up and I did not want it opened. At last I got desperate and took the matter in my own hands. I smilingly at the chief inspector and indicated the direction. He smiled back and paid no more attention to me. I smiled again and yet again. He soon began to recognize that I was shadowing him and so he followed me across to my box. He talked Japanese to me and I talked Canadian to him. He frowned at the nails in the box, and I looked pleasant and tried to enumerate the contents. He didn't understand a word. At last an American gentleman came to my rescue with a broad grin, and told him "books and bedding" in a way that convinced him, and I was passed. It was fun. When all our stuff was put on a cart, we each scrambled into a rubber-tired jrikiska and trotted off for all the world like the pictures. Then I began to realize where I was. We then went to the station and had lunch. I bodily launched in and had currie and rice for my first meal in Japan. We then all got into an electric car for Tokyo. I thought I had looked my eyes out of my head the first hour going through the Rocky Mountains, but I am sure they poped out so far during that trip that you could have knocked them off with a stick. The houses with tile roofs and open fronts, palm trees, rice fields, children with babies on their backs, paper umbrellas and all the rest of it are actually true. The children took a great deal of interest in us. I would have given a lot for a snapshot of three little girls with babies on their backs who looked us all over while we waited for a street car. This is 5th Avenue in Tokyo. A few doors from us is a palace in which a prince is interned, second edition of Prince Arthur only less guesome I hope. It is the heir to the Korian throne. At last we came to Yo Gakka. Everything has a high wall with a gate-keeper's cottage. Some day I will try and describe the gardens that we enter. They are beautiful. The school is quite large and the "foreign rooms are at one end." We were immediately served afternoon tea after we arrived in a big dining room. Then we rested and dressed for dinner. What did we have? Roast beef with potatoes baked in the pan, boiled beets and another Japanese vegetable like our little green beans. Then tomato and cucumber salad, and after that a huge plumb pudding. We then visited for a while with the other folks and then went to bed. The maid had draped my bed with mosquito neeting. My rooms are lovely, a large combination bedroom and a study, with a bed turned into a couch in the day time, and a dressing room off it with lots of shelves and nails. I have two little maids to wait on me. They come and go like fairies and leave me in perfect order. They make my bed and brush up and dust my room in the mornings, and at night turn down my bed and hang the netting and do anything else I wish. Rising bell at 6 a.m. and at 7 we have prayers and at 7.30 we have breakfast. We have fresh fruit, porridge, toast and strawberry jam and finger bowls. The maid, Oheda San, waits on us most faithfully. There are nine in our family. There is so much to tell that I get impatient at having to write it all. However, there will be more letters. I will have to stop this. It is to be continued. The steamer letters and snaps have been a great boom to me. I never saw anything like the way this country makes your face to shine. Pereperation exceeds from every pore. Thanking you all for past favors and hoping to hear from you all very soon.

Yours with much love.
LUELLA RORKE.

Y.M.C.A. Notes

International Convention.

Messrs. F. S. Deacon, E. P. Frederick and P. F. Brockel returned from Detroit where they attended the International Convention of the Young Men's Christian Association. They report the largest convention that has ever been held in the history of the association. The final returns showed that there were 3146 regular delegates present, 71 fraternal, and guests which was by far the laagest gathering that had ever come together in the history of the North American Association. The largest previous convention attended had been 2,200. The report of the International Committee as given in the early sessions of the convention showed an advance in all lines of activities on the continent and also in the foreign work. The various committees reporting on the different phases of the work all sounded a note of advance.

Some of the important reports were as follows: The Commission on Occupation of the Field, the Commission on the Practice of Prayer, Commission on Vocational Training, the Commission on the Conservation of the Values of the War Work, the Retirement Plan for Employed Officers, the relations of the Y. M. C. A. to the Churches. The latter report was of special significance in view of the great Forward Movement planned by the Evangelical Churches of North America. This report should be read by everyone interested in such relationships.

In addition to the very large delegation from Canada and the United States the British National Council was represented by Mr. Chamberlain and Mr. Harry Holmes, general secretary for Australia and New Zealand and representatives from the following countries: Brazil 1, China 7, Cuba 2, Denmark 1, Greece 1, India 4, Japan 6, Corea 1, Mexico 6, Peru 1, Philippines 1, Portuguese 1, Russia 2, Switzerland 1, Syria 2, Egypt 1.

Many phases of the work were emphasized in the presentation of the different speakers. Industrial, Railroad, Physical, Boys, and General Work—all were carefully considered and the results of the recent great efforts made on behalf of the Soldiers and Sailors were thoroughly discussed with a view to discovering the lessons from, and points in this work that might be adapted to a regular program.

Distinguished speakers who were heard were: Alford E. Marling, Rev. J. Timothy Stone, Chicago; Ven. A. W. Rowell, Ottawa; H. Churchill, Ohio; Bishop F. MacConnell, Dr. R. E. Speer, New York; Dr. Tice of Detroit; Col. General E. Birks of Montreal; Hon. Josephus Daniels, American Navy; Major-General C. P. Summeral, U.S.A.; John R. Mott and G. Sherwood Eddy, and a number of others who took part in the discussions and debates.

One of the outstanding addresses of the convention was made by Mr. Eddy at the close of the Sunday afternoon meeting. Mr. Eddy has been around the world in the interests of the Foreign work since the armistice was signed and brought a stirring message

FIRE AT PORT DOVER DESTROYS ROUNDHOUSE

Port Dover, Nov. 25.—The Grand Trunk roundhouse was destroyed by fire, together with two passenger engines. The cause is unknown. The crew of the steamer Commodore Perry of Erie, Pennsylvania, coupled the hose of the village hand fire engine to the steamer hose, and by fighting for hours a fire which had spread to a large pile of kindling, prevented the destruction of two passenger trains and several freight cars nearby.

MINERALS ON FARMS OF SASKATCHEWAN

Some interesting mineral deposits have recently been discovered in Saskatchewan, including common salt 98% pure, iron pyrites, practically pure; sodium sulphite, bituminous coal and a high-grade brick clay. In each case the find was made by farmers who have filed claims with the Provincial Government covering mineral rights. They have seemingly discovered another phase of the possibilities of 'mixed farming' on the prairies.

Of the salt there is said to be enough to supply every table in Canada and leave a lot for export, but the man holds the land—it is near Wilkie—has an exaggerated idea of what constitutes a fair division of profits in return for capital and is holding out for a long price.

The sodium sulphite, which has been discovered on the Bengough-Radville line of C.N.R., near Harvey, is estimated at about 6,000,000 tons.

Should a plant be located there is coal within three miles and in addition there are large quantities of limestone which would permit the manufacture of sodium carbonate used in the manufacture of soap. Sodium sulphite is worth $20 to $30 a ton and is in demand by pulp mills.

The iron pyrites deposit is near Elbow, in the bend in the South Saskatchewan River. The find is said to be one of the most valuable discoveries in the province as the supply is almost inexhaustible. Overlying the pyrites is a fine grade of brick making clay. Sulphuric acid is made from iron pyrites and is worth about $35 a ton.

Andrews and Cruikshank, analytical chemists, who, for several years have been working under the auspices of the Provincial Government, state that there is considerable interest being taken in the samples of minerals, salt and clay. British manufacturers are making enquiries and seem to be alive to the possibilities of developing these resources. This interest is encouraging as giving promise of the required capital for development.

Suffered Nearly Half Her Life

Mrs. Simpson Tried to Find Relief From Trouble of 25 Years Standing.

"I spent about half of my life in a useless search for something that would relieve my stomach trouble and at last found what I needed in Tanlac," said Mrs. Abigail Simpson, of 64 Uxbridge St., west, Toronto, Ont.

"My appetite was poor," she continued, "and I just had to force down enough to keep going. Most everything disagreed with me and often the least little thing would upset me, and I would be sick with nausea for a week at a time, too weak and lifeless to do a thing. I would get up in the morning feeling heavy and stupid. My liver was sluggish, my skin yellow and I had a dull, mean headache most all the time. This went on, in spite of all I could do, for twenty-five or thirty years and I lost all of thirty pounds in weight.

"Hearing so much about Tanlac, I decided to try it and before I had finished my first bottle I felt greatly improved. I kept on taking Tanlac and soon my appetite was normal and I can enjoy my meals and never have nausea or any other trouble. My liver is active, that dull, sluggish feeling is gone and I sleep like a baby and am getting back my strength and energy and am now able to do all my housework without getting the least bit tired."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto, by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell, and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely.

WANTED FOR BURGLARY

The police here are in receipt of the following notice from the Chief of Police at Sault Ste. Marie: Wanted for burglary—Arthur Levigne, Canadian, French, ex-soldier, age 25, height 5 feet 3 inches, believed to be dressed in grey suit and rain coat. Stammers or stutters when speaking, may have recent scar on nose or face, also Lesour, of whom we have no description. These men, on the night of November 14th, broke and entered a store and stole 1 knife edge, Napoleon case watches, diamond rings with following numbers scratched on inside: No 1426, 1444, 1421, 1457, 1422; several bracelet watches, wrist watches, assorted gold rings, wedding rings, watch chains, lockets.

SMALL POX ON TRAIN

Train No. 22 on the Midland division of the G.T.R. was held up on Saturday last by the Lindsay authorities owing to a severe case of smallpox on board. The case was detected by a lady passenger, who is a trained nurse. The victim was a young man, who was on his way from Markham to Campbellford. The train was stopped and Dr. McAlpine, M.H.O., and Dr. Blanchard, Lindsay, took charge. The young man was sent to an Isolation Hospital and the train was disinfected and fumigated. Most of the passengers left the train between Blackwater and Lindsay, as soon as the case was discovered, and when the doctors arrived, only three passengers were found on board Conductor Jones was in charge of the train.

PROF. GILL APPOINTED

Official announcement is made of the appointment of Prof. L. W. Gill, Kingston, to the position of Director of Technical Education, Department of Labor. This is a new post, the creation of which was made necessary by the action of Parliament, in voting the sum of $10,000,000 to be spent on the encouragement of technical education throughout Canada. The money for the most part is to be spent by the provinces on the basis of agreements to be reached with the Provincial Governments, in much the same manner as Federal votes in aid of agriculture have been distributed. Prof. Gill, who will now take up his work, served with the Canadian forces overseas, being in command of the 46th Battery. He has been head of the electrical engineering department of Queen's University for the past fifteen years.

RETAIL MERCHANTS APPROVE

The Retail Merchants Association meeting last evening took the form of a Round Table discussion and the salient points of the extension and reorganization movement of the Board of Trade were well brought out by questions asked the members of the Canadian City Bureau team led by Mr R. A. Crosby, the director. The problems the retailers face and their interest in the welfare and future were frankly considered and the unanimous opinion prevailed that the big need was more faith and less fear, coupled with co-operation. At the conclusion of the meeting the following resolution was heartily and unanimously adopted: Moved by Mr. Jennings, seconded by Mr. Dolan, and resolved that we, the Retail Merchants, endorse most heartily the movement for reorganization and expansion of the Board of Trade. Mr. W. B. Hanley, secretary of the Retail Merchants Association presided.

TRACKMEN'S SOCIAL

On Monday evening the Locomotive Engineer's Hall, Pine street, was the scene of an animated gathering of Trackmen. About forty G. T. R. Section Foremen and Trackmen, stationed between York and Belleville, were attending the social given by the Brotherhood of Maintenance of Way Employees. During the early part of the evening card games were indulged in and enjoyed by those present. The big event, however, was the presentation of an easy chair, smoking set and electric lamp to Mr. Thomas Clare, who after twelve years as Supervisor of Track on the 7th District has retired from his position, Mr. H. W. Lindstorm, President of the Maintenance of Way Employees' Organization, made the presentation on behalf of the Foremen and Trackmen, and in an eloquent address referred to Mr. Clare's long and loyal service to the Grand Trunk Railway Co., to the cordial relations which always had existed between the Supervisor and his Foremen, and to the respect and esteem, in which Mr. Clare was held by all who knew him. Mr. Clare, although completely taken by surprise, in a few well chosen words thanked the men for the beautiful and useful presents and for the co-operation and good will he had always had from his men. The twelve years he had put in as Supervisor, he said, he counted as the happiest years of his life, because he had found the Trackmen on the 7th District devoted to their duties, faithful and loyal, and he counted himself happy to have won such mens' esteem, respect and good will. A splendid supper was served. Several toasts were given and responded to. Speeches, songs and stories followed, and it was in the wee, small hours when the gathering, which will long be remembered by those who had the privilege to be present, broke up.

DRANK SACRAMENTAL WINE

Burglars on Monday night gained an entrance to the Sunday School rooms of the Baptist Church at Port Hope, and apparently enjoyed themselves. After disposing of two bottles of sacramental wine, they ransacked the Secretary's desk and removed the money from the birthday box. The two empty wine bottles were found in the entry to the church so it is evident that the thieves remained in the building long enough to drink the contents.

Last Message Of Prince Of Wales To His Canadian Countrymen

"WILL NEVER BE HAPPY IF MANY MONTHS ELAPSE WITHOUT A VISIT TO MY HOME ON THIS SIDE OF THE ATLANTIC."

OTTAWA, Nov. 27.—"I can never forget it, nor can I express the whole of my deep gratitude for the open-hearted welcome which my Canadian fellow-countrymen and women have given me." The foregoing is from a farewell message from his Royal Highness the Prince of Wales, which has been received by his Excellency the Governor-General.

The message follows:

H.M.S. Renown, Barrington Passage

"The Renown is weighing anchor and I feel that my first visit to Canada is really at an end. I can never forget it, nor can I express the whole of my deep gratitude for the open-hearted welcome which my Canadian comrades in arms and all my Canadian fellow-countrymen and women have given me.

"Will you please convey this message of thanks, most inadequate, though it be, to Sir Robert Borden and the whole Dominion Government, whose care and hospitality throughout my visit have been so generous and so kind. The last four months will influence the whole of my life and I shall never be happy if many months elapse without a visit to my home on this side of the Atlantic.

"My best wishes to all the people of Canada till we meet again.

(Signed) "EDWARD P."

Offered A Seat On Ry. Commission?

Bracebridge Hears That Ecclestone Had a Choice of Several Positions.

BRACEBRIDGE, Nov. 27—According to a gentleman who is acquainted with all the details, G. W. Ecclestone, Conservative M.P.P., for Muskoka, was offered the position now vacant on the T. & N. O. Railway Commission in the event of him deciding to give up his seat.

Mr. Ecclestone, says this informant, was recently approached by the Government through the medium of a prominent Toronto K.C., who said that the Government was anxious to have Hon. Manning Doherty, Minister of Agriculture, secure the Muskoka seat and that it would be advantageous for the district to have him do so. Certain inducements in the way of a model farm were said to have been offered Ecclestone, it is said. The railway appointment was mentioned, and when Mr. Ecclestone declared that it had no attraction for him the K. C. spoke of an important post in connection with the Hydro Electric.

From the first Mr. Ecclestone stated that he had no intention of resigning his seat, but stated that if it were in the best interests of Muskoka he would do so without any reward for so doing, and before making a final answer he desired to lay the matter before the district executive of the Conservative party. This was done, and the district executive decided to have nothing to do with the matter. There is no truth in the rumors that Mr. Ecclestone has or is about to resign his seat.

Bulgaria Signs Peace Treaty

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Limited

PARIS, Nov. 17—M. Stuambuliwsky Premier of Bulgaria, signed the treaty of peace between his country and the allied powers at Neuilly town hall this morning.

The simple staging of the ceremony and the clouded skies, combined with the probably inadvertent but complete isolation of Bulgaria's delegate at the peace table, spread a sort of gloom over the proceedings. Stambuliwsky occupied a seat at the extreme corner of the table nearest the outside door with a number of vacant seats between him and the other delegates.

Will Reorganize Canadian Miljtia

Four Generals Are Preparing Report—Currie in Saddle Soon.

OTTAWA, Nov. 27—The committee composed of Major-Generals Sir Wm. Otter, Sir Edward Morrison, W. G. Watkin, and Brigadier-General McNaughton has nearly completed its tour of the Canadian military districts, and it is expected that in a comparatively short time it will be able to present a considered report on the reorganization of Canada's permanent militia forces. The committee is now at Halifax and will visit Quebec, Kingston, and London districts in the near future. This will complete the inspection tour.

Sir Arthur W. Currie, Inspector of Canadian forces, is expected to arrive in Ottawa about the first of Dec. to take up his new duties, and the committee is expected to confer with him shortly after his arrival.

After further conferences, it is anticapted that the program of militia reorganization will shortly be drawn up and the details worked out with the various districts.

McGill Student Saves Unknown Man

MONTREAL, Nov. 26—One of the previously untold, but none the less heroic, acts in connection with the Laval University fire was revealed when College chums of Pierre Boucher, a French-Canadian medical student of McGill, told of how he plunged into the burning building and rescued an unknown man who had been overcome by the dense smoke. Boucher and a Laval medical student, Lawrence Genest, had visited the university, Genest being interested in some faculty elections, he went in to obtain the information he was looking for and Boucher, believing his friend was still inside, rushed inside, although the police tried to hold him back, and made his way to the third floor, stumbled over the form of an unconscious man and with the help of a policeman got him out and had first aid administered to him. Later Boucher found that his chum had escaped.

Tries Patience Of Uncle Sam

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—The new flare-up over the Mexican problem growing out of the Jenkins case was given serious consideration at a meeting of the President's Cabinet.

There was no intimation as to what this Government might do in event President Carranza refused to answer the note from the State Department demanding immediate release of William O. Jenkins, Consular Agent at Pueblo, held on a charge of conniving with bandits who kidnapped and held him for a $150,000 ransom.

READY FOR EVENTUALITIES

No attempt was made to conceal the feeling that the situation was serious and that relations between the United States and Mexico were strained. Officials said the three departments, State, War and Navy were ready to meet any eventuality and deal with any situation arising out of a more defiant attitude by the Carranza, Administration toward the United States.

In the absence of advices from the Embassy at Mexico City, officials were not inclined to put much faith in reports coming by way of Laredo, Texas, that the release of Jenkins "was momentarily expected." There was no word to the department from the Mexican Embassy here and, while nobody seemed to know hat the next day might bring forth, officials said they would not be surprised to hear that Jenkins actually had been released.

JENKINS' RATING HIGH

Meanwhile, the Government has checked up on the official and private record of Jenkins, and has given him a high-class rating. Officials declared there was no foundation for the charge that he had conspired with the bandits and that information from every available source showed that his statement of his capture and the methods employed by the bandits was correct in all details.

The latest reports from the American Embassy showed that Jenkins was still in the penitentiary and ill, and that bail had been refused him.

In looking into the various features of the Consular Agent's predicament officials pointed out that, under the Mexican Constitution, State Courts had no jurisdiction over cases involving diplomatic or consular officers, such jurisdiction being lodged specifically in the Federal Court. It was contended that the Federal Court of Mexico could settle the question with one stroke of the pen, simply by assuming jurisdiction as is its right.

35000 SCHOOL CHILDREN VACCINATED IN TORONTO

TORONTO, Nov. 27—When the order requiring vaccination of all school children expired Wednesday morning it was estimated that approximately 35,000 children in the Public schools of Toronto had been vaccinated out of the average attendance of 50,000. It is estimated that 4,000 school children were turned away from school Wednesday because they had failed to get vaccinated. There are about 10,000 more children who have been stopping away from school on account of vaccination. Consequently the average attendance at the Toronto Public schools is 14,000 below the average.

At the meeting of the Board of Control the recommendation of the Board of Health that the city issue a proclamation enforcing vaccination on all the citizens was referred back to the Board of Health. The Board of Health in turn is holding a special meeting to consider the whole small pox question.

"We can't do anything," said Inspector Cowley in reference to the expulsion of the non-vaccinated children from the schools. The principals have received instructions from Dr. Hastings to turn them away and that is the law, and it will continue. We can do nothing to prevent it."

Rumanians Promise To Do As They're Told

PARIS, Nov. 27—Rumania's reply to the latest entente note on the question of Rumania's attitude towards Hungary and her status (as an ally, which took the form of an ultimatum, is understood to be on the way to Paris. The week given the Rumanians to reply expired before the answer was despatched, but it is explained in Rumanian circles that the reason for the delay was that the entente note was itself delayed, reaching the Rumanian in driblets.

Private advices indicate that the reply promises the entente entire satisfaction on the points raised.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—Owing to the regulations adopted as the result of small-pox cases in Ontario, the proposed Canadian tour of British Empire delegates to the International Labor Conference has had to be abandoned.

Coal Strike Deadlock

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27—With both miners and operators practically declining to accept Fuel Controller Garfield's proposition of a fourteen per cent increase in wages without increased cost of coal to the public, further parleys were opened today with a view to a compromise proposal. In the meantime the coal supply continues to decrease and the situation is causing increasing anxiety to the public.

JUGO-SLAVS COMPLAIN

PARIS, Nov. 27—The Jugo-Slav delegation has sent a note to the Supreme Council calling attention to serious troubles all around the Adriatic and saying that the situation may so develop as to oblige Jugo-Slavia to take military measures to prevent further encroachment. Receipt of note by the Supreme Council was announced today.

Luis Cabrera, brother of Governor Cabrera of Pueblo State and one of Carranza's advisers, declares the United States in the Jenkins case is attempting to interfere with the internal affairs of Mexico. He says the case will be settled in the Mexican courts, not by diplomacy. This view is said to reflect the attitude of the Carranza government.

War Cloud Lowering Over Adriatic Coast

Only Prompt Measures Can Prevent War, Say News Despatches.

GENEVA, Nov. 27—Telegrams received by the Serbian bureau at Berne from Belgrade, Zera and Spalato; convey the impression that only prompt interference by the allies can prevent war over the Adriatic situation, as the Juga-Slavs are said to have lost patience and to be ready to fight the Italians.

"We are astonished that the Peace Conference permits our people to endure, constant Italian persecutions," says one Belgrade paper received here. "Our peaceful attitude is praiseworthy when we might throw D'Annunzio and his fillibusters into the sea."

Whiskey Prices Are Advanced

As a direct result of the increase made by the distillers in the price of Canadian whiskey, the Ontario License Board has ordered an increase of 15 cents on each Imperial quart bottle of 40 ounces, and 10 cents on each 'reputed' quart bottle of 26 ounces. The increase will take effect on Monday, Dec. 1, when, it is estimated, stocks purchased by the Ontario dispensaries at the lower level will be exhausted. The advance applies only on Canadian whiskey, imported goods and other liquors remaining as heretofore.

It was stated yesterday that the increase in the sale price of the Government dispensaries is less than the increase made by the distillers. At the present time the Ontario dispensaries are showing a fair net profit upon the business done, but much, if not all, of that profit will probably disappear in overhead expenses when the lifting of the ban on imports permits Ontario purchasers to buy elsewhere than from the dispensaries.

The new price list will be as follows:

	Imperial Quart	Reputed Quart	6 oz. Bottles
G. & W. Special	$2 00	$1 35	55c
Do., Ordinary	1 65	1 10	45c
Do. alcohol 65 O.P.	3 25	....	..
Walker Imp'l..	2 00	1 35	55c.

Do., One Star	1 56	1 10	50c
Corby Special Selected . . .	2 00	1 35	55c

The foregoing prices for imperial and reputed quarts are all delivered free of express charges to all points in Ontario.

ITALIAN FINED $1000

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont. Nov. 27—Sylvio Zillo, of Toronto, was fined $1,000 and four other Toronto Italians, Angelo Duresco, Sam Bolasco, R. Sallandrosi, and Gracino Maclalso were each fined $300 for having whiskey in their possession. They were caught in the city Friday night with a truck and two passenger cars. The truck was loaded with seventeen bags, which, while they looked like potatoes, were filled with whiskey packed in straw. There were 408 bottles altogether. They are said to have been on the way to Niagara Falls, N.Y. All the accused pleaded guilty before Magistrate Fraser.

BOOST THE NORTH BUT NOT SECESSION

COBALT, Nov. 27—In the so-called "Boost the North" movement upwards of three hundred points have been heard from, and all appear to offer approval of the plan to organize. Points have been heard from as far east as Mackie, south as far as Huntsville, north as far as Hearst, and west as far as Kenora.

The mining districts are lining up strongly behind the movement, impelled by the fear that it is quite unsound business to place the Provincial Department of Mines under the jurisdiction of a new and untried hand.

By a great many moderate thinking men the movement is not expected to result in any drastic action, and provided a better understanding of the North can be impressed upon the Government, an actual request for secession would appear to be very improbable.

While a number of cases have been disposed of at the Non-Jury sittings of the Supreme Court of Ontario here, presided over by the Hon. Sir Glenholme Falconbridge, there are still a number to be considered.

WILL CASE

Owens vs. Owens.—This was an action in which two brothers, James and Joseph Owens of the Township of Seymour in the County of Northumberland, sought to set aside the will made by their brother, Dennis Owens, on the 25th day of October, 1918, wherein he devised and bequeathed all his real and personal estate to his wife, Agnes Owens, the defendant in this action on the ground that her husband was not in sound mind and testimentary capacity when he executed his will and the will was procured by the fraud and undue influence of his wife and her brothers. Dennis Owens subsequent to the making his will attempted to commit suicide by taking Paris Green and up to the time of his death was confined in Rockwood Asylum, Kingston. The estate valued involved $25,000. The trial started Monday afternoon and was not concluded until this morning on the evidence Sir Glenholme Falconbridge held that Dennis Owens at the time of the making of his will was of sound mind and no undue influence in procuring the execution of the will was shown, but the evidence negatived any undue influence. E. Guss Porter, K.C., and C. A. Payne for plaintiffs, R. J. McLaughlin, K.C. and G. A. Payne for the defendant.

DISPUTED RIGHT-OF-WAY

Parry vs. Parry.—An action to establish right to maintain bars across a right-of-way on lot 17, 3rd concession of Sidney Township. The defendant and son-in-law removed the bars and threw them away. Plaintiff claimed right to maintain the bars it being the right-of-way under the will of the late Caleb Parry. Judgment reserved. Porter, Butler and Payne, for plaintiff, Wm. Carnew for defendant.

Kemp vs. Kemp.—An action for alimony. Plaintiff left her husband in 1913 owing, it was alleged, to cruel treatment on his part. This was denied by defendant. A settlement between the parties was efected. Porter, Butler and Payne for plaintiff; T. A. O'Rourke for defendant.

INDIANS RIGHT TO FISH

Sero vs. Gault and Fleming—The plaintiff in the action, Eliza Sero, is an Indian woman residing on the Mohawk Reserve in Tyendinaga Township. The action is the result of the plaintiff fishing in the Bay of Quinte with a seine net without a license. The defendants are Game and Fisheries overseers of the Ontario Game & Fisheries of Ontario. Plaintiff claims the right to fish in the waters of the Bay of Quinte without a license by treaty and that the regulations of the fishery rights for the Indians are solely within the jurisdiction of the Dominion Government and the Department of Indian Affairs at Ottawa. This action raises the constitutional question as to whether the Indians are subject to the Provincial laws regulating game and fisheries. After some evidence had been submitted. His Lordship stated that he would later appoint a day for argument of the case at Toronto. Porter, Butler & Payne for plaintiff; Wm. Carnew for defendants.

Promise Of Coal Supply Prevents Cancelling Trains

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

MONTREAL, Nov. 27.—An announcement from Washington that Canada's emergency coal requirements will be supplied caused the C. N. R. and G. T. R. to hold up the order issued last Sunday cancelling certain trains so as to save fuel. The G. T. R., however, has laid off a number of men in its shops in expectation of slack times here.

SUPPLEMENT B. C. FLEET

Victoria, B.C., Nov. 27.—The Cholburg shipyard will draw up complete plans for the two 75-foot motor boats to be built for the Marine Department to supplement its present British Columbia fleet.

BEN HOLLINGER IS DEAD

Pembroke, Nov. 27.—Ben Hollinger founder of the Hollinger Mine, died very suddenly of heart failure at his home here yesterday morning.

All Italian news is rigidly censored and British authorities are uneasy about situation there.

Michigan Shaken By Fall Of Enormous Meteor

FARTH TREMORS AND FLAMING PILLAR CAUSED SENSATIONAL PANIC—SUPPOSED TO HAVE BEEN GIGANTIC METEOR FALLING INTO LAKE MICHIGAN —MANY CITIES AFFECTED.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

DETROIT, Nov. 27.—That a meteor of tremendous size plunged into lake Michigan last night causing earth tremors felt in a dozen southern Michigan cities and sending a pillar of flames hundreds of feet into the air which was visible for a radius of more than fifty miles, was the theory generally accepted early today in explanation of the earth shock. From reports from various Michigan, Indiana and Illinois cities where the blinding flare was visible, it appeared that the centre of the disturbance was near the lower end of Lake Michigan. Residents of Battle Creek, Kalamazoo, South Bend, Grand Haven and other western Michigan cities, fled from their homes in panic fearing an earthquake. Houses were shaken, the earth trembled half a moment, then came a deep prolonged rumbling as of a terrific explosion.

Mexico Will Refuse To Release U.S.Consular Agent

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 27.—The Mexican note refusing to comply with the State Department's recent demand for the release of William O. Jenkins, the American consular agent imprisoned at Pueblo on the charge that he connived with bandits, had not been received in Washington early today. The only information the officials had that the reply had been sent was contained in a press despatch last night.

Frail Sickly Children

Gain Strength Rapidly on Vinol

Vinol is successful because it is a non-secret remedy which contains Beef and Cod Liver Peptones, Iron and Manganese Peptonates and Hypophosphites—but no oil—the very elements needed to build up strength and robustness. Children love to take it.

The Wonderful Efficiency of Vinol is proven by these letters

"My little daughter, 13 years old, overworked and was run-down, tired all the time, nervous, had headaches, couldn't eat and had to stay out of school. Vinol has built her up. She has a good appetite, no more headaches and has returned to school." Mrs. L. Andrews, Bainbridge, N. Y.

"My little boy was weak, puny, and tired all the time, did not want to do anything. Vinol was recommended and it built up his strength and made him healthy. Now he romps and plays like other children. We certainly believe in Vinol for children." —Harley Clay, Williamson, W. Va.

For all run-down, nervous, anaemic conditions, weak women, overworked men, feeble old people and delicate children, there is no remedy like Vinol.

Your money will be returned if Vinol fails—Leading Druggists.

Music and Drama

(What the Press Agents Say)

"BROKEN BLOSSOMS"

Of extraordinary interest, not only to lovers of the motion picture, but likewise, to all who appreciate the highest in art in its various manifestations, in the announcement of the Griffin Theatre that it has secured David Wark Griffith's superb screen creation, "Broken Blossoms," to be shown at Griffin's theatre next Monday to Wednesday, matinee daily.

Never has a motion picture been acorded a reception comparable to the triumph that has followed every showing of this production. Newspapers have devoted column after column to its beauties and wonders. Everywhere its success has been instantaneous and it is safe to say that in bringing "Broken Blossoms" to Belleville, the management of Griffin's has to its credit the biggest acomplishment in artistic entertainment ever enjoyed by local patrons.

Five other comedies and Topicals will also be shown on the same program.

"THE LUCK OF THE NAVY"

"The Luck of the Navy," one of the biggest of recent London successes, after running nearly two years in London, wil lbe presented by F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest, producers of "Experience" at Griffin's next Thursday night, Dec. 4th, for one night only, enroute from Montreal to Toronto.

The London Queen's Theatre company, headed by Percy Hutchinson, has been brought from London for its presentation, including Miss Muriel Martin-Harvey, daughter of the well-known English actor; Miss Kate Carew, Miss Elsie Stranach, Mr. J. H. Croker-King, Mr. A. P. Kaye, Mr. Patrick Ludlow, Mr. Aubrey Mather, Mr. Geoffrey Webb, and a number of others.

"The Luck of the Navy," presented by this same company was originally done in London at the Queen's Theatre and subsequently was transferred to three other London theatres to continue its run of 22 months. It will be given here exactly as it was presented at a special command performance before Her Majesty Queen Mary, and the Royal Family, for the British Royal Navy Fund for Prisoners of War last October. Subsequent to this performance the Queen of England sent to Mr. Hutchinson through her private secretary, a letter expressing her pleasure of witnessing a performance of "The Luck of The Navy."

"SAHARA"

Griffin's Opera House presents tonight to Saturday what the management believes to be the most dramatic, soul-stirring drama set in the most lavish, colorful and artistic settings the screen has ever seen. This picture is "Sahara" starring Louise Glaum, who plays the role of Mignon, the darling of Paris, of whom her American husband, portrayed by Matt Moore, has wasted his fortune. He takes over an engineering job on the Sahara desert and Mignon against her wishes, but lured by the promise of a visit to Cairo, accompanies him and dwells in a luxurious tent on the burning sands. But six months of the sand and the praying Arabs drives her to such an utterly depraved state of discontent that she leaves her husband and goes to Cairo with Baron Alexis. Years later she finds her husband demented and a victim of drugs, and her child begging in Cairo. He has sworn to kill the woman who wrecked his life. She, with every desire fulfilled except that of happiness is moved to her first deed of real, loving sacrifice—the return of her husband's mind, though it means her death. She does all in her power to cure him, and the day comes when she is recognized. What then of the butterfly who found her soul? of the man who suffered a living death for the love of an unfaithful wife? Of the child who missed a mother's guidding hand when it was most needed? The climax will grip, surprise and please you Five other selected plays are also being offered on the same program. Regular prices will prevail during the exhibition of "Sahara" in Belleville.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG

Clara Kimball Young and Jack Holt are appearing at the Palace tonight to Saturday, matinee daily, in a new Select picture, "A Road Thru The Dark." The story deals with Gabriel Jardee (Clara Kimball Young) in the role of a French girl, who becomes the mistress of a German Prince and becomes a spy for France Garbriel has fallen in love with John Morgan an American. Her father wishes her to marry a Frenchman and with her brother and sister, sends her away from Paris to break up the affair. They go to visit her aunt. Madame Le Cutier, in a little village in the Meuse. The war comes. The village is invaded by the German's Gabriel's brother, sister and aunt are shot by the drunken Germans. She is offered shelter in the personal quarters of the Kommandant, Prince Karl of Streiltiz. Prince Karl tells her that if she will give herself to him she will punish the rioters and save the town. Garbriel becomes the French mistress of the German Prince scorned by all the villagers, for whom she has killed her soul to save. How she gives valuable information to the Allied Intelligence department who are meeting in Paris, how matters are adjusted to the satisfaction of all forms one of the most unique plots and climaxes of any photoplay shown locally in some time.

A new comedy, and the 4th chapter of the great "stunt" serial featuring Anne Luther and Charles Hutchinson, and the British Canadian News with its many important events culled from different parts of the British Empire completes what promises to be a most entertaining program.

Why Should Belleville Have A Reorganized Board Of Trade?

Among the many questions asked by the citizens who are promoting the extension and reorganization campaign of the Belleville Board of Trade five seem to be uppermost in the minds of the citizens. These are:

1.—Why should Belleville have a reorganized Board of Trade?
2.—What can the reorganized Board of Trade do?
3.—Who is going to run the reorganized Board of Trade?
4.—How will the reorganized Board of Trade be financed?
5.—What about the permanence of the reorganized Board of Trade?

Answers have been prepared to these questions, and each day in this column one will be answered. Today is given the answer to the first—

"Why should Belleville have a reorganized Board of Trade?"

Every city needs an organization of the character of the Board of Trade—an organization which will bring the men together to do the things that the city needs to have done.

This getting together stimulates discussion of the problems of the city; it discovers things to do that nobody had ever thought of; it puts a united force behind the individual who wou'd like to have things done, but knows that he can not do them alone. Discussion of a city's needs leads naturally to the finding of ways and means of doing things.

This is what is meant by the creation of the spirit of enterprise in a community. A city which has once acquired this spirit will not permit it to die out.

The best thought is employed. A well-manned, well-planned Board of Trade provides the city with an organization and the machinery to make use of the best thought and energy of the citizens. A disorganized factory is a menace to the industrial life of a city. It is a liability. An unorganized community is a liability to a nation.

Every man and woman has a surplus of time and strength out of which to give to his or her city. Yet it is the common experience to be to'd when asking the citizen for some service for the common good, that he is too busy with his own affairs.

Enthusiasm is contagious. The accomplishments of a well-organized Board of Trade will quickly show that man that he is not too busy with his own affairs to give a little time and energy to his community. He will not be long in agreeing with the man who invented the phrase "Enthusiasm is contagious." Let's have an epidemic—the best kind of an epidemic a city can have. Men working together every day for a common cause learn to give.

The store-keeper, the mill owner, the professional man—every citizen on the street senses the usefulness of a good Board of Trade; they know that it builds up the business of the city by making it a better place in which to do business and adds to the population by making the city a better place in which to live.

Unless the business and professional men of today insure the prosperity and advancement of their city, a few years hence their sons and daughters will inevitably go to those cities which offer greater advantages. A well-organized Board of Trade is such an insurance.

ROBERTSON—CUSHING

At St. Michael's Presbytery this morning, Rev. Father Killeen united in marriage Mr. Thomas Austin Robertson of Birmingham, Alabama and Miss Mabel A. M. Cushing daughter of Mr. Thomas Cushing, chief despatcher of the G.T.R. in this city. The groomsman was Mr. Francis Cushing, brother of the bride, and the bridesmaid was Miss Nora McGwane. The parents of the bride and near relatives were present at the ceremony. After the wedding the bridal party repaired to the home of the bride's parents, 28 Alexander Street, where a sumptuous repast was partaken of. Mr. and Mrs. Robertson left on the afternoon train on a wedding trip after which they will repair to their future home at Birmingham, Alabama. That the bride was deservedly popular was attested by the many beautiful and costly gifts of which she was the recipient.

PYREX

PYREX SAVES FOOD, FUEL AND LABOR.

PYREX saves about one-half the fuel usually required, because it absorbs nearly all the oven heat and bakes food quickly.

PYREX saves food in many ways. Meats, vegetables, etc., when cooked in PYREX, retain their natural color and flavor to such a degree that economy may be practiced in buying the less expensive kinds and yet have delicious food. Most foods usually cooked on top of the stove can be better prepared in the oven.

PYREX saves labor—it is always free from grease and odors, for nothing can penetrate the hard smooth surface. You can wash it as easily as your china and silver.

Every practical shape and size for baking is made in PYREX. It is ready for immediate use and never discolors, rusts, crazes, dents or chips.

Christ Church Bazaar Bright And Pleasing

Christmas Gifts Aplenty Quickly Snapped Up—Booths and Cafeteria Well Patronized.

The Annual Bazaar in connection with Christ Church, was opened yesterday afternoon in the Parish House and continued last evening and this afternoon, closing to-night with a comedy drama. The bazaar is under the auspices of the Parish Guild and is the most successful ever held in the history of the church.

The officers of the Parish Guild are:
Honorary President—Mrs. Swayne
President—Mrs. Bateman
Secretary—Mrs. F. Millard
Treasurer—Miss Hall

The complete success of the Bazaar was due to the hearty co-operation of every member of the congregation who cheerfully gave their services to make the event the best in the history of Christ Church. The contributions to the sales tables were generous in quantity and superb in quality and added greatly to the general success of the undertaking. A unique and pleasant feature of the Bazaar was the Cafeteria Tea, which was liberally patronized and very satisfying.

The ladies of the Parish Guild are very much pleased with the success of the Bazaar and delighted with the loyal co-operation of every member of the church.

On the lower floor is a Cafeteria

Thanks to the generosity of the Lindsay Company an excellent program of music was rendered.

while all the booths are upstairs.

At the head of the stairs is a reception room.

The fancy work booth is beautifully decorated in yellow and white and the ladies in charge are Mrs. E. T. Austin, Mrs. Buchanan, Mrs. Watts and Miss A. Mills.

The apron booth, decorated in Christmas colors and Union Jacks, is under the supervision of Miss Hall, Mrs. Dillmutt, Mrs. Pauley, Mrs. Colling and Mrs. Wilkins.

The Indian lace stall is under the direction of Mrs. Cherry and Miss Anderson and is decorated in pink and white.

The candy booth is in the form of a tea garden and was tastefully decorated in pink and white. Hanging from the ceiling was an electric light shade in the form of a white lace hat trimmed with pink flowers and ribbon. The booth is under the supervision of Mrs. John Irvin, Mrs. Mills and Miss F. Newton.

The girls' booth containing fancy work of all kinds is decorated in mauve and white, Miss Panter, Miss J. Bishop and Miss Diamond being in charge.

The remembrance booth creates a great interest, all articles offered for sale being donated by out of town former members of the Church and is directed by Miss I Bishop.

The Christmas booth, decorated with Christmas colors and containing many beautiful and useful articles is under the supervision of Mrs. C. I. White, Miss McKnight, Miss Alyesworth and Mrs. G. B. Smith.

The novelty booth is decorated in green and white and is under the direction of Mrs. Hearst, Mrs. Kerr and Mrs. G. Vanderwater.

The goose pond is a great interest to the kiddies, there being the head and neck of a goose in place of the old time fishing rod. It is under the supervision of Mrs. E. Laing and Miss H. Ives.

Under the very capable supervision of Mrs. Boyes, the tea room was decorated in white and pink. The tables being centred with white and pink chrysanthemums. The hostesses looked very neat in their white gowns and quaint pink aprons and caps. Supper was served on the Cafateria plan. The hostesses were Miss K. Diamond, Mrs. B. Bottom, Mrs. E. Academy of Medicine Issues Statement Respecting Vaccination.

The following statement, signed by Dr. Edmund E. King as president and Dr. F. C. Harrison as honorary secretary has been handed out by the Academy of Medicine, Toronto:—

"The Academy of Medicine, Toronto, appreciates that, owing to false and unwarranted statements made regarding the present epidemic and the subject of vaccination, it is due to the public that the position of the profession of Toronto should be stated.

"Any irresponsible person or technically uneducated layman may make statements about the most serious public health matters that may cause great unrest in the public mind, without having foundations other than reiterating statements made previously by just as irresponsible but personally prejudiced persons.

"1. The epidemic that is at present developing in Ontario is smallpox. The majority of the cases are mild, but there are some severe.

"2 Most epidemics develop from mild form to those of grave severity. Notably the one in 1885 may be taken as an example.

"3. Vaccination is the only known protection against the disease and is universally recognized as such.

"4. Vaccination properly performed is not a dangerous operation, but in some cases the reaction is quite severe indicating the susceptibility of the individual to the virus.

"5. There is no possible risk of transmitting any such disease as tuberculosis, syphilis or other blood contagion from vaccination, as the lymph is collected from the host (calf), sealed in tubes and placed on scratch without coming in contact with any human.

"6. There is no vaccinating from one human to another.

Dr. McCullough when asked of the eration and must be done under the strictest cleanliness, and care must be exercised in attending the after-results

"The above statements are made by the authority of the Council of the Academy of Medicine, Toronto."

FOUR MEN ARE INJURED
IN HEAD-ON TRAIN COLLISION

SASKATOON, Nov. 27—Four men were injured, one of them badly, in a head-on collision between a C. P. R. passenger and G. T. P. freight train near the Government elevator here. Fireman F. J. Peeves, of the passenger, was cut on the head and body, scalded and suffered internally.

Engineer J. Fraser was jammed in the cab, but escaped with minor injuries.

Two waiters, Carrigan and Ryan, in the dining car, sustained severe cuts. The impact was terrific and the passenger engine was considerably damaged.

How To Kill Dandruff So It Won't Return

By a Specialist

That the dandruff germ is responsible for nearly all the diseases to which the scalp is heir, as well as for baldness and premature gray hair, is a well-known fact. We appreciate, therefore, the importance of any agent that will destroy its power. For this reason it is a pleasure to give herewith the prescription which a famous scalp specialist states he has found after repeated tests, will completely destroy the dandruff germs in from one to three applications. It will also almost immediately stop falling hair and it has in numerous cases produced a new hair-growth after years of partial baldness. This prescription can be made up at home, or any druggist will put it up for you—6 ounces Bay Rum, 2 ounces Lavona de Composse, one-half drachm Menthol Cystals. Mix thoroughly, and after standing an hour it is ready for use. Apply night and morning, rubbing into the scalp with the finger tips. If you wish it perfumed, add 1 drachm of your favorite perfume. While this preparation is not a dye it is unequalled for restoring gray hair to its original color.

Every community has its civic slackers—men who turn an indifferent eye to the live projects of the town. Perhaps it's because they do not KNOW what it all means. There is no partisan wire-pulling to the efforts of your Board of Trade. Here is an organization working for the good of all.

Join During Week Dec. 1-5

You have no more right to be indifferent to your city's efforts, hopes and ambitions than to neglect your OWN FAMILY. For every citizen is in reality a sort of "Relative." You, as a unit, are morally responsible for what is done—what is left undone.

Come, now, break the ice! A crowd of ambitious fellows, fired by an ambition to put the old town in big shape are giving extra time unselfishly to this effort. And, best of all, once they get in it, they ENJOY it. They feel they are doing things worth while for themselves, their children and their children's children. Roll up your sleeves and get in with your fellows—get into the heart of things—the point of contact, the know-how incentive.

CITY MANAGER SUCCESSFUL.

Many close students of the present system of municipal government are convinced that there is great room for improvement in the management of cities and towns, and that such large business enterprises should be conducted upon more business-like lines. Alderman W. B. Riggs, of the Belleville City Council, is among those who consider that improvements are necessary and possible in civic administration. Recently Alderman Riggs wrote to a number of municipalities in the United States where the city manager plan is being tried and the answers he received are very interesting.

One city with a population of 12,000 formerly administered by a Mayor and Council, has had a city manager for eleven months and state: "We find the manager plan very much better in every respect." His salary is given as $2550 per annum.

Several other letters were received, including the following:

Terrell, Texas.

Terrell is a city of 10,000 inhabitants, and is operating under the commission form of government, having five commissiners, one of whom is the chairman, who fills the place of mayor.

We now have a city manager at $200.00 per month and feel that it pays largely. Our charter only allows the commission a compensation of $2.50 per meeting, which meetings are held weekly, and you can readily see that at this princely salary the commissioners have but little time to devote to the city.

We have been operating under our new charter for four or five years and that charter makes it mandatory that the commission elect a City Manager; however, from some cause this has never been done until the first of April when the writer was elected chairman and at once proceeded to have the city manager put in. We are very much pleased with the move.

G. E. KELLY,
Chairman City Commission.

Gastonia, North Carolina.

With reference to your inquiry of the 14th, beg to say that Gastonia has a population of 18,000 people, and that we adopted the City Manager Plan of government on May 10th last.

As yet we have not been able to show any remarkable results. We have a City Manager which we pay $3,600 a year. Prior to the adoption of the City Manager plan of government we had the Aldermanic form, which was a government by the Mayor and a Board of Aldermen, seven in number. There were different committes, such as the street committee, water and light committee, and such like. We like the present plan much better, but it is too early to give permanent results of the plan.

The City Manager under our present form has complete charge of the city, may employ and discharge heads of departments, and all employees of the city. Such action must be reported at the next meeting of the council for ratification.

We have had no friction or misunderstandings between the City Government or the general public as yet, and the system seems to be moving smoothly.

Yours very truly,
R. G. CHERRY, Mayor.

Anamosa, Iowa.

The population of our city is three thousand (3,000). We adopted the city manager plan April 1st, 1919. Before that date the city was governed by the Mayor and Councilmen. The city manager receives $1800.00 per year.

The plan has been in operation such a short period of time that it is a little too soon to come to conclusion regarding its efficiency over the old plan, but we find that by combining the various petty offices, that were in vogue, under a one-man management, that the affairs of the city are being looked after in a more businesslike and successful way than heretofore, without any additional expense.

The city owns the water works and the city manager acts in the capacity of water commissioner, city marshal, city clerk, and secretary of the commercial enterprises of the city.

So far everyone seems well pleased with the change, and from the number of towns that are adopting the same plan, we are of the opinion that the city manager plan is the solution of the city government problem.

C. A. BEEMS, Mayor.

An Illinois bank capitalized at $25,000, lost $400,000 and its very capable cashier the same day. When the cashier made up his mind to flit the bank examiners had arrived to check up the books, so he invited them into the vault, locked them in, and hopped it in his Rolls-Royce for another field of labor. Yankee banking methods are very amusing to Canadians.

Why it actually looks as if he problem of getting seats for seatless Cabinet Ministers would have to be solved in the same old way of resignations for value received in public office, present or future. This indicates that the political millenium is not yet. Premier Drury says he is not aware of any bargaining for legislative seats. Of course not—he doesn't have to know. The proper department will look after all that kind of business.

One member of the U. F. O. Cabinet has announced his intention of moving into town. Sure! Most of the elected members would move into town if they dared. Do 'em good to have to dig up a dollar a dozen for eggs and sixty-five cents a pound for butter Question is: When an U. F. O. moves into town, does he lose his U. F. O. status and become an O. F. U.—One Foolish Unit?

OTHER VIEWS

A Sinn Fein Liberal Agent.

Hamilton Herald.

Because the so-called "Liberal" weekly, the Statesman, rants about "British spoliation of Egypt, India and Persia," the Ottawa Journal says its observation "would be worthy of a Dunne, or a Walsh, or a DeValera." Evidently the Journal doesn't know that the editor of the Statesman is in that very class—an Irishman of the Sinn Fein type.

Astounded.

London Free Press.

Hon. Robert Hunter, of Queensland, a member of the Australian Government, has arrived here, and in an interview at Montreal he is quoted as saying: "I am simply astounded at what is being done in this country for returned soldiers." Aside altogther from the question of increased gratuities or other matters which are in dispute in this country, we like to dwell upon these words of the Australian minister, We are glad that our reputation outside of Canada at least is that we had led in recognition of the sacrifices of the valiant fighting men of the nation. It is a reputation of which to be proud. If we have not measured up to the highest standards of gratitude as a nation, we have at least excelled the best efforts of nations who participated with us in the war.

The French Election.

Toronto Mail and Empire.

The whole world will feel cheered at the rout of the French "reds" in the general elections. The returns give assurance of increased political power for the solid older parties. The extreme Socialists have been badly beaten. There are a dozen distinct groups in the Chamber, and to define the differences in their platforms and general ideas would require some space; but the larger part of these groups, including the Conservatives, the Nationalists, the Republicans and Moderates, are all for the firm maintenance of the best traditions of Republican France. They have nothing in common with the extreme Socialist, who hampered France during the war, and sometimes actually strove to bring about French submission to the German. The condition of France today leaves much to be desired, socially and economically. It is, indeed, in a material sense, not much better than that of a defeated nation. But in spite of this the French people have refused to endorse revolutionary agitators, and are determined on working out the national problem on sound lines.

The Poet's Corner

NOVEMBER.

Summer is fled, its fervid joys are over;
The winter days draw on;
No more we hear the bees among the clover,
The birds are gone.

The blue and golden autumn flowers are dying,
Dead leaves are falling fast;
Through the bare boughs the dreary winds are sighing
A requiem for the past.

O gladsome past, thy joys we all remember,
Thy smiles and happy fears;
But now, alas, has come life's sad November,
A time for tears.

The spring will soon restore the birds and flowers,
Green fields and sunny streams,
But nevermore, ah, nevermore, youth's shining hours,
And hope's fond dreams.

A Laugh Or Two

Suspects the Comp.

An Ohio paper reports a double wedding "where before the altar, Rev. John Nichols officiating, the two couples plighted their troth, exchanging the cows that made them man and wife."

Rather odd, that idea of exchanging cows in church. We suspect, however, another exchange—that of the compositor, who probably substituted a "c" for a "v".

Influence Needed.

He was very young and fresh and new, and he was a second lieutenant. One day he sought his elderly colonel and poured forth a complaint.

"Sir, I should be so obliged if you'd use your influence to prevent the men in my platoon from calling me 'Baby Bunting'."

"Certainly, my lad—certainly!" said the colonel, "I will with pleasure—if you'll use your influence to stop the whole battalion calling me that bow-legged old duffer with the bald head."

You've Seen 'Em.

"What did you do last night?"

"Oh, I read for a couple of hours."

"I thought you were going to the movies."

"I did go. Ninety per cent. of the feature consisted of sub-titles."

PRESENTED WITH SILVER

Mr. T. Yerrow, of Peterboro, was on Tuesday evening the recipient of a flattering address and a cabinet of silver on the eve of his departure from that city to take up his residence in Belleville. Mr. Yerrow has been for some time supervisor of track of the 8th and 10th district and has been transferred here to be supervisor of the double track between this city and Toronto. The address and presentation was made by the G. T. R. employees in the various departments at Peterboro.

BURGLARS AT PORT HOPE

At Port Hope on Tuesday night the residences of Mrs. J. A. Culverwell and Mr. H. H. King were broken into and ransacked, but nothing of importance has been missed. At Mrs. Culverwell's place the uninvited guests apaprently made themselves at home, having kindled a fire and occupied at least two of the beds. An empty bottles which had contained sacramental wine stole from the Baptist Church in that town was found on a dresser, also some empty glasses used to drink the wine. Every room in the house presented a topsy-turvy appearance.

TRAINMEN DANCE

The Third Annual Assembly of East Toronto Lodge, No. 108, Brotherhood of Railroad Trainmen, was held last night at Johnstone's Academy in this city and it was in every respect a most successful affair. Upwards of 165 couples were in attendance and danced to their hearts' content from 9 o'clock until the wee small hours of this morning. The management left nothing undone for the comfort of the guests, and at midnight a tempting supper was partaken of. The assembly hall was beautifully and appropriately decorated for the occasion and colored lanterns hung about the wall was a fine effect. The reflection of electric lighted bulbs placed in the head lamp of an engine with the No. 108 on the face was striking when the lights about the hall were dimmed. The spacious floor space of the hall was during the whole evening filled to its capacity with dancers who thoroughly enjoyed themselves. A fine programme of music was provided by the Sills Orchestra of this city and many favorable comments were heard of the same. During the evening Miss Winnifred Evans sang a number of solos in a manner that captivated all present. The affair was without doubt the best held under the auspices of the organization. The stewards were Messrs A. F. Campbell, chairman; C. Warren, Secretary; W. Kiser, treasurer; C. Kline, R. J. Muir, R. L. Johnson, W. Haslip, P. J. Connors, John Rigby and J. Tanner. The patronesses were Miss S. Johnston, Secretary of L.A. to B.R.T., Mrs. W. Jordan, Mrs. H. B. Wilbur, Mrs. A. Cole, Mrs. W. Haslip and Mrs. C. Kline.

TO CUT OFF SOME J. P.'S

TORONTO, Nov. 27—A survey of the lists of justices of the peace in the Province is being undertaken by Hon. W. E. Raney, Attorney-General. The Minister would make no comment as to his purpose in revising the lists but in following precedent a goodly number of the 4000 odd J.P.'s will have their patents cancelled. When Sir James Whitney first assumed the reins of government he ordered a revision and cancellations were made wholesale.

The practice of the Attorney-General's Department for some time past however, has been to create a greater number of police magistrates and in so doing eliminated the justices of the peace.

MORE AND BETTER ROADS SAYS NEW MINISTER

TORONTO, Nov. 27—Rural Ontario roads are promised unusual attention by the Minister of Public Works, Hon. F. C. Biggs, who has adopted a new slogan for his department, "Personal inspection, and take noining for granted." "Roads," said the Minister, "will get more consideration this year than ever. Furthermore, our scope will be wider than has been previously undertaken. We not only intend to look after the Provincial highways, but all the side township roads, and will give the townships all the assistance they may require. We want to make more roads and more classes of roads suitable for the traffic that goes over them."

The Minister leaves for Ottawa today, accompanied by W. A. Mclean, Deputy Minister of Public Works, and Chief Engineer Hograth, of the department to make a survey of the Provincial Highway.

Unemployment does not offer any problem to the department at the present time, the Minister declaring that he hardly considered it would be any special work during the coming winter to meet with this contingency. "The main difficulty now," he remarked, "would seem to be to find men for the jobs, not jobs for the men."

"Speedways" Not Favored

Ontario's new Minister of Public Works is not very sympathetic to the project of constructing a trans-Provincial speedway. In an interview on this question Hon. F. C. Biggs expressed himself as favoring a good surface road which, with perfect and continuous maintenance would leave it at no time impasable.

Hon. Mr. Biggs has just returned from a tour of inspection of the roads from Toronto to Hamilton, Hamilton to Niagara, and from Niagara to Lewiston, accompanied by the chief engineer of the department and the Deputy Minister, W. A. McLean.

The system of grading the roads in N. Y. State did not meet with any great approval from any of the party. The practice, especially of grading concrete roads, is held to be objectionable. The grades on these roads vary in some cases from seven to ten per cent. and the road frequently but 16 feet wide, and often bend at sheer right angles.

FUEL COMMISSIONERS TO BE RE-APPOINTED

TORONTO, ..ov. 25—Believing that preparedness is the best preventative of distress during the coming winter because of coal shortage, Provincial Fuel Administrator, H. A. Harrington, yesterday telegraphed all Mayors and Reeves of cities, towns, villages and townships in the Province asking the immediate appointment of local fuel commissioners.

It is the desire of Mr. Harrington to have a complete organization throughout the whole Province and whenever the pinch does come there will be no delay in taking all necessary steps to assure fair distribution of available supplies.

COBALT CITIZENS RECOMMEND ROGERS

COBALT, Ont., Nov. 27—Concerning the vacancy in the T. and N. O. Railway Commission, caused by the resignation a few weeks ago of J. L. Englehart, a number of citizens of Cobalt are taking steps to recommend Lieut.-Col. R. P. Rogers for the position. In well-informed circles Geo. Lee, one of the present commissioners, is said to be the logical choice. Another report has it that J. L. Englehart may be asked to reconsider his resignation.

SMALLPOX CENTRE LOCATED IN TORONTO

Toronto, Nov. 27.—Smallpox cases have been reported in 28 centres of Ontario, according to a report compiled for Dr. J. W. McCullough, Provincial M.O.H. giving complete figures to November 2nd. The total number of cases in these centres is 629 with Toronto furnishing more than fifty per cent., or 368 cases. The Hospital for the Feeble Minded at Orillia, is second on the list with 35 cases. The list of points where more than 10 Woodstock and Stratford 19; Dunwich, 17; Woodbridge 16; Stouffville and Brighton 14; Burk's Falls 13; Sudbury 10. From the list it would appear that the district immediately surrounding Toronto contains the greatest percentage of the cases.

Dr. McCullough, when asked if the recent deaths of children from acute meningitis, who had been vaccinated, were due to the vaccination itself, stated that there was absolutely no connection between the two. "One of the most important things to safeguard against," he continued, "is infection into the wound."

THE MERCHANTS BANK OF CANADA

BLOCK ARCTIC CURRENT

PROPOSAL TO DAM BELLE ISLE STRAIT.

Canada Would Benefit by Having St. Lawrence Free of Ice All Year—Newfoundland and New England States Would Also Have Milder Climate.

PLANS now chrystallizing in Newfoundland may lead to a marked amelioration of the somewhat rigorous climate of the island. The proposed daming of Belle Isle Straits, which would block the Arctic current, would also greatly help Canadian commerce by keeping open the St. Lawrence route. It would also give the New England states a milder climate.

The citizenry of Newfoundland is keen to construct a great dam squarely across the throat of the Strait of Belle Isle and thus shut the door in the face of the frigid and intrusive Arctic current.

It is into the Strait of Belle Isle that the Labrador current so frequently drives great masses of field ice and towering bergs to menace navigation during the spring and summer months when the glacial Northland releases these perils to shipping. At other times, the Labrador current surges into the Gulf of St. Lawrence, chills the contiguous air, and sets back for weeks vegetation's response to the rays of the northern sun. According to our hydrographic experts, describing the drift of ice and bergs in the grip of the Labrador current:

"By the middle of January the shores of Newfoundland and Gulf of St. Lawrence are full of ice which has been frozen there, and are opened or closed by a favorable or adverse wind. Navigation in the River St. Lawrence is closed about the middle of November and does not open until about May. A wind from northwest to southwest will clear the eastern coast of Newfoundland, while the Gulf of St. Lawrence may remain full of ice until the first of May. Even after this date much ice is found in the gulf until July, and by August or earlier the field ice is replaced in the Strait of Belle Isle by bergs."

Plainly, the Arctic flood that enters the Gulf of St. Lawrence by way of the Strait of Belle Isle is one potent aid to the development of local ice by chilling the waters so that they will freeze early. This, quite apart from the intrusion of bergs and floes from Labrador, closes the St. Lawrence river to navigation for months when movement to and from the sea would be of great economic moment to Canada.

The throat of the Strait is in the neighborhood of Forteau Bay, where the span from shore to shore is ten miles. Even so, the soundings show depths ranging from 32 to 62 fathoms (192 and 327 feet). Nothing approaching a dam of such length and height has yet been erected. Further to the eastward where the distance across is about eighteen miles, the soundings show depths of 17, 20, 43 and 18 fathoms across the strait from Wreck Bay to Cape Norman. Here the shallower water and more moderate currents, even with a wider interval to be closed, would make it easier to plant the obstruction. In either case, the enterprise would call for the expenditure of a vast sum.

It is argued as an offset that the climatic modifications, which would be effected by shutting out the Labrador current, would induce enormous agricultural increases and raise the value of the lands by billions of dollars. Further, we are told that the exclusion of the Labrador current from the Gulf of St. Lawrence would permit the warm waters of the Gulf Stream to swing in nearer to the coast, thus tempering the cold months and making the St. Lawrence river as well as the gulf navigable the year round.

The Labrador current brings masses of sand, etc., from the Arctic, which have been deposited in the Grand Bank, and instead of underrunning the Gulf Stream without serious interference has been forced more and more surfaceward by the steadily rising Grand Bank—an obstacle in the main of its own forming. In a kindred fashion, but to a lesser extent, the Gulf Stream has carried sand northward and has helped to upbuild from the south the great barrier which to-day brings the frigid waters of the Arctic current and the warm flood from the tropics into disastrous conflict in the neighborhood of Newfoundland—robbing the Gulf Stream of the major part of its beneficial heat and modifying radically its further paths of travel.

Seven years ago an American mechanical engineer, Carroll Livingston Riker, of New York city, who has done notable things in the realm of hydraulic engineering, boldly proposed the building of a giant jetty projecting to the south and east from Cape Race directly across the main path of the southbound Labrador current. In laying his scheme before Congress a year later Mr. Riker claimed that he could accomplish this amazing result at an expenditure of $20,000,000! He purposed effecting this by drawing upon the forces of nature in such a way as to induce both the Gulf Stream and the Labrador Current—especially the latter—to rear a great sandy bulwork right athwart its own present sweep. No action was taken, but the plan now proposed is somewhat along this line.—Robert G. Skerrett, in Toronto Star.

Value of Farm Stock.

The total value of farm stock in Canada at the time of collecting the last statistics was estimated to be $1,102,261,000, as compared with $903,686,000 in the year 1916. In 1917, for the first time, the total value of farm stock exceeded one billion dollars.

CANADIAN RUNS N. Y. HOTELS.

The Story of John M. Bowman Reads Like a Romance.

John M. Bowman, the Toronto man who went to New York without any money, and just looking for a job, and who now operates six great New York hotels and two resort hotels elsewhere, has had a career like a movie hero. Mr. Bowman is frequently in Toronto, though known by comparatively few people in that city. The November American Magazine tells his story:

"Only a comparatively few years ago he was driving a truck in New York! Later, he broke saddle horses. But always he had the idea that he was cut out for the hotel business. Any other kind of work he regarded as temporary—as a means to an end. But no matter how humble the job, Bowman contrived to use it in some way for permanent gain.

"Even his first little job, doing errands for his grandmother, taught him something of definite value.

"In his native town, Toronto, was a factory that had wood shavings to give away, and Bowman's grandmother liked these for starting a fire in the kitchen stove. So she would often ask him to go to the factory and fetch her a large burlap sack full of shavings. Young Bowman did not like this at all. He did not mind the physical effort so much, but he imagined that he looked ridiculously undignified bearing a bulky sack of shavings through the streets.

"However, he willingly did as his grandmother desired because of the twenty-five-cent piece he knew she would give him. Gradually it dawned on him that there was nothing undignified about the task, that no honest labor, to gain money one needs, is undignified. In fact, he came to feel that boys who loafed about the street corners and occasionally laughed at him, while doing nothing themselves, were really less dignified than he.

"This wholesome view about useful work has clung to him ever since. When the Biltmore was under construction and there was some question about its being ready to be opened on schedule, Bowman, who was to be its manager, used to put on old clothes and climb about over the building to see what was going on.

On the day that it was thrown open to the public, there was a lot of confusion about the turning on of water into certain pipes. And the only man who knew exactly where each valve was located and where each pipe led was Bowman himself. He was obliged to put on a pair of overalls and personally take charge of the plumbing emergency.

"Bowman's first hotel job was at a little resort in the Adirondacks, when he was only nineteen years old. Because of the short season there, he desired a permanent place at some good hotel in New York City. A wealthy man gave him a letter of introduction to the manager of what was then one of the best hotels in New York, a place that Bowman had thought a suitable field for his talents.

"He mailed the letter of introduction to the hotel manager, and requested permission to call. But he got no response. He wrote again and asked for the return of his letter of introduction. Even then he got no reply, and he formed a strong opinion about the character of the man who had exhibited what seemed to him such gross and needless discourtesy.

Years later Bowman became president and directing manager of the company that took over that same hotel, and his first official act was to discharge the manager who had failed to answer his letter. He did not discharge him to vent personal spleen, but because he thought the man lacked that sense of courtesy and consideration which should be among the qualifications of a successful manager.

"Having failed to get the hotel job he sought in New York, Bowman had to do whatever work he could find. Frequently he was obliged to be so economical that each meal was a genuine problem.

"Later he secured work at the Holland House under one Gustav Baumann. Baumann headed a company that put up the Hotel Biltmore and Bowman was to be its manager. A few months after the hotel was ready for occupancy, Baumann died. In a short time Bowman had so thoroughly convinced the board of directors of his ability that he not only was permanently retained as manger, but was made president of the company.

Then he branched out and now operates six great New York hotels—the Biltmore, the Commodore, the Belmont, the Manhattan, the Murray Hill, and the Ansonia. He also controls two great resort hotels — the Belleview at Belleair, Florida, and the Griswold at New London, Connecticut. Mr. Bowman is 43 years old."

Awkward For His Wife.

A good story was told recently by Sir Charles Parsons, of turbine fame, concerning a certain learned professor what shall be nameless.

He was, explained Sir Charles, very absent-minded. One day he saw that his wife had placed a fine bouquet of freshly-cut flowers on his desk.

"What does this mean, dear?" he asked.

"Why, don't you know!" she exclaimed. "This is the anniversary of our wedding-day."

"Ah, is it, indeed?" he answered politely. "Kindly let me know when yours comes round and I will reciprocate."

Birthdays Forbid Marriage.

A curious idea among the Burmese is that people born on the same day of the week must not marry, and that if they defy the fates their union will be marked by much ill luck. To prevent these disastrous marriages, every girl carries a record of her birthday in her name, each day of the week having a letter belonging to it, and all children are called by a name that begins with that letter.

GAME AND FISH LAWS.

Migratory Birds Convention Act Being Well Received.

The twelfth annual report of the Department of Game and Fisheries of Ontario calls attention to the fact that there is a better enforcement of the game and fish laws now than in earlier years and that sentiment in favor of the enforcement is growing steadily. The report also points out that the Migratory Birds Convention Act is becoming better understood by the public in general and, with the better acquaintance of its provisions by publicity, is being well received and will have beneficial results.

Plenty of moose and deer are reported in that part of the province lying north and west of the French and Mattawa rivers, and the supply is generally satisfactory in other parts of the province inhabited by these animals. The benefit of the close season for partridge has been shown to a marked degree in many sections of the northern part of the province. Quail and pheasants are scarce, especially the former.

Of the fur-bearing animals, beaver, otter, marten and muskrat show an inclination to increase, beaver being very plentiful, with large catches reported last season. Many reports of damage to game and fur-bearing animals by wolves have been received by the Department, and in this connection the superintendent recommends that a substantial increase in the bounty be made. He also recommends the establishment of a game sanctuary at some central point in the province.

Commercial fishing, taking the province as a whole, showed an increase over the catch the previous year. Returns, as presented by the license holders, showing a catch of 36,305,360 pounds in 1916, and of 42,834,551 in 1917. The report of the sales branch of the Fisheries Department for the year ending October 31, 1918, shows that over three millon pounds of fish were handled by the sales branch during the first year of operation under the Government policy of securing fish from the waters of the province and placing the same, at a fixed price, on the tables of consumers. These fish were sold to nearly 600 fish dealers and were distributed in over 200 municipalities throughout the province, effecting a saving of at least five cents per pound on all fish distributed to the consumers, or a total saving of at least $150,000. The revenue received from the sale of Government fish during the year ending October 31, 1918, amounted to $235,028.15, and the total revenue received from game and fisheries during the same period was $493,699.77.

During the season of 1918 waters of the Province of Ontario were stocked with several kinds of fish in the following numbers: Lake trout, 999,000; brown trout, 44,000; brook trout, 402,500; rainbow trout, 20,000; black bass (parent), 131; pickerel, 3,400,000; whitefish, 15,500,000; herring, 38,000,000.

Construction Cost Reduced.

Examples of the economic advantages of using electricity are daily brought to notice, and are of special interest in Canada, where approximately 85 per cent. of the electric power is derived from water-power and is, therefore, usually available at low rates.

The saving effected by electric operation in construction work is demonstrated in a recent article in the Engineering News-Record. The plant referred to is for the construction of a nine-span concrete bridge in Ohio. Electric energy is supplied to some thirteen motors varying in size from five horse-power to sixty-five horse-power. These are used for such machines as the saw-mill, belt conveyor, concrete mixers, derricks, pumps, pile driver, cableway and concrete hoist towers. The cableway is equipped with a sixty-five horse-power motor, the conveyor with a fifteen horse-power motor, while a mixer of one cubic yard capacity has a twenty horse-power motor. In determining the reduction in power costs by using electricity, it is stated that the work can be carried out with an average power bill of $450 monthly, while the single boiler plant which has to be used for a steam hammer costs $10 per day. If steam were used throughout, separate plants would be required for all machines, owing to their wide separation, and it is estimated that each would cost as much as the steam-hammer operations.

Export Trade In Dairy Products.

It is the consensus of opinion of Canadian officials who have visited Europe, that the future of the export trade in dairy products is assured. In England butter is everywhere at a premium and Canadian cheese continues to hold its good reputation. Mr. H. S. Arkell, Live Stock Commissioner, who has recently returned from overseas, states that the shortage of milk and dairy products in Great Britain is unprecedented. The same is true of other European countries. The scarcity and high price of concentrated feed is to some extent responsible for this. This condition is so general as not quickly to be remedied. It is further responsible for retarding the increase of swine production and the restoring of the normal requirements of fat. This statement from the Live Stock Commissioner should give confidence not only to dairy farmers, but to those who are able to raise hogs.

Canada's Coal Production.

The tabulated statement of coal production shows that no coal is produced in three provinces, namely, Quebec, Ontario and Manitoba. In 1917 the total production in Canada was 14,015,588 tons, having a value of $47,643,646.

Quick Ventilation.

Quicker ventilation will be possible if the shade rollers are hung on brackets fastened in the upper extremity of the window casement rather than in sockets between the casing.

The best protection for the throat, chest and lungs is contained in a handy box of Peps.

As Peps tablets are dissolved in the mouth, powerful medicinal fumes are carried with the breath straight through the air passages into the lungs, where liquid medicine cannot reach.

The throat and lungs are always more sensitive in cold weather. Peps will strengthen them. Therefore, keep Peps handy wherever you are, and occasionally dissolve a tablet in your mouth. You never know what infection of colds, "la grippe" and even lung trouble may be carried about by people with whom you come in contact.

Because of their direct action, Peps give almost immediate relief to the chronic bronchitis sufferer, and provide young and old with a safe defence against Coughs, Colds, Sore Throat, Laryngitis and Pneumonia.

Beaufort's expectations were still unrealised. On Thursday he was certain 'things would be right on Saturday,' and on Saturday, with undiminished confidence, he repeated, 'Early in the week.' The proprietress of the hotel was a huge red woman, who had been a low-class domestic servant. The 'gracious service unexpressed' by which she had attained her present prosperity the squinting chambermaid did not know, and she added, with a grin and grimace that it was really very difficult to conjecture it. The flaming countenance and belligerent eye of the 'missis' would assuredly have scared Kent from the door, under the circumstances if she had been visible when he came there to arrange, and on Sunday night he slept uneasily. She delivered the bill next morning at nine o'clock, and at twelve sent him a message that she desired it settled at once. His interview with her was eminently unpleasant and on Wednesday, when the fire for the child was not laid, and Cynthia inquired the reason, she learned that the woman had forbidden the servant to take up any fuel.

But for Nanette, their position would now have been untenable She smuggled wood to the room, pacified her mistress by the recital of purely imaginary telegrams she had picked up on Monsieur Kent's floor and wound up by squeezing Cynthia's hand one afternoon and offering to bring down some money she had saved out of her wages. This was the last straw. Cynthia put her arms round her neck and kissed her, and when Humphrey came home, and she told him what had happened, they both felt that to have to decline such a loan, and wish it could be accepted was about the deepest humiliation to which it was possible people could sink. They were mistaken, but it was the lowest point which they themselves were called upon to touch. The day following, Beaufort wired, asking Humphrey to meet him at the Cabaret Lyonnais and gave him a little dinner at a moderate price than which no one in the world need wish to eat a better. 'Billy' had not had his loan made yet—that, he said cheerfully, was certain for next week—but he had had a lucky night at baccaret, and after benedictine he pulled a bundle of notes out on to the table of the shabby restaurant and disclaiming many thanks paid what he owed in full.

With a cigar in his mouth and delight bubbling in his veins, Kent jumped into a cab, and, rattling to the Rue des Soeurs Filandieres, threw their receipt and the rest of his arrears into Cynthia's lap. She nearly dropped the baby with astonishment, and though they were unable to go anywhere it was perhaps the liveliest night they had spent in Paris. After adding together the Garins' account, and the cost of their return and a present to Nanette, it was momentarily disconcerting to perceive how few of the notes would be left; but the relief was so enormous that their spirits speedily rose again, and, extravagant as it was, they ordered champagne, and invited the chambermaid in to drink some of it.

Kent recovered their luggage the next morning and the morning after that they departed for London, having heard in the meanwhile that the Walfords could easily put them up until No. 64 was in readiness for them. The journey without a nurse was awkward and though it had been essential to go the Walfords' on arrival, Kent was secretly chagrined to reflect that explanations would have to be forthcoming of her absence. Compared with the crossing from Newhaven, this passage, to Cynthia, who had to remain below all the time, was a long voyage and when at last they reached Victoria she felt that she would have given a good deal to be going into the Grosvenor Hotel. Strawberry Hill was gained about nine o'clock and Kent found the house a pathetic descent from The Hawthorns. Mr. and Mrs. Walford, however, were not unamiable and as they did not refer to the nurse's absence otherwise than by inquiring presently how soon he expected to obtain another, he concluded that his wife had anticipated their surprise, and discounted it more or less dexteriously in her letters.

"So the paper was a failure?" said Walford, when the excitement of the entrance has subsided. "Oh, well you will be able to get something here, I dare say, before long. What do you think of the place? Not so bad, eh?"

"Not bad at all," said Kent—"very pretty! That was awful news, sir. I was infernally sorry to hear about it. Might have been worse, though—a good deal."

"Ups and downs," said the jobber; "we'll get square at the finish. Grin and bear it, Louisa, old girl. You'll always have enough to eat."

Mrs. Walford laughed constrainedly. She did not relish allusion to their reverses; it appeared to her insult added to injury.

Up On Your Toes

What a thing it is to be fit! To be not merely free from actual sickness, but to be well, absolutely well—and to have the mental vim, stamina, vigor, which go with physical well-being.

But you can't be fit if constipation is constantly breeding poisons, which are taken into the blood and undermine the whole system.

The modern treatment for constipation is Nujol.

The action of Nujol is entirely different from that of castor oil, pills, salts, etc. Nujol is pleasant to take and does not force and weaken the system, nor impair digestion.

Nujol prevents constipation because it softens the food waste and encourages the intestinal muscles to act naturally. It thus removes the cause of constipation and self-poisoning.

Nujol helps Nature establish easy, thorough bowel evacuation at regular intervals—the healthiest habit in the world. Get a bottle from your druggist today.

For valuable health booklet—"Thirty Feet of Danger"—free, address Nujol Laboratories, Standard Oil Co. (New Jersey), 50 Broadway, New York.

Warning: Nujol is sold only in sealed bottles bearing the Nujol Trade Mark as shown here. Beware of products represented to be "the same as Nujol". You may suffer from substitutes.

WINTER IN ALGONQUIN PARK.

As a winter panacea for coughs and colds Algonquin Park cannot be equalled. Two thousand feet above the sea it is always dry and cold. Days spent in snow-shoe tramps, tobogganing or ski-ing and in skating, together with evenings spent in social converse around the cosy warmth of an old fashioned log fire; these slip away unnoticed but these who have once experienced them return to their avocations with renewed energies. The "Highland Inn" owned and operated by the Grand Trunk Railway offers comfortable accommodation at reasonable rates. For all particulars apply to N.

The Canadian Mining Institute.

In 1898 an act to incorporate the Canadian Mining Institute was adopted by the Parliament of Canada. The founding of the institute was for the following purposes:

First, to promote the arts and sciences connected with the economical production of valuable minerals and metals, by means of meetings for the reading and discussion of technical papers, and the subsequent distribution of such information as may be gained through the medium of publications. Second, the establishment of a central reference library and a headquarters for the purpose of this organization. Third, to take concerted action upon such matters as affect the mining and metallurgical industries of the Dominion of Canada. Fourth, to encourage and promote these industries by all lawful and honorable means.

In March, 1905, an annual general meeting of the institute was held in Montreal and bylaws were adopted. To-day the Canadian Mining Institute is the one strong national mining organization of Canada. Its annual general meeting is one of the events that mining engineers and others interested in the development of the Canadian mining industry look forward to. It is now planned to have two annual general meetings, one to be held in the east and one in the west.

Big Prices for Muskrat.

Muskrat has had really the greatest advance of all furs. From the 50 cents of a few seasons ago to an average of around $3—and in the case of one exceptionally fine lot to $5.10 was certainly a great rise.

Since all kinds of furs are bringing high prices, an increased number of people have started in fur farming such animals as mink, skunk, marten, muskrat, etc., and there is no reason why they cannot all be raised at a profit, says the Black Fox Magazine.

If the kitchen windows have no awning, the shades should be dark blue or green.

A comparison with the previous year, itself a record, reflects continued prosperity, the total assets increasing by $32,582,136 to $198,506,572.

The Merchants Bank is especially strong in its liquid assets, amounting to $84,014,865, as against $72,448,277 in the previous year, while deposits have increased $30,117,802 of which gain $19,368,746 was in Savings Deposits.

A careful review of the complete balance sheet inspires confidence in all who recognize how closely the welfare of the country is linked with the sound position of our leading financial institutions.

WINTER VACATIONS

The Grand Trunk Railway has decided to give to those who love the great out-of-doors an opportunity to spend their winter vacations in Algonquin Park. The "Highland Inn" the largest of the Park hotels is to be kept open throughout the year and there will be found all the comforts associated with first class hotel service including warm, cheery, public and private rooms and excellent cuisine. Two thousand feet above the level of the sea Algonquin Park has ideal climatic conditions and is easily acessible, being about 200 miles north of Toronto; and 169 Miles west of Ottawa. Every facility has been provided for winter sports, including skating, tobogganing, ski-ing and snow-shoeing. Copy of new publication, "Enjoy Winter in Ontario Highlands" may be obtained on request from Grand Trunk agents or from C. E. Horning, D.P.A., Toronto, Ont.

Gets V. C. After Five Years.

The gallant behaviour which cost the late Lieut. William Archer McCrae Bruce his life nearly five years ago has just been rewarded with the bestowal of the Victoria Cross. Bruce was a young officer of the regular Indian army, 59th Scinde Rifles, which was formerly commanded by his father, and was a nephew of Edward Hay, former general manager of the Imperial Bank of Canada. The young soldier displayed great bravery at Givenchy on the night of December 19, 1914, leading a party against a German trench, and afterwards, though severely wounded, walking up and down encouraging his men to hold out against the overwhelming masses of the enemy. The onrush of the field grey hordes later swept over this little oupost of the "Old Contemptibles," and most of those not among the slain were taken prisoner. Consequently it was only lately that the story of Lieut. Bruce's gallantry became known.

Had Many Portraits.

Guzman Blanco, late President of Venezuela, whose daughter married the Duc de Morny, and who died a few years ago in Paris, not only had his portrait painted about 200 times, but erected about a dozen statues to himself, writing with his own hand their fulsome inscriptions and invariably called himself in gigantic capitals "The Illustrious American, Pacificator and Regenerator of the United States of Venezuela."

Postage Stamps.

The first duty of every self-respecting nation is to issue a new series of postage stamps. Finland already has led the way with a pleasant variety of colors, and the example no doubt will be followed by Lithuania, Livonia and Esthonia, to say nothing of Bavaria and the Confederated German States when they break up the empire on which the sun has set.

A Huge Stone Crusher.

What is reported to be the largest gyratory stone crusher ever built has just been completed at Allentown, Pa. The machine is to be used for crushing limestone for chemical purposes, flux, etc. It has two jaw openings, each 60 x 190 inches. The crusher, complete, weighs about 800,000 pounds, is seventeen feet eight inches high from foundation to top of hopper, and has a shaft twenty-one feet long and forty inches in diameter.

To Clean Hair Brushes.

Corn meal will clean hair brushes quite as well as ammonia, and there is no danger of injury to the back of the brush. Take a cup of corn meal and fill the brush, rubbing the bristles gently with the hand. As it becomes discolored from absorbing the grease, shake it out and replace with fresh meal until the brush is clean.

PLANT TREES ON PRAIRIES.

Attain Sufficient Growth in Five Years to Hide Buildings.

To trace what one might call the evolution of Western agriculture—that indefinable change characterized by some of the old-timers as devolution with a big "D" and a couple of robust adjectives — would require space far beyond that permitted in a letter of this nature. Indeed, a volume might easily be written describing the wax and wane of "free ranging on a great scale, the slow but inevitable introduction of pasture systems and the inauguration of irrigation in definite "dry" areas. However, taking it by and large, certain very distinct symptoms betray this slow-acting metamorphosis, and of these one of the most striking, if not most general, is the appearance here and there on the bald landscape of groves and windbreaks formed from hand-plantings of trees indigenous to this fertile prairie soil.

Perhaps this feature is most apparent in the Province of Alberta, where a certain roll in the land may in itself suggest to homesteaders the desirability of a small amount of arboriculture. It is not surprising that tree-planting has made great progress in irrigated areas, where artificial watering, possible during a greater part of the summer, conduces to rapid growth even under unfavorable climatic conditions. On irrigated farms all through southern Alberta may be seen homes whose setting is enhanced by long rows of poplars or heavy clumps of soft maple and willows.

One of the most striking illustrations of the beautification of the prairie by tree-planting is to be seen at Strathmore, the headquarters of the western irrigated block of the Canadian Pacific Railway. As the train swings in a wide curve from the great open space beyond, where trees are not and the very grass this year has been parched and sere, there comes into view at the skirts of the little town a vista of rare beauty — brown gables of painted buildings, with red-brick chimneys and white trimmings, evergreens that sweep the sides of curving driveways, clumps of willow and poplar that hide the utilitarian features of a farmyard and stray bits of soft green lawn that charm the eye tired with the endless roll of bare boundless prairie. It might be, this little spot, a town in old Ontario, with its abundance of shade trees and its profusion of flowers. Yet it was, six or seven years ago, a mere staked square in a wilderness of level monotony, a bit of bald prairie ungraced by a single tree or shrub.

"Money did that," I imagine I hear the reader remark. Not at all; probably the actual money cost of the whole ensemble would not run over a few dollars. It is something more than money that brings greenness and beauty and the blessing of shade and velvety lawn to treeless tracts of prairie. Ofttimes, indeed, in these Western lands one finds the most trees and the prettiest flowers and the most inviting homes on farms where money is least thought of, where a far more treasured possession is the memory of an elm-fringed field "down east," with a long lane marked by cedars and balsams, or a great cool maple grove where robins twittered in soft summer noons.

The ordinary man on the ordinary homestead out here is beginning to think in terms of trees and flowers. On the Robson farm near Strathmore, on the Vidal farm near Dalroy, at a score of farms on the Sutherland block and at a dozen other places I saw whole avenues and groves that have been created within a decade. Your Westerner does not set out a tree here and a tree there as does his contemporary who beautifies the surroundings of his Ontario home. Instead, he orders his slips or cuttings by the thousand and plants them by the acre, in windbreaks five or six rows in depth and a mile or two long, or in groves that measure rods on either side, with trees set two feet by two feet all the way across. For, mark you, he need not plant a tree to grow a tree; it is necessary only that he make a hole in the ground with a poker and insert therein a willow slip or a cutting from a poplar. There is something in prairie soil that causes really phenomenal growth in these softwood trees. On the Canadian Pacific Demonstration Farm at Brooks I saw acres of trees, literally, that were planted less than five years ago, and that had attained sufficient growth to hide buildings such as ordinarily group themselves around a barn. At the same place I saw a row of Russian poplars over ten feet in height that had been planted as cuttings in 1916, three years ago. These Russian poplars do unusually well in all three prairie provinces, and, with Manitoba maples and willows, are most popular among tree-planting farmers, although the common spruces and balsams seem to make great headway and to endure the extreme winter weather quite as well as in the eastern provinces.

Curtiss Aeronola
The Last Word in Talking Machines.

Hear It—To-Day—Do!
You Certainly Will Be Interested.

We say it quite frankly—we want you—yes, we are anxious to have you, go and hear a Curtiss Aeronola.

We feel that we have built the finest talking machine ever made, and we are backing our judgment with the financial resources and skill which we put into the making of Aeroplanes.

We have already sold thousands of Curtiss Aeronolas, but—we want you to buy an Aeronola. First of all, then, listen to its Tone. It brings from the record everything that the artist intended should be brought out. We often play records on it, simultaneously with the playing of the same records on other instruments, and in this, the greatest of all tests, the immense superiority of our reproducer, tone arm and specially designed horn has been proven over and over again.

When, in addition to this, you see for yourself the three exquisite cabinet finishes (Fumed Oak, Walnut and Mahogany), we feel that you will surely wish to buy a Curtiss Aeronola.

Do not let another week go by. Go to a music store and ask them to demonstrate the Aeronola to you, or write for our Catalogue and we will send it by return mail and tell you the name of a dealer near where you live.

OSHAWA ATHLETIC CLUB HAS OVER 125 MEMBERS

OSHAWA, Nov. 25—The newly formed McLaughlin and Oldsmobile Athletic Association got off to a good start by holding a smoker and a concert, which was greatly appreciated by some 300 employees of the firm who weer present. A parade from the factory, led by the town band, was the initiatory event. Before the evening was over 125 members had signed on. Mr. Bergey, chairman, presided over a good progam. Boxing bouts and a wrestling match were enjoyable features of the evening.

"The "Flu" Coming Back
Are You Prepared?"

"HERE is an article about the "Flu." It says that the general opinion among physicians is that it will return this winter."

"Have they found a cure?"

"No. It seems that at the annual meeting of the American Medical Association, papers were read by physicians who could speak from authority on this subject. There was such a diversity of opinion on the effects of vaccination and innoculation, that these methods cannot be considered a success."

"What is a person to do then?"

"Well, statistics show that about three persons out of four are immune to the "Flu" germs. Investigations of a large number of cases makes it clear that this immunity from attack is due to the healthful condition of the system."

"In some districts 24 persons out of 1000 developed pneumonia from the "Flu." The germs of these ailments seem to thrive under similar conditions. If you are tired out and run down you are an easy prey to pneumonia germs, and the same applies to the "Flu" and other germ diseases. The thing to do is to keep fit."

"In what way?"

"By living according to the best hygienic laws, giving attention to diet and exercise and keeping the blood pure and rich, for, after all, pure rich blood is the greatest of germicides."

"When your digestive system fails to keep the blood rich there is nothing that will help you so much as Dr. Chase's Nerve Food. This treatment is composed of the elements which nature provides for the building up of the red blood corpuscles. By its use you are enabled to get your vitality up to high water mark and to keep it there. For this reason it is a wonderful help in the fight against all germs which threaten the human system."

EXPECT HOT DEBATE ON SOLDIERS' BONUS

KINGSTON, Nov. 26—If plans materialize, and if challenges are accepted, next Sunday afternoon will see a rather warm discussion when President Howe of G.W.V.A. will debate with Dr. J. W. Edwards, M.P., for Frontenac. At the mass meeting of veterans held in Strand Theatre President Howe, in the course of his short address, sent out a challenge to Dr. Edwards to meet him on the same platform next Sunday and debate Dr. Edwards' attitude in the House of Commons as a member of the Committee on Soldier Repatriation, and his recent statement in the public press on the question of soldiers' gratuity. Both men are keen debaters.

77 TRAINS WILL BE CANCELLED IN ONTARIO

London, Ont., Nov. 25.—Four trains operated out of London by the Grand Trunk will be suspended, commencing Sunday next, as a means of meeting trouble in the wake of the coal strike, according to unofficial information received here today.

Local officials are advised that the company will cancel 77 trains on Ontario lines, among them being the morning train on the London, Huron & Bruce, the nine o'clock train for Toronto, the noon train for Windsor and the afternoon train for Toronto.

The Refinement of Purity

CAREFUL cooks know the value of purity. In the making of cakes or pastry they use those ingredients which they believe to be pure and wholesome.

To apply this "insistence on purity" to sugar, is no easy matter—for nearly all sugars look alike to those not expert in detecting variation. The safe course is to use a sugar that comes from refineries in which purity is a boast.

In the Dominion Sugar refineries the boast is backed by a standing invitation to the public to visit and inspect the plants in which Dominion Crystal Sugar is made.

In Dominion Crystal Sugar the housewives of Canada have one sugar that can be depended upon for that Purity which is so essential to successful culinary effort.

This is the only sugar that may be rightly termed "Canadian from the ground up." We do import the finest raw cane sugar and refine it—but our pride is in the product we make from Canadian sugar beets.

Don't Worry About Smallpox

THERE were half a dozen of them, and they met together for lunch. Of course, the discussion turned to the question of the smallpox epidemic, and vaccination.

"I should worry about the vaccination dispute," said one. "I've had smallpox, so the subject has no terrors for me."

Had smallpox! The rest of the party looked their surprise. What was it like? Where are the pockmarks? Did you have it bad? These and half a dozen other questions came thick and fast.

"I had it right here in Toronto, and spent a month over at the Swiss Cottage Hospital over the Don," said the first speaker. "And I had it as bad as any of the others who were there at the time, and there were about ten, including men, women, and children. As some of you fellows seem scared, I don't mind giving you a few pointers.

"In the first place, don't be scared even if the doctor does tell you you have the disease. I remember when the doctor and Mr. Shutt, from the City Hall, came to the house and told me I had 'it.' I had been ill about a week. For a couple of nights I was a little off my head, but nothing to speak of. I had a temperature, as the nurses call it, and had all the symptoms of a sharp fever. No one suspected smallpox until I was on my feet again. The doctor had not seen me for a couple of days, as he thought I was over the danger point, and it was only a case of getting strong again.

"But that day—it was Saturday—I telephone him that I had a sore spot in my mouth. That seemed to worry him, for he lost no time running up. An hour later Mr. Shutt and the city doctor were on the job, and half an hour after that I was in the ambulance on the way to the Swiss Cottage.

"Say—when they told me I had smallpox I felt as if my days were numbered. All I had ever read about the ravages of the scourge in olden times came to mind, and I as good as gave up the ghost. Honestly I had little hope of ever seeing home and mother again. I don't know when I was so scared in my life.

"I was almost too weak to walk upstairs. But hope began to revive when I saw the ward and the other inmates. Believe me, they didn't look like corpses. There wasn't anyone in bed, and they had just finished a substantial supper, as I could see from the trays the nurse was carrying away. A couple of the men were playing checkers, others were reading, while in a corner a lively debate was under way. In fact, it was like any hospital ward where the patients were convalescent. I had pictured patients tied down to prevent them scratching at the pocks, and so on, but was most agreeably disappointed.

"But you haven't any marks yourself. What do they do? Did you have it bad?"

"Yes, I had it as bad as anyone there—in fact, worse than some. As to marks, why, I didn't see one person leave that hospital disfigured in any way. As for treatment, there was practically none. That is, nothing for the smallpox itself. There was the usual medicine given to patients who are inactive, and plenty of nourishment, but no distinctively smallpox medicine.

"Every night we used to paint our 'spots' with vaseline. That was all the treatment they got, and it certainly did relieve the itching. Some of us were marked from head to heel, and it was a long job to paint all the spots, but it certainly did help a lot.

"Mind, I am not saying that smallpox is as pleasant as a picnic or church social. It isn't. But neither is it half, no, nor a quarter as bad as the average person thinks it is. I saw a little kiddie brought in, whose mother had been down with the disease a week. The little fellow was as bright as a cricket. The nurse had all she could do to keep him in bed one whole day, when he had a slight temperature. Then he sat up and played with his doll and other toys. That was the only day he spent in bed.

"It was a long wait until the little lumps under the skin disappeared. Long before that time we were as well as any dozen persons you could pick out on the streets. We used to count the spots every morning, and some of the fellows would quietly rub away with a little pumice-stone they secured from somewhere. That didn't do any good, however, nature took her own course, and slowly the spots disappeared. When the last was down level, it was a case of get your clothes together, ready for disinfecting. Every stitch is sent to the disinfecting chamber, where all the germs are killed. Then, next day, comes a good scrubbing in a bath of disinfectant, a shake hands with the doctor, and a good-bye to the hospital.

"While I don't want any of my friends to contract smallpox, I would sooner see them down with that than a serious case of the flu, or diphteria or typhoid fever. No doubt, in the good old days they had a worse form than we have at present, but if any of your fellows think that your death-warrant is signed if you are taken down with the smallpox, why, forget it. Arrange your affairs, if you can, for about five weeks, and then make up your mind that you are going to have a passable time. If the attack is a mild one, you may have to go back to work before five weeks. But above everything, there's absolutely no need to worry. I've had it, and I know."

Express Parcels By Aeroplane

The Canadian Express Company and the Grand Trunk System, in conjunction with the Handley-Page Air Line, is now despatching express packages from London to Paris, Brussels and Amsterdam by aeroplane, with return service from these points to London. This illustration shows shipments from Paris destined for Canada, being unloaded from one of the big machines at Brooklands. These shipments include high class model millinery purchased by Canadian merchants in Paris and shipped from that fashion centre at the latest possible moment to catch the fast steamships so that such models will be able to reach the cities of the Dominion as quickly as similar models reach New York. Passenger service by aeroplane is also in operation between the same points.

Clergy At Half-Fare And The Press Free

But in Latter Case, Carvell Not Certain That Privilege Extends Beyond Province.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Nov. 25.—Dealing with the right of railway companies to grant free reduced transportation to ministers of religion, members of local Legislatures, newspapermen and others, the following judgment, accompanied by a memo by the chief railway commissioners has been handed to the Canadian Press:

Upon reading the application, dated October 16th, 1919, and considering what has been urged in support thereof, it is ordered that the railway companies of Canada, sujected to the jurisdiction of the board be permitted until further orders, to carry free of charge these persons viz:

A. Department of Immigration, of the Dominion of Canada, or such representatives of the department as may be required by the Minister, or Deputy Minister.

B. Departments of Immigration and Customs of the United States. For such representatives of the department as may be required by the commissioners or deputy commissioner of immigration, or collector, or deputy collector of customs in charge of the district.

C. Fire rangers. Fire rangers within their respective districts, employed or authorized by Provincial Governments.

D. Families of former or deceased employes of the railways.

E. Former employees of transportation companies and their families.

F. Deputy Ministers' departments of the Federal Government and those having the rank of Deputy Ministers and to employes of the Department of Railways and Canals and to the Governor-General and staff."

FREE OR LOWER RATES

In the memo attached to the foregoing judgment the chief commissioner, Hon. F. B. Carvell, says:

"After having considered this section carefully, I have come to the conclusion that the whole purport of this section was to give to the railway companies, within certain limits, reduced rates; and to such classes of persons and, in some cases, individuals as the companies may decide upon subject in certain cases to the approval of this board. The whole section is preceded by the following words: 'Nothing in this Act shall prevent......'"

It then refers to five specific cases of persons and careful examination shows that there is no great change between the present Act and its predecessor excepting that in sub-clauses (a) and (c) a limitation is placed upon the power of the railway companies and in sub clauses (d) and (e) and extension is provided for.

CLERGY AND THE PRESS

"Under clause (a) the most which the railway companies can do toward reduced fares for ministers of religion is to carry them at one-half the regular fare, and in clause (c) the most they can do for members of the Provincial Legislature is to carry them free within points in the Province to which they belong. It is not clear whether members of the press can be carried free beyond the Province in which they reside, but as there is no comma after the word Legislatures, and nothing to designate a difference in the two classes, I am rather of the opinion that the limiting words "between points within the Povince apply to the latter as well as the former. Clause (c) also extends the privilege to dependent members of the families of any persons who are entitled to free transportation under section 346 of this act.

MERCHANTS BANK CONTINUES TO GAIN

Statement for Half-Year Gives Total Assets of $198,506,572. A New Record.

Deposits Gain $30,117,802

The Balance Sheet of the Merchants Bank of Canada as at the end of the half-year period, 31st October last, received from the Bank's headquarters here on Saturday, shows continued gains and growth on the part of this wellknown financial institution.

The Total Assets have now reached the commanding figure of $198,506,572, an increase of $32,582,136 over the corresponding date last year. The readily available portion of the Assets amounts to $84,014,965, an increase of $11,566,688, by which is shown that the liquid position of the Bank has been well maintained.

That the Bank has continued to do its full share, both to the Government and the Commercial Community is shown by an increase of $4,682,244 in securities held of the Dominion and Provincial Governments, while Current Loans and Discounts in Canada have increased by $19,435,478 during the 12 months' period.

Note Circulation at $15,827,373 is $647,130 higher than a year ago with the issue in excess of Paid-Up Capital more than covered by a Deposit of $8,000,000 in the Central Gold Reserve.

The Deposits amount to $166,006,015, against $135,888,213 on October 31st, 1918, being an increase for the period of $30,117,802, of which gain $19,368,746 was in Savings or Time Deposits and $10,749,056 in Deposits payable on Demand—a basis of progress which cannot but be considered satisfactory.

The statement altogether makes very good reading for those who realize the important part that our Chartered Banks plays in the wellbeing of the whole country, industrial as well as agricultural, and the figures are especially interesting, as the period covered, with the exception of 11 days, has been after the date of the Armistice and clearly demonstrates that our large and well-managed financial Institutions are continuing their progress and growth on a solid basis with the war a thing of the past.

The main features of thefigures of October 31st, 1919, and October 31st, 1918, compare as follows:

Big Law Suit In Brockville

Claim for Recovery of $51,000 Transferred From Ottawa.

OTTAWA, Nov. 28.—The case of the National Manufacturing Company of Ottawa, against Francis Craig, Brockville for the recovery of $51,000 alleged by the prosecution to have been taken from the funds of the company without "authority or warrant" will be heard in the district court at Brockville.

The case, which is attracting a great deal of public interest by reason of the fact that the defence alleged that the National Manufacturing Company had made a clear profit of $700,000 in eighteen months from the manufacture of war munitions was mentioned in the supreme court of Ontario on Tuesday. Chief Justice Lennox decided on sending the case for hearing to Brockville because of the number of documents and the amount of detail involved which would take several days to dispose of.

The statements of the case on file in court shows that the net profits of this company for eighteen months amounted to $700,000. It is understood that the actual paid up capital of the company at the time the contracts were secured from the Imperial Board of Munitions was $600,000.

Mr. Craig claims he was entitled to $5,000 annually as salary and that he also was entitled to a bonus on all profits made. In the eighteen months, when the contracts were secured and delivered his share, he claims, amounted to $61,657.82. This sum he withdrew from the funds of the company and the action is for the recovery of this amount, less $10,000 as salary.

The case for the plaintiffs is that that the new board of directors made no ratification of the appointment of Craig as president and general manager, that Mr. Craig on several occasions, without authority or warrant, withdrew moneys from the funds amounting in all to $61,657.82, of which it is alleged, he was entitled to only $10,000 on account of salary due.

The National Manufacturing Co. is a development of the Delahaye Brothers business, formerly of Pembroke, latterly of Ottawa and Brockville. In Brockville the Delahaye interests took over the old Cossitt's foundry property which was operated under the name of the National Manufacturing Co., municipal inducements being given and local capital invested in the Company. When the war started large ammunition contracts were secured and eventually a re-organization took place in which Mr. Craig, representing Brockville shareholders, took over the management.

Arrested For Wife Murder

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer
Canadian Press Limited

TORONTO, Nov. 28—George James Coppen, who was arrested shortly after midnight, after part of his home had been destroyed and the remains of his wife partly burned found therein, was arraigned in police court this morning and remanded to await further investigation. The police discovered that the woman's head had been badly smashed. Neighbors declared that she had been living for years in a secluded part of the house, and denied the company of her husband and young son.

10,000 ONTARIO TEACHERS WILL BE ORGANIZED

OTTAWA, Nov. 27—Ten thousand men and women Public school teachers of the Province of Ontario are to become organized shortly. They are to be formed into the Federation of Male and Women Teachers of Ontario respectively, but will co-operate whenever their mutual interests become affected. Headquarters for the time being have been established in Peterboro.

Coal Situation Very Serious

OTTAWA, Nov. 28—Canadians can now look forward to a shortage of soft coal supplies for some time, in the opinion of Mr. C. A. Magrath, Dominion Fuel Controller, who has just returned from Washington. In view of the breaking off of negotiations between the miners and operators, announced late this afternoon, there can be little hope of amelioration of the situation for some time.

THE BREAKUP OF WINTER SEEN BY TRAVELLERS IN PEACE RIVER DISTRICT

WINNIPEG, Nov. 28—Coming into the frigid atmosphere of this city, travellers from the Peace River district are talking of the break-up of the winter there, and early plowing, too. They say that ice on the river broke last Thursday, although it has been so thick that teams had been crossing for ten days, and old-timers predict the river will soon be clear. Trappers speak there of an open or very late winter, drawing their conclusions from the fact that rabbits are still brown and that fur, trapped to date, is not primed.

St. Catherine Day Was Celebrated

Custom Was Brought to Quebec by the Early Settlers from Old France.

MONTREAL, Nov. 27—The snowfall of yesterday was exactly what was expected for a thorough and genuine Canadian Saint Catherine Day, as of all the Saints in Paradise there are very few so popular with the French Canadian as Saint Catherine. She is not only the patron of Montreal's largest business thoroughfare, she is the patron of school children, and also the patron of all spinsters, and it was an old custom of Saint Catherine's Day to class as ineligible for matrimony all the girls who had reached their twenty-fifth birthday without breaking out of the state of singledom. The crowning of the old maids, which was the most interesting part of the celebration, is less practised than ever in our party, partly because the refinement of the century barred from polite society any reference to the age of a lady, especially when she had passed the quarter century mark, and looks it, and more especially when she is there and partly because the bachelor girls, that other new product of the century, have made a place for themselves in the world and have become a notable entity in modern society. Also, because age is no longer a factor of eligibility.

But Saint Catherine's Day is still celebrated. It is taffy day, and there is no such taffy as that made after a certain recipe, and cooled on snow. It is why a good snowfall is a necessary adjunct of the celebration, and very seldom is its absence to be regretted.

Taffy Day is celebrated in every French-Canadian home where there are children, and even where there are no children and for once in the year King Taffy is not completely supplanted by the expensive chocolate box.

But it is especially in the boarding schools that Saint Catherine is feasted. It is generally a whole holiday, and it is the rule that every little one is given all the taffy he or she can eat, and a little bit more. In the country, the celebration is not confined to the school population. It is taken advantage of for the last large gatherings before Advent, and, with or without snow, the only girl who does not dance on Saint Catherine's Day is the one that has no beau, and who, through what it not always of coincidence, happens to be twenty-five years of age or more.

The custom of celebrating St. Catherine's Day was brought to this country by the early French settlers, and is still in existence in old France, minus the taffy, the introduction of which is a mystery still unsolved in French-Canadian annals. But it is reported from Ottawa that the archivists are looking into the matter, and if no reason can be discovered they may invent one.

In the meantime, the food controller might save lots of sugar by introducing the Saint Catherine celebration throughout the country, as at least for one day molasses would be the general substitute for sugar.

Canada's Coal Needs To Be Cared For

PHILADELPHIA, Nov. 27—Despite the serious shortage of bituminous coal in the United States as a result of the strike of the bituminous coal miners and the regulations enforced by the American Coal Administrator Dr. Garfield, it was learned that the embargo placed against export of coal will be partially lifted to look after, in a measure, the pressing needs of Canada.

It was stated in well-informed circles that as a result of the effort of Mr. C. A. Magrath, Canadian Fuel Administrator, the U. S. Fuel Administration will release 150 cars of bituminous coal daily for export to Canada.

Mr. Magrath has been in the United States for some days in conference with the Fuel Administration trying to arrange for a bituminous coal supply to after the institutional and public utility needs of Canada.

Vaccination Order Jams Bridges

NIAGARA FALLS, Ont., Nov. 27—The order of the United States immigration authorities, that all Canadians entering the United States must produce vaccination certificates, which became effective yesterday is causing much congestion here. Big crowds have been lined up at the American end of the bridges all forenoon, and travel by train has almost ceased. One train, ordinarily packed carried only one passenger and Canadians who are employed across the river in some cases did not arrive at work until noon. The same condition resulted in Niagara Falls, New York residents, who have daily business on the Canadian side. Vaccination was not rigidly insisted on for residents of this district, who have frequent business in Niagara Falls, New York. Certificates are being issued by the United States Immigration officials on production of passports, or other indentification. Americans are also affected as they must have certificates to be able to return to the United States without vaccination.

Vaccine Supply Ends

WINDSOR, Nov. 27—So great has been the demand for vaccination that at ten o'clock, not one drop of the fluid was to be found in the city. This was due to the fact that so suddenly was the order put into effect no preparation had been made to cope with the situation.

Doctors were busy until midnight taking care of the rush business. It is estimated that nearly 2,000 people received vaccination in that time throughout the border cities.

Both Canadian and United States Immigration authorities report that the vaccination order has had no appreciable effect on the ferry traffic across the river. No one has as yet been turned back. A doctor and two nurses have been placed on duty at the Woodward avenue dock in Detroit, who are prepared to vaccinate anyone applying right at the dock.

Lady Astor Elected Member British Commons

RECEIVED MORE VOTES THAN HER TWO OPPONENTS—FIRST WOMAN TO SIT IN BRITISH HOUSE OF COMMONS — TAKES HER HUSBAND'S PLACE IN PARLIAMENT — LABOR LEGISLATION CHIEF ISSUE IN CAMPAIGN.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Nov. 28.—Lady Astor, Unionist, was elected to the Commons from the Sutton division of Plymouth in the bye-election November 15th, it is announced today. Her chief opponent was W. T. Gay, Laborite. This is regarded as a great victory for the Lloyd George coalition government.

In the bye-election in the Isle of Thanet, Kent division, Esmond Harmsworth, Unionist, defeated Captain A. J. West, Liberal, by 2,000 majority.

The vote in Plymouth was: Lady Astor, 14,494; W. T. Gay, Labor, 9,202; Isaac Foot, Liberal, 4,139.

Lady Astor became a candidate for the Plymouth seat in the British House of Commons after the death of Viscount Astor of Lever Hall had left her husband heir to the title and necessitated his retirement from the Lower House of Parliament. Premier Lloyd George, A. J. Balfour, former Secretary of State for Foreign Affairs, and Baron Fisher, former First Sea Lord, were among the various notables who gave hearty approval of her candidature. Labor legislation was the chief issue during the campaign which at times assumed quite bitter aspects. Lady Astor, who becomes the first woman seat-holder in the House of Commons, was formerly Miss Nannie Langhorne, of Virginia. She is the mother of six children, a fact of which she boasted on one occasion during her canvassing.

Countess Harkievicz was elected as a Sinn Fein candidate in Ireland, but did not take her seat.

BARE BACK NO BEAUTY THINKS ELINOR GLYNN

LONDON, Nov. 28—"What is causing this almost universal desire to expose the back to view?" asks Mrs. Elinor Glynn in an article on the bareback fashion in the Ladies' Field. Mrs. Glynn goes on to say:

"The standard of decency in such matters has always been only geographical, but in all countries where the later Christianity held sway the belief that morality meant primarily sex suppression had caused a set of instincts to be evolved which experienced horror at any undue exposure of any part of the body, except face, hands and neck.

But "Ideas" Were Taboo

"Anything more suggested "ideas," and "ideas" having to do with sex and emotion were consequently wrong and must be taboo.

"The result was that a woman's body was a thing of mystery and fascination, because it was hidden and imagination had to be called in to picture it."

According to Mrs. Glynn, the "imagined" form is 99 per cent. better than the realization, and she goes on to say how foolish women are to aside back drapings.

"Now, hardly anything is left for the imaginative faculty to work on," she says. "Almost everything can be stared at baldly, and the eye is forced to realize that five women out of ten are ugly, misshapen creatures, often with coarse skins."

BACON AT 45 CENTS

TORONTO, Nov. 27—The Harris Abattoir sold bacon recently to retailers at 45 cents a pound, and hams at 36½ cents. The order of the Board of Commerce would mean that Toronto retailers should sell bacon at 51 cents and hams at 44 cents. In some shops sliced ham is bringing from 55 to 60 cents a pound, and bacon 52 to 55 cents. Members of the local butchers' association are not saying anything, but will shortly issue a statement for the Board of Commerce. They claim the order was based on evidence taken in Manitoba.

MANAGING BOARD FOR GRAND TRUNK

OTTAWA, Nov. 28—The Grand Trunk agreement has been practically completed and will be handed to Sir Alfred Smithers this week. It will be submitted to the Grand Trunk directorate on his arrival in England. Before the arbitration proceedings can make much headway, there must be a complete audit of the Grand Trunk financial affairs, and as this has not begun, and, once started, is expected to require two months' work, there is little probability of the arbitration board making much progress before February. In the meantime both parties are selecting their representatives for the joint board of management for control of the Grand Trunk until its absorption by the Government. The Government appoints two, the Grand Trunk two, and these four a fifth, who will be chairman. It is expected that the Government's selections will be made from Messrs Warren, Hayes and Hungerford, National Railway officials, and the Grand Trunk from Messrs. Dalrymple, Hinton and Robb all members of the Grand Trunk operating and traffic staffs. Until these selections are made, there will be considerable doubt as to the chairman, but it is expected to be either a prominent financier or one of the best-known railway men in Canada.

ENGLAND DOES NOT WANT PROHIBITION

MONTREAL, Nov. 27—"The women are splendidly gowned; they smoke and drink wine at dinner with the men; money seems abundant and nobody haggles about the price; but concurrently with all this, England is engaged in solving many weighty problems, which, owing to her larger sanity, she will accomplish with more certainty than could be expected from hectic Latin peoples," said Mr. Jas. C. Tory, general manager of agencies, Sun Life Assurance Company, who has returned from a trip to England.

"There is a new England in the making; but there is one thing the average Englishman wants to see as aforetime—his beer, which temperance people are threatening.

"We are a sober people in the Dominion," said Mr. Tory. "We have no idea on this side of how drinking enters into the general life of the people there. They do not want prohibition."

LANCS FACTORIES CHANGING HANDS

LONDON, Nov. 27—Nearly 100 cotton factories in Lancashire have changed owners. One striking case is the sale of the business of Horrockses, Chewdson & Co., Ltd., of Manchester, the famous firm of cotton spinners and manufacturers, to a group of financiers, including S. B. Joel. The price paid for the business, with its 320,000 spindles and between 8,000 and 9,000 spools, is put at $25,000,000. There is also a great boom in cotton mill shares, some of them selling for seven times their normal and paid-up value.

Thrills And Mystery In Desert Play

"Sahara" a Decided Novelty—Paris, Paris, Cairo and the Great Desert.

What is the real basis and the real test of a great motion picture drama? A group of the most psychologists in the country has been making an intensive study of screen drama, seeking to discover, in the absence of sound of the human voice that adds tangibility to the stage play, what are the main elements that grip the spectators' attention. And the answer to their inquiries is: "Emotional drama that rivets the eyes of audiences on the screen and holds them toally oblivious of the spoken titles; audiences controlled by the acting of the players themselves. In "Sahara" starring Louise Glaum in a story by C. Gardiner Sullivan there are expanses of hundreds of feet of hundreds of feet of scenes in which no one becomes conscious of the intrusion of a single narrative or spoken title. This unusual production was screened before a large audience at Griffin's last night. It is one of the few great stories of the past year or two in motion pictures. "Sahara" absolutely rivets the attention of the onlooker. One cannot look away. It brings tears; it has tensity; it strikes at the heart and the brain. It has warmth and color. It carries the glamor and color of the desert and the sweet scents and odors of the East. "Sahara" easily ranks as an unforgettable picture. The Sreen Magazine, Topics of the Day with its witty excepts from the press of America, a beautiful Outing Chester Travelogue, a funny Christie comedy and the Official British News with its list of important happenings in the British Empire completes a splendid varied bill all of which will be repeated again to-night and Saturday matinee and night. Miss Evans' vocal solos were very much appreciated.

"ROAD THROUGH THE DARK"

How a young and beautiful girl, the daughter of a conventional French family, is forced to become the mistress of a German Prince is the theme of the thrilling story "Road Through the Dark" in which Clara Kimball Young and Jack Holt are co-starring at the Palace this week-end. Gabrielle Jardee, a French girl is in love with an American, John Morgan, who, her conventional parents disapprove of. In order to break up the match they send her with her sister, Marie-Louise and her brother Georges, to the home of her aunt in a small, adjacent town. The war comes and the village is invaded by the Germans. Gabrielle's aunt, sister and brother are killed. Protection is offered to her and the rest of the village if she will give herself to the German Kommandant, Prince Karl of Streilitz, who has seen Gabrielle and becomes infatuated with her beauty. To save the people of the town Gabrielle kills her soul and becomes the French mistress of the German Prince. She pretends to love him for a purpose of her own. Prince Karl is wounded and is transferred to the Intelligence department in Berlin. After much persuasion Gabrielle succeeds in getting Karl to take her with him. Gabrielle's beauty and brilliance charms diplomatic circles and Prince Karl's "Little Friend" is respected as his wife. Gabrielle confiscates some valuable papers, which is discovered by Karl. How Gabrielle escapes, how matters are arranged for her beloved France and how matters are adjusted to the satisfaction of all, including her sweetheart forms a most unique plot which held the interest to the final flicker last night. A good comedy, the British Canadian News and a thrilling and interesting chapter of "The Great Gamble" series are also being exhibited on the same program.

Says Nothing To Fear If Man Does Right

Drury Outlines His System for Reorganizing Ontario Elections —To Act Carefully.

TORONTO, Nov. 28.—"To my mind, proportional representation would wipe out the objectionable features of the party system," said Premier Drury to a press representative. "Those objectionable features are principally the unrepresented minorities under the present system and the disconnection of the representatives from the people once they are elected. "The recall, whatever may be said against it, would certainly prevent this disconnection," he said. "My opinion of the recall might be summed up in the words of an old Irishman I once met—"I don't see that there is anything to be feared in the recall if a man wants to do what is right."

Mr. Drury cited the Swiss system of government, where all of these new features have been in force successfully for many years now.

"I have studied the Swiss system very thoroughly," said Mr. Drury.

"As a matter of fact our administration for municipalities, towns and townships is practically the Swiss system. There is no strict opposition there. Why is it essential to have a party in power and another in opposition?"

His opinion is that the group system is the best system if it is based on principles. The harm would come from groups representing strictly selfish, economic classes, such as a separate group of farmers, another of doctors, a third, perhaps, of lawyers, each working for selfish purposes. The only danger to guard against is to forget that government has a moral end.

"Make this clear, however," said the Premier, "we intend to do nothing suddenly. It will be only after everything has been thoroughly considered and investigated that we shall move."

Complete Success Where Tried.

His opinion agrees with all the investigators of proportional representation: that where it has been tried it has been a complete success, and all the various objections raised against it have been almost entirely disproved. Before it was put into force it was said that it was impracticable; that it would result in unstable governments; that faddists would obtain undue representation; that it would increase the cost and difficulties of electioneering. Where it has been tried it has succeeded, on the contrary, without a hitch. In Belgium, under the new system, it is difficult to obtain a change in Government. In Sweden, where it has been in operation since 1909, and, in South Africa, since the same year, in various municipalities of England, Ireland, and our own Western Canada, the system has been nothing but a complete success.

The scheme of the Hare system published concisely in one of the bulletins of the Bureau of Municipal Research under Dr. Horace Britain, exactly explains Mr. Drury's plan.

The gist of the matter is, that no votes are lost and every considerable party or group of opinion is represented. The real leaders are not only encouraged to run, but are elected and the number of seats actually obtained are far more proportionate that at present to the number of votes polled by any party.

New Grouping of Constituencies.

The only adequate criticism is that counting the ballots takes too long.

The only change would be a new grouping of the constituencies into greater areas, so that there should be at least three to five representatives for each electoral district.

The method used is the transferable vote. The elector instead of marking "X" after one name, puts the figure 1 after his first choice, the figure 2 after his second choice; the figure 3 after his third choice, and so on, for as many candidates as are on the ballot.

The candidate is not elected by a majority, but by what is called the "quota," the smallest number of votes required to ensure election. For example, if three candidates are to be elected, it would take one vote more than one-fourth of the votes cast to ensure the candidates' election. The quota is found, by dividing by one more than the number of representatives to be elected, and by adding one.

The first preference votes of each candidate are noted. The quota is determined. Candidates who have obtained the quota are declared elected.

Surplus Votes.

The surplus votes of those candidates who have received more than their quota are transferred in strict proportions to the unelected candidates indicated in the next preference of the voters whose ballots have been transferred. Any candidates who now obtain the quota are elected. The candidates lowest on the poll are eliminated., and the votes that they received are transferred in accordance with the next choice of the electors. This process goes on till the required number of candidates are elected for the required number of seats vacant.

How it corrects the proportion of seats to the proportion of votes cast for a party may be seen by a comparison with the municipal elections under proportional representation at Sligo, Ireland, and the recent Parliamentary elections in Ireland under the old system.

In the Sligo elections the Ratepayers' Association should have obtained 8 seats, which they did; the Sinn Fein, the 7 they obtained; the Labor party 4, but they obtained 5; the Independents 3, but actually obtained 4. In the Parliamentary elections, under the old system, a disproportionate result followed. The Sinn Fein, instead of 37 seats, which under proportionate representation they should have had, secured 47. The Unionists, instead of 22, had 23; and the Nationalists, instead of 17, had only 6.

Called By Death

MRS. JAMES REID

The death occurred on Thursday, November 27th, 1919, at her late residence in Belleville of Mrs. James Reid at the advanced age of ninety-four. Mrs. Reid in the many years she has lived in Belleville and vicinity made many warm friends, many of whom she has outlived. Possessed of a kindly personality, great strength of character and keen preceptions her friendship was sought for and highly prized by all privileged to join the circle of friendship which surrounded her.

Mrs. Reid was a sister of the late Sir Mackenzie Bowell and was born at Rickinghall, Suffolk, England, on February 23, 1826. When only seven years of age she came to Canada with her parents in 1833. She was the daughter of the late John Bowell, building contractor, who first settled in Belleville, afterwards removing to Hungerford. When eighteen years of age she was married with the late James Reid, who for many years carried on a general mercantile business in the village of Tweed and at the time of his death some thirty years ago was Deputy Postmaster in Belleville.

Mrs. Reid was a life long member of the Methodist Church. Religion was a very real thing with her and her Bible was her constant companion.

Four sons and two daughters survive. The sons are Albert N., who was a dry goods merchant in Belleville for some years, now residing in Toronto; George E., who was for many years European Manager of the Sun Life Assurance Co., residing in London, England, now living in Montreal; Dr. J. F. of St. Louis; and Charles M., Managing Director of The Ritchie Co., of this city. The two daughters are Miss Addie who has lived with her mother here and Miss Maud, who resides in Raleigh, North Carolina.

PYREX

PYREX SAVES FOOD, FUEL AND LABOR.

PYREX saves about one-half the fuel usually required, because it absorbs nearly all the oven heat and bakes food quickly.

PYREX saves food in many ways. Meats, vegetables, etc., when cooked in PYREX, retain their natural color and flavor to such a degree that economy may be practiced in buying the less expensive kinds and yet have delicious food. Most foods usually cooked on top of the stove can be better prepared in the oven.

PYREX saves labor—it is always free from grease and odors, for nothing can penetrate the hard smooth surface. You can wash it as easily as your china and silver.

Every practical shape and size for baking is made in PYREX. It is ready for immediate use and never discolors, rusts, crazes, dents or chips.

HE GETS THOUSANDS ON FORGED CHEQUES

Calgary, Nov. 28.—The "H. uhittaker" who secured $4,000 from the Standard Bank here Wednesday, afterward learned to have been on forged cheques, is alleged to have secured $2,000 from the Union Bank here and $1,000 from the Union Bank at Airdrie, twenty miles north of Calgary, or $7,000 in all. He is still at large, but is believed to be traveling north in an automobile.

Bread Prices Go Up When Embargo Is Gone

TORONTO, Nov. 27 — Roughly speaking, Canadian western farmers are going to make about $20,00,000 extra on their exportable wheat, and Canadian bread consumers are going to pay about one or two cents a loaf more for their bread, because of the United States lifting the import embargo on wheat. The States are very short of hard wheat, and in the last three or four months have been paying prices ranging up to $3 per bushel, while the fixed price is $2.26. In order to gain supplies, and cut down the premium over the fixed price, the United States Grain Corporation, a Government body regulating the movement and price of wheat, took this step, which had been foreshadowed for some time.

Remove Canadian Embargo

Canada also has an embargo, but in this case it is an export one, and has not been lived up to, in that farmers living within ten miles or so of the border have been allowed to take their wheat across to the States in waggons. The United States made no objection to this importation, but refused to allow the grain to be moved in carlots. The Canadian embargo must now be done away with automatically with the cancelling of the United States embargo. All Canadian wheat is sold through the Canada Wheat Board, of Government organization for the handling of wheat "to the best advantage of the producers," and, being organized to secure the "best" prices, must naturally sell to the highest bidders, irrespective of the location of the market.

Grain men say that Canada's present exportable surplus of wheat amounts to about 50,000,000 bushels, most of which is still in the hands of the farmers. An advance of say, 40 cents a bushel, or slightly more than 50 per cent of that premium now being paid in the United States markets, means that Western farmers will have on their exportable wheat alone an extra $20,000,000. Some of the local grain dealers think that the net results will exceed these figures. Shipments to the States on such a large scale as may now develop will cut down the exports to Europe, but this fact will not make much difference to the Canadian, other than the consumer. It is now thought that the top price to the farmer would have been around $2.32 had the United States not lifted the embargo.

Up Goes the Price of Bread

"It will mean either a cent or two cents difference on every loaf," said Mr. Mark Bredin, the well-known baker. "An advance of 40 cents a bushel would make flour about $1.50 a barrel higher, and when this is carefully figured out, I cannot see how the consumer can expect to buy bread within at least one cent per small loaf of the existing prices. At the present time I cannot say just when this increase will take place, but in all probability not before the middle of December, the date on which the embargo is to be lifted. All flour is regulated by the Wheat Board and no firm can have more than about thirty days' supply on hand, and when present supplies are exhausted it stands to reason prices must soar accordingly."

Some of the local grain dealers have been looking for this action. The condition of United States supplies has been well known to Canadian grain dealers, several of whom expressed no surprise at the action coming at this time. At first it was thought by some of the dealers that the Canada Wheat Board, for the sake of the consumer, would prevent shipments going across the border, but as that body was organized for the sole purpose of getting the highest price for the farmer, it must sell to the United States.

Only Hard Wheat Wanted

The wheat wanted by Americans is known as No. 1 and No. 2 hard. Ontario farmers will, therefore, not participate directly, but will gain indirectly, in that the market for Ontario wheat will be broadened. With the hard grain going across the border, the Canadian mills will be more inclined to accept the Ontario product, and with this increased demand the prices will naturally advance accordingly.

The enchancement in value will not create record wheat prices. For a short period, about two years ago, wheat was sold at Fort William on the basis of $3.10 per bushed, and unless the demand becomes greater than present circumstances indicate, the top price will be about 25 or 30 cents below that level.

According to one authority on Saturday, millers having wheat on hand will be called upon to pay the additional price. This dealer claimed that the millers have been accepting wheat on this understanding. Had the prices dropped, the Government would have made a refund to the mills.

Hard on Some Farmers

While the embargo means handsome profits for farmers with wheat to sell, it may prove a hardship to many in Saskatchewan and Alberta, where the long dry season cut the grain crop far below normal. The majority of these producers have not sufficient wheat on had to take care of their 1920 seeding operations. seed will advance in keeping with the wheat being converted into flour.

Interesting Drama Closes Bazaar

The second day of Christ Church Bazaar was well patronized—all the booths but one being completely sold out. The special attraction of this day was the evening performance 'Oak Farm' a comedy drama in three acts. The Parish Hall was filled to its utmost seating capacity with many standees and many turned away and those who witnessed this performance were unanimous in their praise. Those taking part put a finesse to the particular character that compared favorably with the legitimate stage. The story was of an aged farmer who mortgaged his farm to give his son a profession Donald, the son, leaves for the University in New York, leaving behind father, mother, fiancee and young brother. He promises to write regularly and for a time all seems to go well. But the moneylender's son wants to marry the fiancee and being refused, the father, who is also the postmaster, tries to get even by withholding Donald's letters. The time draws near when the mortgage will be due and great anxiety is felt in the homestead. The tension here is relieved by the antics of Joel, the young son, and Sally the child of a neighbor who has come to make her home with the farmer's family. A birthday party to celebrate the father's 60th anniversary is arranged, the guests arrive, among them the moneylender. The audience is here made acquainted with Dr. Meredith, village physician, crippled with sciatica, and Jocelyn Studge, the District school teacher, both of whom are suitors for the hand of Cynthia Warner, a spinster with a little money. The old moneylender will not be friendly and the story of the mortgage is made known—he cannot be persuaded to allow more time and the party breaks up in sadness. In two days the farm will be sold. A good bit of comedy is presented in this act by Cynthia and her lover which keeps the audience in peals of laughter. A stranger comes who brings news of the son and assures the father of his son's loyalty and love. On the stranger's insistence the farmer begins to see that the postmaster has kept the letters and just then the postmaster comes in with an offer to take half the amount, for he must get away. The stranger makes himself known as Donald, pays the mortgage and there acquainted with Dr. Meredith, the acters was as follows:

Silas Wetherby—the farmer—Walter Symons

Mrs. Sarah Wetherby, his wife—Miss Minnie Diamond.

Donald, the son—Jack Diamond
Joel, younger son—Hope Swayne
Helen, the niece—Mrs. Chas. Bishop Jr.

Dr. Meredith—Mr. Field
Jocelyn Studge—Mr. Backus
Jonathan Prune—Mr. H. Leigh
Cynthia Warner—Mrs. Backus
Sally—Jane Bishop

The young people certainly understood thoroughly each particular character and showed the great amount of time and practice expended to bring the play to such a fine finish. One can hardly discriminate between the characters but if any should receive special mention they were Silas Wetherby, Jonathon Prune, Jocelyn Studge and Dr. Meredith played by Walter Symons, Mr. H. Leigh, Mr. Backus and Mr. Field respectively.

These young people should repeat the play at some future date in a larger hall so that more may have the pleasure of wtinessing it.

MILITARY NEWS

Lt.-Col. Campbell Sick.

The many friends, military and civilian, will regret to learn that Lt.-Col. P. G. Campbell is suffering from a heavy cold and confined to his bed. Col. Campbell intended leaving Kingston for Peterboro in connection with the organization of a machine gun battery in that city. Capt. Edwards, the adjutant of the Brigade, returned to Kingston from Ottawa Wednesday and left for Peterboro yesterday afternoon.

Uniforming Cadet Corps.

Lt.-Col. Gillespie, inspector of cadet corps for Military District No. 3, has commenced to uniform all cadets in the district. The uniforms are partly the made-overs of the uniforms issued to recruits in the last days of the war and are practically new. There are also a great many new uniforms that were made for bantam battalions and which have been turned over to the cadets. These uniforms will put the cadets in good shape and will be a great improvement on the former duck suits.

REVERSING THE BINOCULARS.

Toronto newspaper men are busy turning in copy on what may happen as the result of the Granger occupation of Queen's Park. The Government private car for use on the Ontario Government Railway between North Bay and Cochrane is to be scrapped and the million dollar Government House is to be turned into a live stock arena—perhaps.

Nay, not so, most illustrious scribblers. Hark ye back in memory to the arrival of the Whitneyites at Queen's Park after many years of wandering in the cold shades of opposition. Mark ye well their lean and hungry look. Vain show and extravagance was to them a mortal sin and private cars were an abomination. Even the late Hon. Mr. Hanna, who managed to die rich, would have none of the private car habit and on his first visit to Northern Ontario as Provincial Secretary, preferred to sit in an ordinary car with the common people like the great democrat politician he was. Hon. James P. Whitney was also a plain unvarnished democrat, poor but honest and fearful of the least appearance of evil in public life. A million dollar Government House would have seemed a fantastic dream of absurd extravagance to this country lawyer when he was first elevated to the Premiership of Ontario.

However, Premier Whitney's vision broadened, so also did Mr. Hanna's, and the time came when they considered that Ontario was great enough and grand enough for the very best quality in Government Houses, and when they realized that private cars were a convenience and a comfort to tired legislators as well as a benefit to the people as a whole. A government private car is just a travelling office and reception room for deputations. Public men desire to work even when travelling, hence the private car with its secretaries, stenogs and battery of typewriters. As Hon. Mr. Whitney and Hon. Mr. Hanna caught the larger vision they emerged from a narrow constricted atmosphere to a more roomy environment and became much more efficient and valuable to the province.

Messrs. Drury, et al, will ere long be so thoroughly broken in that they will stand without hitching and will not shy at a private car or run away at the mention of a million dollar Government House. And get this—when they exchange their little Fords for Rolls-Rushes they will be satisfied with nothing less than concrete roads, both provincial and rural.

When the farmer comes to town does he bring the farm with him? Nay, verily, not even any of the atmosphere if he can help it. One farmer member of the Drury Cabinet has announced his intention of leaving his farm and moving his family into town, and that is just the beginning of the trek of the farmer legislators to the bright lights and the changing of the Ufola tune from "Down on the Farm" to "Hitting the High Spots on Hamilton Highway."

That was a bright thought of Premier Drury in suggesting a gymnasium at the Parliament buildings. The farmer members would thus be able to keep callouses on their hands and continue to qualify as horny-handed sons of the soil.

Yes, indeed, it's a great life, and few of the Ufolas will weaken. But what a difference a few months will make after life's perspective is changed to the larger outlook!

CRISP COMMENT

By annexing a suburb Brantford's population will be over 32,500, and the Expositor foresees a city of 50,000 people before very long.

Because coal miners in the United States refuse to work some railway men in Canada are obliged to endure enforced idleness just at a season of the year when a healthy pay envelope is most appreciated. It is as true as ever that man liveth not to himself alone.

Moving pictures are so ultra-modern that one can learn from them how to drink tea in high society, how to hold a cup, how to sugar the mixture, how to dress, and how to eat soup noiselessly. Of course the movie actor easily gets away with the silent soup gastronomic feat.

Mr. Drury was introduced at the United Church meeting as the Christian Premier of a Christian Province. The description is all right except as it may seem to imply that Christianity in a Premier is a unique distinction. We have never had any other kind of Premier, in the opinion of the Toronto Star.

The Halifax Herald, commenting on the state dinner to the Prince of Wales, says it was "dry." "It was the first state dinner by a national Government in the Empire at which intoxicating liquors had no place. There were none there—it was a 'dry' State dinner—the first 'dry' State dinner of its kind in our history. This, we think, is a precedent, indicative of the urge of the times."

Secession talk in connection with Northern Ontario is bunk, and old bunk at that. It never had any responsible father and never will have. A separate province carved out of New Ontario would only unnecessarily add more burdens to the high cost of government obtaining now. New Ontario wants a vigorous development policy and is using its vigor in a publicity campaign which is attaining the desired object—newspaper publicity.

Dollar eggs mean nothing in the young life of the Guelph Herald, which prefers the high spots to the low levels of long ago. Says the Herald: "Those were the good old days when fresh eggs could be bought on the Guelph market at a York shilling a dozen, but Canadians will never again see that time. Instead, let the people cease from grumbling, avoid extravagance, and pray that their country may never again see the time when a dollar was worth so much and a man was worth so little.

America must yield the palm to Siam for having the world's richest man, according to information received by the Interchurch World Movement of North America, which through missionaries abroad is making a survey of religious, social and economic conditions. King Chao Fa Maha Vajiravudh Rama VI., the young ruler of Siam, is the man now entitled to write W.R.M. after his name, the report says. The king also is noted for his precedent breaking, the most famous sample being his remaining a bachelor, although his father had 8,000 wives, and this multitude of mothers doubtless has sought to make the son a benedict. King Rama VI. attended Oxford University and has introduced many Government reforms in his country. His sway is absolute, the great teak forests of Siam belonging to him. The Siamese law requires that the bones and ivory of a dead elephant shall go to the king. Rama VI. is credited with being very generous and with frequently replenishing the funds of the State from his private purse.

Diagnosing the Winnipeg Case.
Calgary Herald.

It is said that the municipal election fight in Winnipeg this year is a battle between labor and the citizens. That is a misleading description of the affair. The fight is between the citizen body, which regards community welfare as of the greatest importance, and a band of ultra-radical labor men who wouldn't care if they smashed the community so long as they have their own way.

Americanizing the Peace Treaty.
Vancouver Province.

Senator Lodge declares that the reservations attached to the peace treaty do not destroy the document; they only Americanize it. If Britain had Anglicised it, and France had Gallicised it, and d'Annunzio had Italianized it, the treaty would be a wayward document, with the Dominions, Japan and China and several other nations to hear from. It was the original intention to make this an international treaty. Mr. Lodge has not been able to go beyond the national view.

ThePoet's Corner

THE OPEN SEASON.
By Allen F. Brewer.

When the frost is on the punkin and the fodder's in the shock,
Then's the time Bill Smith grows restless 'bout his gun he put in hock
At the close of last year's season, and he hoards his pay with care
So that when the shooting opens he'll be sure to be right there.

And he hies him to the office and he brags about his skill,
Speaking words of wondrous promise 'bout the buck he's going to kill.
Every man shall taste of venison; let him whet his appetite
When Bill Smith goes forth a-hunting for the fattest deer in sight.

Then, behold! The season opens and he's off before the dawn;
Through the woods and o'er the heather 'midst the glories of the morn;
Shells a-plenty fill his pockets, grub he totes of every sort,
For he's read in all the papers hunting deer's a hungry sport.

Yet with all his preparation ne'er a victim does he see,
Tho' he peers in tense excitement o'er the landscape eagerly,
Till at length the day comes waning and he turns his weary stride
Homeward, planning what he'll tell them 'round the cheery fireside.

But, behold! What greets his vision, there beneath a scrubby pine?
Can it be?—a flash, a roar, thus speaks his gun a single time.
With a yell he dashes forward with his trusty hunting knife
To enjoy the feeble struggles of a quickly ebbing life.

Then his step recoils in horror, all his hopes pass quickly by.
When he gazes through the twilight at his quarry 'bout to die.
Ne'er a pair of noble antlers, no, nor yet a yearling's brow,
For his buck turns out to be old Farmer Perkins Jersey cow.

A Laugh Or Two

Not Particular.

"Doctor, how can I ever repay you for your kindness to me?"

"Doesn't matter, old man. Cheque, money order, or cash."

Discriminating.

Artist—Yes, I had a narrow squeak when I was painting that picture of the Sphinx. An Arab came up behind me and nearly stabbed me in the back.

Friend—What! Are there art critics in Egypt, too, then?

Anyone Could.

Elsie—"My grandpa has reached the age of ninety-six. Isn't it wonderful?"

Bobbie—"Wonderful, nothin'! Look at the time it's taken him to do it."

Get Out and Hustle.

The world is full of "has-beens,"
On whom the people frown;
Nobody cares how high you were
After you've tumbled down.
So get out and hustle for yourself
Or on pay day you'll be missed;
The mill will only grind for you
While you supply the grist.

An Object Lesson.

Learn this brief lesson from the shirks:
The man who wins is the man who works.

No, it wasn't a ghost you saw last night
By the garden path, in the dusk's pale light;
It was only a sheet placed there to stop
Jack Frost from nipping the late greens crop.

Letters To The Editor

THINKS FEE TOO HIGH

To the Editor of The Intelligencer:—

Sir,—The proposal to awaken a community interest in the development of Belleville now being placed before the citizens will touch a responsive chord in the hearts of the people of this city. Every citizen wants Belleville to grow and nearly every citizen believes that Belleville can be made to grow, if we can only link up with this big advice movement, to pay $25.00 per year. This will necessarily exclude most of the citizens and create a feeling that the organization is a sort of Rich Man's Club. There are many citizens who have a very progressive spirit, perhaps a more agressive spirit than a richer person, but do not feel able to pay $25.00 a year. It would be far better to get 5,000 members at $1.00 per year and more if anybody chose to give it, than to get two hundred at $25.00 per year. It is the combination of human energy, the union of human effort and the harnessing up of the will power of the people as a whole that will make this movement succeed. We already have more Lodges, Societies and Organizations than the people can find time to attend. If this movement cannot be made bigger and greater and more gripping than our other organiaztions in the city, it may share their fate. This should be everybody's organization; the rich and poor, the capitalist and laborer. The citizens generally cannot be expected to boost an organization or a movement when they are told they must stay on the outside unless they pay $25.00, and perhaps, during these times of high cost of living, do not feel able to put that much money into it, but would be willing to put one hundred dollars worth of personal energy into it if given the chance, and after all, human energy is better than dollars. Human energy is the power that creates dollars.

Your truly,

W. C. MIKEL.

A QUESTION OF WAGES.

To the Editor of The Intelligencer.

Sir,—As the Board of Trade organizers are getting the business men and all other men of Belleville together for the betterment of Belleville, I think this letter will be in order.

I would like to ask the factory managers and the retail merchants of the city who employ cheap labor, such as boys and girls, if they would like their boys and girls to work for less than their board.

We all know that it costs at least one dollar a day to eat and sleep, and there are seven days a week. There are a number of boys and girls working in Belleville right now for from four to seven dollars a week.

Now, employers, here is how to check up your own conscience! Take a minimum price—we will say she gets six dollars a week (Such a lot of them don't). In one year she earns $312.00. She could not do with less than two suits a year. We will make a complete suit and price it.

Hat	$ 6.00
Coat	20.00
Boots	7.00
Dress	15.00
Gloves	2.00
Underwear	8.00
Cost	$ 58.00
Two suits	$116.00
Board, $7 a week, 1 year ..	364.00
	$480.00
And they earn	312.00
Without any extra clothes or amusement they owe someone	$168.00

A question from the Board of Trade: "After you are through school do you intend to remain in Belleville "

The answer could be for those who have to work: "Not unless we die at the end of our schooling."

This does not apply to all employers, as we have a few good merchants who believe in living and letting others live; but there a lot to whom it does apply, and I hope they will wake up and give their employers wages to feed and dress themselves properly.

I am yours for better conditions,

J. H. DeMARSH.

THE SOURCE OF HEALTH POWER

Dis-ease is present in the body as the result of weakened physical resistance to it; a condition brought about by improper nerve action, and one the cause for which must be removed before nature can restore health to the affected parts.

From the standpoint of Chiropractic the body is a machine, each part of which gets its health producing power from the brain through the nerves. Where there is even a slight compression of nerves it will act to arrest the flow of brain energy and dis-ease where such pressure can occur is where the nerves come through between the joints of the spine in trunks. This is the physical cause of disease and it may be readily and effectually adjusted by the competent Chiropractor.

ORGANIZATION AND EXPANSION CAMPAIGN of the BELLEVILLE BOARD OF TRADE

INTRODUCING THE CANADIAN CITY BUREAU, WHICH IS CONDUCTING THE CAMPAIGN.

Letter of Jamieson Bone, Chairman of Executive Campaign Committee, to Gordon Philip, Secretary Chamber of Commerce, London, Ontario.

GRAHAM'S LIMITED.
Belleville, Ont.,
Canada, 24th Nov., 1919.

The Secretary,
Chamber of Commerce,
London, Ont.

Dear Sir,—

Would you please advise in a few words what you know of the Canadian City Bureau, and whether their services have been beneficial and satisfactory. Please word your reply in such a manner that it may be made public here, and very much oblige

Yours truly,
Graham's Limited,
J. BONE, Sec'y.

Gordon Philip's Wire in Reply:

London, Ont., Nov. 25, 1919.

J. BONE,
Graham's Limited,
Belleville, Ont.

Yours, twenty-fourth. Service rendered by the bureau could not have been duplicated by any local effort. Contract fulfilled absolutely. Secured annual revenue twenty thousand three years. Educational campaign created new civic spirit which enables us to tackle civic problems with confidence.

GORDON PHILIP,
Sec'y London Chamber of Commerce.

What Can the Belleville Board of Trade Do?

(Editor's Note.—This is the second of a series of replies to the five questions most often asked in connection with the Board of Trade extension and reorganization campaign—What can the Belleville Board of Trade do? That is the question answered in the following statement.)

WHAT CAN THE BELLEVILLE BOARD OF TRADE DO?

It can do anything upon which the thought and energy of the community have been centred as needful to be done.

What it will do depends entirely upon the membership. Every member will have an equal voice in saying what shall be done, and the doing of those things will then become a matter of uniting the whole Board of Trade to that end.

Putting the question another way, suppose it is asked: "Who is going to say what the Board of Trade shall do?" The President? No. The Directors? No. The Committees? No. The members? Yes.

The manner in which the members will do this is one of the most important features of the expanded Board of Trade, a feature on which is based one of the chief appeals for the support and co-operation of the men of Belleville.

TWO IMPORTANT QUESTIONS.

In a word, it is the referendum. Two questions will be asked of every member of the reorganized Board immediately after the week of the extensive campaign.

1.—What, as a citizen, do you think is the thing of first importance for the Board of Trade to undertake for the good of the City of Belleville?

2.—What, in your opinion, is the first thing that should be undertaken by the Board of Trade to improve conditions and opportunities in your line of business?

In securing answers to these two questions, reliance will not be placed wholly on mail replies. Group meetings and conferences will be held, discussions invited and other methods followed, all intended to obtain from every member a candid and earnest expression of opinion or suggestion.

EXPERIENCES OF OTHER CITIES.

It has been the experience in other cities that the answers to these two questions, though coming from 400 to 3000 Board of Trade members, classify themselves under a comparatively few important headings. These subjects, thus broadly defined, represent the planks in the platform of work of the expanded Board.

It is clearly seen here, that to the program of work as thus developed the whole membership is pledged, and it is the duty of the officers and directors and of the special committees when appointed to concentrate their whole effort to carrying this program through. The program will cover a period of at least three years of activity.

Having learned the interest of the individual members, it is possible for the directors to call into committee service the men who are interested in certain projects. The signed answers to the questions will disclose who are the people most interested in various matters. By putting these persons on special committees the directors insure careful study of the projects and their completion by interested groups of citizens.

It is by giving the individual member the opportunity to work on the things he is particularly anxious to have done that the whole membership is kept alive and active.

"I don't think we've either of us much cause to grieve," she answered. "We're very comfortable here, don't you think so, Humphrey? There are such nice people in the neighborhood, Cynthia—people who move in the best society, and—hee! hee! hee!—we are quite a fashionable circle; we are out almost every night. Well, I don't hear much about Paris. Did you have a jolly time?"

"We went everywhere and saw everything," said Cynthia. "Humphrey got no end of tickets, and—well, yes, Paris is lovely."

"Why, well, yes?"

"Well, of course, the paper's stopping was an anxiety to us, mamma. [illegible]. How's Aunt Emily?"

"Emily writes us once a week, acknowledging the receipt of her allowance. How she is I really can't tell you; she says very little more than that she has received the money. She is living in apartments in Brunswick Square, and I believe she is very glad she is alone. I am, I can tell you. She has become very sour, Emily has."

"Apartments in Brunswick Square aren't so remarkably cheap," observed Kent. "Aunt Emily must be expensive, mater."

"Well, she has—er—one room. It's a nice large room, I understand, and quite enough for one person, I'm sure. There was no occasion for her to take a suite; she isn't going to give any parties."

"No occasion whatever," he rejoined. "A bedroom can be very cosy when the lamp is lighted and there's a bottle of wine on the table, can't it Cynthia?"

"She won't have any bottles of wine. What are you thinking of?" said Mrs. Walford. "Not but what she could afford wine," she added hastily; "but it doesn't agree with her; it never did. I suppose you know that Caesar is still in Germany? He has settled there. If there are moments when I feel 'out of it,' in spite of the company we see in Strawberry Hill, it's when I read of the life that boy leads in Berlin. He is in a brilliant circle—most brilliant!"

"Cynthia told me he had a first-rate thing."

"Capital thing!" affirmed Sam briskly. "I tell you, he's going to the top of the tree. When he's my age Caesar will be a big figure in Europe."

Kent thought he was a fair size already, but replied he had been very fortunate.

"Ability, my lad! He's got the brains! Do you know, Louisa, it was damn foolishness of us ever to persuade that boy to go on the stage? He was meant for what he is; we'd no right to divert his natural bent! He's in the proper groove, because his tendency was too strong for us. But we we were wrong—I say we did very wrong! By George! he might never have made more than a couple of hundred a week among greasy opera singers all his life. What a thing!"

By dint of many midnight conferences with Louisa, he had almost succeeded in believing that he meant part of what he said.

"Are his prospects now so very wonderful, then, papa?" asked Cynthia, with wonder in her eyes. "What is it he is doing? He has only a sort of clerkship, has he?"

"A clerkship!" shrieked her mother. "How can you talk such ridiculous nonsense? A clerkship! Absurd! He is McCullough's right hand—quite his right hand. McCullough says he would be worth double the amount he is today if he had met Caesar five years ago. He told your papa so last week—didn't he Sam?"

"Certainly" said the jobber, but there was less conviction in his tone. This was new, and he had not taught himself to try to credit it yet.

"He told your papa that Caesar's power of—er—of gripping a subject was immense; he had never met anything like it. He consults him in everything; he doesn't take a step without asking Caesar's opinion first. I don't suppose a young man ever had such an extraordinary position before. No, you don't know what you're talking about!"

Kent gave the conversation a twist by inquiring Miss Wix's number, as he and Cynthia would have to pay her a visit, and, on searching for her address Mrs. Walford discovered, with much surprise, that she was not in Brunswick Square, after all, but that her one room was in a street leading out of it.

The mistake was unimportant, and Kent, moreover, had too much to occupy his mind to really think of making social calls on anyone but Turquand. To the office of 'The Outpost' he betook himself next morning and learnt that his friend was at Brighton until Monday. This did not look as if he had been pressed for his six pounds but was otherwise disappointing. Humphrey proceeded from 'The Outpost' to the 'Daily News' and 'Anthenaeum' offices, where he left his advertisements, and after that he had only to stroll through the streets which looked very ugly and depressing to him after Paris, back to Ludgate Hill.

Tells Dyspeptics What To Eat

Avoid Indigestion, Sour Acid Stomach, Heartburn, Gas on Stomach, Etc.

Indigestion and practically all forms of stomach trouble, say medical authorities are due nine times out of ten to an excess of hydrochloric acid in the stomach. Chronic "acid stomach" is exceedingly dangerous and sufferers should do either one of two things.

Either they can go on a limited and often disagreeable diet, avoiding foods that disagree with them that irritate the stomach and lead to excess acid secretion or they can eat as they please in reason and make it a practice to counteract the effect of the harmful acid and prevent the formation of gas, sourness or premature fermentation by the use of a little Bisurated Magnesia at their meals.

There is probably no better, safer or more reliable stomach antiacid than Bisurated Magnesia and it is widely used for this purpose. It has no direct action on the stomach and is not a digestent. But a teaspoonful of the powder or a couple of five grain tablets taken in a little water with the food will neutralize the excess acidity which may be present and prevent its further formation. This removes the whole cause of the trouble and the meal digests naturally and healthfully without need of pepsin pills or artificial digestents.

Get a few ounces of Bisurated Magnesia from any reliable druggist. Ask for either powder or tablets. It never comes as a liquid, milk or citrate and in the bisurated form is not a laxative. Try this plan and eat what you want at your next meal and see if this isn't the best advice you ever had on "what to eat."

BELOW ZERO AT SUDBURY

SUDBURY, Ont., Nov. 27—The coldest snap of the season was last night when the mercury dropped officially to eight below zero; the coldest previous was on Monday night when it reached nine above, making a drop of seventeen degrees in twenty-four hours. All the small lakes in the district are frozen over. There is some sleighing in town, but it is not very good.

The Appealing Factor.

The only son's engagement had just been announced:

Sis—Absolutely no class!

Ma—Why, that girl lives in Gargo!

Auntie—She's going to be fat.

Uncle—Bow-legged, that's what she is.

First Cousin—She ought to have more hard cash.

Second Cousin—Can't see her for dust—she's so stuck up.

Son (thoughtfully)—Well, there's one good thing about her.

Chorus—What's that?

Son—She hasn't a relative on earth.

Pa—Grab her, my boy, grab her!

Several thousand British women will come to Canada to take domestic positions.

BLOCK ARCTIC CURRENT

PROPOSAL TO DAM BELLE ISLE STRAIT.

Canada Would Benefit by Having St. Lawrence Free of Ice All Year—Newfoundland and New England States Would Also Have Milder Climate.

PLANS now chrystallizing in Newfoundland may lead to a marked amelioration of the somewhat rigorous climate of the island. The proposed daming of Belle Isle Straits, which would block the Arctic current, would also greatly help Canadian commerce by keeping open the St. Lawrence route. It would also give the New England states a milder climate.

The citizenry of Newfoundland is keen to construct a great dam squarely across the throat of the Strait of Belle Isle and thus shut the door in the face of the frigid and intrusive Arctic current.

It is into the Strait of Belle Isle that the Labrador current so frequently drives great masses of field ice and towering bergs to menace navigation during the spring and summer months when the glacial Northland releases these perils to shipping. At other times, the Labrador current surges into the Gulf of St. Lawrence, chills the contiguous air, and sets back for weeks vegetation's response to the rays of the northern sun. According to our hydrographic experts, describing the drift of ice and bergs in the grip of the Labrador current:

"By the middle of January the shores of Newfoundland and Gulf of St. Lawrence are full of ice which has been frozen there, and are opened or closed by a favorable or adverse wind. Navigation in the River St. Lawrence is closed about the middle of November and does not open until about May. A wind from northwest to southwest will clear the eastern coast of Newfoundland, while the Gulf of St. Lawrence may remain full of ice until the first of May. Even after this date much ice is found in the gulf until July, and by August or earlier, the field ice is replaced in the Strait of Belle Isle by bergs."

Plainly, the Arctic flood that enters the Gulf of St. Lawrence by way of the Strait of Belle Isle is one potent aid to the development of local ice by chilling the waters so that they will freeze early. This, quite apart from the intrusion of bergs and floes from Labrador, closes the St. Lawrence river to navigation for months when movement to and from the sea would be of great economic moment to Canada.

The throat of the Strait is in the neighborhood of Forteau Bay, where the span from shore to shore is ten miles. Even so, the soundings show depths ranging from 32 to 62 fathoms (192 and 337 feet). Nothing approaching a dam of such length and height has yet been erected. Further to the eastward where the distance across is about eighteen miles, the soundings show depths of 17, 20, 43 and 18 fathoms across the strait from Wreck Bay to Cape Norman. Here the shallower water and more moderate currents, even with a wider interval to be closed, would make it easier to plant the obstruction. In either case, the enterprise would call for the expenditure of a vast sum.

It is argued as an offset that the climatic modifications, which would be effected by shutting out the Labrador current, would induce enormous agricultural increases and raise the value of the lands by billions of dollars. Further, we are told that the exclusion of the Labrador current from the Gulf of St. Lawrence would permit the warm waters of the Gulf Stream to swing in nearer to the coast, thus tempering the cold months and making the St. Lawrence river as well as the gulf navigable the year round.

The Labrador current brings masses of sand, etc., from the Arctic, which have been deposited in the Grand Bank, and instead of underrunning the Gulf Stream without serious interference has been forced more and more surfaceward by the steadily rising Grand Bank—an obstacle in the main of its own forming. In a kindred fashion, but to a lesser extent, the Gulf Stream has carried sand northward and has helped to upbuild from the south the great barrier which to-day brings the frigid waters of the Arctic current and the warm flood from the tropics into disastrous conflict in the neighborhood of Newfoundland—robbing the Gulf Stream of the major part of its beneficial heat and modifying radically its further paths of travel.

Seven years ago an American mechanical engineer, Carroll Livingston Riker, of New York city, who has done notable things in the realm of hydraulic engineering, boldly proposed the building of a giant jetty projecting to the south and east from Cape Race directly across the main path of the southbound Labrador current. In laying his scheme before Congress a year later Mr. Riker claimed that he could accomplish this amazing result at an expenditure of $20,000,000!. He purposed effecting this by drawing upon the forces of nature in such a way as to induce both the Gulf Stream and the Labrador Current—especially the latter—to rear a great sandy bulwork right athwart its own present sweep. No action was taken, but the plan now proposed is somewhat along this line.—Robert G. Skerrett, in Toronto Star.

Value of Farm Stock.

The total value of farm stock in Canada at the time of collecting the last statistics was estimated to be $1,102,261,000, as compared with $903,686,000 in the year 1916. In 1917, for the first time, the total value of farm stock exceeded one billion dollars.

Famous Mexican General Executed

EL PASO, Texas, Nov. 27—General Felipe Angeles, Mexican revolutionary leader and famous throughout world as a military genius, was executed by a Carranza firing squad at Chihauahua City, following his conviction with two companions on charges of rebellion against the Mexican Government, according to a telegraphic report from Chihauahua. eGneral Angeles was sentenced to death by four Carranza generals in the Teatro de Los Heroes (theatre of the Heroes), at 10.45 o'clock Tuesday night. He was immediately taken from the building through a rear entrance to await execution. This is the time he was shot, acording to the report reaching here.

Four companions were captured with Angeles after their discovery in a cave in a hill that faces Santome, Mexico. Two of them already had been executed by Carranza troops. Of others in the small party with General Angeles, five were killed trying to escape the State troops. The two remaining companions, Major Nostor Enciso de Acre and the soldier, Antonio Trillio, were also defendants with their chief before the court martial. Major de Acre was also sentenced to death, but his sentence was commuted to twenty years imprisonment. Trillo, a seventeen-year-old boy, was sentenced to serve six years and eight months in prison.

General Felipe Angeles, who was recently captured by Caranza forces, was classed before the great war as one of the world's foremost artillerists. He cast his fortune with Francesco I. Madero, in the revolution by which Madero rose to the Mexican Presidency. Subsequently, General Angeles enlisted his skill in support of the cause of Francesco Villa against the Carranza Government. He was sucesssively student, instructor and director of the Mexican military college, Chapultepec, and an author of several text books not all of which dealt with military matters. He was the son of a retired colonel, who served against Maximilian, when the effort was made to make that Prince, Emperor of Mexico.

Earlier despatches told of hurried appeals to various courts for a writ of habaes corpus, following the court martial's sentence.

Hastings County Farmers Meet Endorse Co-Operative Dairy Company

REPRESENTATIVE MEN APPOINTED AS PROVISIONAL DIRECTORS—BIG SAVINGS EXPECTED—MANY QUESTIONS ASKED AND ANSWERED — CHARTER MAY SOON BE APPLIED FOR.

Hastings County Farmers, at a representative meeting of farmers held Nov. 20. in Springbrook, appointed five provisional directors to act on the board of the big company, which it is proposed to form to take over and operate co-operatively many of the cheese factories and creameries of the province. The five men chosen are representative dairymen in their respective districts, they being Messrs T. J. Thompson, of Springbrook, John McCaffray, of Madoc, Her. Mouck, of Thomasburg, Hugh Maloney of Marmora and C. W. Thompson of Stirling.

The meeting was held in connection with the annual convention of the County Association of the United Farmers of Ontario. Four sessions of the convention were held and much business transacted many subjects being discussed, among which on the afternoon of the second day, was the proposal to form the dairy company, which has now been under consideration for over a year. The attendance at the convention was so large at this session that many had to stand, while at the evening session two halls had to be used and both were filled. Matters relating to the proposed dairy company were under discussion for ever an hour and a half and at the close a show of hands was taken as to whether or not provisional directors should be appointed. There was a large showing of hands in favor of immediate action being taken and none raised in opposition. Some present would have liked to have seen a fuller discussion of the subject but as the hour was late this was not possible and the five men mentioned were accordingly elected to the directorate.

Mr. Cowan Explains

The subject was opened by Mr. H. B. Cowan, who described fully the step that has been taken by the members of a special committee representing the United Farmers of Ontario and the Eastern and Western Ontario Dairymen's Associations in the matter. As an illustration of some of the savings which the new company should be able to effect Mr. Cowan stated that he had received a communication from a large box manufacturing concern guaranteeing the proposed company a saving of $20,000 on the price of cheese boxes alone, should an order of a certain size be placed with this company. This company manufactures a high grade box.

The Discussion

The discussion following Mr. Cowan's address was opened by B. C. Tucker of Harold, a past president of the United Farmers' Co-operative Co. Limited, who said that he saw many advantages in favor of the proposed company and was in favor of its formation. In talking over the matter, however, with some of the local dairymen he had found that some were adverse to turning over the control of their factories to another company. There was a general desire also, to know to what extent the farmers around a factory would continue to have control of the operations of the factory.

In reply, Mr. Cowan pointed out that the farmers would not lose control of their factories as they would be expected to continue as shareholders in the new company, which would be controlled by the shareholders, just as their local companies are now. The only difference would be that instead of being divided into numerous small groups of shareholders around local factories they would all become shareholders of a large company, which would control all the factories. As soon as the shareholders of a local factory voted to become identified with the central company and the amalgamation was completed the shareholders around these factories would be asked to form themselves into a local of the central company and to elect a president and secretary, just as is now done. These local directors would act in an advisory capacity to the central company in regard to all matters relating to the local factory. They would be consulted as to the engagement of a cheesemaker, the making of improvements and repairs, the laying out of the milk routes and other similar matter. While they would not have the final say in these matters, it was self-evident that as the success of the business done in the local factory would depend upon the support received from the local farmers every possible effort would be made by the central company to comply with their wishes. The Saskatchewan Co-operative Company operates 314 local elevators in this way and no trouble to speak of is encountered in dealing with the locals of the central company. This is true also of the Saskatchewan Creamery Co-operative Co. Ltd. Once a year a local shareholder would be asked to appoint a representative to attend the annual meeting of this company. The representatives of those local factories would absolutely control the central company and direct its policy. They would elect the directors from among themselves. As it is proposed that no shareholder shall be allowed to hold more than $1,000 worth of stock and as the principle of one man, one vote, will be carried out it would be impossible for a few shareholders ever to get control of the company.

Music and Drama

(What the Press Agents Say)

"THE LUCK OF THE NAVY"

"The luck of the Navy," a dramatic success which has been running for nearly two years in London, and presented by the original London company headed by Percy Hutchinson, comes to Griffin's next Thursday night enroute from Montreal to Toronto, under the management of F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest. "The Luck of the Navy" is a thrilling naval play, which was acted at four leading London theatres in succession. It enjoys the honor of having been commended by the Queen of England, who, with the Royal family, witnessed a command performance given by Mr. Hutchison and his company last October. The cast, all English, is a notable one and includes Miss Muriel Martin-Harvey, daughter of the well-known English actor, Mr. Hutchison is a leading actor-managen and well-known as the nephew of the late Sir Charles Wyndham.

"BROKEN BLOSSOMS"

The popularity of O. W. Griffith's "Broken Blossoms," which is creating a well-recognized furore throughout the country will be shared by local patrons when this superb creation is shown at Griffin's next Monday to Wednesday, matinee daily. The explanation of his methods, whereby he is able to accomplish such wonders, was given by Mr. Griffith to a New York interviewer.

"In the first place, I think that a motion picture should have a big idea. In "The Birth of a Nation" the big idea was patriotism, the silent, hidden, fierce loyalty to America which lurks in the heart of the most commonplace, the most selfish of her citizens. In 'Intolerance' the idea is the passion for personal, individual liberty, the natural impulse to resist oppression. That same feeling is what is setting so many races seething today. It is alive and lively everywhere.

"In the motion picture beauty is the second great essential. The thing that is the matter with the lives of people is not acute suffering, but colorless monotony. Incidentally, that is what is the matter with many screen productions, too. People who lead dull lives, and they are in the great majority, love to imagine themselves the heroes and heroines of crimson scenes. But, unassisted, their imaginations are not strong enough to construct such roles. That is why they are admired on the screen.

"At the risk of contradiction, I will say that people like to see tragedy. I don't believe they go to the theatre mainly to laugh. The reception of most of my pictures testifies that. But finally, as the great desideratum, there must be perfect acting. Let me state that the most gigantic spectacular scenes I have produced have not given me as much work as the requiring of members of my casts to act naturally. Naturalness in acting forms the human touch, without which the photoplay is worth nothing more than a scenic display. Recently we worked hours trying to get a girl to smile naturally. We wanted, just a simple, human smile and yet, no matter what we did, it seemed to elude us. I have not yet succeeded in these human touches to my satisfaction but I am hopeful at the progress made."

CANADIANS ROBBED IN NEW YORK CITY

NEW YORK, Nov. 28—Burglars broke into the apartment of F. A. Skelton, a prominent Montrealer, on the tenth floor of the Bretton Hotel at Eigthysixth street and Broadway, and stole about thirty diamond rings, watches, necklaces and other valuable pieces of jewellery. Mrs. Skelton said that she would neither affirm nor deny the report that the total loss was more than $20,000.

When Mr. and Mrs. Skelton returned to their apartment about midnight last Saturday, after attending the theatre, they found everything topsy-turvy. Drawers from dressing tables desks and bureaus were scattered on the tops of tables and clothing had been thrown upon the floor by the visitors in their search for the jewels. Two jewel cases had been emptied and left open on one of the tables.

ACQUIT FATHER O'DONNELL OF DISLOYAL LANGUAGE

London, Nov. 28.—Father O'Donnell, the Australian Chaplain arrested August 18, charged with using traitorous and disloyal language, was acquitted today by the court-martial trying him.

In the course of the testimony today, Father O'Donnell denied all charges that he had used seditious language. He declared he was a Nationalist, and had never mentioned the King's name, except when eulogizing him for his endeavors to end the recent railway strike.

Father O'Donnell testified that he had not referred to the spread of the Sinn Fein movement to Australia.

St. John Man Has Gained 28 Pounds

Charles Allen Finds Tanlac To Be Just What He Has Needed For 15 Years.

"Yes sir, I have gained twenty-six pounds since I commenced taking Tanlac, and I am in such fine condition that I can do as hard as day's work as any man," said Charles Allen, who lives at 301 Union st., St. John, N.B., the other day.

"My health broke down while I was serving in the Boer War," continued Mr. Allen, "and since that time my condition has been getting worse all the time. For the past nine years my stomach has been in an awful fix and no matter what I would eat I was sure to suffer agony afterwards. Every night that came was misery for me for I couldn't sleep but would roll and tumble till time to get up. I was so nervous that when anybody opened the door I would almost jump out of my chair. Finally I could go no longer, so I gave up my work and started to the country to take a long rest.

"But before I left I decided to buy a bottle of Tanlac and take it with me as I had heard and read so much about it. I went on to the country and began to take my Tanlac, and I want to tell you I felt so much better when I had finished my first bottle that I was determined to have some more and I walked two miles and got it. It has been some time now since I finished my last bottle but I am feeling even finer to-day that I did then for I am heavier and stronger and my work is a pleasure to me. My nerves are steady and every night that comes I can sleep as sound as a child and I get up in the mornings feeling fine. My appetite is so good that I am almost ashamed of the way I eat, and everything I eat digests perfectly, and I never have the least pain in my stomach. Tanlac has proved to be just the thing I have been needing for over fifteen years, and a medicine that can do what it has done for me certainly deserves every bit of the praise I can give it."

Tanlac is sold in Belleville by Ostrom's Drug Store, in Trenton by J. H. Dickey, in Deseronto, by W. J. Malley, in Stirling by J. S. Morton, in Madoc by J. Will Vince, in Marysville by T. J. McAlpine, in Ormsby by Jas. Campbell, and in Thomasburg by J. H. Blakely.

CAUGHT WITH LIQUOR

Inspectors Sykes and Taber took into custody on the G.T.R. express, No. 19, Thursday night, a resident of Montreal, giving his name as Harry Noonan, who was en route to Trenton with 24 bottles of whiskey. He was fined $200 and costs by Magistrate Page.

BELLEVILLE HAD ADVANTAGE

Many of the delegates to the recent meeting in Toronto of the Associated Boards of Trade expressed a desire of coming to Kingston for the next meeting. It was felt, however, that good hotel accommodation in Kingston was lacking and Belleville being able to show she possessed such, won out.—Kingston Standard.

RESIDENCE BURNED

The house near Unionvale Cheese Factory, near Picton, owned by Mrs. Geo. Benson of Picton, and occupied by Mr. Wm. Huff burned completely, on Tuesday evening last. The cause of the fire was the accidental upsetting of a lamp by Mrs. Huff. Before help could arrive the house was in flames. The house and contents were a complete loss and were partially insured.

RECEIVED HIS MEDAL

Lieut. Sherman Young, of Picton, has just received from the Minister of Militia, the Mons ribbon and 1914-15 Star. This decoration is much prized by recipients, as it signifies service in France in the early 1914 and 1915 stages of the war. Thus it is a comparatively rare decoration. The ribbon is very fine, being red, white and blue upon watered silk. The medal is in the form of a star, bearing a wreath and crossed swords.

MUNICIPAL MEETING

Alderman Woodley and Mr. C. I. White, Industrial Commissioner were in Peterboro yesterday attending a meeting of the Midland Municipal Association.

VACCINATION ADVISED

Owing to the prevalence of small pox throughout the Province the Board of Health of this city have advised a general vaccination of all citizens. A notice to this effect has been issued.

A NEW INDUSTRY

Another new industry will be in the near future established in this city, which will employ a number of hands chiefly females. It will be located in a portion of the upper storey of the Canning factory premises on Pinnacle street after necessary improvements have been made.

GIVEN MINIMUM SENTENCE

At Marmora on Saturday last Patrick Joseph Quinn, son of Mr. John Quinn, a former proprietor of the St. James Hotel, Marmora, appeared before Magistrates B. C. Hubbell and Wm. Bonter on a charge of desertion from Military Service. After hearing the evidence the Magistrates imposed the minimum fine of $250.00 and costs, which was paid forthwith.

TRAINS ARE CANCELLED

Confirmation was received by local Grand Trunk Railway officials of the cancellation of trains Nos. 6, 7, and 106 on Sundays hereafter until further notice on acount of the coal shortage. Should the situation not improve it is possible there may be a greater reduction in the passenger service. The changes will have no effect upon the running of trains on days other than Sundays. The trains affected are the eastbound and westbound day-time mail trains. No. 6 is known on Sundays as No. 106 after it leaves Brockville for Montreal.

FIRE AT MADOC

On Wednesday morning fire totally destroyed Mr. Samuel Lapan's business place in Madoc village and it was with difficulty that Mr. Lapan rescued his wife from the burning building. A quantity of butter, eggs, and other like stock, along with the entire household effects is a total loss. An unfortunate feature is the fact that Mr. Lapan was unable to secure about $800 cash which was in the store. The owner estimates his loss to be about $2,500 in addition to the building. On the building he had $1,200 insurance.

A PLEASING EVENT

At St. Michael's Academy last evening an at home was given by the ladies of the congregation of St. Michael's Church which proved to be a most pleasing affair. There was a large number present all of whom participated in card playing. At the conclusion of the contest dainty refreshments were served, which were thoroughly enjoyed. The prize winners were as follows:

Euchre—1st Prize, Ladies'—Stella M. Ford; Gentlemans'—Harry O'Neill. 2nd Prize, Ladies'— Miss Mary Hayes; Gentlemans'—Jas. Lynch.

500—Ladies'—Mrs. P. J. Lynch. Gentlemans'—Stan. Flagler.

Bridge—Ladies'—Mrs. Wm. Dolan; Gentlemans'—W. N. Belair.

TRAINS CANCELLED

Pursuant to the policy which the Grand Trunk Railway had announced some days ago it would be forced to adopt in view of the bituminous coal strike, the new passenger schedule was announced yesterday. The following passenger trains in this city will be cut off on Sunday next:

Train No. 6, leaving Belleville, daily 11.10 a.m. for Kingston, Brockville, and Montreal, will be cancelled on Sundays.

Train No. 7, leaving Belleville 4.58 p.m. for Toronto, will be cancelled on Sundays.

Train No. 365 leaving Belleville 12.10 p.m. daily except Sunday for Madoc will be cancelled.

Train No. 366 leaving Madoc 2.50 p.m. daily except Sunday for Belleville will be cancelled.

HOW TO CARE FOR VACCINATED SPOTS

The following Toronto hints have been issued by the M.O.H. for treatment after vaccination:

1. Al injury to the vaccinated arm should be avoided.
2. Any covering that is tight is to be avoided.
3. Daily washing of the skin may be continued, so long as the crust does not break.
4. Every effort should be made to prevent the crust breaking.
5. If crust does break, daily moist dressings with some active antiseptic, such as as meruric chlorid, or dilute iodin (one part tincture of iodin in nine parts of water) should be applied. Under no circumstances should any dressing be allowed to remain on the vaccination wound longer than twenty-four hours.
6. If the vaccination wound is not apparently progressing in a proper manner, report back to the vaccination centre.

Doing It And Better

Last Friday night I called your attention to the appearance of William Farnum in "Wolves of the Night," in my letter at that time. I personally guaranteed the above photoplay to you. Since its exhibition many theatregoers have congratulated me on the merit of the photoplay and said: "Give us more like it." Well, I am "doing it, and better" this week-end at Griffin's with Louise Glaum in "Sahara," a story that for virility and completeness has seldom been equalled on the screen—a tale that will hold you spellbound, just as the gorgeous scenery about you. I guarantee this photoplay to you. Regular prices.

Respectfully yours,
G. J. FORHAN, Manager.

HELP WANTED—MALE

BOOKKEEPERS WANTED—THE MAJORITY of office men are saying: "I simply must make more money." Meanwhile trained accountants earning $2500 to $15,000 a year in Canada are wanted by large manufacturers. Whether you are a clerk, assistant bookkeeper, stenographer, you can graduate into the big paying accountant's position by simply studying at home during your spare time, and this without interfering with your present occupation. We have a booklet, "HOW TO LEARN ACCOUNTANCY," which explains how you can study at home under the supervision of chartered accountants, the best accountancy course in America. We have dozens of students in Toronto alone and hundreds throughout Canada. The book is sent to you free of charge and it may help you out of your present position, placing you where you will be able to get a much larger salary and better position. If you are ambitious, if you wish to make your way in life, then it is up to you to write us and investigate our method. It will not cost you anything to look into our offer, while it may cost you a lot of money by not investigating. So just drop us a line today and read our booklet which will tell you how easily YOU can become an expert accountant. International Accountants Society, Box 362, Toronto, Ont. n3-tfd

Canada's Greyhound Now Running On Fastest Schedule

(Brockville Recorder)

The fastest train in Canada—that's what is claimed for the International Limited, train No. 1, of the Grand Trunk Railway System, and this reputation it is upholding daily on its Montreal-Brockville run at least.

The Limited, as the train is familiarly and even affectionately termed by the travelling public, is now running on the fastest schedule of its history between Montreal and Brockville, the extensive track improvements, which have been carried out during the past few months making this possible. The winter schedule which recently went into effect provides for the train leaving Montreal at 10 am. daily, reaching here at 12.33 p.m. This means that it covers the 125.64 miles separating the two terminals in two hours and 33 minutes, or 153 minutes all told, and this schedule is being adhered to almost daily.

The average speed maintained by the train between Bonaventure station, Montreal, and the Union Station here is a mile in 1.21 minutes, or slightly over 49 miles an hour. It must, however, be considered that there are three stops to be made, at Coteau Junction, Cornwall and Prescott respectively, the process of slowing down for which and the actual stop at which result in a loss in time of several minutes. There are also other places where it is essential than a moderate rate of speed prevail. Consequently while the average speed of the train is 49 miles an hour, it actually reaches a clip of a mile a minute. There is a restriction against drivers exceeding this speed, though the locomotives used in hauling this and other standard passenger trains on the fifth and sixth districts have shown themselves capable of making even better than this, having travelled at a rate of over 70 miles an hour. The fastest previous schedule on the Montreal-Brockville run was two hours and 39 minutes, or 159 minutes.

It must also be borne in mind that there is a constant up-grade on the trip from Montreal here until the final down-grade descending into Brockville.

Comparison with the speed attained by through trains on competing lines adds further proof to the claim that the Limited is the fastest train in the land. The C.P.R.'s banner train, the Trans-Canada Limited covers the 111 miles from Montreal to Ottawa in 180 minutes, an average speed of only 37 miles an hour. The Imperial Limited on the same run, consumes 187 minutes or runs at an average speed of 35 miles an hour. The Canadian, the C.P.R.'s Montreal Chicago flyer, does somewhat better, traversing the 128 miles from Montreal to Smith's Falls in 180 minutes but its speed is on an average of 42 miles per hour, seven miles per hour slower than the time of the International, otherwise "The Greyhound of Canada."

The International Limited is handled between Montreal and Brockville by two of the most careful and efficient drivers in the service, William Parsley and William Spence, and it is a tribute to their ability as locomotive engineers and to the equipment of the road that the train is able to reach here almost invariably on schedule time and that, notwithstanding the speed attained, it is months since it met with an accident. Both are veterans of the throttle.

In the Rear.

London Free Press.

Last in the war, the United States is emphatically last in the peace. There is nothing like being exceptional.

YOU CAN'T HAVE WHAT ISN'T.

(Chicago Herald and Examiner).

Put one hundred men on an island where fish is a staple article of sustenance. Twenty-five of the men catch fish. Twenty-five others clean the fish. Twenty-five cook the fish. Twenty-five hunt fruit and vegetables.

The entire company eats what is thus gathered and prepared. So long as every body works there is plenty. All hands are happy.

* * * * * *

Ten of the allotted fish catchers stop catching fish.

Ten more dry and hide part of the fish they catch.

Five continue to catch fish, but work only part of the day at it.

Fewer fish go into the community kitchen.

But the same number of men insist upon having the same amount of fish to eat as they had before.

The fifty men who formerly cleaned and cooked the fish have less to do owing to the under-supply of fish. But they continue to demand food.

Gradually greater burdens are laid upon the fruit and vegetable hunters. These insist upon a larger share of fish in return for their efforts in gathering fruit and vegetables. It is denied them, and soon twenty of the twenty-five quit gathering fruit and vegetables.

But the entire one hundred men continue to insist upon their right to eat.

The daily food supply gradually shrinks. The man with two fish demands three bananas in exchange for one of them. The man with two bananas refuses to part with one for fewer than three fish.

Finally the ten men remaining at work quit in disguest. Everybody continues to eat. The hidden fish are brought to light and consumed. Comes a day when there is no food of any kind. Everybody on the island blames everybody else.

What would seem to be the solution? Exactly! We thought you would guess it.

For we repeat that you can't eat, buy, sell, steal, give away, hoard, wear, use, play with or gamble with WHAT ISN'T.

It All Depends.

The teacher was teaching his class in a mental arithmetic lesson. After "tables" had been repeated he commenced giving a series of mental sums, and presently asked an intelligent little Scot:

"How many marbles would you get if I gave 20 to be divided between you and Johnny McGregor?"

"After a moment's hesitation the youngster answered:

"I canna tell, sir."

"How's that?" queried the teacher.

"Weel, sir," said he, "ye see, it's a' accordin'. If ye gie 'em when we're both here we'd hae ten each; but if ye gie 'em tae Johnny when I wasna present, I'd only get about five; while if ye gie 'em tae me tae share when Johnny wasna here, I dinna ken whether he'd hae ony at a'!"—Columbus (S. C.) State.

Women in British Industries.

The vast extent to which British women replaced men in industry and commerce during the war is disclosed in a white paper just issued. It is estimated that the net increase in female workers employed outside their own homes was 1,200,000.

The number of females employed in industrial concerns and government establishments in April, 1918, were: Munitions, 701,000; other government work in industry, 774,000. The number of females employed as permanent work people in agriculture in July, 1914, was 80,000; in 1918 the number was 113,000.

Encouragement.

He (dejectedly)—Is this final? Is there no hope for me?

She—Oh, my, yes! There are lots of girls not so particular as I am.

You've Heard 'Em.

"Look here," said the city editor to the cub reporter, "you should write everything as briefly as possible. Instead of saying 'the middle-aged bald-headed performer in the hired aggregation of followers of Orpheus who nightly provide the harmony at one of our leading temples of mirth, seized his trombone firmly in his hands, placed his feverish lips to the mouthpiece and sounded thereon an unearthly tone like the wailing of a lost soul on the main street of Inferno'—now shorten that up."

So the reporter merely wrote: "The slip horn player in the orchestra blew a helva note."

A Cattle Queen.

A cattle-shipping season to the Eastern stockyards is in full blast, and Mary Vail, Los Angeles heiress, said to be the richest maiden in California, is in these large sales and shipments, figuring as a notable cattle queen. Miss Vail is the daughter of the late Walter Vail, who had over 300,000 head of steers and sheep on his famous ranches. Under the direction of Miss Vail and her mother the cattle domain left by the father and husband greatly increased in value. The meat barons are paying them $1,000,000 for steers and sheep this fall.—San Francisco Bulletin.

RHEUMATISM

PERMANENT RELIEF FROM CHRONIC RHEUMATISM ATTAINED BY USING T. R. C.'S.

"Today I haven't a rheumatic pain in any part of my body and I am satisfied that others suffering as I did will be benefitted as I was by using T.R.C.'s," writes Mr. M. A. Hawley of Campbellford, Ontario.

"I am nearly 81, by occupation real estate and insurance broker. Some time ago I contracted Rheumatism. I tried many advertised cures without result and became very discouraged. At times I was almost helpless, being unable to dress without assistance, and suffered a great deal. One day my daughter brought me some T.R.C.'s. They helped me from the first box. I kept on using them and today am absolutely free from Rheumatism."

Rheumatism is the deadly enemy of middle age—your prime of life. Why grow old before your time? T.R.C.'s will remedy the trouble that is ruining your health and happiness. Ask your druggist for them. There's an agent in your home town. We mail T.R.C.'s anywhere for $1.04. (Templetons Ltd., 142 King W., Toronto). 46

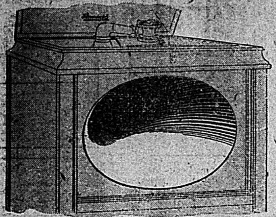
YOUR NEXT PHONOGRAPH WILL BE A BRUNSWICK

-- All Phonographs in One --

And Here is Why---



The "Round" All-Wood Horn

You never heard of a "square" horn in a band or any musical instrument; you never saw a square megaphone. We learned in High School that all sound-waves travel in circles or ovals, yet you will not find any round horns in any of the old style Talking Machines.

Artists sing INTO a round horn, and the Brunswick sends it OUT in a round horn.

That's a simple "secret" isn't it? And yet no one has ever made a round WOOD horn before—and more than that, no one else ever will, because this is one of the exclusive patented features of the Brunswick.

This one feature alone is responsible for much of the Brunswick's wonderful TONE. It makes every good record—of ANY make—better. Because it is all wood—built like a violin.

Yet the BRUNSWICK costs no more than ordinary phonographs.

Prices of convention models range from $148.00 to $395.00.

And Here are 86 more Reasons Why---

You are not restricted to any one list of artists with a Brunswick—positively not.

Every artist is available for the owner of a Brunswick.

There are 86 artists of world-wide fame in particular, whose records are in great demand. There great artists sing for different makes of records. That's the value of the Brunswick.

But all of these different records are played CORRECTLY on the All-record Brunswick. This means that when you own a Brunswick EVERY Grand Opera Star, EVERY Jazz Band, EVERY Vaudeville Entertainer, EVERY Orchestral Organization, EVERYBODY helps to entertain the Brunswick owner.

And mark this: Every make of record is played CORRECTLY on the Brunswick—played just as if it had been made especially for the Brunswick.

Go to the nearest Brunswick dealer listed below and let your ears be the judge.

Have the dealer play ANY make of record on the Brunswick, and see for yourself how the Brunswick Ultona is adjusted INSTANTLY—by a mere twist of the wrist to any make of record.

And note the wonderfully lifelike purity of tone of EVERY record when played on the Brunswick.

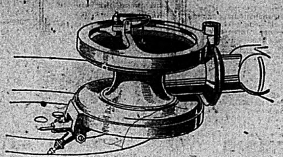
And Here is Why---



The All - Record, All - Needle Ultona

This wonderful Reproducer was designed AFTER all the great Record Libraries were formed.

It is NOT an attachment, and it plays any make or type of record without taking anything off or putting anything on. A twist of the wrist—and it is ready for anything. No needles to change.

And it plays every record CORRECTLY, with just the right needle, just the right weight, and describing just the right arc across the record. And your needle type records actually last longer.

Since the Brunswick came with this wonderful invention notice how they all say, "Play all records." Just see how they do it—then come, investigate the ULTONA.

You cannot afford to make a mistake. Your nearest dealer below will gladly demonstrate the BRUNSWICK for you. Your old model taken in exchange.

Deseronto Firm In Suit Over Ore

TORONTO, Nov. 27.—Master in Chambers J. A. C. Cameron dismissed a motion on behalf of Moose Mountain Ltd., against the Standard Iron Works of Deseronto for summary judgment for $28,000. He directed however, that the case go to trial at Sudbury on December 8, with liberty to renew the motion before the Trial Judge.

The base involves the question of the constitutional power of the Dominion War Trade Board to interfere with the terms of a contract, claimed to be a matter entirely within the jurisdiction of Provincial authority.

The complainant company claimed that the Standard Iron Company had invoked the aid of the War Board to secure delivery of ore, but that it had objected to paying an increased price set by the board. The Standard Iron admits having appealed to the War Board, but claim that it was only when the Moose Mountain Company fell down on its contract, on which the company was to receive 50 tons a day at $8.06.

The price set by the War Board was $15 a ton, the cost was therefore increased from $18,000 to $14,000.

"Y" DELEGATES SLEPT ON BOAT AT DETROIT

Three hundred and fifty delegates to the Y.M.C.A. International Convention were housed in quarters almost equal in equipment to the hotels, through the courtesy of A. A. Schantz president of the Detroit & Cleveland Navigation company, who provided sleeping accomodations in the state room of the steamer City of Detroit III moored at the foot of Wayne street. To many the use of the steamer for sleeping quarters was a novel experience, though to the great majority it came as an unexpected blessing.

VANCOUVER, B.C., Nov. 27—"The Government," said Premier Oliver, "does not propose to continue in its present impossible condition of being hammered by all sides in attempting to enforce a prohibition law which the people do not seem to wish to respect."

It is stated in Government circles that the Government will tighten up the existing act at the coming session of the Legislature and that early next summer the whole question on the sale of liquor will be submitted in a form of a series of questions.

Doherty Would Run In West Durham

PORT HOPE, Nov. 27.—Old-time politicians who have been looking on Premier Drury as unsophisticated are getting their eyes opened. When the great political leaders of the past fifty years wanted to find a constituency for a new Cabinet Minister they looked for a vacancy in a constituency which was represented by one of their supporters, but Premier Drury endeavors to get a political opponent to make way for Hon. Manning Doherty, Minister of Agriculture.

The report is current here that Mr. Bragg, the Liberal member for West Durham, was offered a highly-remunerative Government appointment if he would resign and allow Mr. Doherty to contest that riding. Mr. Bragg called the Liberal Executive together at Bowmanville to discuss the situation but Mr. Drury was promptly informed that there was nothing doing.

"Why does Premier Drury not set by getting the resignation of one of his own supporters?" asks Mr. Staples of East Durham.

WINTER IN ALGONQUIN PARK.

As a winter panacea for coughs and colds Algonquin Park cannot be equalled. Two thousand feet above the sea it is always dry and cold. COBALT CITIZENS RECOMMEND ROGERS

COBALT, Ont., Nov. 27—Concerning the vacancy in the T. and N. O. Railway Commission, caused by the resignation a few weeks ago of J. L. Englehart, a number of citizens of Cobalt are taking steps to recommend Lieut.-Col. R. P. Rogers for the position. In well-informed circles Geo. Lee, one of the present commissioners, is said to be the logical choice. Another report has it that J. L. Englehart may be asked to reconsider his resignation.

To Relieve Catarrh Catarrhal Deafness And Head Noises

Persons suffering from catarrhal deafness, or who are growing hard hearing and have head noises will be glad to know that this distressing affliction can usually be successfully treated at home by an internal medicine that in many instances has effected complete relief after other treatments have failed. Sufferers who could scarcely hear have had their hearing restored to such an extent that the tick of a watch was plainly audible seven or eight inches away from either ear. Therefore, if you know of someone who is troubled with head noises or catarrhal deafness, cut out this formula and hand it to them and you may have been the means of saving some poor sufferer perhaps from total deafness. The prescription can be prepared at home and is made as follows:

Secure from your druggist 1 oz. Parmint (Double Strength.) Take this home and add to it ¼ pint of hot water and a little granulated sugar; stir until dissolved. Take one tablespoonful four times a day.

Parmint is used in this way not only to reduce by tonic action the inflammation and swelling in the Eustachian Tubes, and thus to equalize the air pressure on the drum, but to correct any excess of secretions in the middle ear, and the results it gives are nearly always quick and effective.

Every person who has catarrh in any form, or distressing rumbling, hissing sounds in their ears, should give this recipe a trial.

HOW ESKIMOS LIVE.

Material Used for Houses Costs Nothing.

It takes only about six hours to build a first-class winter residence in Eskimo Land. The material, which is snow, costs nothing.

But the snow must be carefully selected. The bank that serves as a quarry must have been formed by a single storm, to be sufficiently solid and homogeneous. It must yield blocks of fine grain, yet soft enough to be easily cut with saw or snow knife.

Two men do the work, one cutting while the other builds. It is best, if practicable, to attack the side of a steep drift, making parallel cuts and lifting out the blocks as fast as detached. The blocks are three or four feet long, two feet high and six to eight inches thick.

Instead of laying them in parallel course like bricks, the blocks are so placed as to form a spiral, inclined inward to form a dome-shaped structure, with the culmination of the spiral in the middle of the top, where two or three triangular pieces are put in to close the hole. This is a highly ingenious method of building a dome without the aid of a scaffold.

In order to reach high enough, the builder makes a snow bench inside, on which he steps while finishing the upper part of the structure. Finally, the joints are made tight by pressing snow-mortar into them, the idea being to prevent warm air inside the house from escaping.

When finished the house is ten or twelve feet high and twelve to fifteen feet in diameter, and has the appearance of a hemisphere of snow set on its flat side. A sort of entrance hall is added outside, with a passage big enough to crawl through, and on either side of it cubbyholes for the storage of harness, spare food, etc.

A window is cut in the wall of the building and covered with seals' intestines sewed together. Being translucent, they admit daylight or, as an alternative, a slab of clear, fresh-water ice may be set in the wall. This affords an excellent substitute for glass, and can be counted on not to melt in that frigid latitude.

The house is lined with the skins which form the covering of the summer Eskimo dwelling, the object of this arrangement being to prevent the warm air inside from melting the snow roof; for between the skins and the wall there is always a layer of cold air. At the top, for ventilation and to provide a draft for the family lamp, a small hole is cut.

On the side of the house opposite the entrance (within) a broad snow bench is built, with a long pole for an edge. This is the family bed. For a mattress a thick layer of shrubs is spread upon it and over these many deerskins. Clothes, when taken off, are rolled up and put under the skins for pillows. One blanket of skins serves to cover the whole family.

It is very warm inside, for, in effect, the snowhouse is an inhabited oven. A shallow semicircular dish of soapstone, with a wick of fat-saturated moss, serves as a lamp, deriving its oil from the drips of a piece of seal-blubber suspended near the flame. Above the lamp is hung a pot for cooking, and aloft, over the pot, is a network of thongs containing articles of clothing, put there to dry in the ascending warm air.

The lamp gives a brilliant and beautiful light; it cooks the food, it dries the clothes, it heats the house and, not least important, it melts the snow for drinking water. Water, and lots of it (for drinking, not for bathing) is to the Eskimo the greatest of luxuries, for he lives in a country where, through most of the year, the normal condition of H_2O is that of a rock.

All the life of the Eskimos may be said to revolve about the family lamp, which makes it possible for them to dwell in an otherwise uninhabitable region. They depend for their very existence upon this household utensil. The lamp is the recognized property of the woman head of the family, and when she dies it is buried with her.

A Whale Worth $15,000.

A full-grown bowhead whale is today worth $15,000 merely for the whalebone it carries in its mouth.

This is the species that furnishes the bulk of the commercial supply of whalebone, which is now worth $7.50 a pound. It is a denizen of Arctic seas.

The bowhead, like other whalebone whales, has no teeth. Instead its jaws are furnished with a series of long, tapering slabs of a horny substance fringed with hair. Of these slabs, which are the whalebone of commerce, there may be as many as 600.

The biggest of them are ten or twelve feet long and they are inserted in the gum of the upper jaw, from which they hang. They serve as a sieve to strain out the whale's food. Swimming along, it takes huge mouthfuls of squids and other pelagic small fry. Then the huge trap is closed and, the slabs entering and fitting into grooves in the lower jaw, the water is expelled.

A Tout.

A benevolent old lady in one of the streets which still retain the red-brick houses of old-time Toronto looked out of her parlor window the other day and saw a man walking along the sidewalk, apparently in great dejection. There was something so pathetic and appealing in his manner that she took a dollar bill, put it in an envelope, and wrote on the envelope, "Never Say Die!" She slipped out of the house in the most casual manner and handed the envelope to the man as they passed. Next day the melancholy man called at her house and presented her with $10. "It's funny," he said; "you're the only one that backed that horse called Never Say Die."

MY HEAD!

When the head feels thick or aches, when one feels all out-of-sorts—perhaps a coated tongue—it is the signal that poisons are accumulating in the system, and should be cleaned out at once.

Auto-intoxication can be best ascribed to our own neglect or carelessness. When the organs fail in the discharge of their duties, the putrefactive germs set in and generate toxins—actual poisons, which fill one's own body.

Sleepiness after meals, flushing of the face, extreme lassitude, biliousness, dizziness, sick headache, acidity of the stomach, heartburn, offensive breath, anemia, loss of weight and muscular power, decrease of vitality or lowering of resistance to infectious diseases, disturbance of the eye, dyspepsia, indigestion, gastritis, many forms of catarrh, asthma, ear affections and allied ailments result from auto-intoxication or self-poisoning.

John M. Bowman, the Toronto man who went to New York without any money, and just looking for a job, and who now operates six great New York hotels and two resort hotels elsewhere, has had a career like a movie hero. Mr. Bowman is frequently in Toronto, though known by comparatively few people in that city. The November American Magazine tells his story:

"Only a comparatively few years ago he was driving a truck in New York! Later, he broke saddle horses. But always he had the idea that he was cut out for the hotel business. Any other kind of work he regarded as temporary—as a means to an end. But no matter how humble the job, Bowman contrived, to use it in some way for permanent gain.

"Even his first little job, doing errands for his grandmother, taught him something of definite value.

"In his native town, Toronto, was a factory that had wood shavings to give away, and Bowman's grandmother liked these for starting a fire in the kitchen stove. So she would often ask him to go to the factory and fetch her a large burlap sack full of shavings. Young Bowman did not like this at all. He did not mind the physical effort so much, but he imagined that he looked ridiculously undignified bearing a bulky sack of shavings through the streets.

"However, he willingly did as his grandmother desired because of the twenty-five-cent piece he knew she would give him. Gradually it dawned on him that there was nothing undignified about the task, that no honest labor, to gain money one needs, is undignified. In fact, he came to feel that boys who loafed about the street corners and occasionally laughed at him, while doing nothing themselves, were really less dignified than he.

"This wholesome view about useful work has clung to him ever since. When the Biltmore was under construction and there was some question about its being ready to be opened on schedule, Bowman, who was to be its manager, used to put on old clothes and climb about over the building to see what was going on.

On the day that it was thrown open to the public, there was a lot of confusion about the turning on of water into certain pipes. And the only man who knew exactly where each valve was located and where each pipe led was Bowman himself. He was obliged to put on a pair of overalls and personally take charge of the plumbing emergency.

"Bowman's first hotel job was at a little resort in the Adirondacks, when he was only nineteen years old. Because of the short season there, he desired a permanent place at some good hotel in New York City. A wealthy man gave him a letter of introduction to the manager of what was then one of the best hotels in New York, a place that Bowman had thought a suitable field for his talents.

"He mailed the letter of introduction to the hotel manager, and requested permission to call. But he got no response. He wrote again and asked for the return of his letter of introduction. Even then he got no reply, and he formed a strong opinion about the character of the man who had exhibited what seemed to him such gross and needless discourtesy.

Years later Bowman became president and directing manager of the company that took over that same hotel, and his first official act was to discharge the manager who had failed to answer his letter. He did not discharge him to vent personal spleen, but because he thought the man lacked that sense of courtesy and consideration which should be among the qualifications of a successful manager.

"Having failed to get the hotel job he sought in New York, Bowman had to do whatever work he could find. Frequently he was obliged to be so economical that each meal was a genuine problem.

"Later he secured work at the Holland House under one Gustav Baumann. Baumann headed a company that put up the Hotel Biltmore and Bowman was to be its manager. A few months after the hotel was ready for occupancy, Baumann died. In a short time Bowman had so thoroughly convinced the board of directors of his ability that he not only was permanently retained as manger, but was made president of the company.

Then he branched out and now operates six great New York hotels—the Biltmore, the Commodore, the Belmont, the Manhattan, the Murray Hill, and the Ansonia. He also controls two great resort hotels — the Belleview at Belleair, Florida, and the Griswold at New London, Connecticut. Mr. Bowman is 43 years old."

Awkward For His Wife.

A good story was told recently by Sir Charles Parsons, of turbine fame, concerning a certain learned professor what shall be nameless.

He was, explained Sir Charles, very absent-minded. One day he saw that his wife had placed a fine bouquet of freshly-cut flowers on his desk.

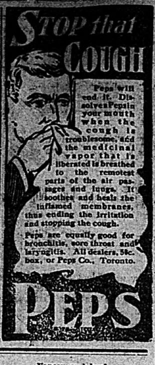
"What does this mean, dear?" he asked.

"Why, don't you know!" she exclaimed. "This is the anniversary of our wedding-day."

"Ah, is it, indeed?" he answered politely. "Kindly let me know when yours comes round and I will reciprocate."

Tobacco Habit Dangerous

says Doctor Connor, formerly of Johns Hopkins Hospital. Thousands of men suffering from fatal diseases would be in perfect health to-day were it not for the deadly drug, Nicotine. Stop the habit now before it's too late. It's a simple process to rid yourself of the tobacco habit in any form. Just go to any up-to-date drug store and get some Nicotol tablets; take them as directed, and lo! the pernicious habit quickly vanishes. Druggists refund the money if they fail. Be sure to read large and interesting announcement by Doctor Connor soon to appear in this paper. It tells of the danger of nicotine poisoning, and how to avoid it. In the meantime try Nicotol tablets; you will be surprised at the result. (6)



Peps will end it. Dissolve a Pepsin your mouth when the cough is troublesome, and the medicinal vapor that is liberated is breathed to the remotest parts of the air passages and lungs. It soothes and heals the inflamed membranes, thus ending the irritation and stopping the cough.

Peps are equally good for bronchitis, sore throat and laryngitis. All dealers, 50c. box, or Peps Co., Toronto.

Vancouver Island.

Vancouver Island in acreage is just under 10,000,000, including the adjacent smaller islands. But not more than one-third of this has been developed to any extent, and much of it has been entirely unexplored. It is said that the island is unsurpassed anywhere on the globe in point of existing sources of unexploited wealth.

PRIVATE SCHOOLS IN ONTARIO.

Proper Buildings and Equipment Lacking In Rural Communities.

Some years before the war I was visiting in the home of a Scottish dominie, writes Farmerette, in Toronto Globe. He had several energetic sons casting about for congenial employment. One lad was looking to Canada for an opening, with the idea of following his father's profession. But when he heard Canadian prices, Canadian rentals, and the fact that Canada was so crude as to leave schoolmasters unprovided with dwellings, he decided to stay where he was.

Consider the contrast! This lad grew up in a country village where his father had been headmaster for many years. They were provided with a large, comfortable stone house, standing in the middle of a half-acre garden, in addition to £300 salary. That is to say, the dominie's net income would equal $3,200 in Ontario to-day. Is there a single small town paying such a sum?

One must take into account, of course, that Scotland has but one headmaster over one large, well-equipped village school, containing everything from kindergarten to matriculation; where we in Ontario have two headmasters over two more or less indifferently equipped buildings, known as public and high schools.

Whatever the merits of our present system in its infancy, the condition to-day is alarming. No men are entering the profession, and most of the girls are frankly teaching for pin-money, or as a step to some more lucrative profession.

A questionnaire was sent out recently by an enterprising journal to members of the teaching profession all over Canada. It aimed at gathering material for proposed reforms. No answers were forthcoming. A second appeal brought the tact reply from a westerner, that the men already in the profession were too busy worrying over "how to pay their bills" to be bothered about reforms.

Looking at the matter from another angle, one finds two diametrically opposite movements going on. At the same time that the Government schools in the small towns are merely marking time in matters of equipment, attendance, etc., and are confronted with truancy and illiteracy, the private schools in the cities are growing by leaps and bounds. They are filled in the majority of cases by the children of those very people who should be doing most to improve the conditions of the small town school.

Why is this? Mere business. The directors of the private schools have grasped the situation before the small town Trustee Boards. That is all. They saw that the age demands that a modern school shall contain a well-equipped kindergarten, gymnasium, domestic science class, manual training class, and shall provide sanitary surroundings and medical and dental inspection. No small town schools furnish these things. Hence the boom of the private schools.

It does not require very much deep thinking to see that this movement is going to result in class education, to the very great detriment of the poorer sections of the people.

What is the remedy? More money. So long as small towns can get away with a school rate of from three to four dollars per capita, the situation will remain hopeless. But if the Government has the power to force children to attend school up to the age of 14, it has also the power to force parents to provide proper schools.

Once the public schools are brought up to standard in the small towns, the high schools will follow naturally. The children themselves will cease from truancy. But they will demand advanced technical classes, local experimental farm stations, commercial schools and the dozen and one vocational opportunities now utterly out of their reach.

First Private English Telephone.

The first telephone ever placed in a private English residence is still to be seen at Marlborough House. It was made in 1875, on board the warship Thunderer, and was subsequently set up between the schoolroom and the boudoir of the Princess of Wales.

FOUNDER OF INDIANA

ONE OF THE MANY NOTABLE SONS OF MONTREAL.

After a Lengthy Discussion It Has Been Established That Francois Marie Bissot de Vincennes Was Born In the Ancient Canadian City on the Banks of the St. Lawrence River.

MONTREAL can be called the mother of the Canadian and American West, for men who were born in that city or were closely connected with its rise and progress, have bequeathed their names to the history or nomenclature of many localities on this continent; to wit, starting with Jacques Cartier, who (1635) discovered the Montreal island and district, erstwhile called the Kingdom of Hochelaga, and gave the mountain its name of Mont Royal or Montreal; Samuel de Champlain, who after discovering Lake Champlain (1609), founded in 1611 the first trading post of Montreal and called it Place Royale, giving the adjacent island, St. Helen, its name in honor of his young wife. Who can also forget that it was from this trading station at the head of navigation Champlain discovered (in 1615) the Ottawa river, the Lakes Huron, Ontario and Nipissing and the near west? Then there is the Chevalier sans reproche, Paul Chomedy de Maisonneuve, who organized the first permanent settlement and called it Ville Marie (1642). Nor must we forget the discoveries of its Jesuit missionaries, such as Chaumonot (with Brebeuf), discoverer of Lake Erie (1640), Isaac Jogues, the martyr, who, with Raimbault first explored Lake Superior (1641) and who named (1646) Lake St. Sacrament (afterwards Lake George); de Quen (1646), the finder of Lake St. John above the river Saguenay; Albanel, who first visited James Bay by the overland route from Quebec. Then there are La Salle (of Lachine), who founded Cataraconi (now Kingston) for Frontenac (1673) and afterwards (1682) explored the mysteries of the Mississippi to the sea, the task left undone by Joliet and Marquette, in 1672, La Mothe Cadillac, one time resident of Montreal, and afterwards the founder of Detroit (1701), and Duluth (c. 1690) (one of whose lodgings was hard by the Notre Dame Church) the founder of the city of that name. Then Biloxi was founded in 1699 by Pierre Le Moyne d'Iberville to hold the Louisiana Valley for France. Then his brother, Le Moyne de Bienville, founded Mobile (1701) and New Orleans (1718), and the Sulpician, Pioquet, who founded (1748) La Presentation (now Ogdensburg).

Montreal can also claim some share in the discovery (1743) of the Rocky Mountains by La Verendrye of Three Rivers, for Montreal merchants financed his expeditions and indirectly Montreal may make a similar claim for the erection of Fort Bourbon (Lake Winnipeg), Fort Dauphin (Lake Manitoba), Fort Pontiyac at the mouth of the Saskatchewan by La Varendrye's sons in 1748.

Montreal, through its most distinguished son, Pierre Le Moyne d'Iberville, the brother of the two Le Moynes already mentioned, and sons of Charles Le Moyne who lived on St. Paul street, left a legendary name for valor, wherever he went as a naval officer of France, Hudson Bay, Newfoundland, New England, and other places being the scenes of his exploits. Montreal has, however, given, under the French regime, governors to Acadia such as a former governor of that city, the notorious Perrot (of Isle Perrot fame) to Ile Royal (Cape Breton), Le Moyne de Chateauguay, to Canada, Louis d'Ailleboust, Louis Hector de Callieres and Phillipe de Rigaud, Marquis (I) de Vaudreuil, Claude de Ramezay, Charles Le Moyne de Longueuil, Pierre de Rigaud, Marquis (II) de Vaudreuil-Cavagnal, formerly governor of Louisiana. This reminds us that Louisiana, proclaimed (1684) as a country of France by La Salle, who had dreams of a French Empire in America, was supplied for its first two governors by sons born in Montreal or its district, viz., the brothers d'Iberville and de Vienville (II). This latter Jean Baptiste Le Moyne, Sieur de Bienville (II) was born in 1680 and died in Paris in 1768. In company with his brother d'Iberville (in 1699) he discovered the mouth of the Mississippi by sea, a joy missed through ill luck by La Salle in his ill-fated expendition ships from France (1684) shortly before his slaughter by his mutinous companions. It was this Bienville who ruled as Governor of Louisiana for forty years.

Of a later period, the British regime, what memories of western exploration from Montreal are not conjured up by the names of Sir Alexander Mackenzie, David Thompson of Columbia river fame, Sir George Simpson, the Henrys, the Frasers and all of the Scotch ilk of the Hudson Bay and Northwest Companies, as well as those of the magnates of the more modern railway era, too well known to be recited here.

Another name of the French regime has now to be added to Montreal's roll of honor, that of Francois-Marie Bissot de Vincennes, the founder of Indiana. This claim has recently been established without a doubt and the documentary evidence, compiled from the notarial deeds of this province, has been collected by the indefatigable rechercheur in "La petite histoire," Pierre Georges Roy, of Quebec, the editor of Le Bulletin des Reserches Historiques, in a volume recently published and entitled "Le Seur de Vincennes Foundateur de L'Indiana et se Famille."

Dr. Roy tells us that for a long time American historians were of one accord in acknowledging that a certain Sieur de Vincennes "had the

CANADA'S TRADE.

Figures Must Be Altered to Restore Value of Dollar.

Canadian trade statistics for the first half of the calendar year appear to indicate that while the adverse balance in trade with the United States is still unfortunately large conditions in this respect are at any rate better than they were in the corresponding period of 1918. That is, Canada has been selling a greater value of goods to the United States, and importing a less value. There has been a marked falling off in exports as well as imports since March, however, the decline in imports being perhaps due to the high rate of exchange, which has led to the cancellation of many orders. The figures from Ottawa follow:—

IMPORTS.

	1918.	1919.
January ..	$47,624,700	$59,431,482
February .	41,185,814	52,255,509
March ...	70,670,794	56,557,492
April	66,934,076	43,071,213
May	78,268,622	58,083,040
June	70,597,035	61,236,510
	$375,179,041	$330,635,646

EXPORTS.

	1918.	1919.
January ..	$26,681,092	$38,836,256
February .	22,795,703	32,357,038
March ...	37,111,492	37,086,020
April	46,459,118	23,625,004
May	36,784,057	35,179,067
June	39,834,229	29,383,659
	$189,665,691	$196,467,038

From these figures it will be seen that the adverse balance of trade against Canada the first half of 1918 was $185,513,350, while for the corresponding period of this year it was $134,168,608. The balance must be still further reduced if the value of the Canadian dollar is to be restored. The discouraging feature of this year's trade is the falling off in exports since March. Canada must produce more—not only enough to supply her own people, but to afford a larger surplus for sale abroad.

Our War Debt.

It will pay Canadians who do not believe in thrift to consider the war debt of the Dominion. Since March 31, 1914, the public net debt has increased 580 per cent., from $335,996,000 to an estimate for 1919-20 of $1,950,000,000. Pensions are estimated this year at $30,000,000; land settlement, $25,000,000, and soldiers civil re-establishment, $10,500,000. Interest on the public debt has risen from $12,093,000 in 1913-14 to $102,767,000 this year.

War expenditures for 1919-20 were estimated at $350,000,000, exclusive of pensions, and this year's consolidated revenue receipts were estimated at $244,000,000.

Income tax had been levied on 51,588 people in 1917, and the amount of assessment was $12,221,669. Only 47,021 people paid, and the amount collected was just over ten million dollars. Only 32,668 persons paid on incomes between $1,500 and $6,000, and $1,469,000 was collected from them. Only 40 persons paid on incomes over $100,000, a total of $1,470,000.

EVAPORATED MILK
NET WEIGHT 12 OZS.

Pure Milk!

—handled with exacting care

The Borden policy is to ensure the unquestioned purity of its products. Scrupulous cleanliness and care in the dairy are not enough. The freshly drawn milk must be taken immediately to a clean, sanitary milk house well removed from the milking stable. It is here emptied into sterilized cans—kept cool until the day's supply is hauled to the condensary.

Borden's St. Charles Brand is the same pure, carefully guarded milk, from which a part of the natural moisture is removed. This makes it available under all conditions, for it keeps fresh and pure in the sterilized cans until opened. Add an equal part of water for fluid milk uses. Handy—economical—for every milk purpose. At your grocer's.

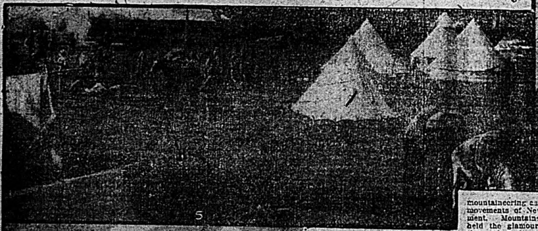
CLIMBING THE CANADIAN ALPS



The rapid advancement of mountaineering in Canada has several contributary causes. Chief is the increasing accessibility of regions formerly remote. The C. P. R. brings you to such wonderlands as Banff, Lake Louise, Yoho Park, and Glacier which have become familiar haunts of pleasure-seeking Canadians as well as many thousands of foreign visitors annually.

One factor that has exerted much influence on the development of mountaineering in this Dominion has been and is the Alpine Club of Canada, formed in 1906 for the promotion of public interest in all that concerns the mountains. Although the club has now an active membership exceeding six hundred and in the past decade has been the means of enabling thousands to enjoy to the full this most inspiring sport, it is still less known than it deserves to be, particularly as its aims and methods are in certain respects unique, or were at the Club's inception. It should be matter of pride to all Canadian lovers of the great outdoors that this country has taken the lead in mountaineering as in so many other movements of New World development. Mountaineering has always held the glamour of romance for those whose lives are necessarily inactive, so that a glimpse at the field life of the A. C. C. should be of interest, and more especially now when the climbing season is closing and the annual camp of 1919 is of the quite recent past.

The Alpine Club of Canada is a daughter of the famous Alpine Club of England with which it is closely affiliated, but differs from the parent organization in this important regard: In order to qualify for membership in the English Club, one must already be an experienced climber—the Canadian Club is primarily a school for budding mountaineers. Each season a camp is held for the exclusive purpose of inculcating the principles of rock and snow climbing. Swiss guides are employed so that, by their example, the best and safest methods may be learned. The uncanny skill of these men is a revelation to those who have never seen the Swiss in his native habitat; and the wisdom of this policy is fully demonstrated in the fact that, although there are now very many Canadians whose training in the hills has advanced until they are quite independent of professional guides, there has never been an avoidable accident at any of the Club camps and even unavoidable accidents have been so rare as to be counted negligible. This is in gratifying contrast with the record of the Swiss Alps, where many lives are lost yearly, almost entirely through inexperience or lack of proper instruction.

But it is, after all, the mountaineer and his craft that most appeal to the Great Public, and it may aid conception of this part of the Club life and work if we take seats on the magic carpet and are whisked by it away to one of the annual "Camps"—by preference the great Victory Camp held only a few weeks since in the marvellous Yoho Valley.

On reaching Field it is only seven miles to Camp, and good trail all the way. We start out in good spirits, and cross by bridge the turbulent Kicking Horse River. The trail winds back and forth to make a possible grade up the steep mountainside. We do not strike water, and thirst grows apace. We are convinced that half an hour will amply suffice to reach the summit, but after two hours of very real work we learn that we are now "nearly half-way there." For hours we have been toiling upward through forest so dense as to obscure all scenery. Now we stand on a bare ridge so narrow there is scarce room for the trail to grip. On right and left tower great sentinels, Mounts Field and Burgess, the latter a sheer precipice of black rock, while between the two is framed a wonderland panorama of elfin ivory crags, hanging glaciers and foaming waterfall ribbons. At our feet lies a vast valley green with spruce and pine, and in its heart is set a perfect turquoise lake, milky blue-green, shading into true emerald where cloud shadows drift across its placid surface.

But afternoon advances and we push on along the rugged sides of Mount Field and Mount Wapta until there is the glimmer of white tents among the trees and Camp at last receives us. Centred is the great campfire, with its circle of logs for seats. In the open space beyond the campfire are bell tents for the men, and in the other direction the ladies' quarters, pitched in the seclusion of the glades. Near at hand is the Dining Tent, a hundred feet square and open on all sides to the winds of heaven. Conveniently contiguous are the Administration and Commissary Tents; and, last but not least, the Tea Tent—where fair hands (under the sunburn) dispense nectar and rare ambrosia and biscuits to ravenous returning climbers.

It is dark when the camping ground is reached, with tents pitched on the very edge of a hustling mountain stream.

By earliest morning, up and away on the Little Yoho Trail. We travel thirty strong, but only six are to make the ascent of Marpole, the others being bound for Mount Vice-President, theirs being a qualifying climb, the accomplishment of which entitles newcomers to active membership.

At last is reached the foot of the mountain proper, where are left alpenstocks, for Marpole is to be conquered with no appliances. Now comes the climb. And so, cliff after cliff is conquered until we stand on the summit and feast eyes on the sea of peaks opened to gaze. Chief among these, is that of Edward Whymper, the conqueror of the Matterhorn; and we discover that we have made our climb on the eighteenth anniversary of that grand climber's ascent.

The Alpine Club of Canada is all things to all people. To the strenuous it offers exercise unsurpassed for excitement and interest, unselfish emulation and satisfaction in successful accomplishment. See Canada First. And there is no grander part of Canadians' scenic heritage than the great mountain ranges of our farthest West. And therefore be advised: Next summer, you who have vacations to spend and love the great Outdoors, pack up and go west to the camps of the Alpine Club and you will surely return therefrom larger-visioned, clearer-eyed, sunbrowned, with greater faith and health and energy and power.

BELLEVILLE, ONTARIO, SATURDAY NOVEMBER 29, 1919.

GET TOGETHER SPIRIT STRONGLY MANIFESTED AT CIVIC DINNER

INSPIRING MESSAGES FROM ACROSS THE BORDER

CIVIC DINNER IN EXPANSION CAMPAIGN OF BELLEVILLE BOARD OF TRADE TREMENDOUS SUCCESS — ALL BUSINESS INTERESTS IN BELLEVILLE FULLY REPRESENTED IN GATHERING OF OVER TWO HUNDRED LIVE WIRE CITIZENS, WILLING, ABLE AND ANXIOUS TO MAKE A BETTER BELLEVILLE—GOOD NATURE AND GOOD FELLOWSHIP FEATURES OF DINNER — SNAPPY CHORUSES KEEP PROGRAM SWINGING ALONG—SPLENDID SPEECHES OF HOPE AND PROMISE—WHAT OTHER CITIES HAVE DONE BELLEVILLE CAN DO.

A real live, modern, up-to-the-minute Get-Together Community banquet was held last evening at the Hotel Quinte under the direction of the Belleville Board of Trade and officers of the Canadian City Bureau. The attendance numbered about two hundred, representing every branch of business effort in Belleville from railways to rolling mills and from retail stores to wholesalers and all kinds of factories. The spirit of good fellowship present was an inspiring feature of the occasion and there was no constraint or class or position—all met on a common level anxious to get pointers upon how to best serve the best interests of Belleville.

The speakers were few, but the speeches were of a high order—eloquent, inspiring and educating. As chairman, a happy choice was made in Mr. R. J. Graham, a captain of industry, who knows the secret of success in business enterprises and who believes that the same principles applied to city building would have equally as good result. Mr. Graham's remarks were full of pep and encouragement and fitted in perfectly with the progressive spirit of the occasion.

Mr. Blake, who was endorsed by Mr. Graham and others present as the messenger of millions of United States capital ready to be invested in Canada, made an excellent address. Mr. Blake is spying out the land and not even telling anybody his plans. He is not looking for bonuses or other municipal inducements, but will recommend the location which suits the business best considered from every angle—power, shipping facilities, living conditions and live citizenship. Belleville is one of four cities now being considered by him. He will make a recommendation and the engineering staff will come on to prove up his conclusions and make final report.

Mr. Crosby, of the Canadian City Bureau, briefly and plainly explained the plan of the Board of Trade Expansion Campaign and what it was hoped to accomplish. All must co-operate in a spirit of progress to make good on this campaign.

Rev. D. C. Ramsay, pastor of the John Street Presbyterian Church, was the chaplain of the occasion, and filled the position very acceptably.

The speech of the evening was, of course, that of Mr. Allen D. Albert, of Chicago, a former newspaper man, later a student and expert in the field of industrial expansion and social service in connection with industry, past-president of the International Rotary Clubs of the World, and a gentleman with a wealth of experience in the development of industries, the building up of greater cities and better citizenship, and an ability to tell his experiences in a very entertaining and understandable way. Mr. Albert's greatest charm is perhaps in his ability to tell a story well and his entire address was a series of stories of real life well told connected with a golden cord of eloquence mellowed by his winning smile and charming personality. Only because of his great regard for and interest in the work of the American and Canadian City Bureaus would Mr. Albert miss his Thanksgiving Day at home to come to Belleville, arriving here very tired after thirty-six hours on the train, lunching at railway restaurants and changing his clothes on the day coach of the local express in which he made the last lap of the journey. That Mr. Albert's address was appreciated was evidenced by the continuous applause and cheers, amounting to an ovation, and although he spoke for one hour and a half his audience was loth to allow him to stop. Afterwards he said to a friend that the spirit of good fellowship and progress so strongly manifest when he had entered the room from his belated train drove away the tired feeling and gave him the necessary inspiration to deliver his message, which was simply an outpouring of his experiences and desire to be useful.

The Civic Dinner was a great success in every way and will be of great benefit in clearing up many points not thoroughly understood by the citizens generally and lining up the progressive citizens solidly behind the Expansion Campaign for a Better Belleville.

The menu was excellent and the service very good. It was a real Hotel Quinte dinner, with chicken which tasted like more the more one ate. Then the music and the rollicking choruses led by Musgrave, of Toronto. It was some night, sure enough, and then some, with a good dinner digested by the general good fellowship of everybody and the message of inspiration lifting the veil from the wealth of opportunity which can be developed by a progressive, united citizenship.

Mr. R. J. Graham, in opening the feast of reason part of the evening's program referred to the pleasure it gave him to preside over such a gathering and it was an honor he esteemed. He welcomed to our city those who were present for the first time in the city and others who have come here to improve our city. It was a delight to see the city so well represented at the gathering and it was a great pleasure to see so many young men present. It behooves everyone to become boosters for the city. We all have talents and we should use them for the furthering of the interest of the city. If the city is to go ahead and improve in every way it will be a united effort. We all want to see a better and bigger Belleville.

A year ago the citizens gave $800,000 for Victory Bonds and this year over one million dollars was subscribed. As there would be no more Victory Bond Campaigns we might give of our means to assist industries in the city. In other cities success had been achieved by a united effort and this could be accomplished here.

It was also pleasing to note that the ladies of the city were at the present time taking an active interest in the matter of promoting the city's welfare and the retail merchants were waking up. It was up to the retail merchants to assist fiancially in this campaign and also to assist financially in securing industries for the city. Belleville has many advantages which should be taken advantage of.

A Messenger of Millions

Mr. Phillip W. Blake, of New York was, in a few well chosen words, introduced by the chairman and upon rising to speak was most cordially received. He gave an address which cannot but be helpful to those who heard it. The speaker stated that the future development of a town or city depended upon its resources and how those resources were handled by the citizens. Some do not realise the fact, although it is a fact, that about 5 per cent. of the people of a community did the thinking for the remained 95 per cent of the population. For the past two weeks he (the speaker) had been visiting places between Toronto and Montreal, and was greatly interested in seeing the water power development. An industrial concern in which he was interested in and which had millions behind it were prospecting with a view to locating upon the Canadian shore, and the probable place was somewhere between Toronto and Montreal. There were, however, many things to be considered before a decision was reached. Mr. Blake, in speaking of Canada and the United States said it was only an imaginary line that divided the two countries, but there was a considerable tariff wall. If you make us jump it, we will do so. In order to advance and improve a community, the centralizing of power was a necessity. Manufacturers in the United States are desirious of coming to Canada and will locate in industrial sections of the country. Belleville might be one of the centres. It is a fact that some place will take the cream of this invasion. In referring to Municipal Government, the speaker said what was wanted was up to date Municipal Governments, which are controlled by the brains of the community rather than by the politicians The prospect he (the speaker) was interested in was not by any means a bonus looking scheme as there were millions of dollars behind it. There were great opportunities for industrial developments all along the line between Toronto and Montreal and Belleville afforded to him many natural advantages, and if things shaped right, it might be the one of the four places he had in view. Mr. Blake referred to the Canadian City Bureau and the fact that it had accomplished much good in places, where a campaign had been inaugurated under its auspices. It was necessary to lay out a two or three years programme and see to it that that program is put through. Make every provision for the taking care of the people that are within the city and also those who may come in, was the closing remark of the speaker.

The Plan of Progress

Mr. R. A. Crosby, who is at the head of the Canadian City Bureau Campaign project in this city, being called upon, gave timely advice as to what was needed to make the present movement a success. The man who is looking for industrial location is not generally looking for a bonus but it is often a question of the people of that community and what they are doing. He had, whilst here, been telling the men of Belleville what they had to do. The question was, what will Belleville be in 1925, just what the citizens make of it? The citizens should seek a high altitude, not a low one. A membership fee of $25 per year for three years was not a large fee, as an organization will be created for the upbuilding and the life of the city. It is not the intention of the Canadian Bureau to write out a programme of work, but the brains of the membership will do that. One of the first things to do is to secure a trained secretary. Find your man and pay him what he is worth. The Bureau has worked in over 200 cities on this continent in the past 10 years. We give you all the advice possible in the matter and a prospectus which had been issued and sent out explained thoroughly the method of campaign. After you have heard the gospel of expansion preached, follow what reason teaches you.

The Man From Chicago

Mr. Allen D. Albert, of Chicago, the speaker of the evening was late in arriving owing to train connections and did not begin his address until ten o'clock, but that he was worth while waiting for was evidenced by the way he held his audience in rapt attention for more than one hour and a half while he stripped humanity of its veneer and laid bare its true worth its faults and its hypocrisy, at the

H. H. Dewart Will Fight The Drury Goverment

ONTARIO LIBERAL LEADER INTIMATES CABINET MINISTERS WILL BE OPPOSED IN ELECTIONS, AND DECLARES THAT OFFERS OF PREFERMENT HAVE BEEN MADE TO ELECTED LIBERAL MEMBERS TO INDUCE THEM TO RETIRE.

TORONTO, Nov. 29—In a statement issued last evening, Mr. Hartley Dewart, K.C.,M.P.P., as the leader of the Liberals in the Ontario Legislature, intimates is the intention of his party to offer opposition to what he terms class government with a small concession to Labor. "The people of the Province of Ontario may have to oppose some of those whom Mr Drury has selected as Cabinet Ministers," is the way Mr. Dewart puts it. "If they find themselves opposed," says Mr. Dewart, "it will be simply because this class Government is not the thing that it calls itself." Mr. Dewart takes a little slap at the new Attorney-General and refers to the new Minister of Agriculture as a Government contractor who was soundly beaten in his own constituency.

Mr. Dewart is particularly bitter respecting the alleged canvass of the province to secure the retirement of an elected member to obtain a seat for a new Cabinet Minister. He intimates that offers of preferment have been made to Liberal members to get them to retire and that secret bargaining has been going on to induce a Liberal member to accept the appointment of Speaker.

Mr. Dewart, in the opening part of his statement, has words of praise for "the present constructive Liberal party in Ontario," which is "animated by an entirely different conception of political duty than to simply follow the party shibboleths or the past." The new platform is commended and the Hearst Administration condemned .

Football Deaths Become Fewer

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

CHICAGO, Nov. 29—Football claimed five victims during the 1919 season which practically closed with Thanksgiving Day games. According to reports to the Associated Press today the number of deaths is the lowest in years and was five less than in 1918 and seven under the toll of two years previous. The development of the open style of play to supplant the dangerous smashing game is mainly responsible for the decreasing number of fatalities in the opinion of experts.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limtied

WASHINGTON, Nov. 2—Although denial from Mexico City of reported fighting there between followers of President Carranza and General Alvaro Orragon, Presidental candidate, served to ease the tenseness of relations between Mexico and United States State Department today had not altered its determination to enforce demands for the prompt release of American Consular Agent Jenkins imprisoned on the charge of conniving with his bandit captors.

No Strike Vote By Railwaymen

The Conference of Railroad Brotherhoods is Brought to a Conclusion.

CLEVELAND, O., Nov. 29.—The 500 General Chairman of the four Railroad Brotherhoods, called to consider an overtime offer by Director-General of Railroads Hines, ended their fourday conference late today.

A committee was named to confer with the Director-General next week for further information as to the effect the elimination of arbitraries and allowances, as requested by Mr. Hines, would have on the offer of time and one half for overtime in slow freight service. No strike vote was taken.

Mines To Reopen Protected By Troops

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer Canadian Press Limited

WASHINGTON, Nov. 29—The battle ground of conflict over the new wage scale in the bituminous coal industry which has centred here during two weeks of fruitless negotiations today shifted to various fields in all sections of the country, the operators returning here to attempt to re-open their mines and ready to pay the 14 per cent wage advance suggested by Fuel Administrator Garfield, received the assurance of the government that troops were ready to protect from violence any miners wishing to return to work. Federal District Attorneys have been instructed relative to proceedings against either operators or miners restricting the output of coal and the Department of Justice simply await developments.

Condemned Murderer Kills Death Watch

FOREIGNER SENTENCED TO DEATH RUNS AMUCK IN HAMILTON JAIL, ATTACKING OFFICERS — ONE DEAD, ANOTHER DYING, ANOTHER SERIOUSLY INJURED.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

HAMILTON, Nov. 29.—Running amuck in the corridor of the jail this morning, Paul Kowalski, condemned to death for the murder of Amnot Tremiuk, killed the death watch, County Constable J. C. Springstead, and seriously injured Turnkeys Auty, Ex-Sergt. Lawrie and Wm. Berry. Kowalski was in the corridor this morning and jumped on Springstead, throttling him to death, and then hacking his throat with a sharpened spoon. The turnkeys ran to assist and sustained severe knife wounds. Auty is dying and Lawrie is in the hospital in a serious condition.

Mayor Grey Will Have Casting Votes In Winnipeg

CITY COUNCIL WILL PROBABLY BE EVENLY DIVIDED BETWEEN LABOR AND CITIZENS' PARTY CANDIDATES, GIVING MAYOR CASTING VOTE—A STRENDOUS ELECTION.

Special Despatch to The Intelligencer, Canadian Press, Limited.

LONDON, Nov. 29.—Later returns indicate that Winnipeg's new City Council will be evenly distributed between the Citizens and Labor members, with Mayor Gray, the Citizens' candidate in the unenviable position of having to give the casting vote on important labor issues which are sure to crop up in council this year.

The Aldermen stand seven to seven, including those Aldermen on their second year. There may be some recounts where the vote was close. Gray had a majority of 3,116 and the count of actual votes cast showed that the Citizens' candidate polled six thousand more votes than the Laborite. The Laborites carried one seat on the School Board.

It was in many respects a case of North Winnipeg versus South Winnipeg, with the south having the better of the argument in actual count, but the north won out in the pinch and thus gained two seats for the Laborites.

Another outstanding feature of the elections was that of fifteen Laborite candidates placed in the field, only four were successful, the other three being members of the council from last year. The vote was the heaviest on record, being nearly double that of 1917, when 15,000 votes were polled.

Keep the City alive by being alive.

Mr. Albert is one of those speakers who can not be adequately reported. His points are illustrated by many stories, grave and gay and by his all-embracing smile, facial expressions and power of mimicry. A moving picture operator and receiving phonograph would be needed to assist an expert stenographer in an attempt to adequately report such an address as he gave last evening.

A lazy man is as good as a dead one, but he takes up more room.

same time showing how all true men and women can work together for the good of all. He had come expecting to address a typical Canadian Board of Trade audience, he said, and had managed to change to a suit of clothes with flowing tails, on the day coach between Belleville and Trenton. He was delighted to find the gathering not a typical Board of Trade one, but a great democratic gathering of citizens, breathing good nature and good fellowship, and the spirit of co-operation without which there could be no great cities or great nations.

Boards of Trade as a rule were so all-fired busy being respectable that they had no time for anything else.

Who Won the War?

Mr. Albert apologized for what he termed the cheap effrontery of some of the American newspapers and speakers—you have suffered, but so have we—we know we did not win the war. It was but our privilege to pour into a measure already full and running over our contribution to the great cause. It was ours to not more than apply the last pressure, not the greatest pressure, to bring the war to an end, that not one precious drop of blood of all the rivers of blood shed in the war should have been in vain. He had hoped and prayed since November 11, 1918, that the people of Canada and the United States who were not insane, the clear thinkers, would put a stop to the arrant nonsense uttered by press and speakers on both sides of the line, calculated to keep the nations apart and disrupt the great feeling of kindly brotherhood which should be theirs in common.

The Building of Cities

All the cities in the world had grown by accident until this generation and humanity had paid dear for their growth. Now social science and intelligent planning was used with great success in the upbuilding of great cities and their improvement. The business men and women of Belleville can make Belleville grow in a continuous and expanding richness of life for your own people.

Distant pastures are always greener to some people who are always willing to concede that the other town can do it but not their own, instead of saying "What in God's name can we do to make our own city better? and getting busy along that line.

The Human Spirit

God furnished the accessories for all great cities in site and environment but one thousand advantages and resources could not build a city without the human spirit of co-operation and good fellowship binding the people together in one common effort for the common good. The Almighty had provided Peublo, Colorado, with the site for a great and prosperous city but not even He could prevail against a stubborn and stiff-necked and jealous people. A river ran through the centre of Peublo and divided the people into two factions who refused to co-operate in anything, with the result that Peublo with the finest site for a great city in the United States stood still. The river which should be an asset to any community was a liability to Peublo.

A Ponderous Bromide

"What this town needs first is more factories, is a ponderous bromide, which should be retired to well deserved oblivion," said the speaker.

There are many things a town needs before more factories. Mr. Albert then explained the necessity of building up a good retail trade with fine retail shops which would hold the community business as well as attracting trade from outside. The wholesale trade was also a big asset bringing men and money in and sending travelling men abroad, the finest advertisers for their home town in the world.

Methods of meeting agents of industry seeking locations were outlined in graphic style by the speaker indicating the need of strong local organizations with live officers able to close deals. Many good industries are lost by indifferent and incompetent officers of local boards.

Welcome Branches

Do not imagine that the great industries of the United States are going to pull themselves up by the roots and transplant themselves in Canada. They will establish branches, but do not scorn the branches and the little concerns which can develop.

Some Bankers and Others

Mr. Albert showed the difference between the old fashioned type of bankers and the modern variety. Good city builders in bankers were rare but golden. The banker is the only business man who can continue to do business and make his customer feel mean. Modern banking methods applied to the upbuilding of industry were illustrated by apt stories of actual occurrences.

Crazy Dreams

The motor cycle was the result of a boy's crazy dream backed up by bankers, who had faith with the result that a factory was established now employing 3,800 hands.

All good ideas are crazy, said Mr. Albert.

Another bright boy invented a wheel beside a bicycle and developed this crazy idea with persistence, character and the assistance of the intelligent perception of a banker. The result was a great industry.

Mr. Albert instanced American cities, which were more than holding their own against larger and more powerful rivals because the people were united in civic pride and progress.

People Make the City

It is the people who make the city not the place itself. Belleville is a company, an aggregate of souls, not an area. If the people left there would be no city.

The city should be made attractive for people to live in which is the secret of growth.

The United States during the war spent over one hundred thousand dollars transporting workers to Pensacola, Florida, to work on shipbuilding, but they refused to stay. The difficulty was overcome by providing decent living conditions.

The worker wants for his family just exactly what you want for your family.

Other instances were given where workers would not stay because conditions were bad.

The workers want houses with modern conveniences, they want educational facilities not measured in dollars, they want facilities for recreation. Open spaces belonging to the people where grown-ups as well as youths can play baseball, football, tennis, etc.

There must be proper sanitary conveniences for everybody, don't think you can neglect the poorest family and not pay for it yourself in the spread of disease, said Mr. Albert.

Learn to Play

Play was the great thing needful. People have to learn to play to get the needed exercise to enable them to carry on and be the greatest use to themselves and others. Particularly the children need play leaders. Most of the evil in life heretofore has been acquired by children in the play hour. The trained play leader eliminated the evil influence and helped to keep the child pure in thought and in deed. Boy Scouts, Y.M.C.A., supervised play grounds and other methods were teaching the children to play without being polluted.

Value of Religion

Mr. Albert closed an eloquent and supremely interesting address by an earnest appeal that more reverence be shown for religion, showing the great influence and value of the churches and the universal respect in which real religion is held. With biting sarcasm and delicious humor he referred to the surrender of church life by the men to the women and the results, also the efforts of men of thought and science to show that the Christian religion was a myth, citing Spencer's ten volumes of reason which had to end in confession of failure.

This city will develop in direct proportion to the capacity of the citizens for development and their respect for religion, coupled with the courage to openly avow their reverence for God.

Workmen reverence religion but stay away from church for a bundle of reasons chief among which is the belief that the church exists for the man with coat tails.

Co-operation, good fellowship, neighborliness, democracy, decent living conditions and fair play for everybody were among the points elaborated by Mr. Albert in showing how the building of better cities can best be accomplished.

Rescued Captain Makes Grave Charge

SAULT STE. MARIE, Nov. 29—Charging that the Captain of the steamer McIntosh deliberately and without any need left him and the remainder of the crew of the sunken steamer Myron to a fate which meant death in all cases but his own, and thereby committed a crime, than which there is no greater in the code of the seas, Captain W. R. Neal told a story of horror which is not equalled in the annals of winter shipwrecks on Lake Superior.

"I was clinging to the roof of the pilot house when the McIntosh hailed me, shortly after the Myron went down from under me," said Capt. Neal. 'The McIntosh' drew alongside me not more than sixteen feet away. Although it was dusk, the ship was so close I had no difficulty in making out her name. I talked to the Captain and expected he would put out a yawl and pick me up, but he did not do so, nor attempt in any way to help me. "I will have a boat sent for you?" the Captain of the McIntosh called, and then drew away. I have never seen him since, nor do I ever want to see him."

HAS LOST USE OF LEGS

Capt. Neal has practically lost the use of his legs as the result of his experience in being tossed about for twenty-four hours on top of his pilot house, more than half of that time being submerged to his waist in icy water. His brain is entirely clear and his experience remains most vivid in his mind. He left for his home in Bay City after spending yesterday here with his wife and the Government Inspectors, to whom he told his story.

When asked if any legal action would be taken arising from the charges made by Capt. Neal to the Federal officers concerning the abandonment of him and his crew by other steamers, Capt. O. W. Blodgett, owner of the ill-fated Myron, said that should such action be taken it would be up to the Government.

PRAISES CREW OF FRANZ

Captain Neal, who is the only known survivor is loud in praise of the Captain and crew of the steamer W. C. Franz, which rescued him after he had practically give up all hope.

After the Myron had sunk, trapping him at his post of duty in the pilot hose, which detached itself from the sunken vessel, he found himself in four feet of water. With difficulty he climbed through the pilot house window and on to the roof, clinging precariously to it in the howling gale. After the steamers McIntosh and Adriatic had gone, the wind carried him rapidly away from the point where the ship had foundered and when rescued twenty hours later he had drifted many miles.

The below zero weather, coupled with an icy wind, quickly froze his legs Realizing this, Captain Neal submerged them in water until they 'thawed out.' Captain Neal says had he not kept his lower body in the icy waters he would surely have frozen to death His hands swelled up, so that when he was halued aboard the Franz next day his rings were not visible. His jaws were locked so that he could not open his mouth to eat.

TOBACCO KEPT JAWS FROM FREEZING

"Had I not taken a large chew of tobacco from the wheelsman shortly before the ship sank it is probable my jaws would have been paralyzed completely by the cold."

He told the wheelsman, he said, that although he seldom used tobacco it might be the last treat he could have from him, so he took a mouthful. He did not eject it until he was safely aboard the Franz twenty-four hours later. This kept his jaws moving and preventing them from freezing solid.

POWERFUL GLASSES SAVED HIM

That he was rescued by the Franz is due to an extra powerful set of binoculars owned by Captain W. C. Jordan of the Franz. The Franz was four miles distant from him when Neal's waving attracted the attention of Captain Jordon through his glasses. He immediately changed his course and put out a boat, which picked up Captain Neal.

"I have never felt anything so good in my life as the heat in the cabin of the Franz," said Capt. Neal. "'At Fort William they call me 'the Iron Man.' They, perhaps, do not know that when I'm at home I demand a temperature of about 90 and no draughts anywhere. I'm going home now, perhaps having more cause to be thankful than any other man in the United States, this Thanksgiving Day.'

ATTEMPTS TO FIND OTHERS

The final effort of the owners of the Myron is being made in an effort to locate traces of other members of the crew, who, barring a miracle, are now without doubt dead. A crew of hardy fishermen have been sent along the south shore from Tahquamenon to Iroquois, part of them afoot and some in a boat. This is the only territory now that has not been thoroughly searched.

No Such Thing As 'Prohibited Area'

Counsel Claims Sales by Government Vendors Void Condition.

OTTAWA, Nov. 29—That the city of Ottawa is not a "prohibited area" under the Dominion Order-in-Council, passed last February, touching the transportation or bringing into prohibited areas of intoxicating liquors, is the line of defence which will be conducted by Messrs Norman Guthrie and R. Code, counsel for the defence, in the case of Inspector McLaughlin versus the Canadian Express Co.

The Canadian Express Company was charged in Police Court with "Having, on November 15, intoxicating liquors taken or transported into the City of Ottawa, Province of Ontario, being prohibited area under the Ontario Temperance Act, contrary to the order-in-council of the Dominion of Canada passed on the 24th day of February, 1919." The charge arises out of the seizure of thirty-five cases of champagne which were seized by Inspector McLaughlin at the Central Station, which was consigned to Messrs Boivin, Wislon and Company, Montreal, to the Country Club. The liquor was labelled "Country Club, Hull," but when sequestered was in the express company's office, and, according to Inspector McLaughlin's interpretation of the law, was not in transit.

Bulgaria Must Pay $445,000,000

Is Deprived of Thrace and Strumnitza, Which Goes to Serbia.

PARIS, Nov. 29.—The Peace Treaty with Bulgaria was signed at 10.42 o'clock Thursday morning. By the conditions of the treaty Bulgaria is called upon to surrender all works of are and valuables taken from Allied countries during the war, and to pay an indemnity of approximately $445,000,000. Bulgaria is deprived of Thrace and also loses Strumnitza, a small triangular section of territory, the latter being assigned to Serbia. Proposals which would give Bulgaria a corridor through Thrace to the Aegean are left to the future disposition of the Allied Governments. The boundary between Roumania and Bulgaria is changed in only minor details.

Compulsory military service in Bulgaria is abolished by the treaty terms the Bulgarian army being limited to 20,000 men, with a gendarmerie, or police force not exceeding the amounts laid down by the treaty shall be turned over to the Allies. A commission composed of Allied representatives is given power to punish crimes committed by Bulgarians during the war and also deal with the repatriation of prisoners.

EXPANSION OF "Y" RAIL WORK URGED

"If there is justification for the statement that 'Cleanliness is next to Godliness,' then you are preparing the way for the appreciation of God and Christianity." This was the keynote of an address by Dr. D. Z. Dunott, chairman of the committee on health and medical relief. United States railroad administration to 300 railroad Y.M.C.A. delegates attending the railroad conference in Temple Beth-El in connection with the International Y. Conference last week at Detroit.

Dr. Dunott urged the railroad delegates to carry on with the utmost energy their work of providing quiet model sleeping conditions, nourishing sanitary food and increased recreational facilites at "Y" rest centres for train crews.

At the organization meeting of the railroad delegates Dr. John P. Munn, of New York, was elected chairman of the railroad men's representatives to the "Y" convention.

In addressing the delegates on the "Unoccupied Field" of the railroad Y.M.C.A., W.W. Aidair pointed out the great territory west of the Mississippi still not properly covered with railroad associations. E. D. Foster, another speaker commenting on a world-wide railroad association, said: "In projecting the program of the railroad "Y" beyond America, we must conceive the idea of a larger brotherhood. There is no better vehicle than the railroad Y.M.C.A. to bring about this desired result."

Wood Alcohol Causes Death Of Two Men

Samples Showed Very High Percentages—Other Men Threw Stuff Away.

At St. Ola yesterday before Dr. Gardiner, coroner, an inquest was held to enquire into the circumstances of the deaths of Mr. G. N. Bennett, of this city, and Mr. James Reid, of Cowson's Corners, North Hastings. The verdict of the jury was that the deceased came to their death, the one at his home in Limerick township on November 14, and the other at Wellman's hunting camp, Wollaston township, on November 14, from wood alcoholic poisoning.

The examination of witnesses was conducted by Crown Attorney Wm. Carnew of this city. Chief Inspector of the License Department J. A. Ayearst was present and read the report of the analysis on two samples of liquid which had been brought to the camp by one of the men. One showed 82.94 per cent. proof spirits by weight and the other 82.80 per cent. Distillation of another sample showed that the fluid was nine-tenths by volume menthyl alcohol or wood alcohol,

It was shown that the liquor was brought in by one of the men, who on the way served the other with diluted liquor and drank a quantity himself. From whom it originally came no one knows, but the Crown and the Chief Inspector stated that every effort had been made to find out its source, but without result. Any clue would be very closely traced.

Two other men got a taste of the liquor, but threw the rest away, not liking the taste.

THE QUEEN OF ENGLAND
"THINKS OF THE LUCK OF THE NAVY"

Buckingham Palace,
23rd October, 1918.

Dear Mr. Hutchison:—

I showed your letter to the Queen, and Her Majesty was glad to have had the opportunity of speaking to you at the Palace Theatre.

The Queen greatly enjoyed the performance of "The Luck of the Navy," and thought the play most interesting and admirably acted.

Her Majesty is gratified to learn that the proceeds for the Royal Navy Prisoners of War Fund proved so satisfactory, and she congratulates you and the other artists on the successful result of your efforts.

I am, Yours very truly.

Katherine Hale At Canadian Club

Interesting Lecture Given in High School Assembly Hall on Canadian Literature.

A large number were present at the interesting lecture on "Canadian Literature" given in the High School Assembly Hall last evening under the auspices of the Women's Canadian Club, by Mrs. John W. Garvin (Katharine Hale) who introduced the subject of Canadian Literature from the standpoint of Canadian Clubs as well as from the interpretive standpoint.

Mrs. Garvin touched on a timely point of production in our literature asking the question "Why we do not keep our Canadian writers in our own country? She answered this question from that of the Canadian editor and then from the writer's standpoint and as a writer, who has received support and great kindnesses from her own people, "let me tell you what I believe is really holding back our literature and all Canadian Art with a subtle and most deadly effect. It is our spirit of carping criticism, we all have it, the editors, the public and our own critical writers. We officially belittle ourselves. We call Canada small and young and her art crude and immature, whereas Canada is one of the vast countries of the world and the foundations of her art are centuries old. If we are immature it is the fault of ourselves and it is also the fault of the public who, contrary to the established idea, largely mould the writer or rather the writers chance of success.

Imagine the first chair of Canadian Literature having just been inaugurated in a Canadian University! Think over the fact that possessing one of the finest schools of poets in the world our Canadian children learn nothing of them and their work in public and high school readers.

These things and their solution rest with ourselves, and no country deserves the immortality of a national art that does not exact recognition of art within its gates."

Giving an outline of the names of Canadian historians, essayists, novelists and poets, Mrs. Garvin gave readings from Isabel Valency Crawford, Pauline Johnston, Bliss Carman, Seranus, Theodore G. Roberts, Lloyd Roberts, Robert Serviss and others.

Mrs. Garvin has given and is giving this lecture on Canadian Literature in many parts of the Province.

A vote of thanks was moved by Miss Fraelick and seconded by Miss Lister.

W.J.Bragg Says Drury Didn't Know Of Offer

Suggestion He Give Up Seat to Doherty Came From Toronto Man.

BOWMANVILLE, Nov. 29—Mr. W. J. Bragg, the Liberal member for West Durham, in the Provincial Legislature, asserts that Premier Drury so far as he is aware, had no part or knowledge of the proposal made him (Bragg) to resign his seat in favor of the Hon Manning Doherty, Minister of Agriculture.

Didn't See Mr. Drury

He neither saw Mr. Drury nor heard from him directly or indirectly, he states. Nor has he received any such proposition from any other member of the U. F. O. organization. So much for this feature of the despatch.

Your correspondent is informed by W. J. Bragg, however, that he was called to Toronto nearly two weeks ago by urgent telephone call. He was unaware of the reason, but went and met a prominent gentleman of Toronto, one well known in political circles, who took him to a private room and made proposition to him that he resign his seat in favor of Mr. Manning Doherty, Minister of Agriculture, but he does not say that he was offered any lucrative Government position for relinquishing his seat. Mr. Bragg does not deny, however, that certain preferment or promise of some equivalent by way of compensation for yielding up so hard-won a position was not mentioned.

What Liberals Did

Mr. Bragg came home without giving any idea of accepting the offer, and consulted John A. Holgate, president of the West Durham Liberal Association, resulting in a call to the executive to meet on Saturday for important business. The executive and a few leading Liberals besides met and heard Mr. Braggs' explanation of the proposition made to him in Toronto. He explained that he was sorry that such an offer had been made. After an hour's discussion of the whole situation, while a friendly feeling was shown towards Premier Drury and the political party he leads, a resolution was proposed and unanimously adopted, that the proposal made to Mr. Bragg to resign his seat be not entertained. Mr. Bragg declines to reveal the name of

Prizes Presented To Bright Pupils

Pupils of Queen Victoria School Presented with Governor-General's and Other Medals.

Presentation exercises were held at Queen Victoria Public School, in this city, yesterday afternoon, and the programme given by the pupils was all that could have been desired. Principal Wilkin's of the School and the efficient staff are to be congratulated upon the success of the pupils under their tuition, as it was certainly an evidence of faithful and careful work. Miss Sybil Smith brought special honor to the school by winning the Governor-General's Medal. This medal is given yearly to the pupil taking the highest marks among all Belleville candidates of twelve years of age or under at the High School Entrance Examination and was presented by Mr. F. S. Deacon, chairman of the Board of Education. Mr. H. J. Clarke, School Inspector, in referring to the winner of the medal stated that he was not allowed to give the number of marks obtained by a candidate, but the maximum was 750 and Sybil Smith obtained nearly 700. Other prizes presented during the exercises.

Previous to the presenting of the prizes an interesting programme was given by the pupils and all acquited themselves in a most creditable manner.

The proceeding opened by a chorus entitled "Hark, the Herald Angels Sing." Miss Georgina Ruttan gave a reading followed by a chorus given by tots of Miss Wilkins' class, entitled "Capt. Baby Bunting." A solo, "O What a Pal is Mary" by Alice McIntosh was beautifully rendered.

Club swinging by the girls of Miss Wilkins' class was cleverly executed as was a wand drill by girls of Miss Robert's class. The pupils of Miss Peck's class gave a chorus entitled "'Tis a Jolly Old World."

PRIZES PRESENTED

To Master Harold Hodges was presented the St. Julian Chapter I.O.D.E. prize to the pupil taking the highest marks among all Belleville candidates at the High School Entrance Examination. School Inspector Clarke made the presentation.

For proficiency in rifle shooting prizes were presented to Gerald Watts Harold Robertson, Tom Wrightmeyer, Bruce Jose and Warren Soule.

Prizes for proficiency in physical culture were presented to pupils of Miss Fleming's and Miss Campbell's classes and a prize to the cadet corps of the school for proficiency in military drill.

The proceedings closed with the National Anthem.

ELDERLY FATHERS.

Their Children Are More Likely to Be Eminent.

"There is something almost dismal in the currently popular theories of heredity, so far as they apply to the human race," says the Journal of the American Medical Association, in an editorial pointing out the defects in such theories as that of Weissmann that acquired characters cannot be transmitted from parent to child.

The editor quotes approvingly M. H. Fischer's article in the Unpopular Review in which he urged that the fact that mutilations are never inherited was no argument against the inheritanace of acquired characters, for mutilations are not acquired but inflicted, and truly acquired characters are those developed in a functional way through effort or performance.

And he goes on to cite Casper L. Redfield's arguments from the breeding of horses, cows, hens, etc., one of the fertile fields for the accurate study of heredity. These demonstrate that the race-winning colts are the progeny of mature horses, that they have by long practice attained high speed before the colts were born; that among dairy cattle each successive calf gives an increased quantity of milk, so that the youngest daughters of the oldest cows are the best producers of all.

Fitscher's statistics of human beings show that, other things being equal, the children of older parents "exemplify in a striking way the inheritance of acquired characters. According to his statistics, if the probability of being eminent when born of a father between thirty-five and forty is taken as unity, the probability if born at twenty-five is less than one-fifth as great. Ascending the age scale, the probability at from fifty to fifty-five is five times that at from thirty-five to forty, and over sixty it is ten times that.

"Statistics on human heredity are notably difficult of analysis. The study of inheritance of character, such as mental traits or degrees of eminence, which cannot be measured in customary ways, is beset with many entanglements. But since the current rock-bound conceptions of inheritance and its limitations fail to satisfy the searcher of 'new hopes,' every attempt to find a more flex-

HAPPY JACK IN THE BUSH.

Large wages, good food and plenty of it and excellent sanitary conditions are enjoyed by the lumberjack this season, but the lure of the pine woods does not seem to lure as in former years despite added attractions. Lumbermen report great difficulty in securing enough help for their bush operations despite the fact that wages for the bushmen have reached a high level undreamed of a few years ago.

There are many husky young men in the cities with no regular employment at present who would make a very profitable investment by spending this winter in the pine woods of Northern Ontario earning large wages, fifty to seventy-five dollars a month and board, good board, too, and good healthy hard work. In the spring they will come out with a big fat roll sufficient to provide for an all-summer vacation, if need be, or form the basis of a healthy growing bank account.

Life in a lumber camp is an experience de luxe now compared to old times, and should have great attraction for the unskilled worker. The board and sleeping accommodations are good, there are reading rooms with plenty of literature provided, and to the studious inclined there are night classes in various subjects conducted by competent teachers. There is no temptation to waste money and wages automatically save themselves. Everything that the worker needs can be purchased in the camp store—tobacco, clothing, etc., and as a place to "make a stake" the lumber camp is the best possible proposition this year. As it is the tremendous production of lumber planned by the bush and mill men will be materially curtailed for lack of sufficient labor to man the camps.

NO MEAN JOB.

Mr. Drury has succeeded in forming a Government at Toronto composed of eight Farmer members, two Labor members, and a Toronto lawyer as Attorney-General. An extraordinary Government it is, says the Journal of Commerce. One of its members has occupied a modest back bench in the Toronto Assembly for a couple of sessions. With that exception not a man in the Cabinet has ever had a day's legislative experience. Only a revolution could produce such a Cabinet. But a veritable revolution there has been in Ontario. Three of the Ministers, including the Premier, are not even members of the new Legislature. They have to find seats, which means that some members must be persuaded to retire to make way for them.

So far as routine business is concerned the new Ministers will probably have the good sense to put themselves in the hands of their deputies and other chief officials, who will guide them along safe paths. It is when they are called upon to devise new measures and carry them through the Legislature that their trouble will be serious. The United Farmers of Ontario did not dream of winning power. They wanted to have the glorious British privilege of grumbling and criticizing, which are the easiest parts of life. To their amazement they find themselves obliged to take the responsibility of governing. Instead of being free to find fault in others, they must take up the burden of doing things and receive the criticism they had expected to administer. These conditions cannot fail to have a sobering effect. While the situation is a strange one, and there will be much doubt whether it can be of long duration, there will be a very general desire to give Mr. Drury and his raw recruits in the field of statesmanship every opportunity of proving their ability to manage the public business with wisdom. The men of the old parties in the Legislature will hardly be disposed to offer obstruction. Independent public opinion will demand fair play for the new Government.

WORLD'S LARGEST PAPER MILL FOR CANADA.

Canada is to have the largest pulp and paper mill in the world when the plans of Price Bros. & Co. of Quebec materialize. As William Price, the elder, called a whole district into being, and earned the title, "Father of the Saguenay," so a descendent of the same name, Sir William Price, proposes the construction of a great newsprint mill in the Saguenay district, with a capacity of between 400 and 500 tons a day. The proposal involves the creation of a town of Saguenay of some 7,000 people about three or four miles east of Chicoutimi, and the expenditure of millions of dollars to convert virgin land into streets, factories, public buildings and dwellings. In addition Price Bros. & Co. contemplate extensions to their existing mills at Jonquiere and Kenogami which will increase their output from these plants from 260 to 325 tons a day of paper and board in addition to sulphite pulp. When their Saguenay plant is in operation Price Bros. & Co. will have a total output equal to nearly two-fifths of the present entire national production, the daily output of Canadian paper mills now being some 2,200 tons as compared with 2,900 tons in the United States. In an interview Sir William Price states that work has already been started on the necessary water-power at the Saguenay plant, and that construction of the mill will be under way by May of next year.

Commenting on these proposals, The Quebec Chronicle says, editorially: "It is fashionable at this moment to worship at the farmer's feet, but in the long run Canadians cannot fail to recognize the decisive part that the manufacturers have played in the upbuilding of a great and prosperous Dominion, and among these the Ancient Capital may hold itself fortunate to be intimately linked with such a progressive, patriotic firm as that which has now bent its energies to capture first place among the world's producers in its own particular commodity."

WISE AND OTHERWISE.

If anyone, anywhere, under the blue canopy of heaven, has any good suggestion or promising plan to make Belleville Better for everybody to live in, go get him and get the idea, no matter what it costs. All the wise men of the East do not live in Belleville, and the real Wise Men who discovered the Saviour of the world followed a star; they looked high and kept going until they found the greatest gift of God to man—and the Wise Men were big enough and broad enough to follow the Star of Hope even into a dirty stable without question. It did not seem to occur to them to question methods or what kind of a setting the gem should have—they were prepared to accept the gift anywhere without question.

Nowadays there be many who must build up a barrage of objections to the manner and methods of every forward movement and without hearing the evidence register an adverse verdict before the case goes to a jury. best citizen and whether that judgment is favorable or the reverse the public is the gainer.

Critics have their uses and abuses, but the common everyday garrulous knocker is a plague and should be quarantined in the Isolation Hospital.

CRISP COMMENT

Perhaps the reason why Mr. Drury proposes to establish a gymnasium for his Cabinet Ministers is because he thinks they need training in political acrobatics.—Hamilton Herald.

Some Farmers sing: Let us have good farming roads on which to draw our produce loads. With us it's not so much the highways as fixing up the little byways, chirps the Toronto Telegram rhymester; but right here let it be said that sensible farmers realize the importance of good trunk roads as the first principle in good roads construction.

The report of the Workmen's Compensation Board for 1918 shows that during the year there were 17,848 accidents reported to the Board and over $3,500,000 was awarded to the victims. There is an average of 158 accidents being reported each day in Ontario, and daily awards of compensation amounting to $11,600. The figures are large, and show the importance of the service now rendered to the factory workers of this province. The Act gives the Board power to promote accident prevention, and this is a phase of its work to which increasing attention is being paid.

The Board of Commerce appointed by the Dominion Government to sit on rising prices of necessities and force them down if possible gets many knocks and is expected to do the impossible. When there is a chance to praise for service rendered the voice of appreciation is so weak that it is drowned out by the loud chorus of disapproval from the throats of those upon whose toes "that man O'Connor," et al, are treading. Cooked ham retailing at seventy-five cents per pound has been reduced to sixty cents as a result of a Board of Commerce order, besides similar reductions on other lines of meat packers products. Give credit where credit is due.

In reference to the big shipments of whiskey to Canada, one London observer remarks that Quebec must be drinking heavily. The assumption is that this is the only wet province. Now the fact is that the whole of Canada is legally under a measure of prohibition, Quebec only enjoying the privilege of drinking six per cent. beer and wine, which is rather mild beverage. With respect to hard liquors, all the provinces are on a par. The bars are banished, but everywhere it is permissible to purchase whiskey on securing prescriptions, which are granted by the tens of thousands, in Ontario as in Quebec and elsewhere. Domestic and imported mild beers are on sale in every quarter. All of which is in accord with the law of the land. The whiskey coming into Canada is not all for Quebeckers, nor is all the Ontario-made whiskey either. The prohibition laws are not as drastic as some people think, or pretend to think.—Montreal Gazette.

The Peace Treaty held promise of prolonged peace and adequate punishment for the Hun, the establishment of better understanding and relationship between the peoples of the earth, security for the little fellows, the uplift for those in the dark places—in a sentence, it opened the way for a happier and healthier world.

In spite of all this Lodge and his wreckers have for months blocked the putting into play of these things. While an entire world waits for ratification in order to end the industrial demoralization that has followed the war, Lodge's crew has haggled and squabbled, using every parliamentary trick and device to prevent acceptance of the treaty. Humiliate Wilson, no matter what it may cost mankind, seems to be the motto of the antic in the American Senate. Playing politics has carried many a party to great and dangerous lengths, but never to the extent that is being pursued by the treaty-killers in the American Senate.

The Poet's Corner

A DISCOVERY.

You talk about excitement and the luxuries of life,
I guess I've tried most everything from pistols, gloves and knife,
I'd like to stop and tell you, only time and space forbid,
The fun I've had just staying home and playing with the kids.

The boys and me were playing horse, we turned our happy home
In less than thirty seconds to a howling hippodrome,
For real entertainment the laughs they hand you out
Beat any burlesque show that's had the nerve to book a route.

And there's something serious in it when you get to thinking, too,
How you were once like them and they may grow up like you.
You watch the laughter in their eyes till sleep weighs down their lids
And thank the good Lord for the chance of playing with the kids.

A Laugh Or Two

Laughter is the unfailing magnet that always draws.

If money is scarce, though the frothy cream puff looks alluring, it were better to pass it up for the good old Irish potato.

There are two kinds of trouble: The kind you have and the kind you have not. There are few of the first kind. but of the second sort there is no end.

The Optimist.

"Woman!" he hissed, "woman, do you thus spurn my heart after leading me on"

"When did I lead you on, as you call it?" asked the girl.

"Did you not tell me that that fortune teller had told you that you were going to marry a handsome blonde young man, with the grace of a Greek god and the voice of an Aeolian harp?"

All the Same to Her.

"I shall have to ask you for a ticket for that boy, ma'am," insisted a conductor, speaking to a quiet-looking little woman. The woman declined to pay.

"I am afraid if you don't pay for that boy I'll have to stop the train and put him off," he persisted.

"All right; all the same to me," she said.

"You ought to know the rules. How old is that boy?"

"I don't know. I never saw him before."

Learning to Fly.

Would you like to take flying lessons without leaving Mother Earth?

Remarkable as it sounds, it is now possible to become an expert airman without having driven anything more dangerous than a wonderful machine called the "Orientator," a new invention which enables the budding pilot to practice the "broken-leaf dive" and "loop-the-loop" while safe inside the practice shed at an airdrome, says a writer in Tit-Bits.

This marvelous machine, which will save hundreds of lives during the next few years by familiarizing the beginner with the various loops, turns, and dives, is composed of steel hoops, fastened together on the universal joint system. Inside the steel rings there is an ordinary pilot's seat, complete wall, and the control levers to drive the engines, exactly the same as an airplane.

Once in this seat, the pilot can put himself through all the evolutions which he is to experience up among the clouds, without being at any time more than six feet off the ground.

In this way, any mistakes he may make, are easily corrected by the instructor, before any harm is done, and a slip which would have been followed by a certain "crash" in real flight has no more harmful result than a lecture for the pupil on what to avoid in future.

Origin of Life Insurance.

A game of cards is said to have suggested the system of life insurance now so universal.

A Flemish nobleman in the seventeenth century tried to divide equitably the cash staked upon an interrupted game of chance. He was helped in his attempt by Pascal, a distinguished French mathematician, who solved the problem.

The idea can be illustrated by the throwing of a dice, the chance of turning up an ace being one out of six. In a large number of throws, the chances are in the same proportion. From this Pascal laid down the proposition that results which have happened in a given number of observed cases will again happen in similar circumstances, provided the numbers be sufficient for the proper working of the law of average.

The life of a person is one of the greatest uncertainties, but the duration, or rate of mortality, of a large number of persons may be predicted with the greatest accuracy by comparison with the observed result among a sufficiently large number of persons of similar ages and occupations and subject to similar climatic influences.

Poor Thin Blood Brings Indigestion

Make the Blood Rich and Red By Using Dr. Williams' Pink Pills

Thin-blooded people generally have stomach trouble. They seldom recognize the fact that thin blood is the cause of indigestion, but it is. Thin blood, weak, watery blood, is one of the most common causes of stomach trouble. The glands that furnish the digestive fluids are diminished in their activity, the stomach muscles are weakened and there is a loss of nerve force. In this state nothing will more quickly restore appetite, digestion and a normal nutrition than good, rich, red blood.

Dr. Williams Pink Pills act directly on the blood, making it rich and red, and this enriched blood strengthens weak nerves, stimulates tired muscles, and awakens to normal activity the glands that supply the digestive fluids. The first sign of returning health is an improved appetite, and soon the effect of these blood improving pills is felt throughout the whole system. You find that what you eat does not distress you and that you are daily growing stronger and more vigorous. Mr. J. J. Murray, Regent street, Toronto, bears testimony to the value of Dr. Williams Pink Pills in cases of this kind. He says:—'During the latter part of 1918 I was a sick man. My stomach seemed simply down and out. I had no desire for food, and when I ate it distressed me. I was pale, did not sleep well, naturally got up in the morning feeling grouchy. My wife was worried over my condition and urged me to try Dr. Williams Pink Pills, reminding me of the good they had done our eldest daughter when she was in a somewhat similar condition. I decided to follow her advice and got a supply and here is the story in a nutshell; I have got my appetite back, sleep soundly at night, enjoy my meals and am so gratified with what the pills have done for me that I strongly advise their use for all pale, sick people."

You can get Dr. Williams Pink Pills through any dealer in medicine, or by

Lunch was over when he re-entered the villa, but it had not been cleared away, and he found Cynthia in the dining-room alone, reading a novel. He noted, with as agreeable surprise as she could have afforded him, that it was the copy of his own which he had given to Mrs. Walford on their return from Dieppe. He looked at his wife kindly.

"Turk's not in town," he said, helping himself to cold sirloin and salad; "gone to Brighton for a day or two. I've paid for my advertisements; did you send off yours yet, to try to induce a general servant to accept a situation?"

Cynthia shook her head meaningly, and came across and took a chair beside him.

"Kemp is awfully nice with baby," she said; "she is upsairs with him now, and on the whole I've been thinking that we had better not hurry to get home again: we had better be a long time arranging matters, Humphrey. While we are here we haven't any expenses."

Kent stared and then smiled.

"This is abominable morality," he said. "Paris has certainly corrupted you, young woman. And, besides, your people would worry my life out with questions. Nothing puts me in a worse temper than being asked what my news is when I haven't any."

"That's all very well, my dear boy, but we haven't any money. There's a quarter's rent overdue now, isn't there and we should only have a month's peace before the tradespeople began to bother. I really think we ought to take two or three weeks, at all events, finding a girl; I do indeed. Mamma and papa would beg us to stop if they knew what a state we were in; it seems to me we ought to do it without giving them the—ahem—needless pain pain of listening to our confession."

"You're very specious," laughed Kent. The semi-serious conclusion might have been uttered by himself, he approved the tone without recognizing the model. "Has your mother noticed that you haven't got your ring on?"

"No; I couldn't tell her a story about it, and I'm praying that she won't. I've been envying you your trouser-pockets ever since we arrived. Don't take ale, Humphrey; have some claret, it will do you more good. If we sold our furniture———"

"What would it fetch at a sale?" he replied; "and apartments would cost us more than the house. No; at any rate, we'll make ourselves welcome here for a week or so. And—well' let's hope the advertisements will turn up trumps Then we shall be independent."

The 'Daily News' advertisement would appear on Monday.

CHAPTER XX

It was slightly disheartening to perceive how many other subeditors were open to offers, and he had the uncomfortable consciousness that his competitors' experience was probably a great deal wider than his own. He knew that for him to consider subediting a 'daily' was out of the question, and his chance of securing a post on a periodical seemed scarcely better on Monday morning, as he perused the 'Wanted' columns. Cynthia declared that his own advertisement 'read nicer than any in the list,' and that if she were an editor it would certainly be the one which attracted her attention; but Cynthia was his wife, and not an editor and this encouraged him no more than Sam Walford's supposition at the breakfast-table that he might obtain the mangement of 'a sound magazine.'

He went in the evening to Soho and Cornelia's successor, in opening the door, informed him that Turquand had returned. The journalist was at the table, writing furiously, and Kent declined to interrupt him more than he had already done by entering. Turquand indicated the cupboard where the whiskey was kept; and, picking up a special edition, Humphrey took a seat by the window and read silently until the other laid down his pen.

"That's off my chest!" said Turquand, looking up after twenty minutes. "Well, my Parisian, how do you carry yourself? Do you still speak English?"

"I can still say 'thanks' in English" answered Kent. "I was devilish obliged to you, old chap. Here's your oof."

"Rot!" said Turquand. "Have you been 'popping' to get it?"

"The 'popping' took place before I wrote you. Don't be an ass; I couldn't take the things out if I didn't pay you back. Well, I've had some bad quarters of an hour in the pleasant land of France, I can tell you."

"That's what I want you to do" said Turquand. "Let's hear all about it. What do you think of that whiskey? Half a crown, my boy; my latest discovery. I think it's damned good myself."

He listened to the recital with an occasional smile, and somehow, now the trouble was past, many of the circumstances displayed a comic side to the narrator. What was quite destitute of humor was the present, and when they fell to discussing this, both men were glum.

"I suppose you haven't been able to do anything with the novel?" Kent asked. "Has it made the round yet, or does a publisher remain who hasn't seen it?"

"It came back last week from Shedlock and Archer. Oh yes; publishers remain. It's at Thurgate and Tatham's now; I packed it off to them on Friday. For the life of me, I don't know why it wasn't taken by Cousins, in the first instance. I looked it through again the other night, and I consider it's—I don't want to butter you, but I consider it's a great work; by Jove, I do!"

Kent glowed; he felt as he had done all along, that it was the best of which he was capable and praise of it was very dear to him, even though the praise of a friend.

Bald Heads at Peace Conference.

An amusing sidelight on the recent Peace Conference at Versailles is thrown, says Answers, by a correspondent, who not only reported the proceedings proper, but took notes regarding the hair, moustaches, beards and whiskers of the peacemakers.

Two-thirds of the delegates were more or less bald. Perhaps some of them made up for this by wearing moustaches. Out of 65 men who sat around the peace table, all had moustaches but 14.

Whiskers, on the other hand, were not popular. Only three people wore them, and by a curious coincidence, the names of all these three people began with V. They were Venizelos of Greece, Vandervelde of Belgium and Vassitch of Serbia. The latter's whiskers were particularly prominent.

In regard to dress, there was less formal attire than one might have imagined. The British paid no special attention to dress. Bowler hats and frock-coats, once a combination that would never have been sanctioned, were quite popular; but there were some countries which put all they knew into their attire. These were, notably, the Japanese, and some of the South American states.

Button boots and lace boots, we are told, came out even.

Vivisecting the Frog.

The frog is the vivisectionist's favorite victim, not because his structure is at all human-like (though he is built somewhat like a man), but for the reason that he will endure being chopped up to a remarkable extent and still retain life. If his brain be removed he can get along without it, swallowing whatever is put into his mouth and otherwise behaving much as usual, though in automatic fashion. If his lungs are cut out he will survive for a long time because he can breathe through his skin. The corpuscles of his blood being remarkably large, that fluid serves admirably for the instruction of the seeker after medical knowledge.

NEW TREATMENT THAT KNOCKS RHEUMATISM

75c BOX FREE TO ANY SUFFERER

Up in Syracuse, N.Y., a treatment for rheumatism has been found that hundreds of users say is a wonder, reporting cases that seem little short of miraculous. Just a few treatments even in the very worst cases seem to accomplish wonders even after other remedies have failed entirely. It sems to neutralize the uric acid and lime salt deposits in the blood, driving all the poisonous clogging waste from the system. Soreness, pain, stiffness, swelling just seem to melt away and vanish.

The treatment first introduced by Mr. Delano is so good that its owner wants everybody that suffers from rheumatism or who has a friend so afflicted, to get a free 75c package from him to prove just what it will do in every case before a penny is spent. Mr. Delano says: "To prove that the Delano treatment will positively overcome rheumatism, no matter how severe, stubborn or long standing the case, and even after all other treatments have failed, I will if you have never previously used the treatmnt, send you a full size 75c package free if you will just cut out this notice and send it with your name and address with 10c to help pay postage and distribution expense to me personally."

F. H. Delano, 1629 Griffin Square Bldg., Syracuse, N. Y. I can send only one Free Package to an address.

New Title Is Suggested By a Writer in England For Head of Our Empire

THE New Europe, the excellent British organ of international politics, makes the suggestion that King George V. should assume the title "King of All the Britains," in order to express the world-wide character of his dominions. The innovation would not be altogether novel, inasmuch as since the accession of the present King's father, Edward VII., every coin of the British realm has borne the device "Brit. Omn. Rex.," an abbreviation standing for "Britanniarum Omnum Rex," of which the title now proposed would be merely the English translation.

It is suggested that the visit of the Prince of Wales to the overseas dominions would furnish a fitting occasion for the change. The argument is that the designation King of England is, in spite of its proud associations, both inadequate and inaccurate. It gives rise to implications not altogether pleasing to the political sensibility of the overseas Britisher, who, although intensely proud of being a member of the British Empire, hardly cherishes a nomenclature conveying the impression that he is being ruled from Westminster. Ian Hay has called attention to the misunderstandings arising from the unjustified, though pardonable, substitution of the term English not only for British, but even for Scotch, Australian and Canadian.

The New Europe's suggestion recalls another proposal, made in several instances during the last two decades, notably at the accession of both Edward VII. and George V., to the effect that by way of symbolizing the greatness and unity of the British Empire the title of the sovereign should be changed to Emperor—"Emperor of Britain" or "Emperor of the Britons." The idea aroused vehement opposition, chiefly on the ground that historically the title and office of Emperor carries, in Europe at least, reminiscences of militarism and usurpation, of supreme power seized and held by violent means, whereby that of the King embodies, in England, at any rate, the continuity of law and constitutional development.

SWOLLEN VEINS RELIEVED

That Absorbine, Jr., would relieve varicose veins was discovered by an old gentlman who had suffered with swollen veins for nearly fifty years. He had made unsuccessful efforts to get relief and finaly tried Absorbine, Jr. knowing its value in reducing swellings, aches, pains and soreness.

Absorbine, Jr., relieved him and after he had applied it regularly for a few weeks he told us that his legs were as smooth as when he was a boy and all the pain and soreness had ceased.

Thousands have since used this antiseptic liniment for this purpose with remarkably good results.

Absorbine, Jr., is made of oils and extracts from pure herbs and when rubbed upon the skin is quickly taken up by the pores; the blood circulation in surrounding parts is thereby stimulated and healing helped, $1.25 a bottle at druggist or postpaid. A Friendly Description Of President Carranza, The Man Who Rules Mexico

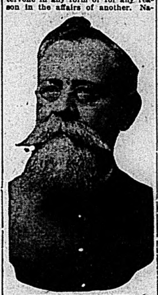
A DEAL has been said and written about President Carranza of Mexico during the last several years, but beyond the fact that he wears whiskers and is vigorously criticized for what he does or doesn't do, few know much about him. Samuel Guy Inman, in his book, "Intervention in Mexico," tells us much about the personal side of President Carranza. He describes Carranza as a "big, stalwart, well-poised man of logic," and he informs us further that he has a sincere love for his people and is interested in anything that will better their condition. A leading characteristic of the Mexican executive, we are told, is a disposition to be "sot" in his ways. "Carranza has never varied his program since the very first day that he tacked his little thesis up on the door of the customs house in Piedras Negras, when he began the revolution against Huerta," says Mr. Inman. It is this quality, we are led to believe, which has kept Carranza in the National Palace, in spite of the fact that it has often been thought he was "done for," until "people now are saying that there appears to be no one of sufficient strength to threaten his power." Also, it is said the Mexican President likes to do things himself. So he chooses as his lieutenants not such men as have pet ideas of their own they want to work out, but men who will do as he tells them. We likewise learn that Carranza is ultra-nationalistic and has a violent prejudice against one nation's meddling in the affairs of another. The essential points of his doctrine are set out as follows. "No nation should intervene in any form or for any reason in the affairs of another. Nationals and aliens should be equal before the sovereignity of the country in which they reside. Diplomacy should not serve to protect private interests."



PRESIDENT CARRANZA.

"Another characteristic of the President," the writer says, "is his dignity and reserve. He prefers to sit behind closed doors and operate by the power of his logic and the force of his ideas rather than to go out before a crowd and hear their cries of Viva el Presidente! I remember the old days when he was running for the governorship of Coahuila. His campaign was the first one ever conducted in that state by an open appeal to the public in general. He wished to inaugurate open campaigning because he wanted the people to realize that Mexico was coming into a new democratic life, when the people themselves must judge between the candidates. However, Carranza himself scarcely ever made a speech. He had three fiery young orators — two of them now governors of states—who accompanied him on his campaign. When he got to a city these orators answered the addresses of welcome, made speeches before all kinds of gatherings, and used all the tricks of campaigns learned from the United States, while Senor Carranza would sit quietly by and look pleased.

"Carranza is a man of sturdy intellect, though he is not strictly of the 'intellectual class,' as it is understood in Latin-America. He is rather of the country gentleman type. He reads the classics and delights in them.

"What is President Carranza religiously? It is difficult to say. I suppose that he would say to the census-taker that he is a Roman Catholic. Some have thought that he is a Protestant, because of his friendship toward the Protestant schools and his fondness for appointing Protestants to office. But he probably is neither a Protestant nor a Roman Catholic, as these bodies would define a faithful member. He certainly is utterly out of sympathy with the Roman Catholic hierarchial system and its endeavor to control politics. He believes in God, in Christ, in the Bible, and in the power of the Christian Church as a restraining and ennobling influence in society. He was not in favor of the radical restrictions on religion in the Constitution of 1917, and has recently proposed to Congress the amendment of these articles. Like most public men, he has been represented as very immoral in his personal life; but, having known him intimately for many years, I am a firm believer in Venustiano Carranza as a man of clean life, of high moral purpose, intensely devoted, though sometimes mistaken in policy to the interests of his country."

Now Meat is so expensive—

OXO Cubes should be more used than ever!

Think what OXO Cubes can save you in the course of a year!

For soups, sauces, gravies, savoury dishes and meat-jellies they do all that meat can do, and do it quicker and with less trouble.

Nothing need be wasted—Nothing thrown away.

With OXO Cubes oddments and "left-overs" need not be put aside. They can be created into ideas for the menu—delicious, inviting, and quite inexpensive.

OXO HOT POT.

Peel and slice sufficient potatoes to half fill a large pie-dish, add few small onions, also sliced. Put into cold water, bring quickly to a boil, boil one minute, then drain. Put back in pie-dish with few slices of tomato, season with pepper and salt and flavour with herbs. Dissolve one OXO Cube in ½-pint of hot milk and pour over mixture. Put few bits of butter on top and bake for two hours in moderate oven.

OXO SUCCOTASH.

Take four-fifths of a breakfast cup of dried lima beans, soak one hour or more in cold water; drain, add one quart hot water in which two OXO Cubes have been dissolved. Cook until almost tender. Add little salt and finish cooking. Allow liquid to evaporate before removing from the stove. Add one cup canned corn and a tablespoonful of butter. Reheat and serve.

Another point to remember:—

OXO Cubes not only add their own goodness and flavour, but possess the peculiar property of making other foods yield more nourishment than they otherwise would—hence, food goes farther when OXO Cubes are one of the ingredients of the dish.

The little money-savers!

OXO CUBES

Prices same as before the war: 10c., 25c., $1.15, $2.25.

English Girls Coming To Canada

OTTAWA, Nov. 29—The vanguard of an army of domestics sailing from Great Britain to the succor of the sorely beset housekeepers of Canada is awaited in Halifax now by Mrs. Robson, of the Department of Immigration. The eighty-three British girls in this party are having their fares paid by the Imperial Government, and are being on the agreed understanding that they will enter domestic service.

They will be distributed as follows: Nova Scotia, one; New Brunswick, one; Quebec, seven; Ontario, thirty-nine; Saskatchewan, four; Manitoba, six; Alberta, two; British Columbia, si; and fifteen more are undecided. These girls have been demobilized from the British Women's War Forces such as the Women's Royal Air Forces, the Women's Royal Naval Forces, Women's Auxiliary Army Corps and the Women's Land Army.

The Canadian Council of Immigration of Women for Household Service will supervise the locating of the eighty-three and has established hostels in Halifax, St. John, Montreal, Toronto, Winnipeg, Regina, Calgary Edmonton and Vancouver to provide for their accommodation and the thousands of British girls expected to follow in their wake to relieve the domestic strain in the Dominion. There is little employment for them in England.

Bigger Business From Better Health

"WHAT is this notion you have about the health of employes?"

"It is no notion, but a great-big idea that I got when on military duty. It is one of the biggest benefits that is going to result from the war.

"Well?"

"What set me thinking was the report of the draft board. Forty per cent. of the men examined were turned down as medically unfit. These men were from all classes, and since they were mostly young men it stands to reason that a far larger proportion of our men would be in the 'unfit' class."

"We cannot help that."

"That is just it. We must help it if we are going to build bigger business and get the production we are after. What is the use of spending hundreds of thousands of dollars on the extension of buildings and then fill them with men who are not in a condition of health to do a day's work?

"That is true. What was wrong with most of those culled out?"

"Twenty-five per cent. were incapacitated because of nervous disorders. Malnutrition, the doctors said, was the cause of their condition. That way from childhood, perhaps. Their blood was thin and watery and their nervous system starved. As a result they were easily tired and had no reserve force. They would catch cold easily and in fact be easy prey to any germ disease.

"What can we do?

"We can see that they get half a day a week for outdoor recreation, and I am going to recommend the use of Dr. Chase's Nerve Food to these men. You know what the Nerve Food did for me when my nerves gave out. If I have my way it is going to have a good try-out among the men, for there is nothing I know of that will build them up so well."

"You certainly should know after the condition you were in, for I sometimes thought you would never get around."

"There are other ways we can help the men by better working conditions, but these are included in these building plans."

"Bigger business from better health" is my motto, and I know Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is going to help me carry out this program."

Dr. Chase's Nerve Food is so universally used that you can obtain it from any dealer at 50 cents a box, 6 for $2.75, or from Edmanson, Bates & Co., Limited, Toronto. The portrait and signature of A. W. Chase, M.D., the famous Receipt Book author, are on every box of the genuine.

Clean Bills Of Health For Brides And Grooms Advocated

PLAIN TALK ON VENEREAL DISEASE—"MAN IN HIS PRIME AT FIFTY," HE DECLARES, AND ADVISES LOTS OF SUNLIGHT AND DRINKING OF MUCH WATER —SMOKING NOT HARMFUL.

OTTAWA, Nov. 27—A plea by Dr. A. F. MacLaren for the physical examination of all men and women who are about to be married was greeted with loud applause at the regular meeting of the Rotary Club of Ottawa, at the Chateau Laurier. Dr. McLaren gave an address on "The Human Machine," and he disclosed highly interesting facts, while his comments regarding body efficiency, prevalence of venereal diseases, the use of tobacco, and the benefits of sunlight, fresh air and good drinking water, bordered closely upon the sensational. It was one of the most instructive lectures yet heard by local Rotarians and absolute silence prevailed during the course of his talk.

Eugenic Marriages

Dr. McLaren only touched briefly upon each of the many features and an outburst of enthusiasm followed his declaration that legislation should be enacted to compel all persons about to be married to provide aclean bill of health, thus indicating the popular sentiment on this point.

"If every man and woman were required to produce a certificate that he or she has been examined, the result would undoubtedly be remarkable," declared Dr. McLaren.

During the years of his practice in Ottawa, he had become acquainted with many cases of venereal diseases, and he had found them in all walks of life and among all classes of people. He expressed regret that it was possible for a diseased man to take a virtuous woman as his wife and then ruin her health, as well as bring children into the world whose bodies were not physically efficient.

Religious Worker a Patient

He had actually been visited by a religious worker, he declared, whom he had found to be afflicted with venereal disease. When the physician had told the man what he knew from the symptoms, the patient had expressed heated indignation. The man came back the next day, however, and confessed. The turning point had come when Dr. McLaren had advised the worker that his days were numbered unless he took immediate treatment.

Concealment Dangerous

"The natural thing for a person with a venereal disease to do is to hide the facts," continued the speaker, "but this is the worst thing that he could do. A venereal disease greatly reduces the power of resistance against other forms of disease.

Smoking Not Harmful

"I believe that smoking is not really detrimental," declared Dr. McLaren, quite emphatically. "The damage that we hear so much about is not in evidence, except in the case of over-indulgence. Tobacco smoking does not reduce physical efficiency. The growing boy is apt to lack judgment in smoking, and therefore, there is a danger with the boy that he may become a fiend."

Dr. McLaren urged the Rotarians or over to be examined by their family physician once each year and to follow the advice of their physician. He pointed out that he was not putting in a word for himself, because he did not happen to be a family physician. This yearly examination, he declared, would mean the difference between enjoying life when a man was growing old or of being a semi-invalid. A man should be in his prime at fifty years of age.

Should be Overhauled

"Some of you men who own expensive motors would not think of going a year without having the car thoroughly overhauled at least once yet you will neglect yourself," he said.

In the same way, an employer would fire an engineer who would permit the wheels and bearings of a machine to become squeaky through want of oil, yet the man himself refused to drink lots of water. The water-drinking habit would keep one's body in a highly healthy state. He pointed out that there was considerable co-operation between nature and the doctor, but in days gone by the physicians had relied on the help of the Almighty.

Need Sunlight

Sun parlors, he considered, were esesntial, and the time was coming when a landlord would find it difficult to rent a house that did not have one. Many germs thrived in semi-darkness. Each person had a standing army of friendly germs whose duty it was to fight off the hostile germ.

He expressed the opinion that examinations of every man in the room would reveal the fact that practically every throat held tubercular and scarlet fever germs, but there was nothing really alarming in this because the friendly germs were undoubtedly on the job.

Old fashioned consumption generlally had taken member after member of a family until it began to be a recognized belief that consumption was hereditary. Sunlight and fresh air had made a big difference, however. In former days, a person with pneumonia was isolated in a room, the doors and windows of which were kept tightly closed. Under modern practice, the patient was exposed to all the fresh air and sunlight possible even if the temperature was 40 degrees below zero.

Dr. McLaren referred to the human body as the most wonderful and the most complicated machine in existence, yet it was abused and overworked on all sides.

CLEVER JUVENILE IN "SAHARA"

Pat Moore is four-an-a-half-going-on-five by his own admission, and when he isn't playing before the camera he can have just as much fun making mud pies, pea shooters, sling shots and climbing fences as the next boy. Young Pat, in spit of the splendid acting of the principals, the lavish settings and beautiful tinting and lighting effects, almost walks away with the honors in "Sahara" starring Louise Glaum, which is being shown at Griffin's tonight along with The Screen Magazine, Topics of the Day, containing the wit of the press. A beautiful Chester Travelogue, a funny Christie comedy, and the official British News.

CLARA KIMBALL YOUNG

Clara Kimball Young and Jack Holt are co-starring in "The Road Thru the Dark," which is being screened at the Palace tonight along with a new LyonsMoran comedy, British Canadian News, and the 4th chapter of the great 'stunt" serial, "The Great Gamble," featuring Anne Luther and Charles Hutchinson.

LITTLE LUCY

Miss Lillian Gish who was first introduced by David Wark Griffith to the American public in "The Birth of a Nation," now appears in "Broken Blossoms"—by far the most artistic production Mr. Griffith ever has done, which is to be shown at Griffin's this Monday to Wednesday, matinee daily.

It is quite certain that a girl less clever than Miss Gish might have found some difficulty in creating the illusion of a fifteen-year old child of the East London slums. Yet there she is, one of the most pathetic and moving figures that has ever wrung the sympathies of one's heart—through the medium of the camera.

It is her beauty that wakes the poetic heart of Cheng Huan, and it is the marvellous acting of Lillian Gish that justifies that turning from the horror of life with Battling Burrows to the almost religious worship of the followers of Buddha. With wan smile, forced by her trembling fingers with sweet, sad eyes abrim with bitter tears, her sorrowful face looks from the screen and in the soul of every true man and woman it wakes thoughts that are full of a pure and holy sympathy. It is clear that the emotions that Mr. Griffith has so wonderfully perpetuated, sprang from the heart of Miss Gish, the clever actress who has always used her art to aid in his success.

"THE LUCK OF THE NAVY"

"The Luck of the Navy" brings across the seas from London, where it has been running for nearly two years, the entire London Queen's Company including Percy Hutchinson. "The Luck of the Navy" is by Mrs. Clifford Mills and is a parlor melodrama of the closing days of the war and dealing with British heroes, German spies, young lovers and all the other attributes that go to make up a first class and thrilling melodrama. There is a prologue of a spectacular nature showing the interior of a submarine at sea while submerging and another spectacular effect showing the British fleet in action at night and the destruction of a German Zeppelin over the North Sea. These initial scenes lay the foundation for the subsequent dramatic action in the drawing room of an English home where all sorts of exciting things happen in an effort to trap the young British Lieutenant who is in command of the submarine.

Her Majesty, the Queen of England in a personal letter, declares that she saw "The Luck of the Navy" and liked it, from which it is to be inferred that Her Majesty is very much like the rest of the world in liking good red-blooded melodrama full of thrills and laughter. "The Luck of the Navy" will be presented at Griffin's next Thursday night, Dec. 4th, by F. Ray Comstock and Morris Gest producers of "Experience" en route from Montreal to Toronto.

NATURE ALONE HAS POWER TO HEAL

Chiropractic and Nature are in accord. The Chiripractor relies on Nature absolutely to do the curing after he has adjusted the pressure from the impinged (pinched) nerve. All health professions are agreed on the fact that the nerve must be in perfect conditioen if health is to prevail.

Chiropractic is the only science that aims at good health by adjusting the vertebrae (small bones of the spine) specifically to keep the nerve fibres free from the passage of impulses from the brain to all parts of the body. Chiropractors believe if the spine is right, the body will be well and strong. In view of the fact that so many people recover their health by taking CHIROPRACTIC VERTEBRAL ADJUSTMENTS, the belief seems right and reasonable; and when we consider further, that most of the Chiropractors' benefited patients are people who had tried every other known health mode, the merit in the science of Chiropractic is all the better shown.

ANOTHER VICTIM OF RHEUMATISM

Entirely Well After Six Weeks' Treatment With "FRUIT-A-TIVES"

MR. AMEDEE GARCEAU

82 Hickory St., Ottawa, Ont.

"I was for many years a victim of that terrible disease, Rheumatism. In 1913, I was laid up for four months with Rheumatism in the joints of the knees, hips and shoulders and was prevented from following my work, that of Electrician.

I tried many remedies and was under the care of a physician; but nothing did me any good. Then I began to take 'Fruit-a-tives' and in a week I was easier, and in six weeks I was so well I went to work again.

I look upon this fruit medicine, 'Fruit-a-tives', as simply marvellous in the cure of Rheumatism, and strongly advise everyone suffering with Rheumatism to give 'Fruit-a-tives' a trial."

Bodies Of Crew Of Myron Found

Remains of Five of Ill-Fated Ship's Company Picked Up.

SAULT STE. MARIE, Ont., Nov. 29.—After nearly a week's patrol of the north and south shore of Lake Superior and Whitefish Bay, searching parties were successful yesterday in picking up five bodies above Salt Point in Whitefish Bay, from the ill-fated steamer Myron. No word has been received as to their identity.

The body of Albert Neilson, deckhand of the Steamer Townsend, who walked off the canal pier about a month ago as he was assisting in getting a cable from the steamer, was found near the centre pier. His home was in Erie, Pa.

WORST IS YET TO COME NEWS PRINT $90 TON

The forthcoming number of "Investment Items," published by the Royal Securities Corporation, contains the following comment on the newsprint situation:

The present situation in regard to the supply of newsprint is becoming more acute. With mills producing to capacity and in many cases increasing their production over that of last year the supply still lags behind the demand.

"As has been stated before, one of the chief causes for this huge demand is the increased amount of advertising now appearing in all newspapers Returns from the sixteen leading cities of the United States show that during the month of September 74,000,000 lines of advertising were carried as compared with 48,000,000 lines during the same month in 1918. The resulting increase in the size of the leading papers has made it extremely difficult for some publishers to obtain enough paper. There has been a decided upward tendency in price for newsprint ordered for immediate shipment as much as 6 cents per pound in place of the usual 3½ cents being paid in some cases.

"The greater part of the Canadian output however, is sold over long term contract, so that the 6-cent price may not be regarded as one at which many sales have taken place. The effect which this situation will have on the next year's contract prices is, however, of considerable importance. Contracts for 1918 will, in most cases, be signed during the next few weeks and will probably be at from $85 to $90 per ton as compared with present contract price of $70 to $75 per ton."

Who Is Going To Run The Belleville Board Of Trade

THIRD OF SERIES OF ARTICLES ANSWERING QUESTIONS IN REGARD TO EXPANSION CAMPAIGN OF BELLEVILLE BOARD OF TRADE.

THIRD QUESTION ANSWERED.

Editor's Note.—This is the third of a series of replies to the five questions most often asked in connection with the Board of Trade campaign. These articles are prepared by the Canadian City Bureau in charge of the Belleville Expansion and Reorganization Drive.

QUESTION.

Who is going to Run the Belleville Board of Trade?

ANSWER.

The members are going to run it. In the modern Board of Trade, which is what Belleville is going to have at the end of the campaign next week, every member is on an equal footing. Each pays the same dues, each has one vote only, each has the right to nominate for office, and each has as loud a voice as any other in the making of the program of work, and each will be called upon to exercise these rights.

THE MODERN WAY.

Under the old plan nominations were made by committees, committees were named by the president alone or in consultation with the secretary, and quite often the program of work, if there was one, was built by one or two individuals. Naturally this system led to "one-man" control or control by a small group. The member who felt that he was one of an obscure majority was too indifferent to come out of the background and presently, after joining the Board, he substantially withdrew, and in a year or two stopped paying dues. He was not interested.

ALL MEMBERS ON EQUAL FOOTING.

The expanded Belleville Board of Trade will be conducted along the new plan—again the boiled-down result of dozens of experiments—of insisting that the members—all the members—shall say who shall hold office and be directors and what planks shall compose the platform or program of work.

It is a fundamental principle of the expansion campaign that the full membership shall direct the thought and life of the Board.

The election of the new directors and officers will take place at once upon the completion of the membership campaign. The election machinery is of the simplest character. Each member will be provided with a ballot bearing the name of every member so arranged that he may vote for whom he chooses. A complete printed list will be a part of the ballot. Those elected to the Board of Directors will be those receiving the largest number of votes, cast secretly and uninfluenced by any other consideration or merit.

A CIVIC DEMOCRACY.

This is democracy reduced to its simplest form. Fitness, in the opinion of their fellow citizens, will determine whether a member shall hold office. Ability and a willingness to serve his community will alone keep a member in office once he has been elected to it, for it is apparent that any director who fails to measure up to the expectations of his fellow members will not be re-elected.

How the committees will be chosen was explained in answer to the question of "What the Board of Trade Can Do."

MEMBERS' FORUM.

Under the modern plan the MEMBERS' FORUM will be an important feature of the expanded Belleville Board of Trade. It will be the means of communication between the officers and directors and the membership. It will hold meetings frequently, bringing the membership together to invite the presentation and discussion of new projects. It will check up the progress of the work of the committees. It will bring speakers on important subjects to the Board to assist the community in the solution of its problems. It will be the dynamo to give motion and action to the Board as an organization.

GET-TOGETHER SPIRIT.

The whole purpose of the Board, first and last, is to bring together the most responsible and capable men in this city and keep them at work for the good of the city. Through frequent social meetings, the acquaintance of each individual member is broadened, friendships are established and there grows up a confidence and optimism which are the two intangible but compelling forces which carry a community forward.

OIL STOVE EXPLODES

At 11.30 this morning the fire brigade responded to a call to Mr. C. B. Scantlebury's store on Front street, but fortunately their services were not required. A coal oil stove exploded and the burning oil set fire to the ends of some rolls of wall paper in a rack. The stove and rack were thrown out into a gangway thus preventing the spread of the flames.

TODAY'S MARKET

The interior of the market building was well filled this morning by our country friends with produce for sale. Good prices were realized, especially for eggs, which sold as high as 90c per dozen for strictly fresh, while 70c was obtained for packed eggs. The ruling price for butter ws 63c per pound. Dressed chickens sold from $1. to $2 per pair, according to size and quality. Duck, $1.50 each and geese from $2.50 to $3.00 each. Potatoes sold at $2.25 per bag.

FARMER'S DEATH ACCIDENTAL

Charles Bateman of Marmora township, a farmer, aged forty-five years, met death in a strange manner on Wednesday night. There was a dead horse some distance from his house, and he had seen foxes at it. At 8 o'clock in the evening he went out with an ancient type of gun to see, it is imagined, if he could get a fox. As he did not return an hour later his' wife went to investigate, and found him dead or dying. She went for help, and it was found that he had been shot through the breast bone and heart. The gun was by his side. Coroner Dr. Gardiner of Eldorado investigated, and found the shooting was accidental. It is thought that Bateman may have stumbled over a small bush. He leaves his wife and family.

CHURCH BANQUET

An exceedingly pleasing function took place on Thursday evening of this week, in the parlors of the Bridge Street Methodist Church, when the Choir accompanied by the Rev. Dr. and Mrs. Scott and the members of the Church Music Committee, in all over sixty persons sitting down to a High Tea of a very bountiful and appetizing nature. Mr. V. P. Hunt, organist and choirmaster presided and short interesting speeches were also given by Dr. Scott, Mr. F. S. Deacon and Mr. F. E. O'Flynn, these were punctuated by old time songs and patriotic choruses sung by all the happy party. Mr. S. Burrows, one of the choir members of thirty years standing, led the audience in "Rule Britannia" with all his old time vigor.

OTTAWA, Nov. 29—His Excellency the Governor-General has received the following message from H. R. H. the Prince of Wales:

"H.M.S. Renown, Camperdown,
"Nov. 25th, 1919.

"To all the men and women of Canada who served at the front in the gerat war:

"On sailing from the Dominion after my first visit I wish to tell you what a pleasure it has been to see so many thousands of you in the last six months. On behalf of the King, I congratulate you on your splendid war service, and for myself I thank you for having received me not only as Prince of Wales, but as an old comrade on the field. I shall always look upon you as comrades, and I hope you will do the same for me. Au revoir.

"EDWARD P.

To Boy Scouts and Girl Guides

"H.M.S. Renown, Camperdown,
Nov. 25th, 191.9.

"To Boy Scouts and Girl Guides of Canada:

"I am just leaving Canada for the Old Country, and I want to send you all my best wishes before I go. I have thoroughly enjoyed seeing so many of you on parade during my visit, I shall tell your brother Boy Scouts and Sister Guides in the Old Country that you are every bit as smart as they are.

"Value your training as Scouts and Guides, for the more you value it the greater will be your own value as Canadians and as Britishers.

"Good luck to you all till I see you again.

EDWARD P."

Advises People to cure Constipation Without Drugs; Suffered Ten Years, Well in Three Weeks By Internal Bathing

Did you ever hear of a person being cured of chronic constipation with drugs? They relieve at the time some, but larger doses are usually necessary from time to time. Natures' own cure, just pure sterilized water, administered with the J.B.L. Cascade, is the only scientific and permanent treatment. Don't force Nature with drugs. Bathe internally.

Mrs. A. McLood, Middleboro, B. C., writes: "For ten years I suffered from constipation, and for the last year I became a wreck. I had awful pains in my back, severe headaches, indigestion and swollen limbs. I tried all kinds of medicine and many doctors without permanent benefit. It was an act of Providence that I saw the J.B.L. Cascade advertised. The first time I used it I felt relieved, and in three weeks I was completely cured. My habits are now quite regular, and am in better health than I have been for years. I am very thankful to be doing my own work again."

The J. B. L. Cascade is the perfected invention of Dr. Chas. A. Tyrell of New York, for internal bathing. It is now being shown and explained at J. S. McKeown's Drug Store.

Phone or ask them for free booklet all about it—or write Tyrell's Hygienic Institute, 163 College St., Toronto.

HELP WANTED—MALE

BOOKKEEPERS WANTED—THE MAJORITY of office men are saying: "I simply must make more money." Meanwhile trained accountants earning $2500 to $10,000 a year in Canada are wanted by large manufacturers. Whether you are a clerk, assistant bookkeeper, stenographer, you can graduate into the big paying accountant's position by simply studying at home during your spare time, and this without interfering with your present occupation. We have a booklet, "HOW TO LEARN ACCOUNTANCY," which explains how you can study at home under the supervision of chartered accountants, the best accountancy course in America. We have dozens of students in Toronto alone and hundreds throughout Canada. The book is sent to you free of charge and it may help you out of your present position, placing you where you will be able to get a much larger salary and better position. If you are ambitious, if you wish to make your way in life, then it is up to you to write us and investigate our method. It will not cost you anything to look into our offer, while it may cost you a lot of money by not investigating. So just drop us a line today and read our booklet which will tell you how easily YOU can become an expert accountant. International Accountants Society, Box 362, Toronto, Ont. n3-tfd

THE JOHNSTONE SCHOOL OF DANCING

Mr. and Mrs. Johnstone's Select Social Dances will be held on Monday, Thursday and Saturday of next week. The reason men want and need the dance is that they are satisfying a God-given instinct of rythm that is as necessary as food to the physical body. Dancing can be abused like money pleasure, or food, but just because it is abused is no reason proper use should not be made out of it. Private lessons given, time arranged to suit pupils. Enlightened Self-Interest

CO-OPERATION is "the word to conjure with" these days, and insurance exemplifies co-operation as does no other business in the world.

Life insurance, based as it is upon co-operative effort, is nothing but enlightened self-interest and every policyholder shares in its benefits.

Especially is this true in the case of Mutual Insurance companies which are not private enterprises but devoted to the common interest of their members without discrimination of any kind.

Fifty years ago the Mutual Life of Canada was inaugurated and the motive which actuated the originators was not speculation by any means—but mutual protection.

But in serving one another each member has benefited himself, for co-operation is "in the last analysis" enlightened self-interest. The enterprise has succeeded beyond the wildest dreams of its founders and in war-time and peace-time has been of the greatest possible benefit to its members and through them to the citizens of Canada.

WOMEN CURED AT HOME

ORANGE LILY

Women's disorders always yield from the very beginning of the treatment to the mild but effective action of Orange Lily. Within two or three days after commencing its use the improvement becomes noticeable, and this improvement continues until the patient is completely cured. Orange Lily is an applied or local treatment, and acts directly on the womanly organs, removing the congestion, toning and strengthening the nerves, and restoring perfect circulation in the diseased parts. In order to convince all suffering women of the value of this remedy, I will send a 40 cent box, enough for 10 days treatment, absolutely free to each lady who will send me her address. Enclose 3 stamps and address Mrs. Lydia W. Ladd, Windsor, Ont.

HUNTING THE KANGAROO.

Australian Ranchers Use Automobiles to Round Them Up.

Three sturdy automobiles, each bearing several men armed with heavy army rifles, speed through the Australian landscape. They come from Adelaide, South Australia, and head northward toward the heart of the plain which extends in unbroken dreariness for hundreds of miles in that direction. The lookout in the leading car scans the horizon with a field-glass.

"There they are!" he calls out, pointing to a slight rise. The heads of a few kangaroos are plainly visible above the salt brush, which grows beyond Burra Burra, the jumping-off place of civilization.

The whirr of the engines must reach the animals' sensitive ears; for they take to flight with tremendous bounds. At a distance of 300 yards they stop.

The automobiles continue in their wild rush over the rough ground, and now the hunters let their rifles speak.

One of the animals is wounded. The remainder of the herd, keeping well together, leap away in one direction, while the wounded animal hops with terrific speed in the opposite direction. The nearest car takes up the pursuit, and for three miles continues in its course, parallel to that taken by the wounded kangaroo. The brush becomes thinner and the hunters head their car in a straight line for the animal, which shifts its course to an angle that brings it directly across the path of the oncoming car. A well-aimed shot ends the flight.

Now, back to the pursuit of the rest of the herd. After a drive of a few miles the animals are sighted. At a distance of fifty or sixty yards the hunters open fire, killing four of the animals. The fifth, a young kangaroo, takes to the open country. The hunters have decided to catch it alive. As they approach their prey, one of the hunters creeps forward on the running-board, seizes the kangaroo by the tail and manages to hold on to both car and animal until the car is stopped.

Each year, during the prolonged drought in the Australian bush sections, the kangaroo becomes a pest in the farming sections, great numbers invading the ranches and destroying the crops. Before automobiles were pressed into service kangaroo-hunting was almost a hopeless job.

War Words We've Borrowed.

While we have added scores of new words to the English language during the war, it is odd, and perhaps significant that only one of them is actually taken from the enemy. That is "strafe," and in all probability that one word will remain. There is, of course, "Zep.," but the Zep. is already becoming a mere memory, and this word will most likely die out.

In the past we have not been so particular, and as a matter of fact, nearly all our war terms have a foreign origin.

"Dragoon" and "cuirassier" are both French words. The original dragoons bore a dragon on their shield, while cuirassier wore breastplates of copper, for which the French is "cuivre."

"Hussar" comes from the Hungarian word "Husz," meaning "twenty." In Hungary every twentieth recruit was placed in a cavalry regiment. The bayonet, of course, takes its name from the French town of Bayonne; while "pistol" is derived from the Italian town called Pistoja, once famous for its munition factories.

"Lieutenant" is French, but "major" is Latin, or perhaps Spanish. The Spanish is "amoyr," meaning "in a superior position."

"Howitzer," oddly enough, is really the Czech word "houfnice." This as originally applied to a sort of catapult for throwing stones. How it came to us is "wrapt in myst'ry."

"Musket" is from the Italian "moschetto," which was really a species of hawk, but was applied to a sort of small mortar.

"Arsenal," as most people are aware, is one of the very few English words taken direct from the Arabic. Its adoption takes us right back to the Crusades.

"Flotilla" and "armada" are, of course, pure Spanish, while the grenades which played so large a part in the great war owe their name to the Spanish city of Grenada, and "commandeer"—used by the Boers in South Africa—has long become a part of our language.—Pearson's.

Whistler's Peacock Room.

The history of Whistler's celebrated Peacock Room is entertainingly told in a new book by Dr. G. C. Williamson called "Murray Marks and His Friends." One of Marks' friends was F. R. Leyland, a wealthy Londoner who wished to reconstruct a prosaic London house on Venetian lines. He spent £1,000 on some wonderful Cordova leather for one of his rooms. Whistler painted a picture for the room. He thought the leather too dark as a background for the picture, and in Leyland's absence painted the leather and the entire apartment until the wonderful Peacock Room resulted. Leyland was exasperated because his beautiful leather had been painted over, Marks resented the change because his blue and white china (he was a ceramic specialist) no longer had a suitable background, and Jeckyll, the architect of the new house, became demented when he saw what had been done. Eventually, however, the wonderful Peacock Room of this story was recognized as a masterpiece of decoration even by Leyland and Marks. After Leyland's death it was removed from his house, and it now forms part of the priceless Whistler collection of Charles L. Freer, of Detroit, together with the famous picture by Whistler which caused all the trouble.

Canada at the National Chemical Exposition, Chicago.

The importance and magnitude of our Chemical Industries form a sensational chapter in the Industrial history of Canada, that has become known the world over. Development followed development during the war with amazing rapidity and still continues. Some idea of the progress made, may be gathered from the fact that up to a few months prior to the end of the war all Synthetic nitrates for explosives produced on this continent, were of Canadian origin. Our production of acetone was equally phenomenal.

It is no wonder, therefore, that Canada occupied such an important position at the National Chemical Exposition recently held at Chicago, admitted to be the greatest industrial event in the history of that city.

In addition to the large attendance from Chicago, over twenty thousand members of various scientific societies, Universities, manufacturing concerns and others interested in commercial and scientific development, attended the exposition. These included, The American Institute, Mining and Metallurgical Engineers, American Electro-Chemical Society, Technical Association of Pulp and Paper Industry and others.

The Government of Canada and the Province of Ontario, realizing the importance of this opportunity of telling abroad the story of our resources were represented by exhibits, and by some of their best men. The Canadian National Railways had an exhibit illustrating the mineral, forest wealth, water powers and raw materials of the country.

● During the Exposition two addresses were delivered by C. Price-Green, Commissioner, Industrial & Resources Dept., Canadian National Railways, on Canadian National Resources and the great field afforded in Canada for enterprise and investment of Capital, which were widely reported in the American Press and many scientific publications.

BANK CLERKS' PAY AVERAGES $22 TO $25

Toronto, Nov. 28.—With reference to the question of small salaries paid bank clerks and bank messengers in this city and a recent charge by an official of the waiters' union that bank clerks and messengers were supplementing their pay by acting as waiters at banquets at nights, Sir John Aird is quoted as saying that the salaries for clerks and tellers in the Canadian Bank of Commerce have averaged from $22 to $25 a week since the first of last May. All the employes of the bank will receive a bonus at Christmas time, Sir John Aird said.

Officials of the Royal Bank say that a 20 per cent bonus increase has been granted to 5,000 employes of the Royal Bank.

U. S. VACCINATION ORDER HITS STAGE

Toronto, Nov. 28.—The new U. S. Government order requiring vaccination within the past year of all travellers to the U. S. is of serious import to Toronto. According to Mr. Chester Martin, the American Consul there will be no exceptions made. Every person must be vaccinated. A vaccination bureau has been established at Buffalo where each traveller must present his or her certificate if they have not got one they must go through the ordeal on the spot.

Toronto theatre managers are aghast Already word has been received from the Detroit Symphony Orchestra that their engagement at Massey Hall has been cancelled.

A SURPRISING DEVELOPMENT

A London cable to the effect that Colonel Grant Morden who was identified with the negotiations which resulted in the recent sale of $50,000 shares of Iron common to an English syndicate was coming to Canada next month bringing engineer experts with him "to advise concerning the reconstruction of the company."

"Ten to fifteen million dollars is required for putting the plant straight" Colonel Morden is reported as stating "and with the financial backing now secured, the company has a future before it. The London board will be appointed immediately."

That such a substantial sum is necessary to place the property on a proper footing caused some considerable degree of surprise to those who read the cable and it is thought that there may have been some corrupting of the message in transit. It is generally understood that the recent sale of the big block of stock was to provide funds necessary to carry out extensions and improvements at the Sydney plant, but Colonel Morden's statement that the expenditure of three or four times the $3,500,000 proceeds of the deal is contemplated is a development unlooked for. The London board mentioned in the cable in all likelihood refers to the formation of the London committee announced last week by President Workman to co-operate with the Canadian directors of the corporation in the effort to extend the export business of the company.

Officials and directors of the corporation yesterday afternoon declined to comment upon the cable.

GUELPH IS PAID FINE DIVIDEND BY RAILWAY

Guelph, Nov. 28.—Another juicy melon, by which the city of Guelph is the beneficiary, was cut at a meeting of the directors of the Guelph Junction Railway, who met to declare the quarterly dividend. The statement showed that the earnings of the road for the last quarter had amounted to $20,675 and a dividend of 11 3-4 per cent. was declared and a cheque for $19,975 was immediately despatched to City Treasurer Rose.

The quarter just concluded is the end of the fiscal year and with the addition of the cheque paid today the city will have received for the year $69,700 or, at the rate of 14 5-8 per cent, on the capital stock owned by the city. Last year the city received from the Guelph Junction $61,569.86.

NEW SKATING RINK PROMISED FOR OSHAWA

Oshawa, Nov. 28.—Plans are said to be maturing for the erection of a large skating ring on the property of the General Motors in the locality of Ritson Road. This follows close upon the organization of the Athletic Association of the McLaughlin and Chevrolet plants. The rink will be an open-air structure, with two rinks for hockey and a fine skating course bordering these. The plans are for a rink 200 feet square laid out in the shape of a figure eight, the ovals or loops in the numeral being the parts laid out for the puck chasers. This will allow for four teams to be engaged and two games to proceed at the same time without interference. Hockey rings will be measured 150 feet by 75 feet.

HAVANA IS CROWDED WITH RACING FANS

NEW YORK. Nov. 28—The races which open at New Orleans and Havana promise to outdo baseball and football in the matter of popularity. It is now a question of holding the crowds, rather than holding out inducements. There is a great wail from Havana as to what to do with the crowd. In the Cuban capital there are but four or five really first class hotels. Altogether they can accommodate about 2,500 guests. Others are going up rapidly, however, and Victor Munoz, Sporting Editor of El-mundo, writes that the Cubans will manage it somehow. They are offering good purses for the Havana events, and the class of the thoroughbreds is much higher than in the previous meets.

The conditions at New Orleans are almost the same. Down there they are going to race right up to March.

"Safety First" To Be Enforced.

People Taking Matters Into Their Own Hands.

Public safety does not alone concern the operation of railways, street cars and motors. It lies deeper. It lies in the health of the people.

One of the greatest enemies to health is kidney trouble. If the kidneys don't filter from the blood the uric acid and other poisons, the general health declines, and all manner of ills appear—rheumatic, sciatic, and neuralgic pains, lumbago, stone in the bladder, headaches, constipation, lassitude. There is certain relief for these ailments. Gin Pills help where other remedies fail. They build up the debilitated system, bring the kidneys and bladder back to normal action, and, by removing the cause, make impossible the evil results. Gin Pills do not contain any alcohol, but all the valuable diuretic properties of the Gin together with other diuretics and antiseptics which have a signal effect on the bladder and kidneys.

All druggists and dealers sell Gin Pills under a guarantee to return your money if they do not bring relief. If you have backache, constant headaches or pain in the sides, begin treatment at once with Gin Pills. 50c a box. Free sample on request.

New Zealand Is a Land Where the Institutions And Customs Are Unique

EVEN the New Zealanders, so far out of the beaten track of world events that their institutions and customs have developed along unique lines, and so self sustaining that the world war scarcely affected their food supply, are not isolated enough to escape the universal pinch of high living cost, according to recent despatches.

The National Geographic Society has issued the following bulletin concerning our sister dominion:

"Imagine boot-like Italy inverted, with the tip of her peninsular toe pointed toward the eastern coast of Australia, some 1,000 miles distant, and you gain a picture, both in size and contour, of New Zealand.

"Long accounted a social science laboratory and political experiment station, some physical features of New Zealand are equally unusual. Zoologists found there a tailless bird, evolutionary souvenir, they believe, of the now extinct wingless moa, ranging in size from that of a turkey to a super-ostrich height of 12 feet from head to ground. Then there is a caterpillar which dies but to live again in the form of a plant, which blossoms and goes to seed.

"In the instep of the island boot is an area where boiling springs spout from shores of ice cold lakes, hissing pillars of steam and columned vapors puncture the surface, phenomena comparable only to the steaming, vaporous valley of Ten Thousand Smokes, near Mount Katmai, Alaska.

"Here, as in Alaska, it is a case of 'cherchez le vocan,' and the volcano is to be found in the extinct crater of White Island. For the thermal springs district extends into the sea, and emerges again in the barren peak a thousand feet high, hooded in billowy veils of white vapor.

"Attracting the publicist because it has the newest governmental experiments — compulsory arbitration, old age pensions, tax exemptions on small farms, for example—New Zealand interests the geologist for an opposite reason, because it is among the oldest portions of the earth's solidified surface.

"Seldom is a clearer illustration to be had of the effects of geography upon a people. In fact the demonstration was duplicated in New Zealand, once with the Maoris, and then with the English colonists. The Maoris, among the most remarkable of all savage tribes, are Polynesians. They came, some 500 years ago, some say from Tahiti, and found the aboriginese 'unappetizing, but, as the event proved, not indigestible.'

"The climate of New Zealand, with its 'elastic air and perpetual motion,' is more stimulating than the enervating air of most Polynesian islands, food was not waiting to be plucked from the trees, and shelter had to be provided. Hence the latent instincts of these savage cannibals were developed here as nowhere else and, even before the English came, the Maoris had gable-roofed houses, with elaborately carved posts and lintels, and interiors decorated with designs of crude beauty.

"Women were needed in the struggle against harsher natural forces, so they won positions of esteem, and were represented in tribal councils. They were ingenious enough to bake meats on heated stones; but not too civilized to roast especially tough cut of human flesh on this aboriginal fireless cooker. They alone, among the Pacific Islanders, discovered how to weave. Yet they knew not the use of minerals, and their leviathan canoes, lashed together, were constructed with fools of stone, shell, bones, and even of human teeth.

"European discovery of the islands is attributed to Tasman, in 1642, but exploration did not take place until the time of Capt. James Cook, 150 years later, while colonization was delayed until twenty years before the American Civil War.

"When colonization did take place it resembled the settlement of the American colonies, in that settlements were made in half a dozen places, instead of being promoted from a central base, according to the usual British method. The colonizers are said to have profited by a study of the mistakes of England which brought about the American Revolution, and so well did they apply the lessons that the far-away island today is one of the most loyal portions of the British Empire.

"A chief figure of the colonization was Edward Gibbons Wakefield, as bizarre a character as his association with such a distinctive dominion would imply After serving a prison sentence in England for abducting an heiress by means of forged letters, he was debarred from the Parliament upon which he later exerted an indirect but potent influence to aid in carrying out the colonization plan now associated with his name. A fundamental part of his policy was to avoid great landed estates, the promiscuous giving away of land to ne'er-do-wells and adventurers, and finally, though his early disgrace still drove him to work under cover of pseudonyms and agents, he ranked as the foremost colonial authority of his day, as a zealous reformer and idealist.

"It was due to Wakefield that men of substance gained a foothold in New Zealand, that industry rather than exploitation became the motif of the colony, and that the fundamental aim of the Government still is that of 'no millionaires and no paupers.'

"The island population, exclusive of Maoris, now exceeds 1,000,000. The Maoris, numbering about 50,000, have risen to a position of eminence, being represented in the Legislative Assembly, in the Cabinet, and having physicians, attorneys and other professional men of note among their number."

TO ANTARCTIC BY AIR.

John L. Cope Tells How He Will Utilize Airplane.

To the South Pole by air is the present aim of British Antarctic explorers. John L. Cope, who was a member of the Imperial Trans-Antarctic expedition to the Ross Sea in 1914-17, is to lead the new venture, which expects to start for the South Pole next June. He plans a five-year stay, and the equipment of the expedition will include an airplane and wireless to keep the explorers in touch with civilization. The general objects of the expedition are:

To carry on the work already done by other explorers.

To obtain further information of a scientific and economic value.

Generally to extend our knowledge of the Antarctic continent, and thus to endeavor to complete the map.

In an interview with the London Daily News Mr. Cope said:

"We propose to leave England next June and sail for Wellington (New Zealand); thence we proceed to Macquairo Island, where a geological survey is to be made. Then we proceed to Scott Island, and establish wireless and meteorological stations, and thence we go to New Harbor, where headquarters will be established.

"Thus, with our boat and airplane carrying wireless equipment, and these stations established, we shall always be in wireless touch with civilization wherever we go."

By using the airplane it is hoped in a flight of 20 or 25 hours to avoid a tortuous journey lasting many months.

"The distance of the Pole from the base from which the airplane will start," said Mr. Cope, "is about 750 miles. We shall, of course, be compelled to take a sledge and extra provisions, etc., to enable us to get back in the event of the airplane breaking down; and with the weight of all these things it will be necessary to cut down our fuel to the minimum or taking off will be very difficult, and lifting the plane for crossing the mountain ranges impossible. We propose to set off with as much petrol as we can, and then, halfway on the outward journey, just before we get to a range of mountains that we have to cross, to dump half of it and pick it up again coming back."

It is hoped to use directional wireless from the base, which will be the ship, and so obtain "tail bearing."

Dealing with the advantages to be gained, Mr. Cope referred to the value of information regarding the development of the whale industry and the probability of mineral wealth, including, possibly, gold.

"As regards the scientific knowledge to be gained," said Mr. Cope, "a great many of the sciences might be supplied with useful data; but it is in the domain of meteorology, in its relation to agriculture in southern continents, that the most economic prospects are promised. It is generally admitted by meteorologists that great droughts, excessive rains, heat waves, and unusual frosts are intimately related, not only to simultaneous, but also to antecedent meteorological conditions, in places far removed from the regions affected.

"Antarctic data are absolutely necessary if the physical processes involved are to be understood and accurate long-range weather forecasts made for the benefit of agriculture. Scanty though our information about the Antarctic areas has been, it has formed the ground work and starting point of useful research.

"The growing science of aerial navigation is greatly dependent on meteorological forecasts and if long-range weather time-tables are to be constructed they must doubtless be based on Antarctic information."

Cabling Fifty Years Ago.

The enormous mass of matter which is being cabled from Paris may recall to some old newspaper men the difficulties with which the work was accomplished fifty years ago, as an exchange says. For one thing the rate was then a sovereign ($5) a word, and the gentleman presiding over the London end of the Anglo-American Telegraph company was an autocrat who did not much believe in special facilities for the press, and among other things exacted that the word "London" — representing a sovereign,—should be added to the signature in each case. "You approached his office," it was written, "as you would approach a shrine, a temple of some far-off deity," and when press messages were allowed to go at a reduced rate he imposed a code under which he dealt with them as he chose, which meant that there was no knowing how or when they would be despatched.

Mayfair Hotel In New Hands.

The London Globe reports that Buckland's Hotel, Mayfair, has been sold to the Guards' Club, which also has purchased the entire furniture, contents and equipment.

The hotel contains about 70 bedrooms, 30 bathrooms, 15 reception rooms, and, says the London Times, is in every way up to date, having recently been the subject of a large expenditure on improvements and redecoration.

It has been established for over 160 years. In the early days it was called Lillyman's, and later it became Pattison's.

Johnnie Was Literal.

Little Johnnie was discovered in the library, busily snipping away at the open dictionary.

"Johnnie," asked his father, "what in the world are you doing?"

"You see, father," answered the bright and shining light of the household, "to-day at school the teacher said there was no such word as 'fail,' and so I'm cutting it out of the dictionary."

Risky.

Counsel (addressing burglar)—"Do you mean to tell the court that you had no accomplice?" Burglar—"No, yer 'onner. Not in jobs like this—a bloke never knows if 'is pal is honest."

The smiles of friends shine brightest when
The clouds of care make dark the day;
We learn to love our fellow men
When grief has swept us from the way.
Out of our gloom we come to see
How fine the humblest friend can be.

Dear Sir:—

The Delco-Light Plant you sold me to light my farm has not only given us the pleasure and convenience of electric light in all our buildings, but it is rapidly paying for itself in the work it does.

It would be a good investment for us aside from the lighting altogether. So far, we have found 16 jobs for Delco on our farm, and we are constantly finding new jobs for it. We are using power from Delco-Light to run:—

(1) 3-unit milking machine.
(2) Cream separator.
(3) The pump in the dairy.
(4) Root pulper.
(5) Emery stone.
(6) Horse clippers.
(7) Sheep-shearing machine.
(8) Fanning mill.
(9) Washing machine.
(10) Vacuum cleaner.
(11) Electric iron.
(12) Toaster.
(13) Charging batteries on our motor car.
(14) Pumping water for household use.
(15) Lighting our home, stable, outbuildings and yard.
(16) Violet ray generator.

We have never figured this work down to so many hours per day, but we do know that we can operate the farm with one less man than we used to. Figure out the wages and board of a farm hand and you can see what the Delco-Light plant saves us.

We used to run a gas engine on the milker and cream separator, at a cost of 10 cents a day. Our Delco-Light plant supplying light and power for the whole farm costs only 7 cents a day.

It would not only be a harder proposition to run our farm without Delco-Light, but it would cost us a lot more money. We have no hesitation in recommending any farmer to harness up his farm to Delco-Light.

Yours truly,

(Signed) W W Ballantyne

The man who considers Delco-Light something that he will buy —when he can afford it—should heed this strong letter from Mr. Ballantyne. It costs more money to farm without Delco-Light. Can you afford, then, to delay equipping your farm with light and power?

Exclusive Delco-Light Features

Where there is a boy on the farm, he can look after this simple plant. These features insure care-free, long-lasting service for you.

It is direct-connected. There are no belts to slip, break or be replaced.

It is self-cranking. Pressing down on a lever starts the engine and it stops automatically when the batteries are charged.

It is air-cooled. There is no water to carry, to freeze or to boil away.

There is only one place to put oil. There are no grease cups.

A simple mixing valve regulates the fuel supply. There is no complicated carburetor.

Ball and roller bearings cut down friction and increase efficiency.

Thick-plate batteries are long lasting.

75,000 Delco-Light plants are operating in Canada and the United States. This in itself proves the practical nature of the plant. Let us put you in touch with some of these people.

You owe it to yourself and your family to learn what Delco-Light will do for you. As a start toward greater comfort and larger profit, ask us to send you the Book "Pays for Itself," written by practical farmers.

WINTER IN ALGONQUIN PARK.

As a winter panacea for coughs and colds Algonquin Park cannot be equalled. Two thousand feet above the sea it is always dry and cold. Days spent in snow-shoe tramps, tobogganing or ski-ing and in skating, together with evenings spent in social converse around the cosy warmth of an old fashioned log fire; these slip away unnoticed but those who have once experienced them return to their avocations with renewed energies. The "Highland Inn" owned and operated by the Grand Trunk Railway offers comfortable accommodation at reasonable rates. For all particulars apply to N.

HOLSTEIN SALE AT ST. THOMAS

St. Thomas, Nov. 28.—Elgin Purebred Holstein Breeders' Club held its annual sale in the Granite Rink with buyers from all over the country present. Forty-six head of cattle were disposed of, but, although some good figures were realized the annimals did not average very high. The total sum realized for the sale was $7,207.50, an average of $156.00 per head. Lady Iosco Boutsje Dekol, a five-year-old cow, brought the greatest sum, $330. The cow was contributed by Charles E. Holborn of Lawrence Station, and was sold to W. Lyndham of Guelph. Shadeland Otley Queen, a six-year-old cow owned by H. C. Holtby, was purchased by Clarence Dickout of Glanworth for $315. May Veeman, a three-year-old, brought the best price for a heifer, Oscar Norton of Cameron's Corners paying $245, and King Fayne Forforit, a yearling, sold to G. Dennis of St. Thomas for $155, the highest amount paid for a bull. The principal contributors were: C. E. Holborn, Lawrence Station; H. L. Lipsit, Staffordville; H. C. Holtby; C. E. Lock, Yarmouth, and F. W. Miller, Lawrence Station.

EGG-O
BAKING POWDER

The H. C. of B.

is largely caused by waste resulting from spoiled cakes, pies and pastry.

Many people do not consider baking powder a very important ingredient in baking, whereas it is most important—Success or failure depends upon the powder you select.

EGG-O Baking Powder

helps keeps down the HIGH COST OF BAKING, because, first, it is sold at a reasonable price, and second, its double acting qualities absolutely assure perfect baking at all times. Always follow the directions on the label, you use less powder.

Buying Egg-O in the larger tins is most economical for family use.

WILLIAMS
NEW SCALE PIANO

YOU would be very much interested if you could see the wood being scientifically prepared for the Williams New Scale Piano. Every inch of it goes through a special process which removes all sap and sugar. When this wood is being cut up, there is a great deal of waste, because only absolutely flawless pieces can measure up to the standard that we have maintained during many years for Williams Pianos. The woodwork on this famous Canadian piano—not only the case, but on all the unseen parts also—will never shrink, warp or decay. The Williams is built to last a lifetime.

Write us for illustrated literature and ask any Williams dealer to show you this beautiful instrument.

A soiled cuff attracts the eye

YOUR cuff is the most exposed portion of your shirt. It soils the quickest. And everyone knows how PROMINENT a soiled cuff is. It seems a magnet that draws all eyes.

A soiled cuff irritates a particular man. He keeps pushing or pulling up his shirt sleeve to hide it. It causes him to change his shirt when the body of it is still fresh and clean.

The Double Wear Cuff is a boon to the particular dresser. When the cuff gets soiled just turn it. It folds easily and lies perfectly flat whether turned in or turned out. And just think of the comfortable feeling it gives you to know that you can turn your cuff, if you should happen to get it soiled unexpectedly when down town, and it's inconvenient to go home and change your shirt.

Cane Sugar Industry Is Growing in Australia; Government Fixed Price

"THE foundations of the cane sugar industry in Queensland," says the East Indian Archipelago, "were laid in the days of the struggle against slavery between the Southern and Northern States of America. The founders of the cane sugar industry obtained extensive tracts of land in concession and got permission to import South Sea contract laborers. Great difficulties were encountered, and in 1871 only 9,581 acres were planted with cane which yielded 3,752 tons of sugar. In the following decade an improvement is perceptible (planted area being 28,026 acres), which continued till the fall in the sugar prices coinciding with an increase of South Sea labor. A law was passed prohibiting colored workmen. European laborers took ground for the planting of cane, while the Government of Queensland advanced money to the groups of farmers working on a small scale to help them to build co-operative factories in order to enable them to compete with the big land owners, who still had Polynesian contract laborers at their disposal for some time.

"Owing to the fact that the big land owners began to subdivide their estate on which the former white laborers now established themselves as cane planters, and thanks to the Government's policy of advancing money, the cane sugar industry had undoubtedly a very successful period, 1895-1900. The end of this period saw a further important development of the principle concerning the exploiting of tropical Australia by white men. The Federation of the Australian states which were in favor of free traffic among the different states, protected further the Australian cane sugar industry against foreign competition by imposing an import duty of 1.37c. a pound. At the first meeting of the Commonwealth Parliament in 1901 a resolution was passed to send home the eight or nine thousand South Sea laborers which were still employed in the cane sugar industry, and further, as compensation for the increasing cost price of sugar, a premium was offered for all sugar which was produced solely by white labor.

"The fear that there would be an insufficient amount of white laborers proved ungrounded, as the profits made in this industry were large enough to pay big wages in the harvest time, and so laborers came from all parts of Australia to the cane sugar district.

"Many cane sugar planters continued to subdivide their estates because of the law already referred to, and in 1908 the number of European cane planters registered was 4,425, the total production 151,000 tons, of which more than 93 per cent. was produced without colored workmen.

"The following figure will give an idea of the development of the industry:

	Planted Area (Acres.)	Cane Produc'n (Tons.)	Sugar Produc'n (Tons.)
1903 ..	130,649	1,047,446	111,659
1910 ..	155,542	2,000,753	229,534
1916 ..	178,100	1,723,072	192,831

"Forty years ago planters ground their own cane, but now the planting of cane is as a rule apart from the manufacturing of sugar.

"Manufacturers do not sell their sugar in the open market, but to refineries. It goes without saying that an industry which stretches from Nerang in the south to Port Douglas in the north, a distance of about 1,000 miles, shows great contrasts here and there. Irrigation is necessary in some districts, so as in Burdekin delta and in other places drainage is a first essential. Top-dressing varies according to the ground, and extensive analyses are made in the laboratory at Bundaberg, in the cane sugar district. It takes the cane two years to ripen in South Queensland, while the cane in the extreme north is ready for the rollers fifteen months after planting.

"Certain industries in connection with the cane sugar industry, as, for example, jam making industry, so important in Australia, have experienced great difficulties of late years because of the increasing price of sugar. These difficulties date from 1916-17, when the Government purchased the sugar at 3.90c. per pound, and a new standard of wages was fixed (the so-called Dickson award) by which the laborers in the cane sugar indusrty received from $6 to $8 more per week. This wage standard threatened the cane sugar planters with financial ruin; the Federal Government purchased the crop for 4.55c. per pound, and after the Government of Queensland had promised not to increase the cost price of sugar further (as had happened with the granting of the Dickson wages) the Federal Government bound itself to pay this price for the present crop as well as that of 1919-1920."

India Raises Most Cattle.

Contrary to popular opinion, the United States is not the world's greatest cattle country. India has one hundred million more than America, though America is second, and there are twenty-nine countries that have more than two millions each.

In the last thirty-three years Guernseys led by far all other breeds in numbers of pure-bred cattle imported into this country, and of the five breeds leading the importations four were distinctly dairy types.

More than 8,750 Guernsey cattle were imported; Jerseys ranked second in number, with Durhams, including Shorthorns, third; Holsteins fourth, and Ayrshires fifth. The volume of pure-bred cattle importations has been extremely variable.

WITCHCRAFT.

Many British People Still Dread Evil Eye.

We constantly hear it said that "this is the twentieth century; superstition and all that sort of thing died out long ago." Yet there is hardly a person in the country without his pet little belief — that misfortune follows stepping over a baby, or spilling salt or that a black cat brings good luck, for example, says Answers. Hence, too, the universal practice of wearing mascots "for luck."

"These, however, are not very serious beliefs, being merely personal fads. Superstition of a deep-rooted and more unpleasant type is still common in the more backward rural areas, however. Only a few weeks ago an old dame in the Fen Country was boycotted by the whole countryside because she had the reputation of being a witch and of throwing spells over people's children, stock and crops. No one would go near her or let her have food or clothing, and she nearly starved to death.

The cold, legal atmosphere of the courts would be thought unfavorable to belief in witchcraft, and yet a farmer — by no means an ignorant man — stood up the other day in a Norfolk court and informed the bench that someone had bewitched his cows. He cured the evil spell by thrusting a red-hot poker into his churn, when the evil spirit vanished in a bright flame.

Years ago an old crone who was cross-grained with the neighbors stood a good chance of being tried (and burnt) for witchcraft, and cases are even known where animals were solemnly brought into court and tried on a similar charge.

A tough old cock at Basle, in Switzerland, was accused of laying eggs—a most serious offence, as such eggs were used only for making witches' ointment. The unhappy bird was haled before the justices, and one of the eggs produced as proof of guilt. In the face of such evidence the rooster's case was hopeless. He was convicted, and he and his miraculous eggs solemnly burnt at the stake in the town square.

A sow and six young pigs were accused of witchcraft towards a child, and were brought, protesting loudly, before the "beak." Amid great sensation the sow was found guilty and publicly executed, but the porkers were acquitted on the ground of extreme youth. As late as 1740 a cow was accused of possessing a "devil," and after a long hearing was found guilty, and condemned to death. "Rats and mice and such small deer" have been summoned on numerous occasions, but almost invariably failed to put in an appearance at court.

In the fifteenth century the peasants of a village in the south of France took legal proceedings against a plague of locusts which trespassed on their fields and devoured their crops. As the case was still being fought nearly half a century later, the modern gardener can sympathize with the unlucky plaintiffs, but would probably prefer the more up-to date application of lime of mustard.

Another action was brought against a pest of leeches swarming in the ponds and streams of another country district in France. The judge issued a decree against the leeches trespassing farther on the disputed territories, but history is silent as to whether the injunction was obeyed or ignored, with resultant punishment for contempt of court.

Animals have even been admitted as winesses in the courts. It used to be considered no offence to kill a burgar trying to break into a house. There arose the difficulty that one man living alone might ask another to his house, and then murder him, pretending that he was a robber. To get over this it was decided that any domestic animal, such as a cat or a dog, present at the time might bear witness. If the animal on being questioned satisfied the court that his master had acted in good faith the killing was held to be justified. There are not many instances of acquittal.

Too Eloquent.

It was the young barrister's chance. The court had appointed him to defend the prisoner, who was charged with theft. And he proceeded to make the most of it. After his impassioned appeal on behalf of his poor helpless client many spectators were sobbing, while even the jurymen were furtively using their handkerchiefs. Then the prisoner bestirred himself, turning to the warder with the question: "Who's the bloke wot's been talking?" "That's your counsel," replied the official gruffly. "He has been pleading for you." "Ain't 'e a dismal chap!" commented the prisoner.

Cleaning London's Air.

Unsuspecting Londoners would probably be very uncomfortable if they knew what the Atmosphere Pollution Research Department recently discovered about their city: that each cubic inch of air in the vicinity of London contains six million particles of dust. Pure mountain air contains only thirty thousand such particles to the inch.

Germs, too, are so plentiful that it is estimated a man putting in a ten-hour day in the city inhales some thirty-seven million microbes of all kinds.

It has been put up to the Atmosphere Pollution Research Department to find a remedy.

Rewards for Big Families.

Ninety French families with nine children living will each year hereafter receive donations amounting to 25,000 francs each, a Paris despatch says. The French Academy has just received a donation for the foundation of this work from M. and Mme. Cognacq. The amount of the capital is not mentioned but to produce ninety donations of 25,000 francs annually it would at the present interest rates be at least 40,000,000 francs.

$80 Kribs Electric Washer $80

Banish Washday Drudgery

NO need now to rub and scrub the life out of clothes and the happiness out of a day on a back-breaking wash-board. You can now have an electric washer with all its advantages at a cost within the means of every housewife. The Kribs Electric Washer is just as efficient as other machines that cost two or three times as much, and soon pays for itself in saving clothes, time and labor.

The Kribs Electric Washer works with a half-turn movement. And is operated by a Robbins & Myers motor, which will last for years. It is also equipped with a special safety release wringer, which releases at both ends instantly when the spring is pressed. This feature is a big advance over the old style one-end release. The cut gears on the Kribs Electric Washer are so superior over the cast gears usually used on low-priced washers that comparison quickly demonstrates the advantage. It washes a tubful of clothes in a surprisingly short time—washes them thoroughly—and costs only a few cents an hour for operation. The price of the machine is only $80.00.

"14 Days' Free Trial

During November only, we are introducing a limited number of these machines on a Fourteen Days' Free Trial. Upon request a Kribs Electric Washer will be placed in your home with no expense to you. No obligation to buy. Do your regular washing for two weeks. If it doesn't prove its worth many times over in saving time and labor and its efficiency in washing blankets, woollens, tablecloths, everything down to the flimsiest lace—we don't want you to keep it. But, we are sure you will be so pleased with the washer that you will want to keep it—then we can arrange an easy payment plan for you.

Easy Terms Arranged

During this demonstration sale easy monthly payments to suit every purchaser can be arranged. In fact, you can pay for the machine out of its actual savings. You have all its advantages free.

We want to place as many of these machines as possible this month. The easy terms will suit you fine.

Offer Good Till November 30 Only

We have been allotted only a few washers for this special sale. Therefore we are limiting the sale to November thirtieth. Call immediately and inspect one of these machines. Then have one placed in your home. You can make no mistake in giving a Kribs Electric Washer a trial.

How Oranges Are Bathed.

Oranges are not just plucked off the tree and packed into crates, and then shipped off to foreign countries. If that were the case, most oranges before they arrived would be rotten and not worth eating.

When an orange is plucked the skin begins to draw closer to the pulp, and this causes the orange to give off moisture, which would make it "sweat" and spoil if packed at once.

Instead, the oranges are bathed. They are dumped into a long, narrow tank of water, at one end of which is a big wheel with a tire of soft bristles. This wheel turns round so that its lower edge works with another set of brushes below, and the oranges, after bobbing about in the tank, pass between these wet brushes and come out, bright and clear.

In some of the small packing houses women clean oranges by hand. Each with a tub of water and brush scrub busily away at huge piles of oranges, which never seem to grow less.

After their wash the oranges are spread out in the sun to dry on long slanting racks, after which they are packed in the well-known orange boxes. But before that they are brushed again to give them a smooth, shiny look ready for the market.

The Imperative.

Heck—I understand that your wife is subject to moods.

Peck—Wrong! She has but one and I am subject to that.

Sculptured Portrait of the Prince.

A beautiful bas relief of the Prince of Wales has just been executed by the sculptor, E. L. Laur, which is one of the most artistic and pleasing portraits of the young prince. Indeed, it was done from the prince's favorite portrait, sent over from Buckingham Palace, and shows the prince in the outfit he so much enjoyed wearing, the rough khaki shirt of the soldier. This sculptured portrait will later be exhibited at the National Academy, New York. Some 800 composite copies are to be made for Canada, in antique and French bronze shade, and ten copies in solid bronze! Below the portrait are the dates of his birth and of the year of his visit to his country, 1894-1919, and these are surmounted by the Prince of Wales' feathers. The portrait is really a work of art, and the whole is a dignified tribute to the royal visitor.

Tungsten Ores.

Australia is second in importance among British territories producing tungsten ores. In Queensland many of the principal mines have quite recently been acquired by one of the largest of the concerns which have established tungsten-reduction plants in Great Britain since the war, and the event appears to promise a new era of progress for this branch of mining in New South Wales and Victoria, while important quantities of scheelite, another ore of tungsten, are obtained in New Zealand and in Tasmania.

NOT SO ENTHUSIASTIC

Ottawa, Nov. 28.—Owing to the growth of the farmers' party it is understood that provincial Liberals in the western provinces are hesitating about attending the national Liberal organization meeting here on December 1 and 2. All the provincial premiers are members of this committee but their enthusiasm has chilled since the famous convention last August. Since then Hon. W. L. Mackenzie King sent Andrew McMaster and Isaac Pedlow to Saskatchewan to support Hon. W. R. Motherwell against a farmer candidate. Mr. Motherwell lost his deposit. Premier Martin, of Saskatchewan repudiated any alliance with the Federal Liberals and permitted a farmer to be elected without a contest in Mr. Motherwell's provincial provincial constituency. A farmer defeated a Liberal in Cochrane, Alta., and in Manitoba, Hon. T. C. Norris would prefer any other ally than Foster, of New Brunswick, is also said to be desirious to become disassociated from the Federal party. The organization meeting will have few prominent provincial Liberals present and few, if any, representatives from the west.

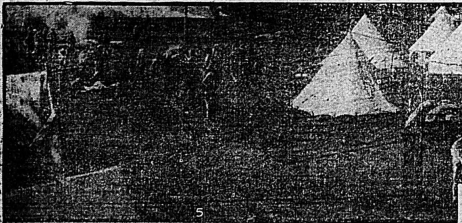
CLIMBING THE CANADIAN ALPS



The rapid advancement of mountaineering in Canada has several contributary causes. Chief is the increasing accessibility of regions formerly remote. The C. P. R. brings you to such wonderlands as Banff, Lake Louise, Yoho Park, and Glacier which have become familiar haunts of pleasure-seeking Canadians as well as many thousands of foreign visitors annually.

One factor that has exerted much influence on the development of mountaineering in this Dominion has been and is the Alpine Club of Canada, formed in 1906 for the promotion of public interest in all that concerns the mountains. Although the club has now an active membership exceeding six hundred and in the past decade has been the means of enabling thousands to enjoy to the full this most inspiring sport, it is still less known than it deserves to be, particularly as its aims and methods are in certain respects unique, or were at the Club's inception. It should be matter of pride to all Canadian lovers of the great outdoors that this country has taken the lead in mountaineering as in so many other movements of New World development. Mountaineering has always held the glamour of romance for those whose lives are necessarily inactive, so that a glimpse at the field life of the A. C. C. should be of interest, and more especially now when the climbing season is closing and the annual camp of 1919 is of the quite recent past.

The Alpine Club of Canada is a daughter of the famous Alpine Club of England with which it is closely affiliated, but differs from the parent organization in this important regard: In order to qualify for membership in the English Club, one must already be an experienced climber—the Canadian Club is primarily a school for budding mountaineers. Each season a camp is held for the exclusive purpose of inculcating the principles of rock and snow climbing. Swiss guides are employed so that, by their example, the best and safest methods may be learned. The uncanny skill of these men is a revelation to those who have never seen the Swiss in his native habitat; and the wisdom of this policy is fully demonstrated in the fact that, although there are now very many Canadians whose training in the hills has advanced until they are quite independent of professional guides, there has never been an avoidable accident at any of the Club camps and even unavoidable accidents have been so rare as to be counted negligible. This is in gratifying contrast with the record of the Swiss Alps, where many lives are lost yearly, almost entirely through inexperience or lack of proper instruction.

But it is, after all, the mountaineer and his craft that most appeal to the Great Public, and it may aid conception of this part of the Club life and work if we take seats on the magic carpet and are whisked by it away to one of the annual "Camps"—by preference the great Victory Camp held only a few weeks since in the marvellous Yoho Valley.

On reaching Field it is only seven miles to Camp, and good trail all the way. We start out in good spirits, and cross by bridge the turbulent Kicking Horse River. The trail winds back and forth to make a possible grade up the steep mountainside. We do not strike water, and thirst grows apace. We are convinced that half an hour will amply suffice to reach the summit, but after two hours of very real work we learn that we are now "nearly half-way there." For hours we have been toiling upward through forest so dense as to obscure all scenery. Now we stand on a bare ridge so narrow there is scarce room for the trail to grip. On right and left tower great sentinels, Mounts Field and Burgess, the latter a sheer precipice of black rock, while between the two is framed a wonderland panorama of elfin ivory crags, hanging glaciers and foaming waterfall ribbons. At our feet lies a vast valley green with spruce and pine, and in its heart is set a perfect turquoise lake, milky blue-green shading into true emerald where cloud shadows drift across its placid surface.

But afternoon advances and we push on along the rugged sides of Mount Field and Mount Wapta until there is the glimmer of white tents among the trees and Camp at last receives us. Centred is the great campfire, with its circle of logs for seats. In the open space beyond the campfire are bell tents for the men, and in the other direction the ladies' quarters, pitched in the seclusion of the glades. Near at hand is the Dining Tent, a hundred feet square and open on all sides to the winds of heaven. Conveniently contiguous are the Administration and Commissary Tents; and, last but not least, the Tea Tent—where fair hands (under the sunburn) dispense nectar and rare ambrosia and biscuits to ravenous returning climbers.

It is dark when the camping ground is reached, with tents pitched on the very edge of a hustling mountain stream.

By earliest morning, up and away on the Little Yoho Trail. We travel thirty strong, but only six are to make the ascent of Marpole, the others being bound for Mount Vice-President, theirs being a qualifying climb, the accomplishment of which entitles newcomers to active membership.

At last is reached the foot of the mountain proper, where are left alpenstocks, for Marpole is to be conquered with no appliances. Now comes the climb. And so, cliff after cliff is conquered until we stand on the summit and feast eyes on the sea of peaks opened to gaze. Chief among these, is that of Edward Whymper, the conqueror of the Matterhorn; and we discover that we have made our climb on the eighteenth anniversary of that grand climber's ascent.

The Alpine Club of Canada is all things to all people. To the strenuous it offers exercise unsurpassed for excitement and interest, unselfish emulation and satisfaction in successful accomplishment. See Canada First. And there is no grander part of Canadians' scenic heritage than the great mountain ranges of our farthest West. And therefore be advised: Next summer, you who have vacations to spend and love the great Outdoors, pack up and go west to the camps of the Alpine Club and you will surely return therefrom larger-visioned, clearer-eyed, sunbrowned, with greater faith and health and energy and power.
